SCHOOL COMMITTEE DIVIDED ON WARD TWO

But Vote Four to Three in Favor of Addition to the Washington School

Mayor in Letter Favors School at Bigelow Park

An important meeting of the School Committee was held Tuesday evening at which there was a prolonged discussion between the School Committee and members of the Finance Committee of the City Council on the question of building an addition to the Washington school. Color was added to the discussion by the receipt of the following letter from Mayor Miller relative to the question.

Quincy, June 30, 1914.

"Mr. John D. Mackay, Chairman school Committee, Quincy Mass.

"Dear Sir: I have been thinking this afternoon of the school question in our city, and I am struck with the magnitude of it. We are pressed on every side for school accommodations, and the School Committee has only asked for four rooms to be built on the Washington school. This is wholly inadequate for the needs of our city.

"Why not leave off bickering for an addition of four rooms on the Washington building, and build a twelve room building in the Bigelow Park section. I know that in that section there is the need at the present time of nine or ten rooms for pupils, and if we were to build an addition of four rooms it would only be a drop in the bucket.

"Therefore I would suggest that they get together and complete a building in the Bigelow Park section at the earliest possible time. For at the best, by the time we get that built the people will be clamoring for a new school in the Massachusetts Fields district or the Atlantic district.

"If you could go into the office of the Inspector of Buildings, you will find that the tendency to growth is wholly in the Bigelow Park section, Ward Three Massachusetts Fields district, and Atlantic.

"So I hope that you will take the earliest possible steps to further the petition of the Bigelow Park citizens that you hold in your office, to send it along to the City Council for their action.

"Thanking you in advance, I am your respectfully

(Signed) John L. Miller, Mayor."

Later in the evening, while in executive session, the board passed the following resolution:

"That it is the sense of the School Committee that work be begun on the Washington school addition as soon as possible, and that the Finance Committee of the City Council be informed of this action. Also, that the Finance Committee of the City Council be informed that the resolution was adopted by a vote of 4 to 3."

RESIGNATIONS.

The following resignations were received and accepted:

Austin W. Greene of the Gridley Bryant and Montclair schools, who resigns to accept the principalship at Lynn.

Miss M Frances Talbot of the Gridley Bryant.

Miss Marjorie Fay of the High school. Miss Fay goes to Santa Barbara to accept the principalship of a private school.

Voted that the Superintendent send to Mr. Greene a letter expressing the regrets of the School board at his resignation, and of appreciation of his seventeen years of efficient and conservative work in the schools of Quincy.

GRADUATION DRESS.

The Superintendent advised the committee of a proposed change in the course of study in sewing, suggesting the making of a simple skirt and blouse by the girls of the eighth grade to be worn at the graduation exercises, and that it be made a required part of the course. The suggestion was adopted.

TEACHERS ELECTED.

The following teachers were elected:

Andrew Johnson, at present principal of the Locke school at Arlington Heights as master of the Gridley Bryant and Montclair schools.

Mr. Johnson is a graduate of the Hyannis normal school. He has taught as principal of grammar schools at Walpole, Belmont and Hyannis training school, resigning to go to the teachers college at Columbia, where he received his degree. At Arlington Heights he had a corps of 17 teachers and 700 pupils.

MAYOR'S VIEWS ON GRADE CROSSING BILL

Set Forth in Signed Letter Read Today in Massachusetts Senate

City Engineer and City Solicitor Concur

The Ways and Means committee of the Senate reported ought not to pass, Tuesday afternoon on the House Bill, No. 2757, known as the bill for depression of the railroad tracks through Quincy. No action was taken at Tuesday's session on the report but it is probable that action will be taken at the session this afternoon.

At today's session the following letter signed by Mayor Miller, City Solicitor Pinkham and City Engineer Sargent was read:

"Quincy, Mass., June 27, 1914.

"To the Members of the Massachusetts Senate:

"House Bill No. 2757 now before the Senate relating to the Quincy grade crossings is in no sense a bill of the City of Quincy.

"The original House Bill No. 1539 was introduced at the request of Mr. G. B. Bates on petition of the Mayor, at a time when the decree plan had not been approved by the Public Service Commission nor acted on by the Superior Court in order that there might be legislation pending in case the grade crossing question should not be settled by the courts. After he had carefully examined the decree plans and studied the engineering problems involved, acting with the advice of the City's consulting engineer, C. B. Breed, the Mayor agreed to accept the decree plan as reported by the court commission, and requested that House Bill 1539 be withdrawn.

"The decree plan as approved by the Superior court leaves the grade of railroad at the Saville street crossing in the center of Quincy as is at present, and does not raise the tracks in the least. At the Water street crossing in the south part of Quincy the grade of the railroad is raised to a height of 8 feet and Water street, passes under the railroad. This plan is the result of several years study of the question by the court commission consisting of ex-gov. John L. Bates, Winfield S. Slocum, city solicitor of Newton, and former senator Arthur H. Wellman, who not only heard all parties in interest but who also had the help of some of the best engineers in the State. If the grade crossings are eliminated according to this decree plan the city will have a substantially satisfactory solution of a difficult problem, and the expense involved is reasonable and can well be undertaken by the city and by the Commonwealth as well as by the railroad.

"In House Bill No. 2757 now before the Senate, Section 1 provides that the grade crossings must be eliminated by depressing the tracks from orfolk Downs to the Braintree line. If this should be done the expense according to the opinion of all the engineers would be enormously increased and the grades of the railroad would be nearly, if not quite prohibitive.

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

No issue of the Daily Ledger will be printed on Saturday, the Fourth of July. Many of the Saturday features will appear in the Daily Ledger of Friday and announcements and large advertisements should be forwarded early on Thursday. Don't wait until Friday as that will be our busy day.

Church correspondents should make their report for Monday's Ledger very brief, as most of the paper will be devoted to Fourth of July reports.

INDEPENDENCE DAY.

One hundred and thirty-eight years have passed since the old Liberty Bell in Philadelphia pealed forth the joyous tidings that a new nation was born, and during the many decades which have elapsed, the interest in the celebration of the "Glorious Fourth" has not waned. As the day on which was launched the first experiment on an extensive scale of a republican form of government, July 4, 1776, will ever stand unique in the annals of history, and that its anniversaries should be occasions of jubilation, on which our native pride and enthusiasm finds vent in a manner closely approaching the bombastic and boisterous, is not a matter of surprise.

Indeed, in the light of our present day influence and progress, a little over-exuberance on our part is but natural, and may readily be forgiven. In recent years, however, a saner note has been struck, and the day is now celebrated with somewhat less noise and hullabaloo and more dignified demonstration of genuine patriotism Quincy is to have a safe and sane Fourth.

While we would not wish to wholly check the effervescence of spirits which is an especial characteristic of American youth, much may be gained by directing such manifestation into a deeper channel of thought and purpose. Symbolism and pageantry are valuable adjuncts, and this year two especially significant centenaries furnish material of especial value and interest.

It is somewhat paradoxical that although the primary cause of our rejoicing was the freeing of the American colonies from the exactions of the mother country, there is today an equally important reason for felicitation in the attainment of a century of peace between the two great English-speaking nations, and the spirit of amity and brotherhood which now characterize their relations.

Again, the centenary of the writing of the "Star Spangled Banner" will add to the glory of the flag which we so love and delight to honor and which claims our veneration for its long freedom from dishonor and defeat. Fifty years ago a dark stain was washed from its folds by heroism and sacrifice. What better time can there be than the Fourth of July to put into practice a resolution that henceforth our patriotism shall be so exalted, our individual and collective effort so powerful, that all the evils which strive to hide beneath its stripes and stars shall be eliminated and ours shall be in the highest and truest sense the land of the free.

Our national lines have indeed fallen in pleasant places, and it is meet that the bells shall chime, the cannon roar and the flags wave on the recurring natal days of our nation. "Lest we forget—lest we forget."

PROGRESSIVES' LINE OF ATTACK

Revealed In Uncompromising Speech by Roosevelt

GOVERNMENT BY CONVULSION

Passing Back and Forth of Power Is Thus Termed—Wilson Policies and Penrose Come In For Sharp Prods—Former President Plainly Lacks His Former Vigor

Pittsburg, July 1.—Former President Roosevelt made here last night his first speech of the 1914 campaign. He spent five hours in Pittsburg and was welcomed enthusiastically. In his address before the Pennsylvania Progressive league he criticised the policies of the Wilson administration, attacked Senator Penrose and appealed for support for the Progressive ticket.

It was apparent as soon as Roosevelt began to speak that he did not possess his former strength and vigor. There was a noticeable change in his manner as compared with that of two years ago when he was engaged in his previous campaign.

He spoke with comparative ease, after the first few sentences, but there was a huskiness in his voice which showed that his throat was still troubling him. His gestures were less rapid and vigorous than of old, and as he neared the end of his speech he was plainly weary.

Roosevelt coined a new phrase in his speech. It was "government by convulsion." By this he said he meant the passing back and forth of power between the Republican and Democratic parties, which he said would happen unless the people intrusted the power to the Progressive party.

The former president's speech was regarded by Progressive leaders present as an indication of the line of attack which the party would follow in this year's campaign. It was an uncompromising speech.

Before he made it the report had gone out that he would hold out the olive branch to the Republican party, but there was no hint of such a thing in his remarks. He appealed to individual Republicans to support the Progressive ticket, but suggested no dealings with the Republican party as an organization. He denounced the Republican leaders who, he said, had misrepresented the people.

He attacked Penrose unsparingly. "Let him go in sackcloth and ashes," he said, "because it was owing to him and his associates that the Democratic party now has power to do wrong. No more scandalous appeal could be made than to return him to power to right the wrongs for which he is primarily responsible."

The Wilson administration policies, Roosevelt said, were responsible for backward business and unemployment. No progress had been made, he said, toward solution of the trust question.

Following are some of the principal points in the former president's speech:

The present national administration is pursuing a course that prevents the existence of prosperity.

Their (the administration's) performance has brought distress upon the nation. The cost of living has not been reduced. But the ability of the average man to earn a living has been greatly reduced.

Tariff reduction as put into practice by the present administration has chiefly benefited foreign rivals and competitors.

It is politicians like Boise Penrose who are responsible for the existence of the present national administration. To put them in power would merely insure in a short time another violent swing of the pendulum against them and a continuation of government by convulsion.

We recognize that business efficiency in production can be attained only through business organization. But we demand that the government be clothed with all the necessary power to crush monopoly with all its attendant evils.

ULTIMATUM TO PERKINS

Must Either Quit Bull Moose or the Harvester Company

Washington, July 1.—Progressives in congress have decided to send word to Colonel Roosevelt and George W. Perkins in pointed terms that either Perkins must cease to be chairman of the national executive committee of the Progressive party or must sever his connection with the International Harvester company, which he organized.

This communication was described in Progressive quarters as an ultimatum intended to answer Roosevelt's statement that he would stand or fall with Perkins.

ARM FOUND IN RIVER

Completes Body of Salesman Who Was Murdered at Lawrence

Haverhill, Mass., July 1.—The left arm from the body of John K. Shamlian, the jewelry salesman, who was murdered in Lawrence last February and whose body was dismembered, was found floating in the Merrimack river, the finding completing the body.

The other arm was found at Ward Hill two weeks ago, it being conjectured that the sample case, in which the murderers are claimed to have enclosed the arms, fell apart after being in the water about two months.

Shamlian was murdered in a lodge hall in Lawrence and his body was cut up in order to make it easy to carry. His murderers threw the arms into the river and buried the other parts in Andover. They were recovered after the alleged confessions had been made to the police.

ACCEPTED BRIBES FROM RICH CHINESE

Charges Against Immigration Officials at San Francisco

Washington, July 1.—Scandal threatens in the United States immigration service as the result of the charges filed and made public involving Assistant Commissioner General Larned and three other prominent officials in the bureau of immigration station at San Francisco.

Inspector Ainsworth, himself charged with dereliction of duty, brings grave charges against Larned and his assistants. So serious are the accusations that Secretary of Labor Wilson turned the entire matter over to the solicitor of the department for an immediate report.

Ainsworth makes sweeping allegations that Larned virtually accepted bribes from wealthy Chinese while he was in charge of the Chinese immigration inquiry on the Pacific coast. He charges also that the selection of a totally unfit immigration station in Baltimore was due to Larned's influence.

"DIVORCE" BILL PASSED

Bay State Solons Act Favorably on Important Railroad Measure

Boston, July 1.—After more than four hours' debate the New Haven-Boston and Maine separation bill advocated by Governor Walsh and the committee on railroads was passed to be engrossed in the house by a unanimous vote.

Before the vote was taken on the main question more than half a dozen amendments were rejected, in all but one case without division of the vote.

The one amendment upon which there was a close division provided for a referendum on the question of state ownership, this being defeated on a rollcall by a vote of 104 to 113.

BLOWS HIMSELF UP

Prisoner Also Damages Jail In an Attempt to Escape

Williamsport, Ind., July 1.—In an attempt to liberate himself from the jail here by means of a powerful explosive, Walter Atchinson, aged 31, was killed, his head being blown off.

The explosion, which took place while the sheriff was absent, did much damage to the interior of the jail. How Atchinson procured the explosive is a mystery. Atchinson was under arrest on a charge of horse stealing.

THE SPIRIT OF '76

Every little helps. Send it along no matter how small the amount.

Have you noticed how admirably the Oval at Merrymount park is situated? Many thousands can see the events as the sloping side of Hancock street makes a fine place to see every part of the field.

Who gets the hardest hit in the Horribles?

Will you not be one of the "Backers" of the Association? Say yes and send to Clarence Burgin a good sized check.

The life of a Publicity man is a happy one and is an easy task. Try it yourself sometime.

Some of the committees from our neighboring cities who were here last year "getting points" are trying hard to keep their people at home this year but many of those citizens will come to Quincy on the 4th because they know what we do do and will take no chances.

I have a button saved for you. Call at the Board of Trade rooms tonight at 8.15.

Dr. Galen Vinton Bowditch has proved that he is still a success as a collector, for the Veteran collected the usual large amount to the fund that was expected of him. If we had a few more like him the work of the association would be easy.

By the way, Galen says that he has been promised his "Charger," and he will lead the horribles on Saturday, and I know that all citizens will take off their hats to Galen and cheer him when he passes by.

Don't forget that some member of the committee will be at the Board of Trade rooms tonight, to receive your contributions, and answer questions as to the celebration.

Meeting of the whole committee and all others interested every evening till Friday 11.59 P. M.

"Lucy" who visited Quincy on the 4th last year has come miles this year to be with her friends again. She had such a good time last year that nothing would keep her away this year, and "John" had to come with her. He says that when they are married Lucy and he want to live in Quincy, because we know how to do things: so he is looking for a house already. He wants Lucy now.

It is not necessary to go to Boston to see a no-run, no-hit game of base ball. We have in our midst just the kind of talent that can give us such a game on the 4th. Witness one of the many games scheduled for the day and see.

There is a class of people called "Cranks" sometimes called "Kickers" of course you do not belong to that class.

RELAY TEAMS TO PRACTICE

The members of the different Grammar School relay teams will meet at Merrymount Park Oval tomorrow afternoon from 2.30 to 5.00 to practice for their big races on the Fourth of July. Mr. LaRose of the Y. M. C. A. will be on hand to time the different trials and to help out in any way possible. A new feature this year will be that each runner will carry a baton and it will be necessary for the runners to hand this baton to the next man to run. This method is to be used at the next Olympic games at Berlin and is being gradually adopted here in America by the different athletic organizations all over the country.

The races on the morning of the holiday will be run off in the following order.

First Race, each man to run a half lap or 176 yards,—Lincoln school, John Hancock school, Coddington school, Atherton Hough school.

Second Race, same distance as first,—Willard school, Massachusetts Fields school, Wollaston school, Washington school.

Third race, each man to run one lap or 352 yards—Seniors, Juniors and Sophomores.

The first race will start as soon as possible after the parade is over and when the races are finished the Boy Scouts are to demonstrate some of their work. The morning program is expected to be finished by 12 o'clock.

Sick-Room Light.

If there are electric lights in the sick room they will generally be found too brilliant, hurting the eyes of the patient, and not every sick room has the electric lights that can be turned up or down. Make a little green silk bag and fasten it over the incandescent bulb and it will give a good but subdued and harmless light.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

DEMOCRATS ELECT NEW CHAIRMAN

But There Was a Hot Time and the Ward Four Members Are Not Satisfied

Want Republican Candidate to Straighten Them Out

Edward J. Parker of Ward One overwhelmingly defeated Charles C. McHugh of Ward Four, for the chairmanship of the Democratic City committee, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of William Kelly at a special election in Wilson hall Tuesday evening. The vote as announced was 43 to 14, all those voting for Mr. McHugh being practically members of the committee of his ward.

The meeting was by far the warmest held in the city for some years and the red fire glowed early in the session when Mr. McHugh's right to run as candidate for the leadership of the party was challenged with the placing of his name in nomination. William J. Sullivan, secretary of the committee, who opposed it took his stand he said on statements made by Charles H. Johnson, Republican candidate for Mayor, who alleged that Mr. McHugh agreed before last fall's campaign to support him over the Democratic nominee.

James Sweeney, a well known, openhearted Democrat, and Councilman Daniel Corcoran, both of Ward Four, immediately came to the defense of the candidate, as did his other friends.

After a solid discussion in which the situation was handled with and without gloves, the vote was taken and Chairman Parker assumed the chair.

The discussion was then re-opened and a long debate resulted in the passage of a resolution to have Mr. Johnson appear at the next meeting and either substantiate or deny the statements he is alleged to have made relative to the West Quincy man. Only one voted against this proceeding.

Mr. McHugh's aspiration to be the standard bearer of the party dates from the dim past. He has been a member of the Ward Four committee for several years, and his reports gave every promise of party loyalty which were never before publicly questioned.

As a member of last year's committee, he created considerable excitement at a regular meeting by declaring that the then board of officers held their position as the result of an irregular election, and it was rumored at the time that he was to apply to the courts to straighten the matter out.

Mr. McHugh however carried the situation no further until William Kelly passed away and left the vacancy in the chairmanship. Since then he and his friends have worked hard in his behalf but they failed to muster votes enough to put him in the chair.

At the close of the meeting the Ward Four members were very indignant with the treatment their candidate had received, and they expressed themselves as being entirely in sympathy with Mr. McHugh. Others from different wards in the city did likewise.

Although there were nearly 90 present Wilson's hall may not be large enough for the next meeting if Mr. Johnson harkens to the resolution and appears to back up the statements attributed to him. Mr. McHugh who will refute them says he stands on his own ground, and wants the matter cleared up.

The chorus of ladies voices included Mrs. Nettie Ayers, Miss Hanna Bright Miss Beatrice Medling, Miss Isabelle Murphy, Mrs. John Ruggles, Miss Pearl Smith, Miss Sarah Thomas, Mrs. Norma Lowe Trainor, and Miss Eva Weymouth.

Mrs. Page and her pupils were warmly aplauded by a very appreciative audience, who seemed to enjoy thoroughly the very interesting program. Mrs. Page is to be congratulated on the spendid work of her pupils.

MAYOR'S VIEWS

"At the recent hearing before the Senate Ways and Means Committee there appeared as witnesses the following engineers: Prof. C. B. Breed of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology who has been the consulting engineer for the City of Quincy in all grade crossing matters; E. C. Sargent, City Engineer of Quincy; H. T. Whitman, senior member of the firm of Whitman and Howard; E. W. Branch, of Quincy, who had formerly been on the Grade Crossing committee of the Quincy Board of Trade; A. S. Tuttle, engineer of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad; and F. B. Walker of the Engineering department of the Bay State Street Railway Company. All of these engineers opposed the present bill and testified that to eliminate the grade crossings in Quincy by depressing the tracks was not practicable. They all favored the decree plan. On the other hand not a single engineer appeared in favor of the present bill or of depressing tracks.

"Section 5 of the bill provides that all the expense or loss incurred in the proceedings already had in the Superior court shall be borne by the City of Quincy. This we deem unjust to Quincy and we urge that the City be not compelled to assume this burden.

"The question as a whole is an engineering and financial problem. As an engineering problem we ask you to look for its solution to the advice of the competent engineers who have made a study of the matter. Financially the City of Quincy cannot afford to pay its share of the enormous expense involved in eliminating the grade crossings by depression even if the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad can afford to pay their shares.

Respectfully,
(Signed)
John L. Miller, Mayor.
Walter S. Pinkham, City Solicitor.
Ezekiel C. Sargent, City Engineer."

THIS IS THE CENTENNIAL YEAR OF "THE STAR SPANGLED BANNER"

Upper, the Constellation; lower, the original "Star Spangled Banner," which flew at Fort McHenry (now in the National museum, Washington).

THIS year sees the centennial celebration of the writing of "The Star Spangled Banner," the national song, by Francis Scott Key. The anthem was inspired by the bombardment of Fort McHenry, near Baltimore, in September, 1814. Various celebrations, official and unofficial, have been planned, and the occasion will be remembered on the Fourth of July of this year. The government decided to repair and restore the historic frigate Constellation at a cost of $50,000, so that the vessel might be taken to Baltimore for exhibition in September during "The Star Spangled Banner" centennial at Fort McHenry and afterward stationed permanently in the Potomac river, near the Washington monument and the Lincoln memorial. The frigate has been stationed at the naval training station at Newport, R. I., and is the oldest vessel in the American navy.

RAISING THE SCHOOLHOUSE FLAG

A Fourth of July Poem

Today the birthright of her hopes the younger nation sings
As on the pinions of the light the banner lifts its wings.
Today the future on us smiles and studious labors cease
To set the flag above the school, our fortress wall of peace—
War bugles old, storm beating drums and veterans scarred and true
And children marching for the states mid roses wined with dew.
Behind ye thrice a hundred years, before a thousand grand,
What says the past to you today, O children of the land?
What are thy legends, O thou flag that gladdenest land and sea?
What is thy meaning in the air amid the jubilee?
Flag of the sun that glows for all,
Flag of the breeze that blows for all,
Flag of the sea that flows for all,
Flag of the school that stands for all,
Flag of the people, one and all—
The peaceful bugles blow and blow across the silver sea.
What is thy meaning in the air? Oh, banner, answer me!

Oh, my America, whose flag we throne amid the sky,
Beneath whose folds 'tis life to live and noblest death to die,
I hear the peaceful bugles blow across the silver sea
And bless my God my palace stands a cottage home in thee!
So speak the voices of the past, ye children of the land,
Behind us thrice a hundred years, before a thousand grand.
Such are the legends of yon flag that gladdens land and sea;
Such is the hand that scrolls the air this day of jubilee.
Flag of the sun that shines for all,
Flag of the breeze that blows for all,
Flag of the sea that flows for all,
Flag of the school that stands for all,
Flag of the people, one and all—
Hail, flag of liberty, all hail!
Hail, glorious years to come!
—Hezekiah Butterworth in Youth's Companion.

Franklin's Suit of Clothes.

Shortly before the outbreak of the Revolution Benjamin Franklin, then postmaster general for the American colonies, was in London trying to get fair treatment for the Americans. His petition was dismissed by the government as "groundless, scandalous and vexatious," and he lost his official post. On returning to his lodgings that night, says Lossing's "Pictorial Field Book of the Revolution," Franklin took off the suit of clothes he had worn and declared that he would never wear it again until he should sign the degradation of England and the independence of America. More than ten years later he donned the suit again when he signed the treaty of peace which freed the United States.

"SANE" FOURTH GAINING.

Fewer Lives and Limbs Now Lost In Day's Celebration.

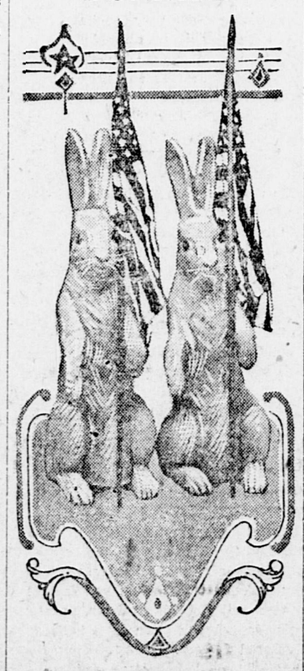

The celebration of the Fourth of July with fireworks, which in former years caused death or injury to an average of 4,000 persons a year, is becoming a memory. The day passed off last year with only 8 dead and 365 injured in the entire country.

The sane Fourth movement has spread widely since last year, which showed a big reduction in casualties as compared with previous years. In Kansas alone fifty towns have passed ordinances forbidding the death dealing kind of celebration.

The saving of life and limb in the larger cities is shown by the following comparison of casualties:

PREPARING TO QUIT CAPITAL

Huerta Realizes That His Power Is About at an End

BRITISH PEOPLE ARE WARNED

Advised by Carden to Leave the Country—Signs of Failure of Peace Conference—Mexican Minister Says People Would Resent "American" President—Carranza-Villa Row Washington, July 1.—Private dispatches from Mexico City stated that President Huerta had sent his son and daughter toward Puerto Mexico, and was making preparations for his own departure.

Revolt of the federal troops in Mexico City, the downfall or flight of Huerta and outbreaks of bloodshed and anarchy in the capital are freely predicted at Vera Cruz by refugees from the interior. They say that never since the death of Madero has the tension in Mexico City been so great, and prophesy that the explosion may come within a week.

Sir Lionel Carden, British minister, advised all his countrymen to leave the country. The advice caused consternation among the British subjects, who regarded it as coming as an order from the home government, Carden offered loans of money to those unable to pay their way out of the republic.

A recess of the peace conference at Niagara Falls until such time as constitutionalist delegates and the Huerta envoys confer will be declared today. There are those who believe that conference will never meet again. It may never accomplish anything more, but it seems hardly likely that the three mediators who brought the conference into being could afford to let it go by the board.

So it is assumed that no matter what happens as between the warring factions in Mexico the conference will resume it only for the purpose of adjourning sine die. It has accomplished little beyond the academic statement that there should be a new government for Mexico.

In an official statement the Mexican minister of foreign affairs points out why the Wilson plan for the pacification of Mexico must fail. He says a provisional president taken from the constitutional ranks at the dictation of the United States to supervise the holding of a general election would not have the confidence of Mexican people. He would be an "American" president and an object of scorn.

General Villa has stopped the march of his army to San Luis Potosi and is hurrying back to Torreon, there to confront General Carranza, who is reported to be withholding ammunition from the conquerer of Zacatecas. "There cannot be two masters," Villa is said to have told his men.

Torreon advices at El Paso say that arrangements have been made for a conference this week between Villa and representatives of Carranza in a last effort to settle the trouble between the leaders.

Only General Barron and fourteen men of the Zacatecas garrison of 14,000 or more which was overwhelmed by Villa have reached Aguas Calientes.

RIOTING IN VIENNA

Servian Flag Is Burned by Mob of German Nationalist Students

Vienna, July 1.—Anti-Servian demonstrations which began Sunday in Bosnia have now extended to Vienna. Three hundred German nationalits students joined in a noisy demonstration here.

They burned the Servian flag which was flying at half-staff on the Servian legation. There was much difficulty in dispersing the students.

Similar demonstrations occurred also in other parts of Vienna. The declaration of martial law at Sarayveo has had the desired effect. That city is now quiet, but disorders continue in other parts of Bosnia.

New York, July 1.—Jesse B. Grant, son of former President Grant, has filed an answer to his wife's petition to be allowed a suitable sum from his annual income of $5400. She is separated from him.

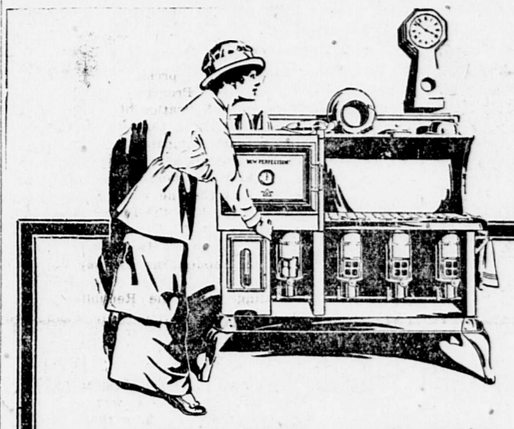

Grant replies that his wife is living apart from him of her own choice. He concludes with a renewal of his offer to support her if she will return to him.

SPORTS AT BETHANY PICNIC

The members of the Bible school of the Bethany church, and their friends had a glorious time Tuesday at their annual picnic at Glen Echo park, Stoughton. It took four special cars to convey the party to and from the park and many others went by automobile. On arriving at the park those in charge of the commissary department got busy and soon a barrel full of refreshing lemonade was ready to serve, and later on a basket lunch was partaken of. Ice cream was also served.

During the day there was a series of field and water sports which were in charge of C. Wesley Williams, Richard D. Wetherell and Miss Lovejoy.

Carle R. Hayward was in charge of the lemonade barrel and Melville Hayward in charge of the ice cream. The general committee in charge were Richard D. Wetherell, C. W. Williams and Theodore Forsythe. During the afternoon several automobiles from Quincy wheeled to the park and participated in the outing.

ASQUITH'S HOME STORMED

Militants Also Cause $100,000 Fire Damage in London

London, July 1.—Militants forced their way into the Downing street residence of Premier Asquith with the announced intention of whipping him.

Several of them carried dog whips. They shouted and screamed for "justice for women," fought the servants and wrecked one of the rooms.

Windows and furniture were smashed and the women were ejected only when the police arrived in force. Two of them were arrested and fined $10.

Prior to invading the premier's home, the militants set a series of fires which destroyed two large business buildings and several tenements, leaving fifteen families homeless. The fires were all in the south of London. Damages estimated at more than $100,000 resulted.

SUFFRAGISTS SNUBBED

Fail to Receive Even a Handshake From President Wilson

Washington, July 1.—Declaring that the cause of woman suffrage was a question to be settled by the states, and not by the federal government, President Wilson caused a sensation in the ranks of 700 suffragettes when he refused to let them heckle him upon that opinion, abruptly turned on his heel and walked out of the East Room, leaving the women gazing after him in apparent astonishment.

Most of the women who had gathered in the White House had expected to shake hands with the president, but were afforded no opportunity.

The suffragettes had marched to the White House and demanded of Wilson a definite statement of his position toward votes for women.

TOWN HAS TROLLEY LINE ON ITS HANDS

Buys It at Auction Because Taxes Were Not Paid

Trenton, N. J., July 1.—West Orange is the first municipality in New Jersey to own a railroad. The condition resulted from the purchase at auction by Town Treasurer McGuirk of the Orange Mountain Trolley company because the company failed to pay $1500 taxes.

The power on the line has been shut off by the Public Service company because of a bill for power which runs from the time the road started six years ago. The town authorities have not yet decided what to do with the line.

DYNAMITE WRECKS DAM

Owner Thinks Destruction Was Wrought With Malicious Intent

Mishawum, Mass., July 1.—Dynamite is believed to have been used in the destruction of the dam enclosing a small lake on the estate of F. E. Nickels, editor of a German newspaper published in Boston and an official of the American Voting Machine company.

A section of seven feet was torn out of the dam, which is three feet thick and six feet high. The escaping water washed away a part of the Mishawum road leading from Woburn to Reading, making it impassable, and ruined a bridge along the highway. Nickels declared he believed the destruction of the dam had been done with malicious intent.

Found on Secret Shelf In an Old Soapstone Sink

Nashua, N. H., July 1.—C. W. Atwood, living on Abbott street, this city, found eight bank books, bonds and securities to the amount of $13,000, also two gold watches. Atwood will be able to keep a large portion of this wealth, because he found it hidden on a shelf underneath a sink in the home of his grandmother, who died at Pepperell, Mass., last week.

There are other relatives. All of them thought the grandmother, who lived alone on an estate known as the Goodnow farm, was wealthy. After her death and burial, however, a search failed to reveal anything of value.

Atwood went to the farm yesterday and began a systematic search. He came to an old soapstone sink, and after considerable difficulty, found a hidden shelf which was concealed by the moulding. On this shelf were the bank books, stocks and bonds and two gold watches.

EVANS FOR GOVERNOR

Defeats Howard in Bay State Prohibition Convention

Worcester, Mass., July 1.—After a stormy session at the Prohibition state convention, Alfred H. Evans of Northampton defeated Arthur Howard, former mayor of Salem, for party nomination for governor after he had expressed his willingness to withdraw from the race and give the nomination unanimously to Howard.

Evans, who was the Prohibition candidate last year, despite the opposition of a strong faction which backed Howard, is at present the principal of the Northampton high school. He was formerly professor of Greek and Latin at Amherst college.

Mosquitoes and Malaria.

That the mosquito is a carrier of malaria is supposed to be a recent discovery, but it was suggested in a medical work written in Ceylon 1,400 years ago.

Special device, the magical set-piece. This set-piece is the most gorgeous manufactured, producing a most elaborate effect in colors which has ever been witnessed by the human eye. There is not any piece which lasts so long and has so many changes of color. It will change colors at least five or six times, and burns with growing intensity. This is the product of the best designers ever trained in Italy. The most perfect piece ever created.

Flight of Italian girandole.
Flight of ascending and descending girandole.

Special device, dragon set-piece. Here we see a huge set-piece in the air covered with dragons. These dragons turn in all directions, sometimes in the same direction, sometimes in opposite directions, ever changing, first one way and then the other. They give a most beautiful effect of color, darting around with gradual changes into new colors. Most beautiful and long burning.

Special device, the volcanoes. This device shows streams of fire and lava, which represents the erruption of Mt. Vesuvius.

Combinations of the geysers of Yellowstone park.

Marconi wireless This is the most surprising piece ever made A wheel of fire on a set-piece is thrown from its position across the field to a new position The wonderful effect and surprise produced is beyond description, for no one realizes that it is different from the ordinary set-piece, and no one can see why it should go as it does Then the wheel lights another wheel which revolves and then develops into a girandole After the girandole is started the lighting wheel shoots back across the field to its original location, a duplicate of its first act. Then the wheel revolves and lights a setpiece as it did the girandole, with two wheels as shown in this display the wheels go in opposite directions and are doubly effective. The set-piece is the one following.

Special device, American flag. First the fire kindles and shows a huge flag in solid color of gold. This suddenly gives way to an American flag, with perfect form and color.

While revolving they continually change showing different colors. This piece throws showers of fire 400 square feet and is one of our latest designs.

Special device 20th century set-piece. This piece represents an Arabic Mosiac. It shows color and design after design. The colors and tints are most perfect and after each design and color the piece dies out and then rekindles showing a different one. These changes occur five or six times and finally end in a shower of gold. A very wonderful creation.

ILLUMINATION.

Searchlight set-piece. This is one of the most perfect set-pieces that has ever been produced in the fireworks art and a special product of this Company. From a large frame a number of wheels are attached forming a hexagon. First the wheels all start with blue colors showing, then it makes five different changes of colors, and betwen each change will appear flashes, at equal intervals, as bright as a large flashlight. This will light up an area of one mile square so that every one can be easily distinguished and any one could readily read a newspaper.

Plain girandole.
Flight of wolf tail girandole.
Firefly shell.

Farfalle shell. This shell is one which repreesnts bats flying around in the night.

Fountanella shell.
Fumante shell.
Golden shell.

Internal region shell, double break. From the bursting of this shell tongues of fire are thrown about the sky, darting and shooting in fantastic paths.

Pupatella shell, two breaks with sixteen sections.
Pupatella shell, three breaks with twenty-four sections.
Pupatella shell, four breaks with thirty-two sections.
Pupatella shell, five breaks with forty sections.

Special device, zuretto set-piece. This set-piece upon lighting first goes in one direction, with a ball of liquid fire throwing off sparks Then it flashes, after which all is darkness. The whole proceeding is again repeated and so on for all six times together. The seventh time it rekindles showing entire in solid colors and then it all changes and the air is filled with showers of gold. This set-piece is the longest burning and has the most changes of any ever made.

Transformation set-pfece. This is one of the most beautiful set-pieces that has ever been made in the fireworks art and a special product of this company. From a large frame a number of wheels all start, forming a hexagon. First the wheels all start and blue colors show, then it makes five different changes in colors and between the changes flashes are sent forth at equal intervals as bright as a flashlight. This will light up a park one mile square.

Special device ,alternating speed wheel.

Special device, zodiac set-piece. This shows the sun, moon and stars arranged as follows:—In center is a large star of perfect proportion, which remains stationary, and slowly changes colors. Beyond it is a half moon which revolves around the star, which also changes colors. Then outside of all is seen the sun in pure gold, revolving in great speed from the common center, throwing out showers of gold like the rays of the sun. The whole device when burning covers a circle with a diameter of fully forty feet.

Triple ascension girandole.
America girandole.
Surprise shell with parachute chain.
Special parachute chain. Salvo of parachute chain.
Rendella shell, eight breaks.
Rendella shell, sixteen breaks.
Rendella shell, twenty-four breaks.
Rendella shell, thirty-two breaks.

PALM TREE.

Special device palm tree. This set-piece is so large that it has to be made on the exhibition field. The effect is as follows. First in the center are three wheels, one above the other, then these turn rapidly and change color. Meanwhile from all sides huge showers of gold are thrown out like palm leaves.

Special device, brilliante set-piece. This piece is notable for its beauty of design and color. The design is in a beautiful figure changed according to the place of display. The color is the most dazzling white ever seen. It is so dazzling that one can hardly look at it. It repeatedly dies and rekindles with three changes of color. Finally ending with a shower of gold accompanied by a battery.

Special device, palomella set-piece. This set-piece is one of our most pleasing designs. First the light spreads over the piece, burns for a minute, then dies out as if it were the end. Then it rekindles with a change of color and new effect. This is repeated with each change of color. The effect is unique in that it produces practically three or four set-pieces, one after another, in one single set-piece. This piece is really wonderful because of the fact that the piece entirely dies out and as if by magic makes an entire change. Every color is effective instantly and in no case does one see blotches of different colors.

Special device, tracche set-piece. This piece is one which is very interesting, as it produces a very true description of a gattling gun in action giving numerous discharges with ever increasing rapidity.

Special device, tracche set-piece. This device shows a large fall of colored fire which looks like water breaking over the rocks on the falls and falling to the bottom. It almost seems to be water burning as it rushes on. As the falls start flowing, they are divided into the three parts of our National colors. They then change into the wonderful silver of the falls in the moonlight. No other set-piece affords such pleasure and with the new invention giving the American colors will be doubly pleasing.

Grand finale. This finale is a blending of the most beautiful colors known to the fireworks art and will be accompanied by the discharge of huge aerial maroon which are sent into the heavens in rapid succession, making a dazzling effect, which is simply sublime. The whole air seems to vibrate with force, the heavens are alight, the earth belches forth fire and noise. For the five minutes during this, every one is thunderstruck, all is wild and uncanny. It is a sight of exceptional beauty and unexcelled in splendor No battle scene could be more realistic. This finale consists of numerous pieces of fireworks, namely, mines, fountains, batteries, shells and maroons.

HOW FRENCH PEOPLE CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

A household remedy of the French peasantry, consisting of pure vegetable oil, and said to possess wonderful merit in the treatment of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles, has been introduced in this country by George H. Mayr, who for twenty years has been one of the leading down town druggists of Chicago and who himself was cured by its use. So quick and effective is its action that a single dose is usually enough to bring pronounced relief in the most stubborn cases, and many people who have tried it declare they never heard of anything to produce such remarkable results in so short a time. It is known as Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy and can now be had at almost any drug store. It is now sold here by Clyde T. Cox and druggists everywhere.

A Piece of Professional Advice

It Was Given Freely and No Fee Asked

By WILLIAM HURD HILLYER

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"Hello! Is that Mr. Burton?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Well, this is Mrs. Merriam. Could I see you a few minutes tomorrow morning?"

Now, I had a case in the courthouse at that time, so I said:

"Won't tomorrow afternoon do just as well, Mrs. Merriam? Say 5 o'clock."

"Couldn't you make it 4? I'm going to a tea at 5."

Now, I had an engagement at 4 with another client.

"How about half past 3, Mrs. Merriam?"

"Oh, I'm so sorry! I don't see how I can manage it. I'm just obliged to be at the Woman's club from 3 till 4."

"You couldn't postpone it until day after tomorrow?"

"No; not possibly. It's very important. Er—you couldn't see me at 2 o'clock, could you, Mr. Burton?"

Now, 2 o'clock is my lunch hour. To interfere with that is again my most ironclad rule.

"Why, I don't know, Mrs. Merriam"— I began; then, on a sudden inspiration: "I'll tell you, I might see you at lunch. Suppose I meet you at the Chelsea at 2 o'clock."

"Oh, I'd be so glad if I could see you then. But won't that put you to some inconvenience, Mr. Burton?"

"Not in the least. It's a pleasure, I assure you."

I did not tell her that I was breaking another ironclad rule of mine, which is never to talk to clients at lunch. And I never do—ordinarily.

That was how it happened that I lunched today with Mrs. Merriam. The business she wished to consult me about was not very complicated—a matter of some investments—and I gave the best advice I could and promised to look further into the affair and render a more detailed opinion in a few days.

I have been Mrs. Merriam's lawyer for some time, but have never had any extended conversation with her until today. Jack Merriam and I had been intimate friends ever since we were college boys, and I was his lawyer up to the time of his death. Jack went out to Colorado in 1896 on account of his lungs. Three years later he came back, radiant with regained health and successful mining stocks.

He brought with him his young bride and her maiden aunt, who was her nearest relative. I took dinner with him several times at his home in Brooklyn, but Jack and I did most of the talking.

After Jack's death—that was two years ago—Mrs. Merriam stayed in Brooklyn, where she and her aunt kept house. I saw her two or three times while the estate was being settled—I was naturally looked upon as her legal adviser—but Jack had been sensible to sell out his mining interests at a good profit and invest the money in gilt edged securities, so there was not a great deal to do in the way of legal contriving.

I had never seen much of Mrs. Merriam. I had but one definite impression concerning her. It is a mental habit of mine to classify every woman I see, according to her looks, in one of three grades—A, B and C. I had classified Mrs. Merriam as A—that was all.

Today after we had finished with business matters we talked about things in general for awhile.

She is really quite sensible. I must say I enjoyed myself.

She is a rather slender person of medium height. Her hair—I think you would call it dark brown, but I am under the impression that it has a reddish tinge. I don't remember what color her eyes are.

She is not at all reserved, yet somehow remarkably dignified. I insisted on paying the bill—over her solemn protest. I trust I did the correct thing.

* * * * * * * *

I'm in a quandary. Mrs. Merriam came to my office yesterday to learn the result of my investigations and requested me to present a bill for my services.

Now, I had never dreamed of charging her anything. It had been no trouble at all, and I told her so. She said, "Very well; I shall have to pay you what I think the advice is worth if you decline to fix a price," and this froze me to the bone.

"Do you think $50"— she began, but I roused myself and cut her short with: "Oh, never mind, Mrs. Merriam. I'll send you a bill at the end of the month if you desire it. It's not customary to pay before then. We can settle on a price at that time, I've no doubt."

The fact is I wanted a chance to think. Fifty dollars! She evidently believes that lawyers are highwaymen.

The whole affair has not taken up more than an hour of my time. I don't count the half hour spent at the Chelsea. That was recreation and amusement.

I think I will send in a bill for 100 cents and make a joke of it. But she might not like that. Yes, she can take a joke. I know she can. But here; wouldn't it be a bit rude—rather too presuming?

Yet why not? Jack Merriam was one of my best friends. I have been to their home, and all that.

I am glad I don't have to decide the question of the bill at this time. I'll see what I shall do at the end of the month.

* * * * * * * *

I have been working very hard lately. The Thayer case has gone through the mill again, and our side gained it, but the other side made a federal question of the thing and sued out a writ of error in the supreme court of the United States.

The case is now locked up before that august tribunal. The evidence fills 200 pages.

In addition to this and five or six other cases up for trial, I have had a good deal of business to transact for Mrs. Merriam.

Right here I must say that my conscience is not unclouded. To be sure, I have stirred up no lawsuits, nor am I guilty of the crimes of maintenance and champerty. But I am forced to confess that I have rendered her business more complicated than it might have been.

To put it plainly, I have made professional conferences necessary where, by a little management, they might have been avoided. I have advised her to ask advice. I entwined her business with red tape.

Yet I have not mismanaged her affairs. I have made money for her, and she knows it.

At the end of the first month I sent in my bill. "To professional services rendered, 100 cents."

And, do you know, she refused to pay it. She sent it back with a note claiming that the charge was exorbitant and that she thought 30 cents was a fair compensation for my services.

Yes, she has a sense of humor, all right!

Well, I tore up the bill and wrote another, putting 30 in the place of 100, and the return mail brought me her check on the Manhattan Trust company for 30 cents, since which I have rendered her no more bills.

* * * * * * * *

Yesterday afternoon, while I was dictating a letter to my stenographer, the office boy looked in from the main room and remarked:

"Mrs. Merriam's outside."

A few minutes later I had sent the stenographer to his machine, and she was following me into my private office.

"I'm so sorry to have kept you waiting," I said. "But that letter just had to be finished. Have this chair, Mrs. Merriam. Now, what can I do for you?"

She seemed somewhat embarrassed.

"Mr. Burton"— she began.

Then she stopped. I waited.

"You've been my lawyer for some time, and I've learned to respect your judgment. There is something about which I would like your professional advice."

Her manner had become quite businesslike.

"Certainly, Mrs. Merriam," I said. "I'll take pleasure in giving you whatever aid I can."

Then she told in a calm and straightforward way how a certain wealthy widower had offered himself in marriage and how she had the matter under consideration.

"Mrs. Merriam," I said, "it is very difficult to give advice in a case like this."

Here I paused. I was thinking hard and fast.

"Yes, I know it is"— she was beginning, but I interrupted her.

"You have asked my advice," I said, measuring my words, "and I shall give you my best judgment. The question is a difficult one. You say this man is a widower of long standing. That is, of course, a disadvantage. But without going into details," I went on, my excitement getting the better of me, "here is my advice: Do not marry the widower. Marry me instead."

She stared at me in amazement. Then the color rushed to her cheeks, and her eyes fell.

I saw my opportunity. I changed my role from counselor to advocate.

"Rose!" I cried.

I said a great deal more, but it would be out of place here, because it was entirely unprofessional. But when, after awhile, she asked me what she must say to the wealthy widower I advised her to tell him, as gently as possible, that his suit had been not pressed.

GENEROUS SUMS FOR THE NEEDY

Salem Fire Relief Fund Has Passed the $250,000 Mark

DAUNTLESS COURAGE SHOWN

City Pledged to Definite Policy of Reconstruction, Civic Pride Forbidding Her to Throw Up Hands—Alleged Graft by Landlords—Fire Perhaps Due to Combustion

Salem, Mass., July 1.—Last night saw the Salem relief fund pass the $250,000 mark, and yesterday was the biggest day yet in point of contribution of clothes, foodstuffs and other necessities. All day offers of help kept coming to Gardiner M. Lane, the Red Cross treasurer, and from a hundred cities and towns money, food and supplies poured into Salem.

Officially, the fund stands at $254,338.35, but there are several contributions not listed in that amount.

Governor Walsh is still in doubt as to just what steps the state can take in regard to helping the fire sufferers. His conference with Attorney General Boynton was not productive of any direct result.

Among her charred ruins Salem will build a city better planned and more beautiful than the old, if her dauntless courage counts for anything. It will be a modern city, with circumferential and radial streets, undoubtedly with much fireproof construction, a new railroad station and all the historical features intact that have been accumulating since the days of witchcraft.

The Salem that was burned had features that indicated lack of broad planning. She had streets that were too narrow, and important sections that were not even connected by streets, but in the planning of a new Salem there will be a co-ordination of interests to eliminate the objectionable things, and, if the uncurbed spirit of the citizens prevails, it will be a home-made Salem.

That means that Salem brains and intellects will build and manage the new Salem, with such financial assistance from the outside as business possibilities can contract. Civic pride will not permit the city to throw up its hands, as Chelsea did, and surrender the glory of a worthy reconstruction to a commission of outsiders.

The city is now pledged to a definite policy of reconstruction, suggested by its citicens' committee and indorsed by its city council, and this policy it commends to the best consideration of the governor and legislature of Massachusetts.

In some instances there had been intimations that a new commission would be desirable to take the reins of government, relieving the present constitutional authorities until the ruins are covered by homes and factories again, but that voice was effectively silenced in a meeting in city hall, where Mayor Hurley presided.

Serious complaints against some Salem residents who are seeking to profit by the misfortunes of their neighbors in the big fire reached Colonel Graves, and he is trying to figure out some legal way in which he can punish these people.

The complaints are against some landlords in the cheapest vicinities of the city where there are cheap tenements. At other times the landlords have been glad to get $6 a month for some of these places, but within the last three days they have not only doubled the rentals, but in some cases have trebled it, and have obtained it from those who are not so destitute they are asking aid from outside sources, but who have been tremendous losers in the fire, though still desiring to stay in Salem.

Salem is free from grafting from another source, however, thanks to the prompt action of the authorities, who have driven from the town the men calling themselves insurance adjusters, and who were going about offering to purchase insurance policies at a great deal less than their face value.

The possibility that the fire was started from the combustion of chemicals used by the Korn Leather company was brought out in the hearing that Deputy Chief of the State Police Neal is conducting. The first witness called was Nahum Adlin, head of the Salem Tip Finish company. The latter firm occupied the top story of the Korn factory building.

CODFISH SPECIALTIES.

The people of New England know how to prepare the fresh and salt cod in a great number of simple and delicious dishes.

Codfish Balls.—The salted fish is of course never so good as the fresh, but we must be satisfied with that when the fresh fish is unobtainable. Pick up two cupfuls of the fish and pour over it cold water to cover and simmer gently for 15 minutes, then pour off the water. Have prepared three cupfuls of hot mashed potatoes, season with salt, pepper and three tablespoonfuls of butter and three of cream. Stir into the potato the fish, form into balls, dip in egg and fry in deep fat just before using.

Codfish Bisque.—Soak a cupful of salt codfish in cold water and pick it up as for codfish balls. Put it with a pint of water, a slice of onion and a pint of strained tomatoes in a saucepan to cook 20 minutes. Sprinkle in a bit of soda, and when it foams add a pint of milk. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, and when hot add the same amount of cornstarch, with a seasoning of white pepper, stir this into the boiling soup. Let it cook 20 minutes and serve with croutons or oyster crackers.

Codfish Porterhouse.—Pick up two-thirds of a cupful of salt cod, pour over it two cupfuls of cold water and simmer gently for 15 minutes after it begins to boil. Drain the water off and put into the pan with the fish two tablespoonfuls of butter. Pour into it three cupfuls of good, rich milk, or one of cream and one of milk is better. Stir two tablespoonfuls of flour smooth in half a cupful of milk, pour this into the hot milk and stir it until smooth, allowing it to simmer for five minutes after it is thick. Just before taking from the fire break into it three fresh eggs. Let the whites set before the yolks are broken and then stir them in lightly. Take from the fire at once and pour into the serving dish, dot with bits of butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Serve with baked potatoes.

WEDDING BELLS AT WOLLASTON

Miss Etta H. Holmes Becomes Wife of Dr. Parker

One of the prettiest home weddings of the season was solemnized Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, in the presence of relatives and friends, when Miss Etta H. Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burnam Holmes of 15 North Central avenue, Wollaston, was united in marriage to Dr. William H. Parker of Athol, at the home of her parents, by the Rev. Joseph Walther, pastor of the First Baptist church of Wollaston.

The ceremony took place in the parlor, beneath a wedding bell suspended from a floral arch of pink rambler roses and wild smilax leaves. The double ring service was used. The wedding march was played by Miss Olive R. Hatfield.

The bride was attended by Miss Pearl Parker, sister of the groom. The groom was attended by William H. Talbot, nephew of the bride.

The bride wore a beautiful dress of white voile and lace, with pearl trimmings, cut en train, over white messaline, and a bridal veil caught up with lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. The bridesmaid wore white shadow lace over pink silk, and carried pink sweet peas. Hazel Estes was the flower girl, and was dressed in white allover embroidery, with a pink sash.

The ribbon bearers were the Misses Ethel Hatfield, Annie Flieger, Eva Hecla, Marion Holmes, Winifred Church, Mabel Tripp, Dora Rundle and Mrs. Madge Barlow. The ushers Mrs. L. M. Talbot and H. H. Holmes, sister and brother of the bride.

A reception followed immediately after the ceremony, when R. B. Holmes brother of the bride was caterer. Guests came from Middleboro, Canton, Brookline, Medfield, Greenfield, Athol East Milton and Quincy.

The bride is well known in Wollaston and was the recipient of many handsome gifts. Dr. and Mrs. William H. Parker left for a honeymoon amid showers of congratulations and best wishes. Upon their return they will make their home at 15 North Central avenue, for the present.

HOWARTH—KATEON.

Miss Margaret Isabelle Kateon, sister of Lawrence Kateon of 39 Chestnut street, and Alfred A. Howarth of Fall River were married at St. John's church on Tuesday afternoon. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock by Rev. John J. Coan, pastor, in the presence of the immediate families of the bride and groom.

The bride, an attractive blonde, was gowned in pink crepe de chine over pink taffeta, wore a pink picture hat, and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Miss Grace Kateon, her sister, was bridesmaid, and was attired in light blue charmeuse with chantilly lace overdress. She wore a leghorn hat trimmed with blue and carried pink sweet peas. William H. Burke, a prominent Fall River resident was the best man.

The wedding party left for Boston after the ceremony where dinner was served at the Hotel Lenox, and in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Howarth left for an extended western trip. They will be at home to their friends after Sept. 1 in their new home in Fall River.

Mr. and Mrs. Howarth were the recipients of many handsome and costly wedding presents, and the groom's gift to the bride was a sunburst of pearls. The bride's gifts to her attendant was a string of gold beads, and the groom's gift to the best man was a gold scarf pin.

Miss Kateon has many friends in this city, and is a frequent visitor here. She is a graduate of the High school of Bath, Maine, and the Gorham Normal school. They include those set forth in the claims of the attorney who asked for a dismissal of the charges before he closed the defense at the public hearing.

A citation, summoning Perry Green to appear with witnesses before Judge Avery on a certain date will be issued today. At the hearing the evidence will be reviewed and the justice will determine if the overseer acted in good faith in making the removal.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

SCHOOLHOUSE IN WARD TWO

To the Taxpayers:

At the present time there is before the City Council an order which should be of interest to everybody and especially the citizens of Ward 2. It is proposed that the city build a four room addition to the Washington school.

Now we all agree that adequate school accommodations in the rapidly growing Point district are absolutely necessary, but just stop a little and look into the future. Would it not be better to strain a little now and not be too easily satisfied as the people of Quincy have been in the past. Those of you who live in the upper precinct or Precinct 2, do you want your children to walk a mile to the Washington school are a mile to the Coddington school—and back again—twice a day?

The City of Quincy should build a new school, not a four room addition to the old one. The order before the Council calls for an appropriation of about $38,000, which will, as your school committee will tell you, provide an addition which will take care of the pupils for two years to come. But two years hence you will be in the same situation practically as the one you are now in. Then you will be back to the Council trying to get what you should have struggled for in the first place—a new school in Bigelow Park or some where in that vicinity. This district is a center for the overflow from three schools—the Adams, the Coddington, and the Washington.

Now wouldn't it be much better business and much more economical for the City of Quincy in the end, to borrow $75,000 this year and take care of the school population in these growing districts for ten or fifteen years to come, than it would be to borrow $38,000 this year and in two years time have to rectify the mistake and build the new school That would mean paying interest on $38,000 and $75,000 combined. Why not strain a little now and get the $75,000 for the new school. Quincy Point needs a new school, not an addition to the old one. Why not get the whole of the money and do the thing right for once and stop the false economy of continual patching up—a policy that in the end is wasteful.

Just talk this matter over with your family, Mr. Voter and then get after your councilman and make him vote for what is rightfully due your children and for what will be in the long run the best financial policy for the city.

B. M.

Quincy Point, June 30, 1914.

CONGRESSMAN FOR POSTMASTER

A Washington letter says the nomination of Congress Edward Gilmore of the 14th Massachusetts District to be postmaster at Brockton, his home city, will be sent to the Senate in a few days by the President, according in information at the Post Office department.

This information confirms the report current in the district that Mr. Gilmore would become the postmaster of Brockton as the successor of James M. Hollywood who resigned in April after a long period of valued service. At that time Mr. Gilmore recommended the appointment of no successor and it has since been commonly understood that he wanted the place for himself.

This means that the Democratic party, on which ticket Congressman Gilmore was elected, will be obliged to find new timber for its fall campaign, and it also opens a broader way for Col. Henry L. Kincaide, last years Progressive candidate, to go to Washington with flying colors. Colonel Kincaide was defeated by only 498 votes, and the Republican nominee, Judge Harris, ran over 2000 behind.

WHO KNOWS JOHN McARTHUR?

Medical Examiner McGrath of Boston is seeking the relatives or friends of a man supposed to be John McArthur, a Fore River shipyard painter whose body was found floating in the waters of the harbor on June 26 and which is at the North Grove street morgue, Boston.

The man is thought to have lived in a boarding house at Quincy Point and to have a mother in Hyde Park. A card in a room formerly occupied by the drowned man came from a person named O'Grady, at 69 Cottage street, Hyde Park.

A lawn party is to be given on the afternoon and evening of Wednesday, July 8 on the grounds of M. E. Hanson, Hancock, corner of Carruth street. Candy, ice cream, sandwiches, etc. will be for sale. Music during the evening. Admission free.

ESCAPED WITHOUT INJURY

Clark G. Boynton of 39 Park street, Wollaston, was among those on the White Star line pier at Charlestown on Tuesday when a gangplank fell and killed one man and injured several others. He managed to escape injury, although it was reported shortly after the accident that he had received bruises about the head and shoulders but was able to go to his home.

Mr. Boynton was on the pier to say farewell to a party of friends and with the others was waving to those aboardthe ocean greyhound when the heavy timbers dropped into the crowd without warning.

Henry Cosgrove, 75 years, of 2040 Washington street, Roxbury, was crushed to the pier and fatally injured. Mr. Boynton assisted in extricating him. He died on the way to the hospital,

The ambulance was delayed in arriving and thousands crowded onto the pier when the word went out that probably a score has lost their lives. The greatest excitement prevailed and the departure of the ship was delayed over an hour. Mr. Boynton is well known in this city. He is an auto salesman and has lived in Wollaston for many years.

DOG WON'T TELL.

The people in the upper Willard and West street sections are debating the cause of the disappearance of milk and butter from the well of a neighbor Tuesday morning while a ferocious bull dog, friendly with its owners, was on guard. The theft occurred on the premises of Mrs. Mary Simmons, some time before daylight. The goods consisted of two quarts of milk and a pound of butter which dangled on the end of a rope, a few inches above the water in the well. Nature's refrigerator did the work on several occasions and did it well, but when John Simmons, the son ,went for the articles they were gone. The dog was still there blinking in the sun. Apparently he had not moved or been moved. Now the people want to know how it happened. The dog won't tell.

HULL CENSUS.

The summer census of the town of Hull shows a population of 8,589, and eleven more liquor licenses have been granted.

MURDEROUS ASSAULT.

Frank Buldoni is at his home at 145 Sumner street suffering from the effects of several knife wounds in the adbomen, and the police are searching for Antonia Grastalli, alleged to have been his assailant. The affair was brought to their attention at midnight Tuesday by a physician who pressed the wounds of Buldoni.

Two officers were sent to the district immediately by Sergt. Larkin and although they made a thorough search for Grastalli he escaped arrest. The police say Buldoni was stabbed during a fight by Grastalli who drew a knife and inflicted several wounds of a dangerous nature.

CITY COUNCIL TONGHT.

An adjourned meeting of the City Council will be held this evening. The adjournment until this evening was chiefly to hold a public hearing on the acceptance of Ocean street, Atlantic. Any regular business however can come before the meeting. It is more than probable that the Finance Committee may report on the order for a four-room addition to the Washington school, as a meeting of the committee has been called for 7 o'clock tonight.

Miss Edna Smith, who has been visiting friends in Quincy, left Tuesday for North Belgrade, Maine, where she will spend July and August.

GRADE CROSSING BILL KILLED IN THE SENATE 7 TO 20

NO DEBATE ON VETO MESSAGES

All Are Passed by City Council Notwithstanding Objections of Mayor

One of These the Appropriation for Fireworks

Monday night's meeting of the City Council was what might be termed veto night, for Mayor Miller sent to the City Council, without his approval five separate orders. One of these was the several items in the supplementary budget for miscellaneous matters, calling for street rebuilding, paved gutters, etc.

It is not often that a Mayor's veto passes without discussion of some kind, but in this case not a word was said, but the Council immediately took a vote on passing notwithstanding the objection of the Mayor.

On four of the orders the Mayor was supported by Councilmen Barker, Richards and Sodergren and on the fifth order he had the support of the three Councilmen mentioned above and Councilman Carlson.

It only required an affirmative vote of two thirds of those present and voting however to pass the orders over the veto and the required number was had in every case.

The only absent member was Councilman O'Dowd.

TEMPORARY LOAN.

The Mayor forwarded a communication from the City Treasurer asking for the passage of an order authorizing a temporary loan of $100,000 in addition to the loan of $500,00 authorized earlier in the year.

The communication was laid on the table until later when Councilman Bailey offered an order for a temporary loan of $100,000 which was referred to the Finance Committee.

FIREWORKS VETO.

A communication was received from the Mayor returning without his approval the order appropriating $600 for fireworks for the Fourth of July. The Mayor in returning the order says:—

"The writer returns to you Order No. 246 without his signature. It was distinctly understood that the Mayor and the members of the City Council were elected to economize on expenses in the year 1914. But by the action of our Council in bringing in such large extra budgets without any consultation with the Mayor, or allowing him to have any say in the matter, you have increased our budget by practically $50,000.

"Gentlemen, could you realize the

CONTROVERSY OVER GRANITE

Port Directors Favored It by Vote of 3 to 2

Now that the Boston Port Directors have been legislated out of office, it became known Wednesday at the meeting of the Governor's Council that there was dissension over the contracts for the Boston dry dock and the South Boston pier.

A majority of the directors had voted in favor of granite for the drydock, the motion being made by Admiral Bowles, recently of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corp.

Gen. Bancroft, chairman of the directors of the Port of Boston, stated the board has voted to award the contract for construction of the dry docks on the basis of its being lined with granite, to Holbrook, Cabot & Lawrence for $1,846,542, which may be reduced by the substitution of a concrete lining for the granite by the amount of $230,275, if that option is exercised up to May 1, 1915, in which event the total amount of the contract would be $1,616,307.

At the same time a contract was awarded for Pier 1, East Boston, for $658,867. On the approval of this contract Gen. Bancroft, Admiral Bowles and Mr. Fitzgerald voted yes and Messrs. Conry and McNary voted no.

At the State House conference Mr. Conry declared the specifications for the dry dock, on which the contract had been let, were notoriously incomplete, and that there wasn't a man on the board who believed it could be constructed within the contractural figure.

"I believe the work should be done by the state," said Mr. Conry.

"This is the first time I every heard you say that," said Admiral Bowles.

"I have advised it many times," said Conry.

"Not in board meetings anyway," said the admiral.

Admiral Bowles said the opposition of his colleagues was far from clear. "The specifications so criticised for the dry dock," he said, "are those accepted by engineers the world over.

"There has been no haste in this dry dock work," the admiral continued, "and it is my absolute opinion it can be built with the money which we have at hand.

"As for the directors assuming the responsibility of building the dry dock, he argued that the legislative committee which considered the question practically put it up to the board to use its judgment, and that is what it did.

"What about Mr. Conry's criticism of the contract?" asked Mr. Barry.

"The gentleman does not know what he is talking about," said the admiral sharply.

Mr. McNary criticized the dock and the proposed construction of the East Boston pier.

HILLIARD—NIXON.

Curtis M. Hilliard, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Aubrey Hilliard, of 87 Middle street, Braintree and Miss Helen Nixon of Wollaston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William G. Nixon, formerly of 233 Middle street, Braintree, were united in marriage Tuesday afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, the Rev. Daniel Roy Freeman officiating. The ceremony was performed at the bride's home 75 Prospect avenue, Wollaston, in the presence of immediate relatives the bride being given in marriage by her father. After a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Hilliard will reside at Wellesley Hills during the summer.

The bride and groom were born in Braintree and living in the same neighborhood their fondness for each other dates back to public schools days. Mrs. Hilliard has just graduated from Wellesley College. Mr. Hillard has been professor of sanitary science at Purdue University, Lafayette, Ind., and in September will become a professor at Simmons College, Boston.

EXTRA FIRE PRECAUTION

Chief Billings Has City Well Protected for Fourth

Chief Faxon A. Billings of the fire department has completed arrangements for the national holiday and today and Friday he will take a trip about the city and examine the location of all bon fires. If in his judgment they may menace the surrounding property the pile of debris or whatever else it may be, will be dismantled.

A long motor truck that will carry 1000 feet of hose, an extension ladder, and several chemicals, will be added to the equipment at the central station on the "night before." The truck will be in charge of Albert Jardine, a well known auto man of this city, who will also act as mechanician for the department that night.

The supply wagon of the Central station will be sent to cover in at West Quincy, and two extra horses will be given Wollaston to take the place of the "skates" now in the harness at that station. Atlantic as in the past will be covered by the full fire fighting force that will respond on the auto chemical of that ward.

A system of runs has been arranged so that no matter how many alarms come in there will be no confusion.

Extra precautions to take care of the Houghs Neck property have been made, and from midnight Friday until midnight of the Fourth a lookout will be stationed in a place from where it will be possible to detect a fire on its first appearance.

The auto fire engine built at the Fore River shipyard under the direction of Harry L. Houghton may not go into commission in this city this year but in the event of its assistance being necessary Mr. Houghton, who will spend the night in this city, has promised to readily respond to any place, near or far.

With this added equipment and all the permanent men and call men in the city stationed in the fire houses, Chief Billings is certain that his department will be in a position to handle anything that may develop as a result of the celebration.

REUNION OF ACADEMY BOYS

Members of the Class of Naughty Four of Adams Academy met at Nantasket on Wednesday for their first reunion since their graduation ten years ago. A good representation of the class was present and greetings were received from several of the absent ones.

The day's program included a trip from Boston by boat; a series of athletic and water sports, "eats," and an organization meeting.

The base ball game between the married and single men was not played because the benedicts, Fred Johnson of Eureka, Utah, and Dr. Alfred Brown of Baltimore, Maryland, who were to do the battery work, failed to sign up a third benedict to play a fielding position.

The meeting was held after the dinner and Fred Johnson, Harvard '08, was elected president. George A. Sullivan of this city was chosen vice president and Alden H. Blanchard, Amherst '08, boys' director at the Y. M. C. A., was made secretary-treasurer. The members talked over plans to re-organize the alumni association of the academy graduates and definite steps will be taken to bring this about after the summer season. It was voted to hold the next reunion next year at the same place.

Leslie A. McCormick of Willard street has been spending the week end with his aunt at Campello.

GIVES REASONS FOR APPEAL

Nearly everyone in the city has learned by today that William J. Vaughn, through counsel J. J. McAnarney, has appealed from the decision of Perry Green, overseer of the poor, who refused to reinstate him as warden of the almshouse.

The petition which was filed with the clerk of the district court Tuesday, states the reasons for the appeal as follows:

"That owing to the indefiniteness of the charges and the failure to furnish data requested, he (Mr. Vaughn) was unprepared to meet said charges, and that notwithstanding his protest the hearing proceeded and he was compelled to participate therein, and that owing to your respondent being unaware as to when several witnesses would state the definite acts or occurences took place he was unable either to advise his counsel that he might properly cross examine said witnesses or to meet such evidence as was then and there offered."

EPWORTH LEAGUE SOCIAL.

The Epworth League of the Atlantic Methodist church held a social and entertainment in the vestry Tuesday evening. The principal attractions were whistling solos by Mrs. Seavers of Newton, whose canary-like whistle charmed those present. Other features were a cello solo by Miss Mabelle Crockett accompanied by Miss Alice Beal and old home selections by the Epworth League orchestra, Miss Alice Beal, pianist, Miss Mabelle Crockett, cello, Eric Felt and Russell Dicey 1st violins and Miss Mary Beal 2nd violin. Refreshments were served during the evening by the members of the Junior league. It was a very successful affair and thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

Two or three days this week Quincy people have found a furnace fire comfortable.

NO OPPORTUNITY FOR AMENDMENT

Senator Langelier Fights for Referendum on Quincy Grade Crossing Bill

Only Seven Senators Favorable to the Bill

The adverse report of the Ways and Means Committee of the Senate on the Quincy grade crossing bill came up for action in the Senate on Wednesday and was accepted 20 to 7, which brings to an end the grade crossing controversy in Quincy.

Senator Langelier made a fight for the bill, particularly on the referendum, and had his amendments been accepted, the bill would have been very acceptable to Quincy. But there was no opportunity for amendment. The question came on acceptance of the adverse report.

Mr. Langelier gave notice that he would move the following amendments if the report was rejected:

In Section 1, line 6, after the word "railroads" insert "and raise grades of streets where necessary."

In Section 5, line 10, after the word "therefore" insert "such expense to be borne equally by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and"

In Section 7, line 4, after the word "question" insert "shall the Supreme Court decree plan for the abolition of grade crossings in the City of Quincy to be known as Plan No. 1 or" In line 7 after the word "tracks" insert "to be known as Plan No. 2."

In lines 9 and 10 cross out the words "upon said section are in the affirmative" and insert in their place "for Plan No. 2."

In substance the above amendments not only perfect the bill but further protect the interests of Quincy.

Without the Section 1 amendment there was no authority to raise the grades of streets and the only alternative would have been to close them up.

The amendment to Section 5 is based on the theory that if the decree plan is wrong, the State of Massachusetts through its Commissions is responsible and naturally any damages accruing should in justice to the City of Quincy be partially borne by the Commonwealth.

The amendment to Section 7 provides for all the voters of Quincy having an opportunity to express their

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

No issue of the Daily Ledger will be printed on Saturday, the Fourth of July. Many of the Saturday features will appear in the Daily Ledger of Friday and announcements and large advertisements should be forwarded early on Thursday. Don't wait until Friday as that will be our busy day.

Church correspondents should make their report for Monday's Ledger very brief, as most of the paper will be devoted to Fourth of July reports.

Having licked the Federals in good shape, the Constitutionalists failed to pursue them, fearing they might capture them and end the war.

The railroads are cutting down the number of trains and cars, but that is all right so long as they don"t use any less handsome marble on their big terminals.

The boys can swim perfectly well in four feet of water, but there wouldn't be any chance of getting drowned.

Having conferred learned degrees on all the lawyers, doctors, ministers, business men, and politicians, it would seem as if next commencement the colleges should do similar honor to the farmers, butchers, bakers, and insurance agents.

It is hoped no one will be so hard on a boy as to give him $10 worth of firecrackers and make him go off into a quiet place and set them off.

If the Sunday School teachers will make all the lemonade and ice cream, put up swings and mark out the ballground the pupils are willing to favor them by going on a picnic.

The new dance called "half and half" will probably be popular about as long as the dancing teachers can find any one to teach it to.

If the college girls who have just graduated wish to acquire a husband, they will have to study up on baseball and sedulously conceal the fact that they are familiar with Mr. Browning's poetry.

It would never do for baseball players to shave every day, as they would not look rough enough to scare the other team.

LENGTHENING HUMAN LIFE.

The present generation of young people should live 15 years longer than their parents. The latter lived 15 years longer than did their ancesters of 100 years previous.

At least, this is what Dr. V. C. Vaughn, the new president of the American Medical Association, told that body the past week at their Atlantic City convention.

The death rate was reduced in a century in London, for instance, from 50 per thousand to 24. Twice as many children live to grow up now. It was formerly quite an achievement for a young person to acquire maturity. Small pox used to kill one in ten of the population.

Still the ordinary observer of human life can hardly believe that the babies of today are going to gain any 15 years. Diseases like cancer, brights, heart troubles, are increasing. The science of modern life saves the infants, but the pace of human life kills the old folks.

It is a good deal like a paragraph seen in some paper the other day. A young man was reported as seeking a $5 per week increase of pay and getting it. He immediately telephoned his wife that she could close the deal for another house at an increased rental of $20 a month. Added income means added outgo.

If a man through better science or physical exercise acquires increased strength, he rarely uses it in building up a reserve of resistance against troubles to come. Ordinarily he uses it in speeding up his business pace, so that he can make more money.

What is needed for a greater longevity is not so much more science, as a better spirit of philosophy. It is just as important to live within our physical means, saving up a reservoir of energy against future drains, as to live within our financial means and acquire a bank balance.

NATION-WIDE CALL FOR AID

Salem Relief Committee May Be Forced to Make One

FIFTEEN THOUSAND HOMELESS

Funds, Though Generous, Are Inadequate to Meet Demands—Governor Asks Legislature to Authorize Bond Issues and Abate State Taxes—Known Criminals Driven From City

Salem, Mass., July 2.—As the catastrophe which struck Salem is measured up by the public-spirited men who have assumed responsibility for the care of the refugees and their re-establishment in life, it is found to be far beyond what can be handled with the funds that are coming in.

Salem needs much more money. This was agreed upon at a meeting where the general committee canvassed the situation from every angle, and it was deemed to be so urgent that Governor Walsh was called by telephone and requested to call a meeting of the committee of fourteen which he summoned to meet with him at the state house.

The governor at once agreed to call that committee together at the state house today. The general relief committe in Salem was advised by its finance committee that at the rate money was coming in now it will be wholly inadequate. There is only about $300,000 on hand. At least $750,000 will be needed, and probably around $1,000,000.

It was pointed out at the meeting that the relief and rehabilitation must soon be put to a permanent basis. With 15,000 persons not only homeless, but out of employment, and no prospect of work in the immediate future, a nation-wide appeal for help may become necessary.

The mayor of New York telephoned to Salem and informed Ernest Bicknell, national director of the Red Cross, that he will issue an earnest appeal in New York.

Governor Walsh sent to the legislature a special message asking for speedy legislation for the relief of Salem.

The first of two bills accompanying the message authorizes the city of Salem to borrow $70,000 outside its debt limit by the issue of bonds for a loan to run forty years at 4½ percent interest, the income from the said bonds to be used for the construction of buildings and for other municipal purposes.

The second bill provides that the state tax of the city of Salem be abated for the current year, and that the city may borrow $100,000 on a ten years' loan for the purpose of recouping its revenue in anticipation of taxes. These bonds, issued to mature in 10 years, are also at the rate of 4½ percent.

The message was referred to the committee on taxation.

The most strenuous efforts on both the part of the police and of the militia are now centred on the routing of swindlers in many forms who are threatening to swamp the city unless their efforts are so heartily discouraged at the beginning of their campaign that the helpless people will not have to bear the added burden of their presence and their predatory purposes.

Summary action was taken by the police in disposing of pickpockets, fake isurance adjusters, fake fire sufferers who have sought aid from the milita and various private distributors, and those who have sought clothing with the purpose of selling it.

Only two arrests were made, though, the remainder having been given a warning which City Marshal Lehan announced in no uncertain terms would be the last that would be given any offenders. Any one caught doing things of the sort from now on were warned that they will be dealt with to the full extent of the law.

From the temper of the crowds who are gradually learning that there are those who are seeking to impose, and thus lessen their own chances of much-needed aid from outside sources, there may be no need of police interference except to save the lives of offenders in case these are caught by the fire sufferers.

Pickpockets and other known criminals are not even given a chance of getting into Salem in the ordinary ways, for at the railroad station six state officers and ten special officers in plain clothes are stationed with orders to intercept any of this gentry and to hold them till the next train leaves and see that they are aboard.

SANATORIUM IN MIDAIR

Will Be Used Exclusively For Patients With Weak Hearts

Cleveland, July 2.—A sanatorium 2000 feet in the air, sustained by a balloon and anchored to the earth by a cable, will be opened above Cleveland next month. Only patients with heart weakness will be accepted. The sanatorium will ascend each evening and descend the next morning.

Dr. Rudolph Heym, Jr., the proprietor, holds that people affected with weak hearts can be cured in a higher altitude where the air is lighter.

MAYOR SMOKED THEM OUT

Says He Made the Councilmen Show Their Hands

Mayor Miller intimates that he set a trap for the City Council, when he defeated the orders sent to the Council on Wednesday night, and that the Councilmen walked into the trap.

After the meeting the Mayor in speaking of the action in passing the orders notwithstanding his objection, said: "Some of the Councilmen have been opposed to me for many months while pretending to be favorable to me. I had a chance to smoke them out tonight, and I think I made them show their hands."

The action of the City Council is unprecedented in his history of the City of Quincy. Never before have as many vetoes been received at any one meeting, and never before have a lot of vetoes been turned down without a word of debate as on Wednesday evening. With an attendance of 22 out of 23 members, the vote on all of the vetoes with one exception, was 18 in favor of passing over the veto and three in favor of sustaining the veto.

On one of the orders, that for fireworks for the Fourth of July, 17 voted to pass over the Mayor's veto and four supported him. Councilman Barker, Richards and Sodergren supported the Mayor on every veto, and on the July Fourth order Councilman Carlson joined them and voted to sustain the Mayor.

There is some question if the City Council will be able to reach an adjournment next Monday evening as planned. The matter that will hold up the adjournment will probably be the addition to the Washington school. The Finance Committee met Wednesday evening before the council meeting in an effort to reach a decision on the order, but were unable to, although the committee remained in session for fifteen minutes after the Council had been called to order.

The letter of the Mayor to the School Committee on Tuesday evening is generally considered as a sign that should the order pass the Council and get to the Mayor, that he would promptly veto it. The Finance committee met immediately after the Council meeting and will hold still another meeting before the meeting of Monday evening. Should the committee report the order the amount will have to be increased which will mean that the order would have to have another reading, making a meeting of the Council later in the week necessary.

CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATES

The announcement that Congressman Gilmore was to be appointed postmaster at Brockton, his home city, opened up several lights on the political situation in the 14th district that were not generally known.

Richard Olney, 2nd, of Dedham, who lost the nomination to Mr. Gilmore, has not announced that he will be on the ticket this year but he has the matter under consideration and may make a statement before Monday.

Dr. John Kiggen of Hyde Park, a man who has been prominent in county affairs, is a candidate and his Quincy friends have already commenced a popularity campaign in his behalf.

It is certain also that several candidates will come forward from the Brockton district and when the time comes for the registered Democrat to make a choice of a party candidate this fall he may be surprised to find that his choice lays between seven or eight men.

Quincy Republicans have a live candidate in Frank Fessenden Crane, who has been speaking in many towns of the district on the development of water ways. A Milton gentleman also aspires for the Republican nomination.

Assuming for the sake of argument that Col. Henry L. Kincaide decides to enter the contest, and is nominated, and that Mr. Crane is the Republican nominee, many Quincy voters will be placed in a position of having to make a choice between men for whom they have the highest regard, regardless of their party affiliations.

David W. Murray of Hyde Park it is said will again be a candidate for the senate and will again have as his opponent Louis F. R. Langelier, the present incumbent. It has also been said that Representative Michael T. Sullivan is a senatorial aspirant and rumor also connects him with the county commissionership.

THE SPIRIT OF '76

The children think that the chairman of their entertainment committee is almost as big a man as Mr. 4th of July. Ask the first one that you meet about it.

Better get some sleep tonight. You will feel fresher for it.

We will have a use for that check, make it a good sized one and see us smile—the smile that won't come off.

Chief Billings will sleep standing up for the next 48 hours. He informed me last week that he will have a large tapper or bell cut into the fire alarm on Hancock street, near Merry Mount Park, and during the fireworks he will be there with his auto and will also have a chemical there to respond in case of fire. He is a live one.

Boys, please do not set any bon fires where they are liable to destroy property, and please do not set any in the morning, as our citizens would like to see our fire department, or at least a part of it in the parade, and frequent calls for the department for fires will cause that feature to be omitted.

Parents, your children will be well taken care of by the managers of the theatres on the afternoon of the Fourth. They are polite, considerate, and very careful, having children of their own. Ask the children if they had a good time last year. Have them come promptly at 2 P. M. so that the performance can commence on time, and thus give a good long show.

Notice the stranger in town and speak right up to him. Show him that we are hospitable and then he will come again, and perhaps become a citizen. Boost the city, don't knock it.

What every citizen should say—Quincy has the goods and can deliver them. ASK ME.

Chief Marshal Phelan has appointed Albert Keating as Chief of Aids. Mr. Keating has the distinction of being Chief of Aids of practically every Fourth of July parade since 1872. Though advanced in years his eye is clear and his enthusiasm is up to the highest pitch. He is a veteran and the spirit of '61 will be in evidence as he rides on his horse on Saturday.

Senator Langelier spoke for ten minutes or more against acceptance of the committee's report and in favor of his amendments, particularly the referendum. The vote however was 20 to 7 on acceptance of the adverse report.

Any attempt at reconsideration would be futile, therefore Quincy's grade crossings at Saville and Water streets will be abolished by the "Decree plan." Land takings have already been made but work may be delayed.

NOTABLE GUESTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Wrigley had a very pleasant call on Tuesday from the Rev. Archdeacon Duffield of Garden City, who was a choir boy in Christ church when Mr. Wrigley was organist in the times of Rev. H. Evan Cotton. On the same day they entertained Mr. and Mrs. Alex Ferguson and daughter Esther. Mr. Ferguson also sang as tenor in Christ church at the same time and will be remembered by many in Quincy as tenor in the Unitarian church for three years. They are on a trip around the world and leave Friday for England, their little girl being at a private ladies seminary in Norwood, London.

CITY COUNCIL

poverty that is in our city, and how very many poor people are pressed to the very wall for money to pay their taxes, and how they come to City Hall to plead with us to let their taxes go and not sell their property, you would know that to have a house and lot in your name does not make you wealthy by any means, and very often as poor as the poorest.

"So when suffering is plain all around us, and people are pleading for mercy at the city's hands, I cannot sign this order. Even though the amount may be small in your eyes, it would help many a poor person with their taxes.

"Moreover this is not a city celebration, as Ward Six has no part in it, nor have they asked for any money from the city for it. I think this should be given due consideration. Then again the Fourth of July association advertised on their posters that they would not get any money from the city this year, and therefore wished the people to make their contributions larger. Taking these things into consideration it would appear that you must agree with me in thinking that the appropriation should not be made.

"This order also calls for the amount to be taken from the school funds which we receive from the State Will our people not hold us strictly accountable for this? I think so. And I hope you will retract your action before it is too late."

The question was on passing the order notwithstanding the objection of the Mayor. The vote was taken by roll call and was as follows:—

Yes—Bailey, Barrows, Bass, Beenan, Barnicoat, Corcoran, Craig, Ericson, Gilliatt, Griffin, Gelotte, Hadlock, Little, Nelson, Ross, Thompson, Williams: 17.

No—Barker, Carlson, Richards, Sodergren: 4.

Absent—O'Dowd.

Not voting—President Whiton.

ROSELIN AVENUE.

Returning the order accepting Roselin avenue, the Mayor said he could give no good reason for accepting this street this year and there were many streets that needed money worse.

This order was passed over the veto by a vote of 18 to 3, Councilman Barker, Richards and Sodergren supporting the Mayor.

FEDERAL AVENUE.

On Federal avenue extension, the Mayor said that as much as he would like to sign this order he thought that it should wait for another year, for we must recognize that our expenses have been lavish. This order was passed over the veto by a vote of 18 to 3, Councilman Barker, Richards and Sodergren supporting the Mayor.

PARK LANE.

In returning the order accepting a part of Park lane, the Mayor said he could see no good reason for accepting and building this street this year. There were so many streets that needed the money worse he felt justified in refusing his signature.

This order was also passed over the veto 18 to 3, the same three councilmen mentioned above supporting the Mayor.

SUPPLEMENTARY BUDGET.

The last veto of the evening was of five items in the supplementary budget, namely, paved gutters Cranch street, $1,500; paved gutters Whitwell street, $800; paved gutters both sides of Rogers street, $1,000; rebuilding part of Bennington street, $1,000; rebuilding Scammell street, $2,000.

In his veto the Mayor says that we can fix Bennington street amply well from the street appropriation. On Scammell street, he said "Scammell street is kept in such a dirty condition by the carriage manufacturers that it would only be a waste of money for the city to rebuild it."

The vote on this veto was taken separately on each item, and all were passed over the veto by a vote of 18 to 3, the Councilmen mentioned above supporting the Mayor.

OCEAN STREET HEARING.

A public hearing was held at 8 o'clock on the acceptance of Ocean street. George W. Baker appeared in favor and no one against. The hearing then closed and the order laid on the table until later when Councilman Gilliatt offered an order accepting the street which was referred to the Finance Committee.

At 8.10 a public hearing was held on several petitions for location of poles on Water street, Clairmont avenue, Sea street and Elm avenue. The only objection was by Mr. McDonnell of Water street to a pole directly in front of his property.

The petition for poles on Elm avenue was recommitted and later in the evening Councilman Gilliatt offered orlers granting the locations on Water and Sea streets and Clairmont avenue. Referred to Committee on Streets.

A petition of the Telephone Co. for attachments on Prospect avenue was granted.

Several applications for minor licenses were received and referred to the License committee and a petition for a license to keep gasoline from L. D. T. Gurney was referred to the same committee.

The application of Harry W. Hartwell for a Sunday fruit license was laid on the table until later when it was granted.

The License committee reported orders granting a number of minor licenses which were adopted.

The same committee reported leave to withdraw on the applications of Jacob Asnes, William Hanrahan, J. P. Moses and Joseph Broderick for Sunday fruit licenses. Report accepted.

WEST QUINCY LAWN PARTY.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Hall Place M. E. church held their annual lawn party on the church grounds, Wednesday afternoon and evening, and although it was not a very pleasant day, it was enjoyed by all. An early adjournment to the vestry was made on account of the rain, and the only things lacking there to convince anyone that a lawn party was in progress were the blue sky and the green grass.

The room was prettily and tastefully decorated with Japanese lanterns, bunting, flags and flowers, the decorations being in charge of Rev. P. S. Neldon, Mrs. Wm. McCormick and Mrs. Badger. Mrs. F. L. Badger was in charge of the candy table and Mrs. Hawes, Mrs. McNeil the apron table.

D. H. McNeil presided over the ice cream and was assisted by Harold and Robert McCormick.

Tonic table—R. Newcomb and Leslie McCormick.

Ticket committee—Mrs. R. Newcomb.

Mrs. John Smith of Rogers street, loaned her victrola and this furnished music throughout the evening.

Music and games were indulged in by the young people and in spite of the rain the lawn party proved successful and enjoyable.

CITY RECEIPTS SIX MONTHS

Tax Collections Much Smaller Than in 1913

Six months of 1914 have gone. Although the tax levy is larger each year the tax collections of 1914 are not as large by over $50,000.00 as they were in the same period of 1913 and the water receipts although larger than in 1913, are not as large as for the first six months of 1912. Here are the figures of City Auditor Fairbanks:

TAX RECEIPTS.

1914 to July 1	$217,641.25
1913 to July 1	275,707.95
1912 to July 1	193,717.37

WATER RECEIPTS.

1914 to July 1	$54,159.12
1913 to July 1	51,907.50
1912 to July 1	56,890.25

SEWER ASSESSMENTS.

1914 to July 1	$10,524.05
1913 to July 1	10,314.25
1912 to July 1	9,695.75

SEWER CONNECTIONS.

1914 to July	$3,962.57
1913 to July 1	3,309.66
1912 to July 1	2,850.12

The borrowing capacity July 1 was $371,422.00. This amount will be reduced when the loan orders authorized the last of June are negotiated.

Thus far in 1914, no new loans chargeable to the City debt have been issued, but $25,000.00 have been borrowed for sewer extensions and $26,000 for water extensions.

The debt payments in 1914 have been: City debt, $91,425.00; street improvements $5,800.00; sewer $25,000.00 and witer $30,500.00 The figures show a decrease in the totai debt of $101,725.00, but most of this will be wiped out when the loans already passed by the City Council are issued.

These orders include: $30,500 for Hancock street widening, $23,000 for Houghs Neck school, $40,700 for acceptance of streets, $6,300 for sidewalks, $7,700 for Penn street, the addition to the Massachusetts Field school lot, and other loan orders.

Because of the drop in receipts the City Treasurer finds it necessary to ask authority to issue more temporary loans, which will increase the interest account.

OLIVER—ROSS.

Harry W. Oliver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Oliver of Mill street and Miss Christy Ross, were married at Providence on Tuesday in the presence of their immediate relatives and many Quincy friends. Russell Oliver, a brother of the groom, and Miss Jennie Ross, a sister of the bride, were attendants.

Mr. Oliver is the third child of the family to embark on the matrimonial sea inside of six months. He holds a responsible position with the Connecticut River Transmission Co. and is now located in Newbury, Mass., where he and his bride will make their home.

The start of their honeymoon which will embrace the principal cities of the west, was eventful for the couple found on entering their stateroom on the New York boat that their friends had been there before them. Many handsome bouquets and a choice arrangement of flowers were only some of the surprises received.

At the wedding supper which followed the ceremony the old fashioned custom of having two wedding cakes was revived, and each of the guests received a piece from the bride and groom.

Mr. and Mrs. Oliver and the Quincy friends who attended returned home Wednesday afternoon.

OLD SECRET IS BARED

Fees of Suffolk County's Sheriff Reach $26,000 Annually

Boston, July 2.—An old-time mystery in local politics has been solved by the finance commission. It relates to the fees annually flowing into the office of the sheriff of Suffolk county by the service of writs. Heretofore only sheriffs have been in on the secret.

Now the public is informed by the commission, which has it from Sheriff Quinn himself, that a snug little fortune if $26,000 comes his way annually, outside of salaries.

The commission investigated the subject in view of a house bill which seeks to increase the salary of Quinn from $3000 to $4000 a year. It finds that Quinn, who also receives $1000 as keeper of Charles street jail, has not participated in the annual fees, but has allowed the deputies to share them equally.

As the sheriff declared that he would not struggle longer for an increase in salary if he be allowed to pocket some of the fees, the commission recommends that the salary bill be killed.

SCORES FEMINIST TREND

Declared by Doctor to Lead to Immoral Dress and Dances

Atlantic City, N. J., July 2.—The feminist movement, which encourages women to "imitate the vices as well as the manners of men," cannot help but have a deleterious effect upon the public welfare, said Dr. Richardson, professor of nervous diseases at Boston university, speaking before the American Institute of Homeopathy, in convention here. He advocated legislation to correct the extremes to which femininity is going in dress and modern dances.

The doctor declared that much of the blame of crime may be laid on the dress of women and the tango.

"Women in creations designed for the Paris demi-monde vie with each other as to how far they may reveal the form," he said.

"Modern dance halls are the nursery of the divorce courts and the graduating school of infamy. Our young people's dances defy description. They are impure, contaminating and deadly."

London, July 2.—With Rev. Wells knocked out Bell in the second round, winning a $10,000 purse besides the championship.

Digby, besides being master of ceremonies, was the official director of the contest and the supervisor of order among the spectators.

KILLED BY WAR RELIC

Former Sailor In United States Navy Is Blown Up by Shell

Brockton, Mass., July 2.—Thomas W. Cook, 26, was killed, and Stephen F. Heal, 29, maimed for life when a six-pound rapid fire percussion shell from which Cook was trying to remove the plug exploded.

Cook's death was instantaneous. Heal's right hand was blown off and his left badly mangled. The force of the explosion partially wrecked the house where the two men lived.

The shell was a relic of the revolution in China for the overthrow of the imperial dynasty. It was brought home by Cook, who at that time was a sailor on the U. S. S. Helena, one of the international fleet, then stationed in Chinese waters. Cook and Heal decided to take the shell apart to see how it was charged.

ENTHUSIASM IN COMMITTEE

Fourth of July Association Happy over Appropriation

The Fourth of July committee is meeting every night this week and on Wednesday evening its program included the arrangement of the last details of the separate committees under the direction of which Quincy is to again hold a safe and sane celebration with conservatism in the deep background.

Former Mayor Eugene R. Stone presided, and the number present exceeded that at past meetings. More real live enthusiasm prevailed than has been seen in the rooms of the Board of Trade for a year and each chairman appeared to have plenty of work on hand while his associates crowded around to discuss the last features.

The real pleasure for the association, the one that thrilled them as nothing else can do, was the news that the Council had passed the annual appropriation over the veto of Mayor Miller. President Stone, who for two successive years signed the order when presented, did not have the honor of making the announcement because the person that carried the glad news, popped into the room and couldn't keep it secret. His face was wreathed in smiles and his every inch of stature breathed the fact that the association had received the assistance of the city despite the attitude of its chief executive.

And Theodore Du Plessis, treasurer of the fund that is being contributed to defray the expenses of the observance, created more enthusiasm when he announced that money was coming in regular order and that many small sums had been recived. His mention of $50 by the owners of the Tubular Rivet & Stud Co., $25 by the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation, $10 each from the Wollaston Foundry and the Boston Gear Works, and other establishments was received with applause, and although there is no superfluous amount of coin on hand it is expected that the swelling of the list in this, the closing hours, will be enough to take care of all of the bills.

There will be no battleship in Quincy waters on July Fourth this year, and in fact no battleship will be assigned to any city this year. Many of the battleships are now in Mexican waters, and others are so located that they cannot readily be assigned to any city. This is mainly the reason why the Navy department at Washington has been obliged to refuse all requests for battleships on the Fourth this year.

However what will be lost by not having a battleship in Quincy waters will be made up in other ways. For instance the famous D troop of cavalry will be in the city for two days, and their attractive red coats will be quite a feature. Then several companies of the Cardinal cadets from Charlestown will be present and participate in the parade and it is expected that other military organizations from out of town will be present.

T. C. Du Plessis, chairman of the Finance committee has forwarded to the Daily Ledger several additional lists of contributors to the fund. Councilman Charles Gilliatt has raised nearly $100 among the industries at Wollaston and Norfolk Downs. Messrs. Stone, Diack and Elcock have raised over $50 among the granite manufacturers. A Ward One collector has raised $8 and a Ward Two collector $6. Robert Craig has collected $13, Leo Early $5.10, D. Littlewood $7.70, P. Savard $7.55 and M. Cady $4.45.

James H. Elcock has raised $31.50 in Ward Four, and William H. Teasdale has collected $16 in the same ward.

In Ward Three, Ben Johnson has collected $5.10 and F. Mennier $4.15.

The above lists include about 200 contributors.

SIZING UP HUERTA FACE TO FACE WITHOUT FEAR OR FAVOR

Determination, Audacity and Cunning His Dominant Characteristics.

Master Schemer, but Losing Because the World Is Too Strong For Him.

WHAT kind of a man is the real Huerta? How has he been able to hold his own with all the diplomats of Europe and the state department in Washington? These questions Paul Davis essays to answer in the New York Times.

When General Huerta invited a few months ago American newspaper men to visit Mexico one of those who accepted was Mr. Davis. After being received by the Mexican executive he continued his journey into the interior. He got to the front, saw battles and skirmishes and finally landed in jail, where he remained some time, in imminent danger of being taken out and shot by his captors. Finally he regained his freedom, reached Vera Cruz and returned to the United States. This article by him tells of his personal experiences with General Huerta:

A man short and stocky, with squared shoulders—shoulders that have been loaded down, but refuse to sag; a hard square chin and a mouth that snaps tight, nostrils that dilate as an Indian's should and then eyes that peer, that search you out and bore through you—this was the man Don Victoriano Huerta as I saw him enter the National palace in Mexico City.

A Man With a Punch.

For months Huerta had been damned as an assassin and lauded as a patriot. Whichever he might be, there was no denying he had the punch. He had shot out of total obscurity when the spotlight discovered him standing on Madero's dead body at the end of that ten days' fighting through the streets of Mexico. And the reason why he had emerged on top and not some other politician or general had become apparent. He has brains—practical, put it through brains.

It seemed that our presentation to him was to be a formal occasion, and such things take time in Mexico. At last the hour was appointed and we were escorted to the National palace.

This palace is a relic of bygone days when Spanish emperors ruled over the land of the Aztecs. Most of its furnishings I found were relics, too, musty with the atmosphere of a dead monarchy. Brown soldiers in the blue uniforms with red edgings of the Twenty-ninth regiment, the backbone of the army, guard the doors. Military aids, secretaries, state officials and diplomats tread softly through its rooms and corridors holding whispered conferences behind their hands. Even the canopies and draperies seem to shroud secrets. It is all very impressive and mysterious.

Brisk and Businesslike.

An hour rolls by, and then the double doors are thrown open, several secretaries and cabinet officers come in, looking as guilty as pallbearers, and—enter Huerta.

Before he has taken three steps into the room everything has wakened up. He wears a little brown hat pulled down over his eyes. He has a touch of the rolling gait of a man who has spent most of his life in the saddle and plants his heels quick and hard. The introductions are run through with in short order. We seat ourselves by his direction—he even hustles a few chairs—and, signing to his interpreter, he begins to talk.

Two men have been pointed out to me as "the chap who writes Huerta's speeches for him." But nobody needs to write speeches for Huerta. He can speak for himself. He talks with careful emphasis, and to aid our weak Spanish he enunciates with painstaking care. He hunts for just the right word, and when he catches it if it tries to elude him he gives a little grunt of approbation that is traditionally Indian. As I sit almost at his knee he shoots a glance at me after each sentence and occasionally says in English, "Understand?" I nod "Yes," whether or not, and he goes on.

He has a mammoth map of the republic brought in, and, pointer in hand, like any schoolmaster, he lines us up and gives us our lesson in Mexican geography. He points out the territory that Villa and Carranza hold, taking care not to exaggerate their holdings.

"They aren't rebels," he explains. "They are bandits. They are fighting for loot, not liberty. They pillage, murder, violate women. They are entirely beyond the pale of civilization and will be dealt with accordingly."

Shrewd and Witty.

Huerta is not to be caught napping. He is shrewd and he is witty.

"How much money," I asked him, "will you need to conduct your campaign against these bandits?"

"Thirty cents apiece for ropes to hang them," he flashed back.

"And how long will it take to rid the country of them?" I persisted. He had been bluffing a bit about the strength of his army. Now there was the glint of a laugh in his eye as he explained his answer must not be taken too seriously, and he said, "How old is God?"

We were at liberty to go anywhere through the country that we chose, he told us, promising that all our questions would be answered frankly, that military escorts would be provided if we wished to go to the front, and that he and the whole machinery of government were at our disposal. After this expansive invitation he led us to the banquet table and there corrected my pronunciation of "Salut!" the Spanish equivalent of "Here's luck!" to be pronounced over your cognac—cognac, not cocktails, begins every spread in Mexico.

His Rainy Day Fund.

Huerta drinks enough cognac to make any American's hair curl, but the stories of his drunken rampages are wild. It may be that he can't drink enough to bowl him over. His capacity for cognac is the despair of his followers. But no one ever sees him unsteady on his legs or hears him talk with a thick tongue.

The first entry in the biography of Don Victoriano Huerta will read that he was born an Indian. And the last entry in that book should be: "He died an Indian." First, last, and all the time Huerta is an Indian. There are 15,000,000 people in Mexico. Twelve millions are Indians, nearly half of them full bloods. Huerta is the last "big chief" the world will ever see.

There are stories of the millions he has shipped abroad and placed to his private account in Paris. They would be hard to prove. Millions have been scarce in Mexico during the past two years. By an accident I learned that he has a rainy day fund in bills and gold to the extent of several hundred thousand dollars—even "the old man" himself doesn't know how much—stored away in his safe.

If he were playing the game for money alone he would have slipped out before this. Huerta is greedy of power. He brooks no interference and will risk no rival. General Mondragon, a really capable military man, was minister of war during the first months of his administration. The war portfolio is the most ticklish in the cabinet. Huerta grew uneasy about Mondragon. He gave a banquet for him. When the time for the toasts arrived Huerta arose and announced that he was feeling very triste that evening—very melancholy indeed. His dear friend, General Mondragon was leaving for Paris tomorrow.

A Futile Protest.

"Why—a—you mistake, your excellency," Mondragon protested. "I am not leaving for Paris."

"Yes, my dear general; yes, you are. An important mission," Huerta insisted.

"But I am not prepared," persisted the general, floundering for excuses. "I have no trunks; no"—

"Don't worry. I'll send you trunks," snapped Huerta. And to make it plain that he was in earnest Huerta sent around thirty fat trunks to the Mondragon residence early next morning. Mondragon packed the trunks, and Huerta went to the station and bade him an all but tearful farewell. He likes Mondragon, but he likes to be sure of him.

"The old man" has real and dark troubles abroad during his exile, but they have been nothing compared to his troubles at home. The worst of his troubles is money. How he managed to squeeze through a year and a half with his credit cut off and the revolution growing bigger every day is a mystery even to the financiers closest to the throne. His creditors have been barking around him every day.

Bluffing His Creditors.

Once he called them all up to the palace, those with large accounts. They were shuffled from room to room and the gloom deepened. Finally "the old man" burst in on them. For twenty minutes he abused them for their greed. "Money!" he yelled. "You want money! Well, the government has money. There! And there!" and from every pocket he pulled out handfuls of gold coin and threw it around the room. "Now, go home! And come back tomorrow. Kiss your families goodby and come back to collect your bills."

The American automobile man who told me of this scene went back the next day. And he got his money, $80,000. But "the old man" bluffed a lot of them out. There is no trick he is not ready to turn to win.

Face to face with General Huerta I could scarcely believe that he was over sixty. His vitality is enormous. He is a two handed talker, short, gripping hands they are, and he makes jabs with his fist to drive his point home. The thing that grows on you is the capacity of the man. When all his resources are exhausted he has will power to go on. It is this power of personality that is holding the remnants of his forces together today.

Why He Isn't a Bigger Man.

As you watch him you wonder why he has not become the idol of the populace. He has the magnetism and the dominance that ought to catch them in spite of themselves. And the reason probably is that there isn't any populace in Mexico. By this I mean the people at large know they have no voice in the government. Government to them spells oppression. They are dumb, driven things. And Huerta is a driver. He cracks the whip and rounds up the men. "More cannon meat," they say as a squad of volunteers goes marching down the street under the rifles of soldiers who have been broken to the wheel.

The days of despots in Mexico are probably numbered. What sort of despot Huerta would have proved had he got control is now beside the mark. He has played the game. He has not overlooked a trick. He is losing because the world is too strong for him.

AN OLD SCHOOL POLITICIAN.

Sketch of the Late Frank Hiscock, Who Was Twice a Democrat.

The late Frank Hiscock was one of the old school politicians who helped to make famous the political history of the last quarter of the nineteenth century.

Hiscock was a natural politician. He was born at Pompey, Onondaga county, N. Y., seventy-nine years ago. He got on good terms with Levi P. Morton, James G. Blaine, Roscoe Conkling, David B. Hill, Chester A. Arthur, Thomas C. Platt and many other influential men of both of the big parties.

After the free soil movement in 1856 that supported General Fremont Mr. Hiscock became a Republican. When Horace Greeley was nominated in 1872 Mr. Hiscock went over to that side and was nominated for congress by the Liberal Republicans and Democrats of his district. But he failed of election, and when the Greeley candidacy collapsed Mr. Hiscock returned to the Republican party. He finally reinstated himself with the leaders of the party and in 1876 got the nomination for congress and was elected.

In 1887, while he served in the house, he was elected a United States senator and served on important committees.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

Useful to the student of the situation in Ireland are the three new books which the Thomas Crane public library has just added. The first "Two Irish nations: an essay on home rule," by William Flavelle Monypenny is divided into two parts, part 1: Ireland and home rule, part 2: the present home rule bill. The second "A fool's paradise," by Albert Venn Dicey is "a constitutionalist's criticism of the home rule bill of 1912." The last "Is Ulster right," by An Irishman is "a statement of the question at issue between Ulster and the Nationalist party, and of thereasons, historical, political and financial why Ulster is justified in opposing home rule."

Useful to a different class of student the research worker, and also to the general reader, is the A. L. A. portrait index. This work indexes portraits from about 1,181 titles, or some 6,216 volumes including popular books and periodicals, and also rare and expensive works to be found only in large libraries, the book is intended to be used both in large and small libraries.

Two other books lately added are "Modern dancing," by Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, and "Best stories in the world" compiled and edited by Thomas L. Masson of "Life." The book on dancing gives directions for dancing the new dances with pictures illustrating the various steps. The stories are humorous, witty and satirical. An index is so arranged as to make the stories useful to after dinner speakers, but as the editor says, they must be taken in small doses.

CRASH THROUGH OFFICE WINDOW

Pistol Held In Woman's Hand Kills Innocent Victim

CONCLUSION OF THE POLICE

Belief That Bullet Which Caused Death of Woman Was Meant For Physician Upon Whom She Was Calling—Both Prominent In Long Island Social Circles

Freeport, L. I., July 2.—Mrs. Louise Bailey, who was murdered in the office of Dr. Edwin Carman, was killed by a bullet that was meant for the physician, the police determined.

Mrs. Bailey and Carman were in consultation in his office shortly after 8 o'clock at night when a revolver was pushed crashing through the glass of a window of the office. The hand in which the revolver was held was barely visible to Carman, who was standing with Mrs. Bailey at the door. He saw just a couple of fingers and realizing the danger dodged behind an operating chair. One shot was fired. It struck Mrs. Bailey under the arm and killed her almost instantly.

After an investigation the police satisfied themselves that the bullet which killed Mrs. Bailey was meant for Carmen. They were sure, too, that Carman's story of the shooting was substantially correct.

Mrs. Bailey and Carman had paused just a moment at the door as she was leaving after receiving some medicine from him. She had asked him the time and as he held his watch in his hand the shot came. Had Mrs. Bailey continued out the door instead of pausing for a moment the bullet would not have touched her.

The police were inclined for a time to believe the murder was committed by a woman, but on investigating some of the clews that resulted in this theory they found only more puzzling developments, and finally refused to say whether they believed a man or a woman had fired the shot.

Carman said he had seen several fingers of the hand which held the revolver. From the quick glance he had of the fingers he was almost certain that they were a woman's.

The mystery is further deepened by the fact that Mrs. Bailey's husband knew nothing of her visit to the physician. Carman said that she consulted him regarding her general condition. She was run down, he said, and he had given her some medicine. Their entire interview lasted but a few minutes.

Carman is one of the most prominent physicians on Long Island. He is 45 years old and living with him at his home are his wife, his 12-year-old daughter, his father-in-law, Platt Conklin, and his wife's sister, Mrs. Mary Powell, a widow.

The doctor is wealthy in addition to his lucrative practice. His home is one of the show places of Freeport. Conklin, Carman's father-in-law, is one of the wealthiest residents of the South Shore.

Mrs. Bailey was 36 years old, but looked several years younger. She was a blonde of unusual beauty. The Bailey family occupies a fine home at Hempstead and is prominent socially there. Mrs. Bailey left two children, Madeline, 17 years old, and Harry, 12 years old.

According to their friends the home life of the Bailey family has always been happy. Mr. and Mrs. Bailey were devoted to each other and their children, it was said.

HAS ACCOMPLISHED WHAT HE DESIRED

Man Who Murdered Royal Couple Is an Anarchist

Buda Pest, July 2.—A local newspaper publishes what it declares to be the confession of Gavrio Prinzips, the assassin of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the Duchess of Hohenberg.

According to this story, Prinzips began to read anarchistic works while he was a reservist with the colors, with the result that he became an anarchist and formed a resolution to destroy one of the pillars of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy.

When at Belgrade he read of the archduke's intended visit to Sarayevo and decided to go there and try to kill him. He gave details of the assassination and concluded by saying:

"I do not regret what I have done. I am indeed well satisfied because I have accomplished what I desired to do for a long time."

MUCH DEPENDS UPON KEY

Owner Must Account For Its Presence In Mrs. Angle's Room

Stamford, Conn., July 2.—A Yale key, which Chief of Police Brennan says opens the front door of the Rippowam building, also all the doors in the apartment of Mrs. Helen M. Angle, figures prominently in the investigation of the death of Waldo R. Ballou.

The owner of the key must account for its presence in Mrs. Angle's apartment. The key was found by Brennan in Mrs. Angle's apartment on a dresser in the course of an examination of her rooms. Brennan has the maker's record of it and other keys of the same type. There are said to be five such keys, and three of them have been thus far accounted for.

SENSIBLE HINTS FOR THE FOURTH OF JULY

Enact the signing of the Declaration.
If there are chimes have "America" played.
Keep piano music going all over town.
Fifers and drummers to march in Continental costume.
Print patriotic songs on cards for free distribution.
Sing these songs at all the band concerts.
Have strings of lanterns across the streets.
Make it a homecoming day, a family reunion day.
Let the boys have a campfire and cook their dinner.
An automobile parade at night would be a pretty picture.
Send up small balloons with "reward" postcards attached.
Have an athletic contest between Uncle Sam and John Bull.
Free entertainments in halls would go far to make children happy.
A porch may be used as a stage and little folks give an entertainment there.
Exhibit war relics in the town hall—swords, flags, pictures, letters, etc.
Each one of thirteen houses to represent one of the original states.
Use red, white and blue or blue and yellow candles for lights in the evening.
Children like to put on uniforms and march. Let them if they will go without fireworks.
At the sunrise flag raising have a lot of little flags rolled up to drop out of the big one.
Wherever there is water have a water fete—canoes decorated, swimming matches and other aquatic sports; lanterns, torches, music; bridges and rafts illuminated.
Good subjects for tableaux are: Washington taking command of the American army, Betsy Ross making the American flag, the Boston tea party, signing the Declaration and Washington's farewell to his officers.—Ladies' Home Journal.

TWO FAMOUS FOURTHS.

Saw Beginning of Erie Canal and America's First Railroad Line.

July 4 has always been selected as an auspicious one on which to inaugurate important enterprises. July 4, 1817, Governor De Witt Clinton turned the first sod in the construction of the Erie canal, considered a great undertaking. On July 4, 1828, was celebrated the beginning of the first railway in this country, the Baltimore and Ohio.

Charles Carroll of Carrollton, the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence, and a member of the first directory of this railroad, was present and turned the first spadeful of earth, saying, "I consider this among the most important acts of my life, second only to that of signing the Declaration of Independence, if indeed, second to that."

To the Blacksmiths' association, which presented to him the pick, spade, hammer and trowel used in the ceremony of dedication, Carroll wrote: "You observe that republics can exist and that the people under that form of government can be happier than under any other. That the republic created by the Declaration of Independence will continue to the end of time is my fervent prayer. That protracted existence, however, will depend on the morality, sobriety and industry of the people, and on no part more than on the mechanics, forming in our cities the greatest number of their most useful inhabitants."—Chicago Record-Herald.

British Earl Fought For America.

One of the most interesting figures of the Revolutionary war period in America was the Earl of Stirling, who fought for American independence. He was the only British peer who served in the American army, and he was a warm friend of George Washington. He held the rank of major general in the American army. Lord Stirling lived the greater part of his life in America, was married to a New York lady and died in Albany, N. Y., in 1783.

July 4 Killed a President.

The cornerstone of the Washington monument at the national capital was laid July 4, 1850. It was a very hot day. President Taylor, who was present, was exposed to the heat of the sun for three hours. On his return to the White House he drank freely of ice water and iced milk and also partook of some cherries. Shortly afterward he was taken ill and died July 9.

WHAT INDEPENDENCE DAY DID FOR ENGLAND.

Immediately, the Fourth of July is noisily observed to celebrate the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. Essentially, the celebration has a deeper significance and one which the Americans ought to know more about than they do. It recalls not only our own independence, but the triumph of the English people over the crown and the relegation of the king to his true place in the English system of government. By the English system of government we mean not only the system in England, but the system obtaining in the United States, the systems of Canada, of Australia, of all the truly independent powers which have grown up as a result of the great English movements of adventure and of colonization which from time to time expressed English energy, or the English spirit of revolt, or that of unrest, from the days of Elizabeth to the days of Victoria.

To those who know the development of English popular government the Fourth of July marks the time since when no English monarch has dared to demand the right to tax English people at home or in distant colonies without their consent. The struggle was long, and the crown fought hard for its prerogative, but despite this the principle of English liberty survived under what were apparently most untoward circumstances, the crown became what it is, and a republic was established which has become the strongest nation in the world.

The Fourth of July is the day on which we celebrate the rule of the people here and abroad, the growth of individual liberty and the absolute dependence of the crown in English lands.—Harper's Weekly.

THE SIGNERS IN RIME.

Their Names Shall Honored Be Until the End of Time.

It will not be denied that the men who, on July 4, 1776, pledged "their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor" in behalf of our national liberty deserve the most profound reverence from every American citizen. By arranging in rime the names of the signers according to the colonies from which they were delegated the Atlanta Constitution assists the youthful learner in remembering the names of the fathers of American independence:

The Massachusetts delegation
That signed our glorious Declaration
Were Hancock, Gerry, Robert Paine,
The great John Adams, and again
Another Adams, Samuel by name.
New Hampshire, called the Granite State,
Sent Whipple, Bartlett, Thornton great,
Alike in counsel and debate.
Rhode Island's delegates, we see,
Were Stephen Hopkins and Ellery.
Connecticut, excelled by none,
With Sherman, Wolcott, Williams and Huntington.
New York as delegates employed
Lewis Morris and William Floyd,
With Francis Lewis and Livingston,
Who died before the war was done.
New Jersey to the congress sent
Her honored college president,
John Witherspoon, with Stockton, Clark,
Hart, Hopkinson, all men of mark.
Though Pennsylvania need not blush
For Morris, Morton, Wilson, Rush,
And, though most men might seem as dross
To Clymer, Taylor, Smith and Ross,
To Franklin each his tribute brings,
Who neither lightning feared nor kings.
The men from Delaware—Indeed
As true as steel in utmost need—
Were Rodney with McKean and Read.
"My Maryland" is proud to own
Her Carroll, Paca, Chase and Stone.
On old Virginia's roll we see
The gifted Richard Henry Lee,
And, just as earnest to be free,
His brother, Francis Lightfoot Lee,
And Wythe and Nelson, patriots true,
With Harrison and Braxton, too,
But of them all there was not one
As great as Thomas Jefferson.
North Carolina's chosen men
We know were Hooper, Hewes and Penn.
And South Carolina's vote was one—
By Rutledge, Heyward, Lynch and Middleton.
From Georgia came Gwinnett and Hall
And Walton, too, the last of all
Who signed our precious Declaration,
The pride and glory of the nation.

A REAL JULY 4 AMERICAN

Little Red, the Indian boy,
Went to town one day.
All the folks were celebrating
July Fourth—hurray!

Little Red picked up Old Glory;
Held it straight and true;
They took his lujun name away.
Now he's Little Red, White, Blue!

A Prophetic Englishman.

We have no news, public or private, but there is an ostrich egg laid in America where the Bostonians have canted 300 chests of tea into the ocean, for they will not drink tea with our parliament. Lord Chatham talked of conquering America in Germany. I believe England will be conquered some day or other in New England or Bengal.—Horace Walpole, Feb. 2, 1774.

THE REST IS SILENCE

One May Have Too Much of a Good Thing

By FRANK CONDON

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"This, then," remarked Mr. Tully, looking out of the car window, with a sad gleam in his eye—"this is East Waldoboro?"

The train stopped. A porter shooed the New Yorker through the aisle and off to the station platform, and, leaving him surrounded by bags and parcels, the coaches rolled away into the distance.

Fresh from the roar and clamor of the city, Mr. Tully gazed about him and observed instantly that he was in the midst of an ocean of quiet. Peace and silence surrounded him. A man who drawled and accented strange parts of his conversation spoke a few words to the city stranger, and subsequently Mr. Tully found himself upon the highest seat of a carry-all, which is a Maine wagon designed to eliminate the rough spots from a citizen's anatomy by the simple process of knocking them off.

Leaving Mr. Tully on the wagon and in ascent of a stony hill a mile long and eight miles high, we will return at once to New York and look into this strange affair. Why was Mr. Tully in Maine at all?

"Doc," Mr. Tully had said to his oldest friend, "I want to know what's wrong with me. I'm run down, and my nerves hurt. I see strange things creeping along the wall at night."

"David," the doc answered, "you need peace, rest and quiet of the quietest sort, and I know just where you ought to go. I've got an aunt in East Waldoboro. Go up there and get back your nerves. If you don't go you'll die."

He disembarked from the station vehicle at the risk of life and limb, found Dr. Gregory's aunt a fine, pleasant, kindly old lady and put away his traveling impedimenta in the largest room he had ever seen, in the middle of which was a bed, which was twice as large as a regular bed.

"I'm going to like this place," he exclaimed enthusiastically. "When a man needs quiet he wants to come to just such a place as this. I'll bet I'll be perfectly well in no time."

Besides Dr. Gregory's aunt there were others in the house, and at first Tully concluded that somebody was ill in an upper room because of the continued quiet about the place and the noiseless movements of its inmates.

"We are free from the noises of the village," his hostess said to Tully on the first evening, "and we are so far from the main road that you will not be disturbed by passing motorcars. There are only three of us now—myself, my niece and the man who looks after things for us. I am sure you will find nothing to disturb you."

"Thank you," Tully said. "I am positive I shall improve very quickly in these peaceful surroundings." He was beginning to feel embarrassed by the attentions shown him.

That night as he lay between the sweet smelling sheets his ears fairly tingled. He endeavored to corral some stray, faint sound, but there was nothing except the soft rustle of the leaves outside his window.

In the morning he awakened, fresh and vigorous, after a sleep a dead man might have envied. During breakfast Mrs. Knight sent the hired man into the yard to shoo away a bevy of robins which had met in convention assembled under a lawn sprinkler and were chattering over the minutes of the last meeting. Tully watched the hired man in astonishment.

"The robins are so noisy," Mrs. Knight said to him. "We must try to keep the place quiet for you, Mr. Tully." Tully began to wonder exactly what Doc Gregory had written his aunt about him. He began to wonder whether he had not better bury his watch under a rosebush on account of its tremendous ticking.

He observed curiously that Mrs. Knight and her niece moved about without producing the slightest noise and that the hired man evidently ran upon pneumatic tires. The huge grandfather's clock in the dining room ticktocked in a low, almost inaudible, tone. The screen doors swung noiselessly against rubber fenders.

The floors were somewhere underneath the thick rugs or carpets. The entire house represented the word "quiet" worked up to the nth power. The last pocket in an abandoned coal mine was a noisy racket compared with it.

Mr. Tully, feeling refreshed and cheerful, sauntered forth. He plucked a red, red rose and placed it in his buttonhole. He sniffed the morning breeze and held out his hand to take bearings. The hand was almost steady.

He examined the blank atmosphere for his little pals, the starfish spots he had been accustomed to seeing in New York, but they had already diminished in size. He gazed at the side of a red barn in a hunt for the moving objects that a blank wall usually supplied and had great difficulty in finding them.

"This is a most wonderful spot and a most wonderful improvement," he chuckled in a pleased way. "Here I've been around only twenty hours, and I can see a change for the better. Thanks, Hank Gregory."

Tully's appetite increased at once. He consumed quantities of fresh milk, corn bread, bacon and eggs, vegetables and Maine pie, to which no pie is peer. He found himself awakening in the middle of the night to assuage the pangs of hunger with half a pound of cold roast beef.

The noiseless customs of those about him had affected his own actions, and he could now move about without making a sound.

At the end of a week Mr. Tully of New York had concluded that ordinary quiet meant one thing and East Waldoboro-Knight quiet another. He had discovered what other men have found—that there is a superlative degree of quiet that gets under a man's skin and makes him yearn for some sort of noise.

The people were quiet, the horses and cows were quiet, and the chickens cackled in b minor, which is just above the first zero in sound affairs. It was on Sunday that Tully spent his first wakeful night.

He had leaped into bed with a glad sigh, expecting the usual hurried approach of Morpheus, but Mr. Morph was visiting in Chicago, and at 2 in the morning the New Yorker disembarked and spent the remainder of the night reading a novel under a carefully shaded oil lamp.

On Tuesday night Tully was on the fourth reading of the same novel and had begun to weary. The fifth night he simply sat still with his chin in his palms and fought off a strong desire to weep.

During the daytime he walked far and wide, listening with extended ears for a sound—any sound. The exercise tired him out, but sleep refused to come. He began to paw over the thought of hurling a hitching post through the meat shop window to see if anything in the way of audibility would result.

"I'm going daffy," he made judgment when he found himself kicking an empty salmon can along a deserted lane and gloating over the sounds it made.

Far away each night—millions of miles in the distance—he could hear the faint whistle of the night freight train. It passed through East Waldoboro at 4 in the morning, bound for Bath, Brunswick, Portland, Boston and New York.

On sleepless nights his greatest, supremest joy was to lean out of the broad window under the oak trees, waiting for the faroff toot. It was at 2 o'clock Thursday morning that he sat motionless and considered a hasty thought. For five minutes the details of the thought rushed about in his head.

Then he began to remove his pajamas with great speed, and, disregarding all consequences, he turned up the oil lamp and hastily packed his dressing case. A new light shone in his eyes, and he was smiling gloriously. His head felt light, as one's head does after three glasses of champagne on an empty interior. He felt fine.

"Dear Mrs. Knight," he wrote on the sheet of paper, which he pinned on his pillow, "my stay with you and your niece has done me a universe of good. I am the healthiest man in the world. But I am going away from you, thanking you over and over for your kindness and your thoughtful acts. I am going away because it is so quiet here that if I stay two more hours I will commit some desperate deed. I haven't the courage to face you and tell you this, and, besides, the night freight train is coming, and I will be in the caboose or death will end it all."

Mr. Tully let himself out of the Knight home on feet of velvet and aimed at the station. The night freight stopped there to turn a switch, and when the caboose slowed down a strange young man, carrying a suit case, climbed the steps and shook hands with the sleepy conductor.

Tully sat up the entire trip to Portland and enjoyed himself beyond human understanding. The clatter of the wheels over rail joints, the creaking, groaning of the brake beams and the scratching of the metal shoes were sweet sounds in his long famished ears.

The yells out of the night from yardmen and station agents assailed him like a pleasant opiate. The roar of passing trains threw him into an ecstasy of delight. He decided that he would spend the remainder of life riding in a freight caboose with a greasy brakeman.

When he struck Broadway and Twenty-third street Tully was a mass of goose flesh, and each member of the said goose flesh was a unit of joy. He found his apartment and entered it serenely.

He drank a large glass of water, undressed in three minutes, surged into bed and for the first time in two weeks he went to sleep—such a sleep as dying victims of insomnia picture in their feverish ravings.

He was awakened by a large, greasy, blue overalled figure sitting on the end of a steel girder outside his window.

The man was staring down at him, amazement and envy written over his grimy countenance.

In his hand he held a machine gun attached to a pneumatic hose, which he waved at the surprised Tully to emphasize his remarks.

"You're some sleeper, young feller," the riveting man said amiably.

"What's the matter with you?" Tully inquired, wondering at this steel enthroned one's proximity.

"I've been rivetin' bolts into this girder for the last hour and watchin' you slumber. I wish I could do that, mister. I envy you."

"Oh, shut up and let me alone!" Tully growled.

He turned over, punched the pillow and returned to deep sleep at once.

The man on the steel beam renewed his clamorous attack upon the metal support with fresh energy, shaking his head and wondering.

THINK WAR HAS BEEN AVERTED

Mediators Consider Self-Imposed Task Is Finished

FACTIONS MUST SETTLE REST

Still Hope That Huerta and Carranza Delegates May Participate In Parley —Rebels Watching Dictator's Plans For Leaving Mexico—Angeles Not Ordered Executed by Villa

Washington, July 2.—It is stated at Niagara Falls that the mediators consider their task is finished. They appear to be satisfied with having found out what President Wilson's attitude in the Mexican affair is, and incidentally they think they have averted war. The rest they leave to the Mexican factions for a settlement.

This places upon the United States the responsibility of forcing the unwilling General Carranza and the willing Provisional President Huerta to a conferece. Urgent arguments have been transmitted to Carranza through his agents in Washington outlining the tremendous responsibility for their country's future resting on the constitutionalists. They have been urged by the Wilson administration, it is said, to suggest to their chief possibilities that might follow American intervention in Mexico.

Plans for the indefinite recess of mediation were somewhat disturbed by the suggestion of the United States government that such a break might be interpreted generally as a disruption of the proceedings.

The mediators explained that the recess did not signify an adjournment, but they thought they could be of more service in Washington and elsewhere in forwarding the peace program. No objections were offered by the American government to the recess, but merely an expression of preference.

There is no disposition on the part of the United States to press the point, however, in view of the plans of the mediators to keep in touch with each other and to continue their efforts to bring the constitutionalists and Huerta delegates in the conference.

Plans for the meeting place of the Huerta and Carranza delegates, if parleys are agreed upon, are indefinite. Probably some place other than Niagara Falls will be chosen.

President Wilson authorizes the statement that the situation was favorable as may be and that he was very hopeful of a satisfactory outcome.

Movements of French and German cruisers in gulf waters were discussed in connection with suggestions from Vera Cruz that Huerta's family, and perhaps the dictator himself, would take refuge on one of the vessels. The cruisers were represented to have sailed for Puerto Mexico, gulf terminus of the Tehuantepec line to Mexico City.

Constitutionalists in Washington have declared their forces are prepared to cut the line if Huerta attempts to leave the capital.

Reports from Carranza sources that General Angeles, long the trusted friend and military adviser of General Villa, has been shot by Villa's orders because he failed to disprove charges that he sought to betray the rebel cause to Huerta, are denied by Villa.

A representative of the constitutionalists in Washington says he received a dispatch from Villa revealing why he went to Torreon from Zacatecas. The reason, it is said, was not a hostile move against Carranza, of whom Villa is quoted as saying: "I still recognize him as the first chief of the constitutionalists."

CUPID AS BAROMETER

Marriage Figures For June Show Our Nation's Prosperity

New York, July 2.—Prosperity is very much on the boom, if the marriage license figures throughout the country signify anything, June, 1914, showed increases over June, 1913, in most of the larger American cities in the matrimonial market.

If this "market" is a criterion of business conditions, the United States is on the upgrade—and at any rate a good many folks are happy and contented.

A sample of the boom times was given by the figures for New York city, which showed 4484 licenses issued for last month, as compared with 4059 for the corresponding period last year.

Youngster Shoots Schoolmate

New Haven, July 2.—The toy pistol numbered its tenth victim in a month in this city when Russell Dolphin shot his young schoolmate, Anton Yeffkin. Dolphin is under arrest.

Witnesses Say Gifford Was Not Man Seen In Clute's Automobile

Albany, July 2.—Four witnesses swore that Malcolm Gifford, Jr., on trial here charged with murdering Chauffeur Frank J. Clute, was not the passenger that Clute carried in his automobile the night he was slain.

A fifth witness was somewhat uncertain, but was strongly of the opinion that the man he saw in the car was not Gifford. Their testimony opened the defense's case.

Gifford's case has attracted an unusual amount of attention because of his youth, 20 years, his wealth and his high social position. Following the death of Clute, a purse, said to have been Clute's property, was found concealed on the roof of a house where Gifford was a guest. Gifford's father is a manufacturer.

Roosevelt's Voice Will Be Good as Ever In Six Weeks

New York, July 2.—Theodore Roosevelt in all probability will not be obliged to give up his campaign this year on account of his physicial condition.

He learned this after an examination by a throat specialist, who gave him the most encouraging report he has yet had. The physician said that if Roosevelt would rest for the next six weeks, and that if the recurrent attacks of fever could be controlled, he probably would be in as good voice as ever.

Roosevelt was delighted at the doctor's opinion. After his visit to the physician he was more like his former self than at any previous time since his return from South America.

FIFTEEN-YEAR SENTENCE

Result of Spectacular Attempt to Blackmail Cunard Company

New York, July 2.—Joseph Barton, the negro who recently attempted to blackmail the Cunard Steamship company, was sentenced to fifteen years in Sing Sing prison.

Burton sent letters to officials of the line threatening that unless a package containing $10,000 was thrown from the back platform of a train in New Jersey in response to a green light he would flash beside the track he would blow up one of the company's big steamers.

The company engaged a special train to follow close behind the express, and when a detective tossed a decoy package from the train ahead both trains stopped and let off detectives who captured Burton when he ran out of hiding to get the package.

The resolution is designed to serve definite and final notice to business and the country that anti-trust legislation is to be passed before congress quits Washington.

DIVORCE LAW UPHELD

Year's Residence Required to Sever Marriage Ties In Nevada

Carson City, Nev., July 2.—The validity of Nevada's divorce law was sustained by the state supreme court in a decision handed down in a case which was sent up from the district court of Reno to test the constitutionality of the act.

The supreme court decision means that applicants for divorce in Nevada must reside one year in the state before the courts will acquire jurisdiction.

EIGHTIETH BIRTHDAY.

A birthday party dinner was tendered to William Arnold of Squantum on the event of his eightieth birthday at the Squantum Inn on Monday. Covers were laid for twelve and the table was prettily decorated with forget-me-nots, sweet peas and jhck roses.

The affair was a surprise to Mr. Arnold, planned and attended by his immediate family only; namely, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Arnold of Stoneham, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Morse of Squantum, Mrs. W. F. Curtis of Ballardvale, Miss S. S. Arnold of Cambridge, W. H. Arnold of Stoneham, H. C. Arnold of Malden, G. B Arnold of Durham, N. H., H. R. Arnold of Stoneham, Miss Ethel Arnold Morse of Squantum and E. Hermann Arnold of Stoneham.

The menu card was especially novel the same was constructed in such a way that one half of it formed an easel, the menu appearing on the front side, while the part that formed the support bore a sentiment.

Mr. Arnold proved himself a most interesting host and it is hard to realize that he has reached that grand old age, he is so energetic and active. All his Squantum friends wish to congratulate him on this anniversary and extend to him the hope that he may live to enjoy a great many more such celebrations.

An Indulgent Father.

The Duke de Richelieu one day visited his son, who was a student in the University of Paris. "Do you need any money?" he asked in the course of the conversation.

"No," said his son. "I still have 20 louis from last month's allowance."

On hearing this the duke took the boy's purse and, handing it to his servant, said: "There, John, are 20 louis. My son, the Count de Fronsac, presents them to you. Go and drink his health."

But to his son he said: "Young man, remember that you are the son of the Duke de Richelieu. Be more generous with your money."

How many youths in college today would like to have so thoughtful a father!

BATES WILL TRY AGAIN

Says He Will Go To the Next Legislature

Editor Daily Ledger:

In your issue of yesterday there appeared a letter addresed to the members of the Massachusetts Senate purported to be signed by John L. Miller, Mayor; Walter S. Pinkham, City Solicitor; and Ezekiel C. Sargent, City Engineer; stating that the original House Bill No. 1539 was introduced at the request of G. B. Bates, on petition of Mayor Miller, to abolish the grade crossings in Quincy by the city plan of depression.

I wish to unequivocally and most emphatically deny the statement. The facts are these: Mayor Miller on his own letter head, in his own hand writing, and over his own signature, asked me to help him get this city out of the hands of the grafters, and become Principal Assessor.

I believed Mayor Miller was honest and sincere when he wrote me, but since his conference with the Railroad Commission, when they showed him the new light which I have been unable to see even to this day, his nearly seven years attitude as a depressionist became in the twinkling of an eye an elevationist.

During my short story as Principal Assessor I made two suggestions for his consideration:

First,—In order to get after the grafters, he would have to stop the Decree plan of ruining our city and plundering the taxpayers by a bill in the Legislature petitioning for the abolition of the grade crossings in Quincy the city plan of depression, which the Mayor did by calling in to City Hall Representative Sullivan to help formulate the petition and have it presented to the Legislature.

Second.—I suggested for his consideration (The Mayor having posed as the tax payers candidate and elected as such.) In order to lower the tax rate and the big city debt, to appoint a strong, fearless board of Assessors, who would get after and round up the tax dodgers in our city, compelling them to pay their fair share of the tax burden, which they have escaped for the past 25 years.

The right solution of the grade crossing problem in Quincy received a temporary halt yesterday by the Senate, which has been said at times to be the grave yard of the people rights, but there is a day of resurrection, and the city of Quincy will make another fight next January before the next Legislature.

Yours truly,
G. B. Bates.

FOURTH OF JULY PROGRAM

Parade, Sports, Fireworks and Other Attractions

The official program for the Quincy celebration under the auspices of the Fourth of July association shows that there will be plenty to occupy the attention of the citizens all day, and in the evening.

The program starts off at 9 o'clock with a civic, military and horrible parade. The parade forms on Hancock street near the Woodward Institute and the route is as follows: Hancock, Washington, Sumner, Scammell, Quincy avenue, Water, Franklin School, Hancock to City Square where it will be reviewed and dismissed.

At 10.15 the Boy Scouts will give a demonstration of their work on the oval at Merrymount park. The exhibition will include signal competition and first aid work. The Boy Scouts will also maintain emergency headquarters in charge of a professional nurse at the oval all day and will be ready at all times to respond with the ambulance if needed.

At 10.30 there will be a series of athletic events on the oval at Merrymount park. These events are strictly for Quincy school boys. There will be relay races by the seniors, juniors and sophomores of the High school, each boy making one lap of the oval, 352 yards.

For the Grammar school boys each boy will make half a lap, 176 yards. The first race will be between boys of the Massachusetts Fields, Wollaston and Willard schools, and the second between the Coddington, Atherton Hough, Lincoln and John Hancock schools.

The base ball games on the main field at the park will be as follows:

10.30 Division 22, A. O. H. vs Copelands.

3.30 P. M. on the Ward Four playground, Wampatucks vs Atlantic All Stars.

At 2 o'clock entertainments for the children will be given at the Kincaide theatre, Music hall, at the Boulevard theatre, Wollaston beach; and at The Dream, Houghs Neck. All children between the ages of 6 and 14 years holding tickets issued by the committee will be admitted. Only a comfortably filled theatre will be allowed, but there will be seats for all.

During the day, open houses will be numerous in and about City Square and the out of town military organizations will be entertained.

The day will close with a magnificent display of fireworks at Merrymount park. The display this year will eclipse anything ever before seen in Quincy.

Make Him Content.

One of the principal duties entailed upon the housewife is insuring the comfort of the husband. Every man is contented so long as the solid comforts of life are his—so long as his meals are to his liking and his home always ready for his occupancy.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Frederick M. Atwood, one of the graduates in the class of '14 Quincy High school, received word this morning that he had successfully passed the examination for Harvard college.

Mrs. Ellen B. Wilde, wife of Charles F. Wilde of Prospect avenue passed away this morning. She was a resident of Wollaston for many years and made many friends. Funeral services will be held Sunday afternoon.

On Friday Mr. and Mrs. Wrigley will entertain the Rev. and Mrs. Thompson of Walpole and the Rev. and Mrs. Eames of Bridgewater. Both made many friends in Quincy while they lived at Christ Church Rectory last summer and previous years.

Mrs. C. F. Carlson, who has been on her farm in East Friendship, Maine the past two weeks, returns home today. Her many patrons at the restaurant on Depot street will be glad to see her back and will read her daily menu with a keen appetite.

Attention is called through a notice in another column to the closing of the public library at 6 P. M. during the months of July and August. The hours are from 9 o'clock until 6 every day excepting Saturday when the library is open from 9 A. M. to 9 P. M.

Among the Quincy boys at W. H. Bentley's camp at Wolfboro, N. H., this summer are: John Pfaffmann, Harold Schenkelberger and Winsor Harlow of Goffe street, William Doble of South street, Brayton Blake, of Elm avenue, Russel Sears of Elm avenue, and Wendell Boyden of Beach street.

MRS. ANN HART.

Ann Hart, the most popular aged resident of West Quincy and mother of Rev. Fr. Francis Hart, pastor of St. Johns church at East Bridgewater, died at her home Wednesday evening after an illness of a weeks duration. Mrs. Hart was over 70 years of age and lived in West Quincy for many years.

She was the widow of Barnabus Hart and until her son's elevation from a curate in the Canton parish to the pastorate in East Bridgewater she made her home on Willard street.

On the death of her husband, some years age, rMs. Hart became greatly interested in the charities of the Boston diocese. She was unostentatiohs and many of her close friends were not aware of her efforts to assist the unfortunate.

She was a deeply religious woman and one of the most generous contributors to St. Mary's parish. When the church was erected she was one of the first to subscribe to a memorial window, in memory of her deceased husband and shortly after gave the church its pulpit. Several years ago she presented the parish with a handsome altar.

The funeral of Mrs. Hart will take place Saturday morning. A solemn high mass of requiem will be celebrated at St. Mary's church and burial will be in the family lot in the adjoining cemetery.

Mrs. Hart was the mother of six children, Mrs. John Shields of Milton, Robert, Lawrence, Joseph William and Father Francis Hart.

ADAMS STREET LAWN PARTY

Upwards of 200 members of St. John's parish attended the lawn party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Cook on Adams street, Wednesday evening held as a preliminary to the parish festival on July 18. The grounds had been prettily decorated with lanterns and bunting under the direction of Miss Nellie Desmond and presented an attractive appearance.

Whist was played at 35 tables, the winners being Patrick Driscoll, Miss Josephine Daley, Miss Lulu Crowley, and Harry Eaton. The whist was conducted by Miss Mary E. G. Colligan assisted by Miss Mary Costello and Miss Sarah Malone. After the play there were vocal solos by Miss Helen Galvin, accompanied by Miss Mary McConarty.

The spacious barn was devoted to dancing and music was by a pianola from the Johnsen musical company. The floor was in charge of Robert Arbuckle an dthe committee was Leo Ford, Frank Avery and Frank Driscoll. Vocal solos were rendered by Harry Horrocks.

Fancy articles and other novelties were sold at a booth, the outline of which was completely hidden in folds of bunting and colored crepe paper. The rainy weather had no effect on the pleasures of the evening. The special guests were Rev. Fr. Walter A. Quinlan and Rev. Fr. Florence McCarthy. Assisting Mr. and Mrs. Cook was Miss MaryC olligan and Mrs Francis J. Fahy.

The weather Wednesday and this morning was hardly a reminder that the Fourth of July was near at hand. Wednesday afternoon a cold easterly breeze prevailed and last evening it was showery. At times during the night it rained hard and it was showery all of the morning. The weather predictions however are for pleasant and warmer weather Friday.

CAR COLLISION.

A runaway construction car of the Bay State Street Railway Co., crashed into a motionless East Weymouth bound car on Washington, near South street, Wednesday afternoon and a bad accident was averted only because the latter carried no passengers.

MAYOR MILLER SIGNS APPROPRIATIONS

Hancock Street to be Widened Between Granite and School Streets

Auto Tractor For the Central Fire Station Steamer

The various orders for acceptance of streets, widening Hancock street, and other important orders passed at the Council meeting ten days ago, other than those vetoed on Wednesday, were signed by Mayor Miller Thursday afternoon and are now in force. The Mayor also signed the supplementary budget approving the items not mentioned in his veto message.

One of the important items in this budget was that of $4,000 for an American and British tractor for the Central fire station steamer. It will require about sixty days to equip the steamer with the tractor and it will have to be sent to Providence, R. I., to be attached. The company however will furnish Quincy with a relief steamer to use in the meantime.

As soon as the relief steamer arrives at the freight yard, it will be unloaded, and Quincy's steamer immediately put onto the cars so that the City will not be without a steamer at any time.

In applying the new tractor the front wheels now in use will be taken off and the tractor bolted onto the frame in their place. It will also be necessary to change the rear wheels of the steamer. That is it will be necessary to equip it with larger tires than those now in use.

However when it is returned to Quincy it will be all ready for service and an experienced man will come on from the factory at Providence to give the firemen at the Central station the necessary instruction as to running the tractor. As most of the men now at the Central station are chauffeurs it will not be difficult for them to master the new piece of apparatus.

RECITAL.

There was a well attended piano and voice recital given by the pupils of Miss Marguerite Louise Holbrook in Odd Fellows' hall, Wollaston. Miss Holbrook and her pupils were assisted by Miss Margaret Alice Strickland, a graduate of the Emerson College of Oratory. Miss Strickland has a charming personality and her dialect interpretation is exceptionally fine and true to life.

Miss Eldeine Young of Atlantic appeared for the first time before the public as a vocalist. Her voice is true and sweet with a bell-like quality. Miss Beulah Collett of Wollaston whose rich contralto voice pleased the audience greatly sang two selections. Francis McCabe has a fluent and easy style at the piano which always calls forth much applause. Miss Dorothy Fratus' brilliant and clear style does credit to herself and her teacher.

Miss Holbrook rendered the Cavatina well and it was a disappointment to the audience to learn that she would not be able to sing her group of songs owing to a severe attack of laryngitis. Miss Holbrook's rendering of very difficult piano solos brought forth well merited applause.

Others taking part in the program were Gladys Keith, N. Lois Parlee, Charlotte Fox, Edith Nickerson, Gertrude Whalen, Louis Paul, Basil Delano, Florence Hall, Edith Osburg, Dorothy Fratus and Helen Arthur.

DIVORCE LIBEL.

Mrs. Ruby E. H. Darrow of Quincy filed a petition with the clerk of the Superior court at Dedham Thursday seeking a divorce from her husband, Wallace H. Darrow, also of Quincy. She charges him with cruel and abusive treatment, gross and confirmed habits of intoxication and neglect to provide suitable support. They have two children, William 4 and Lillian 2.

True Patriotism.

by Chas. L. H. Wagner.

Not in the belching cannon's roar,
Not in the piper's lay,
Not in the flag which we adore,
Nor yet in holiday;
Not in the fulsome studied speech,
Not in the pomp and show,
Not in the rocket's sizzling screech,
Nor in the fire's glow;
But in the heart where doth abound
A nobler, finer plan,
Where Country's weal is the profound
And holy love for man;
There is the future's heritage,
There is our Country's hope,
There doth the patriot's true gauge
Confound the misanthrope.

FINAL ARRANGEMENTS FOR THE FOURTH

The Quincy Fourth of July Association committees met in the rooms of the Board of Trade Thursday night, and reports of the various committees shows that everything is moving smoothly and that the details of the day's celebration are practically completed. Good weather is now the main thing to insure the celebration's success.

It was announced at headquarters Thursday night that Troop D of the Roxbury horse guards or cavalry would arrive in Quincy early Saturday morning and go into camp at Merrymount park where they will remain over Sunday.

Interest in the early morning will center at Atlantic where the parade is scheduled to start at 6.30. As the Quincy parade does not move until 9 o'clock it will afford ample opportunity for one to go to Atlantic in the early morning and see the parade and then arrive back in City Square to see the Quincy parade.

Chief Marshal Duggan tells the Daily Ledger that there will be over 25 floats in the Atlantic parade. Among those interested are the Knights Templar, Knights of Pythias, Ancient Order of Hibernians, United Order of Hibernians, United Order of Workmen and boys of the Memorial church. The Pumpkin Centre band will come down from Quincy town as usual with new music, but at great cost have secured their old leader who has been in retirement Way Down East.

All day long there will be sports and other attractions at Quincy and Atlantic, programs for which have already been published.

Chairman Elcock of the Quincy fireworks exhibition says that this year's display will eclipse anything yet seen in the city, and if anyone is not satisfied with the exhibition they can have their money back. There are 125 different pieces in the display, several of them being shown for the first time in this country.

Chairman Elcock notifies the Daily Ledger that the Quincy fireworks have already arrived at Merrymount park and are being set up.

There will be no battleship in Quincy waters on the Fourth, and in fact no city will have the pleasure of entertaining battleship officers and crew this year for Uncle Sam has other and more important use for his fighting machines this year.

The weather predictions for the Fourth are not particularly encouraging, for unsettled weather is predicted. The weather this year is quite a contrast from what it was a year ago. The week before the Fourth last year the noon temperature was between 90 and 100, and on July Fourth the noon temperature was 91 degrees. During the past few days the temperature has been between 50 and 75 and a cool easterly wind has prevailed, making fires in the homes almost necessary to take the dampness out of the house. Heres hoping for pleasant weather.

There is one good thing however about the weather of the past few days and that is the danger of fire has been reduced to a minimum. A year ago the long hot spell had dried everything up and it would have taken but a slight spark to have started a fire. This year with the rains and cool winds everything is damp and the fire risk has been greatly reduced.

That the Fourth is near at hand was apparent Thursday night when the Quincy Fife and Drum corps marched to City Square playing lively airs. Coming down Hancock street they stopped in front of the Fourth of July headquarters where they gave a concert which attracted a large crowd.

As usual Quincy lodge of Elks will keep open house the night before and dispense hospitality to all Elks and their friends.

LARGE HOTEL AMONG POSSIBILITIES

Charles M. Schwab Said to be Interested

During the past two days there has been a flurry of excitement among the owners of property on Hancock street between Granite street and Elm street because agents representing Charles M. Schwab, the Bethlehem Steel magnate and the owner of the Fore River shipyard have been seeking a location for a hotel.

All the available sites have been examined, and it can be said with authority that within a week the transfer of several pieces of desirable property will be recorded.

The housing of employees at the shipyard has become quite a factor and since there is no arrangement where suitable accomodations can be secured for the majority, Mr. Schwab with his characteristic reasoning, that

No issue of the Daily Ledger will be printed on Saturday, the Fourth of July. Many of the Saturday features will appear in the Daily Ledger of Friday and announcements and large advertisements should be forwarded early on Thursday. Don't wait until Friday as that will be our busy day.

FOURTH OF JULY PATRIOTISM.

The old time Fourth of July address was a cock-a-doodle-doo affair. Effete nations of the Old World were handed out some sassy stuff. They were invited to enter Uncle Sam's kindergarten and acquire a few elementary principles of government.

The July 4 address is nearly extinct today. If held, the ministers, lawyers, Judges, a few office holders, Woman's club leaders, and other serious minded persons, may attend.

They know in advance what the speaker will say, and sympathize. But it's the Dutch taking Holland. They need no incitement to love for native land. Meanwhile the young folks, for whom such addresses are given, would of course like to be present. But unfortunately the hour of the lecture would conflict with some ball game or dance.

From such July 4 orations as are given today, the spread eagle note has mostly vanished. The more Uncle Sam knows, the less he thinks he knows. Our orators do not now try to instruct the Old World. Rather they are interested to put some bone and sinew of heroism and public spirit into the new generation of young people. They glorify the deeds of the past, to elicit the courage and action needed to solve the problems of today.

A to patriotism in case of war, there has always been plenty of it and always will be. Most young men have a warm attachment for and pride in their native land. They will not see its flag in the dust. This feeling is of course helped on by the fact that it is dull business working in factories and stores. War means something doing, new scenes, new life. This does not detract from the value ol the service given by the soldier.

Patriotism is sacrifice. A man may rise impressively for the national anthem. He may reverently uncover at sight of "Old Glory." But if he fails to turn up at his political caucus merely because it rains, he is a pretty cheap variety of patriot.

HONORS PAID TO SLAIN ROYALTY

Imposing and Picturesque Midnight Scene at Vienna

MARCH TO HOFBURG CHAPEL

Emotion Displayed by Populace as Procession, Headed by Outriders Bearing Lighted Lanterns, Passes Through Streets—New Heir Only Member of Imperial Family Present

Vienna, July 3.—The special court train from Trieste, conveying the bodies of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, arrived here last night. Prince Montenuovo, the court chamberlain, and other high officials, were in waiting.

Escorted by halberdiers and lifeguardsmen, the coffins were carried to the imperial waiting room, which had been converted into a temporary chapel. Here they were blessed by court chaplains and then carried out and placed in two hearses.

The funeral procession, which meantime had formed outside, started just before midnight for the Hofburg. Two outriders, carrying lighted lanterns, led the cortege. They were followed by an advance guard of cavalry. Then came an official on horseback, dressed in the picturesque costume of a Spanish cavalier.

The court carriages were next in line. Two outriders preceded the hearses. Each hearse was drawn by six black horses. On either side walked non-commissioned officers and court lackeys. A special guard of twelve halberdiers and twelve mounted life-guardsmen with drawn swords followed the hearses, and two carriages with the suites of the archduke and the duchess completed the cortege.

At the Hofburg the master of ceremonies and the palace clergy awaited the cortege at the foot of the ambassadors' staircase and walked slowly forward to meet it, preceded by the boy choir of the court chapel, chanting "Miserere."

The procession then advanced to the chapel, with the Austrian and Hungarian life-guards and halberdiers walking beside the coffins, which were attended by four noble pages dressed in sombre costumes and carrying huge lighted wax tapers.

The court chamberlain and other officials brought up the rear. The coffins were placed on an elevated catafalque entirely covered with gold brocade, with swinging canopy.

After a short benediction the chamberlain of the late archduke handed the keys of the coffins to Prince Montenuovo, the chapel was locked and all departed.

The Hofburg chapel is very small, accommodating not more than 200 persons. All the seats have been removed and the walls and floors are covered with black cloth. On one of the walls hangs an escutcheon consisting of the archduke's arms. It is surrounded by silver sconces, with lighted candles. The arms of the duchess similarly adorn the opposite wall.

Silver candlesticks holding lighted wax tapers surround the catafalque, at the foot of which are cushions bearing the archduke's crown and the Austrian archducal two-pointed hat, his general's plumed hat and sword and all his orders and decorations.

At the foot of the coffin of the duchess repose her orders, a pair of long white kid gloves and her fan, in accordance with the Austrian custom.

The only member of the imperial family who attended the ceremony last night was Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, now heir to the throne, who at the last moment decided to go to the station to meet the body.

The populace displayed great emotion during the passage of the cortege, which, except for the military display, was of an extremely simple character. The hearses were plain, square built, with a lighted lamp on each corner and entirely devoid of ornamentation.

The archduke's funeral ranks in court etiquet as third class, first class being reserved exclusively for the emperor and second class for the empress.

The anti-Servian agitation, which is becoming an exceedingly dangerous symptom, shows no sign of abating. Even while the funeral cortege was on its way to the Hofburg, hundreds of excited students were engaged in a desperate struggle with the police to reach the Servian legation, within three blocks of the procession.

NOT GOING TO VIENNA

"Severe Cold" Prevents Kaiser From Attending Royal Funeral

Potsdam, July 3.—Emperor William suddenly abandoned his intended trip to Vienna to attend the funeral of the late Archduke Francis Ferdinand. It was announced he was suffering from a severe cold.

In court circles here it is said the emperor's illness is of the slightest character and would not have prevented his trip to Vienna.

It is surmised here that a hint was received from Vienna indicating the kaiser's visit was not wished for under the circumstances.

MORGAN AT WHITE HOUSE

Wilson Begins Series of Conferences With "Big Business" Men

Washington, July 3.—J. P. Morgan and President Wilson had nearly an hour's conference at the White House on general business conditions.

It was the first of a series of talks the president plans to have in the near future with captains of industry and finance, learning their views and giving his own, on the industrial and financial situation of the country as well as measures in congress.

Next week the president will have an informal conference with Henry Ford, the Detroit manufacturer, who will be entertained at luncheon at the White House.

Officials close to the president said he would take such an opportunity to outline his views to the heads of "big business" in person.

SERVANTS GAVE HIM $65,000 TO "INVEST"

Former Coachman Has but 32 Cents to Show For It

Philadelphia, July 3.—Thomas Loury, formerly employed as a coachman, who was entrusted with $65,000 in savings by servants in the wealthy and fashionable section of the city, lost all except 32 cents in bucket shop gambling, according to his testimony in the hearing of his case before Judge Barrett in common pleas court.

"I speculated in many stocks," he said. "I made some money, but mostly I lost. I dropped more than $20,000 on Reading alone."

FIRE CLAIMS THREE LIVES

One Man Killed by Jumping and Two by Suffocation

Manchester, N. H., July 3.—A search of the lodging house of Mrs. David Mayo, which was damaged by fire, revealed the fact that three lives had been lost.

John Reed was fatally injured when he disregarded a warning and jumped from a third-story window, dying while being taken to a hospital. Mederic Caron and Albert Lachance were suffocated in their rooms on the top floor of the four-story frame building.

The fire, which started in the basement from an unknown cause, was confined to the lower part of the structure, occupied as a clothing store. The upper floors were filled with dense smoke. The loss will not exceed $10,000.

INTERRUPTS INQUEST

Father of Slain Girl Jabs Murderer With an Umbrella

Pittsburg, July 3.—John Dove, father of Florence Dove, who was assaulted and murdered on a hillside near North Braddock, attacked Jacob Taylor, confessed slayer of the child, as he sat in the coroner's inquest.

Dove jabbed Taylor with a steel-shod umbrella in neck and face, and it was with difficulty that Taylor was rescued.

The attack came just after Elizabeth Kimek, who was with Florence Dove when she met death, had identified Taylor. Taylor was held for the grand jury.

Doctor Charged With Murder

Westerly, R. I., July 3.—Following the death of Miss Kate Bontvenot, aged 18, Dr. Percy A. Senior was held without bail on charges of murder and performing a criminal operation. The cases were continued until July 10, after he had pleaded not guilty.

Col. A. B. Packard Camp Sons of Veterans keep open house and will entertain members of Paul Revere Post 88, G. A. R., and kindred organizations.

Much of the success of the minstrel show of the Tonawanda club was due to Spencer Apollonio who selected the music, secured the costumes, drilled the chorus, and showed ability.

Miss Henrietta Robinson of Glover avenue, Norfolk Downs, has returned from Methuen, where she has been teaching in the High school. Miss Robinson is to take a course in the Harvard summer school.

All of the street cars are carrying signs on the dasher boards urging safety first, and drivers not to take any chances. It is a good thing to bear in mind. If everybody would stop taking chances there would be less accidents.

The granite sheds of Hughes & Johnson on Granite street were entered by sneak thieves sometime during Thursday night and two bush hammers stolen. The police think the job was done by some party who wanted to increase his celebration fund by a few dollars.

The L. S. Richards medal was awarded June 25 at the Marshfield high school graduation to Gladys Webster and grammar school medals are to be awarded later. Our former townsman shows his interest in educational matters in Marshfield, where he now resides, these prizes being given annually by him.

If the weather is as cool on the Fourth as today it will not be as uncomfortable marching in the parade as some years. A year ago for instance when the parade passed the judges' stand the sun beat down on them so hot that everybody was nearly roasted. It was also very uncomfortable for those who marched over the route.

Two tables will be conducted under the auspices of the Maple Lodge, K. & L. of H., on July 4th, for the benefits of the Salem sufferers. One will be located in City Square near the fountain and the other at the residence of Miss M. Lizzie Furnald on Washington street. Tonics and all kinds of refreshments will be sold.

At the morning and evening services at Bethany Congregational church on Sunday offering will betaken for Salem Relief fund. The pleasant Sunday evening service will interest men. A double male quartette will sing. The pastor will lecture on "Our best citizens." All seats are free at all services.

The members of Paul J. Revere Post 88, G. A. R., met in their hall on Hancock street Thursday eevning to arrange for their appearance in the parade on the Fourth. John Phelan was present and offered the use of an auto truck for the veterans and his offer was accepted. The truck will take the veterans from the hall where they will assemble.

A very enjoyable social was held Tuesday night by the Epworth League of the Atlantic Methodist church. Music and refreshments were enjoyed. The chief attraction were whistling solos by Miss Sigfretz of Montreal, her rendering of the Mocking Bird, Annie Laurie, Rock of Ages and Jesus Lover of my Soul, delighted her audience. There was also music by the Hall orchestra. It was one of the best entertainments ever given by the League.

A forward wheel on a wagon owned by A. G. Pawsey of Germantown collapsed on Hancock street, opposite the Daily Ledger office Thursday afternoon and Mr. Pawsey and James Grant of Dorchester, a well known insurance agent were both thrown to the street. Mr. Pawsey had his hands scratched but Mr. Grant sustained no injuries. Mr. Pawsey reset the spokes of the wheel and continued to his home.

THE SPIRIT OF '76

Tomorow is the day.

Here's hoping for a pleasant day. Not too warm—a nice cool breeze.

Get some sleep tonight if you can, as it will be a strenuous day tomorrow.

It is hoped that every one will hoist "Old Glory."

Tomorrow is the one day of the year that you are a sport.

Remember that the police and firemen are human and will get tired and cross if pushed beyond endurance.

Tomorrow night we can go to bed at 11.30 P. M., and sleep, sleep. And some of us will sleep till the cock crows Monday morning. How we will enjoy it.

The association has asked Commissioner Brown to have the watering cart start out just ahead of the parade, so as to lay the dust.

All roads lead to Quincy tomorrow.

One of the prettiest sights that I ever saw was last year when Mayor Stone stepped out on the stage at the theatre and asked the children to stand and salute the flag, which was suddenly dropped behind him. Every child immediately stood and the flag was saluted as of one child. It was an inspiring sight.

Give up all thoughts of business tomorrow and show to the world at large how thankful you are that live under the best flag that floats—and do not forget to salute it when it passes you in the parade.

"My country! How I love my country"—Wm. Pitt.

Give the visitors a glad hand of welcome and make them feel at home, and they will give our city a good name and come again.

Do your firemen sleep tonight? yes, "Cat naps," but all dressed and ready for duty's call

Put the children to bed early tonight, so that they can stay up tomorrow night and see the best display of fireworks ever seen in Quincy. I know that you both will be tired and cross long before that time, but remember the 4th only comes once a year.

LONG FAITHFUL SERVICE.

John Byrne, who delivers the Ledgers daily on Presidents hill and Adams street, starting from City Square and finishing his route at the Quincy Hospital, will on Saturday complete eight years o fservice. In all this time he has been off his route only two weeks and has been faithful in rain or snow, heat or cold, no weather being too bad for him. Customers on his route could always be sure of getting their Ledger promptly every afternoon and hope he won't grow up so fast that he can no longer be "the newsboy."

SALEM FUND IS GROWING

Clarence Burgin, treasurer of the Quincy Salem Relief fund reports the following additional contributions:

First Presbyterian church	$28.
Friend	1.
Syrian Christian Union	10.
George W. Holden	5.
George H. Field	5.

Funds seem to be coming in rather slowly. It is expected however that the benefit performance at Kincaides theatre Sunday evening will net a good sum to the fund, and there will be collections in the churches on Sunday.

Miss Purchase, secretary of the Associated Charities, visited Salem on Thursday. There was great suffering there on account of the cold, rainy weather, especially for people living in the tents. The Relief Committee have their work remarkably well organized, system and order rapidly taking the place of disorder in the work of relief giving.

The supply of second hand clothing is sufficient for present needs and no more will be received for distribution. Although there is a supply of volunteer workers, the relief committee are handicapped by a great lack of trained workers, especially investigators. Money for relief purposes is urgently needed also.

Miss Purchase conferred with the gentleman who had charge of the final distribution of the Chelsea fire fund, as the statement is being made, a large amount of money from that fund was not used for fire sufferers. The report was found to be untrue. The money contributed for Chelsea fire sufferers was all used for that benefit and there was nothing left over.

People who wish to help Salem fire sufferers, should contribute as promptly and as generously as possible as they are in immediate need.

APPOINTED FIELD DEPUTY.

William L. V. Newton, formerly a state representative from South Boston and a summer resident of Quincy, has been appointed a field deputy on income tax work with Boston headquarters. His salary will be $1600 per annum, with $1200 for expenses. The appointment was made by Sec. McAdoo.

Mr. Newton is one of the best known of the state legislators. He has always been a Democrat and served several terms in the old Boston council from Ward 13, later going to the House of Representatives. He is the first income tax investigator appointed.

For the past three years Mr. Newton has made his home at Rock Island. Daily he walks from there to Quincy station. He is a keen student of affairs in this city and is said to be contemplating making Quincy his permanent home.

ASSAILANT MISSING.

No arrests have been made in connection with the stabbing of Frank Buldoni of 145 Sumner street at midnight Tuesday. The assailant of Buldoni for whom the police are searching is described as a thick set Italian, about 5 feet 10 inches in height, dark eyes and thick red hair. He is said to be an employee of the Fore River shipyard.

Buldoni is rapidly recovering from the effects of the slashing his abdomen received but has given out no information as to who he was attacked at his home.

Not too late to order a couch hammock or lawn swing for the holiday at Kincaide's furniture store.

Aliens.

A man's world always, this has been —everything arranged for men—and the women are foreigners.

MISS WINSTON'S FOURTH.

"Well, that is what I call downright mean," said Bud. "They never decorated Miss Winston." And he emphasized his remark by aiming a stone at the saucy chipmunk that had been making friendly overtures. Nellie the eldest of the group, took exception to the remark.

"You talk as if she was a cosy corner or a pin-cushion," she exclaimed, sharply.

"You talk like—like—a girl," answered Bud, with fine scorn. "Don't you know she's a Daughter of the American Revolution"

"And Mrs. Hodges she says that she is a Mother of the Spanish-American War."

Bud's face indicated all the contempt possible for one whose nose is already tip tilted at a decided angle.

"Yes, and Miss Winston's grandfather helped lick the Britishers before there was any Philippines, but just because he is buried away up in Maine, they didn't give her any Memorial Day, or any flags or flowers, and didn't even ask her to sit on the platform like they did Mrs. Hodges. I bet it made her feel awful bad."

Here six-year-old Blinks set up a dismal wail. Some one in some fashion, was injuring Miss Winston who as a dispenser of cookies and gingerbread, held a warm place in his small affections. The patriotic discussion was perforce abandoned until Blinks was pacified.

The Courtney children spent every summer at the old family homestead in Chatham but this year thanks to an epidemic of diphtheria in city schools, they had been spirited off to the country with the opening of spring. For the first time in their lives they had participated in a country celebration of Memorial Day, and had absorbed the full meaning of the occasion. In the city it represented merely a parade. Here in the quiet country town it stood for patriotism of the loftiest sort. And to the loyal, impetuous Bud it amounted to an insult that Miss Winston, whose every silvery gray hair he reverenced had had no part in the solemn ceremonials.

It was not entirely because the three children felt that the quaint old Winston mansion was a never failing refuge in time of other disappointments, nor that with the welcome always awaiting them there came more substantial proofs of their hostess' affection, but they felt that the white haired lady with the quiet voice, represented the men whom generations before, had died that their country might live. Miss Winston's cookies were irreproachable but better still were her thrilling tales of when Grandfather Winston was on Washington's staff. And in their eyes, far handsomer than the silver tea set which had come over in the Mayflower, and had been given General Winston's father on his marriage, was the faded Continental uniform which hung in Miss Winston's own room, and which they were permitted to gaze upon, and even touch, on those rare occasions when all three had been good simultaneously.

During the weeks which intervened between Memorial Day and the Fourth of July a general air of mystery brooded over the Courtney family. If Grandmother Courtney had not been afflicted with failing eyesight, she must have judged from the secret conclaves in dim corners that something was brewing. As it was, she did wonder somewhat at the subsidence of the usually exuberant Bud, who had little or nothing to say about the rapidly approaching day of noise and jubilation. Nor could she quite understand why, when the supply of fireworks arrived from the city Bud did not attempt to sample them in advance. Only the year before, in his enthusiasm, he had shot off all the Roman candles by daylight and then cried himself to sleep because night brought no fresh supplies. She even went so far as to administer a mild dose of senna to her oldest grandson on the general principle that when Bud's curiosity failed, something must be wrong.

On the eve of Independence Day the three children sat on Miss Winston's back porch sampling a fresh loaf of gingerbread.

"Do you mind, Miss Winston, if we decorate you tomorrow?" asked Bud, with labored politeness.

"Bless your soul, no," replied the old lady, slightly puzzled, yet lending herself willingly to any plan that might bring pleasure to her young admirers. "But what do you mean?"

"You mustn't ask questions," responded Bud, with sudden seevrity, and incidentally heading off Blinks' attempts at explanation by filling the infant's mouth with gingerbread.

"You see," ventured Nell "you were not decorated on Memorial Day, and we thought tomorrow would do just as well. It will be more exclusive to have a celebration of our own, and, besides, more appropriate, being Independence Day, and your Grandfather Winston having fought in the Revolution, and his old uniform hanging upstairs."

Nell was waxing incoherent but Bud felt she was getting on dangerous ground, and he remarked, with the air of one refraining with difficulty from administering a reproof

"Nell, I'm afraid grandmother wants us to come home quick before you blab the whole thing. Good evening Miss Winston! We'll see you in the morning." And with a bow that indicated the respect due one of Revolutionary ancestry he drove his submissive sister and brother out of the Eden where they would fain tarry.

* * * * * * *

The sun was barely peeping over Jason's barn the next morning when Miss Winston was roused by violent cannonading. Hurrying to the window, she saw Bud, on her well-trimmed lawn, hoisting a flag on an improvised pole, while Nell held her ears against the progress of the national salute of 21 guns improvised from giant firecrackers and tomato cans.

"It isn't going off quite regular," explained Bud in stentorian tones above the din, "but some of the fuses is fatter than the others, and they go off too soon."

Miss Winston smiled and asked where they had found the flag.

"It's a pillow-case," replied Nell, in housewifery triumph. "We made it ourselves. The blue is from the laundry, and the red grandpa got to paint the shingles with. It ain't just the right red, but it does very well Now we are going to give you another salute, and then go home to breakfast."

"Better stay here," called back the decorated one. "I'll be down in a minute, and we'll have johnny cake."

"And honey?" suggested Bud.

Miss Winston nodded.

"Then we will stay," he announced, gravely, "for we have all the fireworks here, and we told grandma something might happen that we wouldn't come back for breakfast. So we'll set off one more pack of firecrackers and then come in."

All the morning long, Miss Winston arrayed in a fresh lawn dress, figured with sprigs of dainty flowers, sat on the front porch, with the double purpose of serving as the center of festivities and watching that Blinks did not set his clothes on fire. In the afternoon, when the supply of pyrotechnics ran short, Bud grandiloquently announced that it was time for exercises, and would Miss Winston please open the program by telling them how her grandfather became a general, and did the soldiers really go barefooted in the snow at Valley Forge. Miss Winston was not only willing, but proud to do this, and later in the afternoon, in the dim, cool parlor, she served cake and lemonade, while on the stiff, old horse-hair sofa reposed the tattered regimentals which represented so much to her and the youthful patriots who were enjoying the most glorious and perhaps most unselfish, celebration in their short history. And, of course, they had to stay for supper, because, when the longed for darkness came, Zach was to set off the fireworks Roman candles, sky-rockets and flower-pots.

It was quite 9 o'clock when the last rocket whizzed through the air, and Zach was at liberty to retire to the kitchen porch for his evening smoke. Blinks had fallen asleep with his head in Nell's lap, and a tender silence rested on the group, when suddenly Bud sat up very straight.

"I hear music!"

It was music, the one music suited to an Independence Day celebration—the piping strains of fife and drum corps. Nearer and nearer it came. The musicians swept round the bend with half of Chatham at their heels. Marching in advance was the president of the village board. The procession stopped before Miss Winston's gate, and the astonished lady, with three delighted guests circling round her, stepped hospitably forth. The president of the board removed his hat somewhat awkwardly and cleared his throat.

"It's the sentiment of some of our leading citizens, Miss Winston ,that we ain't appreciated the fact that we had in our midst one whose ancestor fought in our country's first and greatest war, and we're glad even to be reminded of said fact by these here children, and in token of that sentiment, we have brought the fireworks display along, and, with your permission, will set off the same in your pasture lot, instead of in the public square, according to the usual custom."

He stopped from sheer lack of breath and Miss Winston, all a tremble over this unexpected honor, gave her delighted consent to the subversion of her pasture lot to patriotic uses. So there was more red fire, more candles, more rockets and innumerable flower-pots and nigger chasers; then came, spread in living flames, a double portrait of Washington and — General Winston. Nell could stand it no longer. In a very ecstasy of satisfaction, she flung her arms about Miss Winston's neck.

"That's from papa. I wrote him to send them down."

Bud glared at her through the darkness.

"It's all right," he assured her, since it's so good; but I knew you couldn't keep a secret."

Nevertheless he smiled as he felt Miss Winston's arm about his neck, and her tender kiss upon his tanned cheek. They were starting for home now under Zach's care.

"Dear children, this has been the happiest, the proudest, day of my life, and you have made it so."

"Yes, it's been a bully day," assented Bud, vainly trying to stifle the pride in his voice. Blinks raised a sleepy face for Miss Winston's good night kiss.

"The lemonade was good, too," he murmured as he placed a confiding hand in Zach's big, rough one. And so the four were swallowed up in the summer darkness; but long after they had disappeared, Miss Winston stood at her gate ,inhaling the fumes of burned powder, and enjoying them as a true Daughter of the American Revolution should.— Colin S. BIRTHDAY SURPRISE .

About 75 friends of Oliver Burrell gathered at Grand Army hall Wednesday evening. Commodore Culley summoned Mr. Burrell on the pretext that a G. A. R. comrade wished to talk with him. He was completely surprised when confronted by such a host, but was at once informed that the levity was in honor of his 79th birthday.

P. P. Mrs. Mary Mahoney had the affair in charge and arranged a pleasing program. There were orchestra selections by Arthur Fearing clarinet, Sumner Fearing violin, Mr. Keith cornet and cornet and piano numbers by Marjorie and Theodora Keith, followed by the presentation of a flag to Mr. Burrell by Murray Whitcomb, P. I. of Post 58, assisted by Corps president Mrs. Agnes Baldwin and P. I. Mrs. Margaret Culley. Mr. Burrell responded in a happy manner after which the orchestra played The Star Spangled Banner.

Olived Burrell and Mrs. Mary E. Mahoney lead the way to the lower hall where refreshments were served and dancing and a social hour enjoyed.

Special guests were Edward O. Pierson, P. I. of Post 87 of Braintree and Mrs. Pierson, Dr. Marstin P. C. of Paul Revere Post, D. I. Mrs. Carrie F. Loring of W. R. C. who gave 5-minute speeches. Mr. Wadsworth, Lue Stuart Wadsworth, Adj. Gen. Wetherbee, and Annie R. Leighton all prominent in patriotic work were invited but unable to be present.

SILVER WEDDING

Thursday evening members of the Universalist Sewing Circle and other friends met at Thomas's corner and wended their way to the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Jones of Shaw street, to surprise them on their silver wedding anniversary.

Mr. Jones was a party to the affair but Mrs. Jones was never more surprised than when about eighty friends took possession of her home and made merry for two solid hours.

While Albert Poulin entertained with phonograph selections a collation of ices, punch and cake was prepared.

A delightful feature was the presentation to the couple by friends of silver, suitably enclosed. Rev. R. H. Dix was spokesman and his remarks were in part humorous and caused much merriment. Mr. and Mrs. Jones also received numerous other gifts, among which were a silver gravy ladle and cold meat fork from their son H. Deforrest Jones and wife, and two horses (?) not hobbies. An elaborate cake with decorations of roses and silver ornaments was the gift of Mrs. Geo. White.

Mrs. Jones was Georgianna Morton of Hingham daughter of the late John T. and Harriet A. (Bates) Morton and Mr. Jones son of the late Moses and Deborah (Dyer) Jones.

Mrs. Jones has been a member of the Universalist Sewing Circle for many years and is active in church affairs. She is also a member of Reynold W. R. C. No. 102 while Mr. Jones has for nine years been proprietor of the newspaper and periodical store at Thomas's corner, and was identified with the business for several years previous as assistant.

In departing the friends expressed a wish that all might be present at "Jone's fiftieth." Among those present were Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Dix, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Nash, Raymond Nash, Mrs. Abbie Jordan, Mrs. Lizzie Burr, Mr. and Mrs. Miles P. Keene, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rodolph, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. AUTOISTS BEWARE.

Automobile No. 51877 nearly came to grief on Hancock street Thursday morning when its operator locked the brakes in trying to avoid hitting a team which crossed his bow to go up Dimmock street. The auto turned a half circle and headed back for City Square. When stopped it was opposite the residence of D. F. Ramon Burke.

Several other machines passing through City Square skidded from one side to the other and pedestrians had narrow escapes from being struck. No one was injured during the day however.

The streets because of the heavy rain and the oil are in a treacherous condition and all operators that attempt to round corners of oiled streets at over five miles an hour are tempting fate.

K. OF C. GIFT.

Quincy council, Knights of Columbus, was one of the first organizations that heard the call for funds for the relief of the population of striken Salem and at its meeting in Colonial hall on Thursday evening a motion appropriating $50 to be applied to the funds for the members of Veragua council of that place, was unanimously passed. Grand Knight William A. Carey presided and among the bsiness transacted was the arrangeing of the details for the whist party to be given in the hall of St. John's parish school on the evening of July 8 in aid of the parish field day.

WEST QUINCY CELEBRATION.

Late this afternoon the annual base ball game between two sections of the northerly end of West Quincy will be played on the field opposite the Gridley Bryant grammar school. One team is called the Rail Reds and the other the Rail Blues. This contest is usually the opening of the celebration of the "night before" and when darkness sets in all on hand form into line and parade over the streets of the district. Open house is observed everywhere in that section until midnight Sunday. Several huge bon fires are ready for the match. All are situated so that they will not be dangerous to surrounding property.

PUMPKIN CENTRE BAND.

The Pumpkin Centre band, which is composed largely of members of Mt. Wollaston lodge of Odd Fellows will enliven the parade with their music at Atlantic on the morning of the Fourth as usual. The band has several new players this year and they promise that the music they blow out this year will be a surprise. Then again the drum major has been in daily rehearsal of a number of new stunts which he intends to spring upon the unsuspecting public the morning of the Fourth. One must hear them to fully appreciate their efforts.

GRANITE RIVAL.

The steamer Cricket, Captain Wehman, arrived this week at San Francisco from Tacoma laden with lumber and 1100 tons of Alaska granite. This is the largest cargo of the Alaska product ever brought to this port, and is probably the precursor of many which will follow.

All of the granite has been loaded on deck. The hold contained lumber, which had been piled clear to the deck in order to make a solid resting place for the granite. Each block weighed from six to twelve tons.

According to Fred Lindermann, owner of the Cricket, the granite was worth about $50,000. Each block was valued at an average of $500. Formerly nearly all of the granite used for ornamental purposes was shipped from the New England states. Recently a valuable quarry was opened on the island of Tokeen, near Wrangell, Alaska.

DEATH BLAMED UPON A WOMAN

Police Theory Regarding Tragedy in Carman's Office

PATIENT SHEDS NEW LIGHT

Tells of Alleged Inaccuracies In Stories Told by Principal Parties—Dictaphone Connected Doctor's Office With Bedroom of Jealous Wife—Carman Says Life Was Threatened

New York, July 3.—That a woman fired the shot that killed Mrs. Louise Bailey in Dr. Edwin Carman's office at Freeport, L. I., is the police theory, based on new evidence.

This evidence—an affidavit from a patient, Joseph Golden—showed the presence of a woman near the doctor's window a few minutes before the shot was fired. Postponement of the inquest resulted from Golden's testimony.

Two weeks before Mrs. Bailey was murdered in the office, some one called Carman on the telephone and threatened his life. With apparent reluctance, and more than thirty-six hours after the tragedy, the physician gave this information to the district attorney. The county prosecutor failed to make him amplify this revelation. Carman refused to say whether the threatening message came from a man or a woman.

Officials expect to have Mrs. Carman and her husband before the inquest for a searching examination—Mrs. Carman as to her movements on the fatal night, her jealousy of the doctor, and her use of a spying distaphone to trap him; the doctor to relate under oath all the events of the evening.

Golden swore that a woman and a little girl passed the office window only a brief time before the shooting. The girl was dancing in play, but the woman passed near the window. Golden was not entirely certain that he could identify the woman.

Golden surprised the authorities by declaring that he saw Mrs. Carman enter the room where Mrs. Bailey was killed a minute or two after the shot was fired. She helped her husband lift the woman's body to a couch, he said, and folded the hands over the breast.

This contradicted Mrs. Carman's statement that she did not see Mrs. Bailey either before or after the shooting.

Further questioning brought from Golden an admission that the woman he saw in the doctor's office might have been Mrs. Carman's sister, who closely resembles her.

The discovery of a telephone device connecting the physician's office with his wife's bedroom closet, which seemed to promise important revelations, brought forth nothing definite beyond the fact that Mrs. Carman was jealous of her husband and that her scheme to overhear conversations in his office had convinced her, so she now declares, that her fears were groundless.

While Mrs. Carman was in Hempstead for the purpose of viewing the body of Mrs. Bailey, detectives, acting under the instructions of District Attorney Smith, were hard at work pumping out a cesspool and a well in the rear of the Carman residence and a cesspool in the cellar.

In one of these three places, the detectives declared, they believed they would find a 38-calibre revolver with one exploded shell in it.

The body of the murdered woman was taken from her home in Hempstead to an undertaker's morgue in that town for the purpose of performing an autopsy which had been ordered by the district attorney.

William D. Bailey at first refused to allow the body of his wife to be moved from the house, but after the authorities had threatened to go to a supreme court justice and secure an order permitting the autopsy, Bailey gave his consent.

Mrs. Carman and her attorney were waiting at the morgue when the body reached there. Mrs. Carman, in reply to a question from her attorney, declared she had never seen Mrs. Bailey before.

BUSY DAYS FOR "CON" DUGGAN

Fourth of July Plans and Trip to Ireland

Cornelius M. Duggan, who will be chief marshal of Atlantic parade on Fourth of July, has made arrangements for an extensive tour of Ireland his native country. He and Mrs. Duggan were born in West Cork, Ireland and both are anticipating an enjoyable visit to the old country which they have not seen since coming to America. They will sail next Tuesday on the Franconia direct to Liverpool and will visit Belfast, Armagh, Londonderry, Dundalk, Dublin, Tipperary, Killarney, West Cork and other places. They sail to return Sept. 2.

Since coming to America 33 years ago, Mr. Duggan has worked continuously for the Wollaston Foundry Co. and is today treasurer of the Mutual Relief association of that company. First he sent to Ireland for his old sweetheart and they were married. Father and mother, brothers and sisters followed him to Quincy, but all have now pased away. But Mr. and Mrs. Duggan have been blessed with seven children, all much attached to Quincy.

For four years Mr. Duggan was a member of the Quincy Board of Health; he is a past high chief ranger, M. C. O. F., and a past president of the A. O. H. One evening recently Neponset court M. C. O. F., and the Allan Larkin & O'Brien club presented Mr. Duggan a pair of field glasses.

The building will be of brick and will be erected along the most modern hotel lines. Its size has not been determined, but it is expected that there will be at least 100 rooms. There is some talk also of making it a strictly bachelor's home, to be conducted along the lines of the Barristers chambers in Boston.

MANCHESTER WANTS INDUSTRY

Rapid progress is being made in the organization of the company to build the auto fire engines designed by Harry L. Houghton of Somerville, and already the residents of Manchester, N. H., have subscribed to $300,000 worth of stock.

This in itself is a tribute to the engine that saved the city of Manchester from a conflagration which threatened to wipe it off the map, and then rendered such valuable assistance at the Salem conflagration while on its way back to this city.

The sudden turn of events undoubtedly means that there is but little chance of the company locating in Quincy, although President Joseph L. Whiton of the City Council has been very active in attempting to bring this about.

The 150 horse power machine, built at the Fore River shipyard, which has been used as a demonstrating car by Mr. Houghton, will now be painted, loaded with hose and taken to different points in the country for exhibition purposes. He believes that because of its work at the two biggest fires in New England, a little over a week ago, that there will be but little necessity of further exhibiting it in this section.

Mr. Houghton arrived in Quincy this morning and called on Chief Billings of the Fire department. He has promised the use of his engine from midnight tonight to midnight Sunday. This will be added equipment available for fires and protection to a point never before reached in this city. It will also make it possible to use the horse drawn apparatus of the Central station only on extra occasions.

PENN STREET TO BE PAVED

The business men along Penn street, South Quincy, can celebrate the Fourth in better spirits from the fact that the Mayor has signed the order appropriating $7,700 for paving the street. This is a street much used by granite teams and it has been in a deplorable condition for several years Not only is the street rough but all over there are rocks of various sizes sticking up through the surface making travel along the street rather hard

The order for paving this street has been before the City Council for several years and has been the subject of hours of debate. Several times the council has refused to pass order, with the result that the vote has been reconsidered to be tried later, and when at last there were no hopes of passing it the order has been sent over to the next council. At one time an attempt was made to substitute a macadam road for paving, but this met with a like fate. This year however the order for paving went through without debate of any kind in the Council, and Thursday it was signed by the Mayor. Ex-Councilman John R. Richards is happy.

CITY SQUARE RUNWAY

Some day teamsters will learn the folly of leaving a horse standing in the public street feeding without a bridle. This noon a team bearing the name of H. A. Eagles of Newton Centre bound for Pembroke with a load of furniture, was left standing on Washington street in the rear of the First church. The driver had removed the bridle and left the horse feeding. Something startled the horse and across Hancock street bringandand across Hancock street bringing u pagainst the fruit stand near the Hancock cemetery. A second later there was a mixture of strawberries, lettuce and cucumbers on the sidewalk. By this time the horse had been stopped without doing further damage.

DISTRICT COURT.

Frank Chaisson was fined $5 and John Rush $10 for drunkenness at Quincy, and William Townsend $5 for drunkenness at Braintree.

Arthur W. Gardner was fined $20, Walter Gardner $20, Frank J. Brown $10, and George W. White $15 for exceeding the automobile speed limit on the Blue Hills parkway.

The Foy stores will not be open on Saturday, the Fourth of July, but will be open late this evening to supply all holiday wants. They have anticipated your desires for the holiday dinner, or luncheon, or outing, also your Sunday dinner.

The Minute Boys organized in Memorial church a week ago, will attend church in uniform Sunday morning.

THE FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION WAS A ROUSER

QUINCY'S MORNING PARADE BIG FEATURE OF THE HOLIDAY

Relay Races and Base Ball Games Interest a Large Number of People

Thousands However Witness Display of Fireworks

Quincy's parade, under the auspices of the Fourth of July Association was the best since the national holiday has been observed in a conservative way and all that was lacking to make it one of the best in the state was the "jackies" who until this year have always been a feature.

It was shortly after 9 o'clock that the first division of the parade formed on Adams street and a short time after the order to march was sounded by the bugler. The other divisions which had formed on the nearby streets fell into line, including practically the entire Atlantic parade, and as they passed through City Square hearty applause was rendered by the thousands along the line of march.

The parade followed the route—Hancock, Elm, Washington, Sumner, Scammell, Quincy avenue, Water, Franklin, School, Hancock to City Square, where it was reviewed and dismissed.

Quincy people and many out of town friends were along the line of march and as each feature came into view they applauded and cheered.

The members of Paul Revere Post No. 88, G. A. R. who rode in a decorated auto truck were given an ovation and the Boys of '61 at their headquarters after the parade expressed themselves in a kindly way over the recognition accorded them.

Another feature which, although it has appeared here before, nevertheless continues to be a real asset to the parade were the 360 Cardinal cadets from Charlestown, with their own field band of 60 pieces. Wearing red coats, duck trousers and white topped caps, they covered the route in formations that were not only executed with skill but also with an eye to beauty and whenever a change of column was ordered they received applause from all who witnessed it.

The Roxbury Horse Guards, owing to an accident to Capt. Ferguson and the loss of a wheel on one of their wagons, reached the starting point at 10 o'clock. They went through the square on the run to pick up the parade, leaving considerable handclapping in the rear. On the review they were in line and presented a natty appearance.

The horribles and antique division was one of the finest aggregations of real live comedy makers that the city has seen, and more than one laugh was created along the line of march. Up to the minute banners, from the yellow Votes for Women Flag that flew from the Atlantic "Suffering Yets" auto to the wagon with "The whole Dam Family" evoked laughter, and it was with difficulty that the judges made the award of prizes.

Galen V. Bowditch commander of this division rode his horse like a seasoned trooper. As he passed before the reviewing stand, with eyes right, and his erect figure as straight as the poplar tree, he was cheered to the echo.

One other man, beyond the age of 60 was also in the parade. He was Albert Keating, an aid on the chief marshal's staff, a post he has filled well the past two years. He also received applause and was the only veteran in line riding a horse.

While all were waiting for the parade to pass in review Hon. Eugene R. Stone, president of the association, discovered Edward A. Gisburne sitting on the grandstand. Without any delay he announced to the crowd that the hero of Vera Cruz was present. As "Eddie" arose to bow his acknowledgements to the applause, with his straw hat in his right hand and his crutches supporting him, the people of the city for the first time realized that he was indeed a live hero, and the three cheers called for were given with a gusto. The people in front of City Hall took up the cry and the last salvo was given by those in front of Bethany church.

The policing of the crowd was under the direction of Chief Frank E. Burrell and only one accident marred the day. No arrests were made during the parade and no robberies have have been reported to headquarters. Many new officers made their debut and were obliged to take the good natured jollying of their friends, and if Chief Burrell had twelve more men he could have easily used them.

The idea of having a grand stand on the steps of the First Parish church was commended and although the sun was not as hot as in previous years the beautiful shade trees would have protected the spot very well.

The old favorite lookouts were again claimed this year and the windows of the Granite City Club, the top of the Savings Bank Building, the walls along the Hancock cemetery, City Hall and other available places were filled from early in the morning until after the parade.

The judges' auto was in front of City Hall and immediately after the parade they met in the office of City Clerk Crane and made the awards.

Although motorists are annoyed by the clouds of dust from other machines, they can get some compensation by depositing a lot of it on the farm houses along the way.

CLEANLINESS ON RAILROADS.

The railroads have had their trouble where they proposed to omit the point of view. Mops, brooms, and the services of scrub women cost money. Some of the roads, notably the Erie, recently reached a point of desperation where they proposed to omit the washing of car windows, as an emergency measure of retrenchment. They were informed by the public Utility Commission that clean cars and car windows are necessary to proper service.

Railroads differ greatly. Some of the richer roads conciliate patrons for high fares by a delightful spotlessness. Their toilet rooms shine. Scrubbers are constantly rooting for dirt at the larger stations. It is good business. People do not like to don overalls when they go travelling. The mantle of cleanliness covers many sins.

The majority of the roads are careless. They excuse themselves on the ground that whenever the man with the broom goes along, some tobacco spitter carefully deposits his cud on the floor that has just been cleansed. There is something in that, too.

But a high degree of cleanliness is worth working for. Merchants catering to the general public find the same difficulty with filthy people. But they do not therefore omit to sweep their floors. A dirty store window would drive away trade.

The one compensation for the achy bones of a railroad journey is the pleasure of looking out the windows at God's country. An unwashed window neutralizes that pleasure. An unswept floor and unbrushed seats convey an impression of dinginess and discomfort. They are left handed advertising that spells decay. Public service commissions that have made the railroads quit such pennywise economies confer a benefit on the stockholders.

WONDERFUL HARVEST.

The wheat eaters and the wheat growers of the world are nip and tuck—largely tuck. Ten years ago the statisticians said the wheat eaters consumed only four bushels a year. But recently James J. Hill has figured it that they are getting away with seven. The inevitable result has been much higher prices. So the news of the biggest wheat crop ever raised, with 154,000,000 bushels in Kansas alone, means some help on living costs in millions of families.

Formerly wheat was something of a luxury. Half of Europe lived on "black bread." In the United States simple country people used "hasty pudding" and corn cake. Many economically minded families of the older days never had white bread, save when the minister or other dignitaries called. Now the same families are buying wheat cereal preparations put up in a wasteful manner in small packages with fancy paper coverings.

The cereal habit has enormously increased the wheat eaters. The old time rustic family had for breakfast sausage, hash, liver, or often steaks or warmed over roasts. A similar diet means bankruptcy today. The simple modern morning meal of cereal, toast or muffins, coffee, eggs when possible and fruit of which wheat is the backbone, looks terribly skimpy and parsimonious to your older country cousins. Yet to modern taste it seems fresher and more invigorating.

It will be interesting to know whether this year's wonderful harvest is due to weather luck, or to the spread of better farming information. Probably it is owing to both. Ordinarily it is slow work to educate the farmers. England spent 40 years in raising her production per acre from 11 to 34 bushels. The United States has been wantonly careless in farm methods. For 20 years it raised its wheat production only two bushels per acre.

GAINING GROUND IN WITCH CITY

Salem Assumes Share In Work of Rehabilitation

TOO MANY BOSSES IN CHARGE

Part of Militia Leaves For Home, Leaving About Four Hundred Soldiers to Guard Burned District—Great Throngs of Sightseers Still Invest City—Dynamiting Resumed

Salem, Mass., July 6.—Salem is assuming a larger share in the work of rehabilitating the community, disordered and overwhelmed by the great conflagration.

Part of the Eighth regiment and Ambulance corps No. 1, from Boston has been withdrawn and left, tired, but happy at the prospect of seeing home again.

Colonel Graves, however, will remain and still retains command of the militia to the number of 300 or 400, who will stay as long as they are needed.

There is, too, a goodly cutting down of the number of rations which are being served in the armory, due, it is believed, to the fact that many of the people who have been receiving them are beginning to be able to care for themselves.

It is daily becoming more and more apparent that Salem, fire-stricken and needy, is also suffering from a case of too many bosses. Relief committees, city fathers, the civil government which has been appointed to take over the affairs of policing the city on the removal of the troops, and the military are bound to duplicate efforts to some degree and to conflict in their activities.

There was a change for a few hours when Mayor Curley of Boston became mayor of two cities at the same time. Mayor Hurley of this city went away for the first time since the fire, and asked the visiting mayor to take charge, which he did.

Colonel Cutting, who has been appointed head of the civil government to take the place of the military, spoke of his first official act in taking over the reins of government. That was to rebuild the tent city in Forest River park—Binetteville, as it has been named by the French residents, in honor of the priest who has been among them constantly—to place all the tents higher on the hillside and in more orderly formation and to lay out streets, all toward making the tent city a permanent one.

There is no abatement in the interest which people are taking in viewing the devastation of Salem, as was evidenced by the throngs who visited here Sunday, the crowds rivaling those of the first day or so after the fire. Automobiles which came in a constant stream down Lafayette street, and through all the streets that are not roped off and patrolled by the militia, carried the great majority of the visitors, but special cars from the nearby points were run at frequent intervals.

Colonel Graves has ordered out a big squad—the demolition squad—and has announced that he will no longer "stand for" quibbling in the matter of dynamiting the dangerous walls and chimneys and that the dynamiting must positively begin at once.

In case there should be any interruption of the telephone service, which is most necessary for the soldiers to carry out their policing, there has also been installed a system of signalling. Signal stations have been placed on the tower of the state armory, at Forest River park, on the high school building, on the normal school and at Bertram field. Lanterns will be used for the signalling at night and flags by day. This was organized by Captain Chamberlain, regimental adjutant, under the supervision of Lieutenant W. W. Austin, battery quartermaster.

ELOPERS ARE FOUND

Fern Hallian and Father's Chauffeur Arrested In Portland

Portland, Me., July 6.—Fern Hallian, daughter of Joseph Hallian of Hull, Mass., who eloped with her father's chauffeur, Louis Eisman, was found in this city after having, without meaning to, dodged the police and newspaper men who had searched high and low for her for several days.

The discovery of the couple was due solely to Julia Roper, telephone operator at the Falmouth hotel. It was when Miss Hallian, with Eisman, went to send a telegram to her mother that she was recognized by the telephone girl. The police were at once notified and fifteen minutes later they were taken to headquarters by Sergeant Herman Haskell.

Aviator Flies Self-Made Craft

DR. EDWIN CARMAN

Physician In Whose Office Mrs. Bailey Was Murdered

FILLED WITH SPLINTERS

Surgeons Have Four-Hour Job on Young Motorcycle Racer

Philadelphia, July 6.—For four hours surgeons at St. Agnes' hospital picked splinters out of the various part of the body of "Jack" Tarroconi, 20 years old, of 515 Christian street. When they completed their work 167 pieces of wood ranging from one-quarter of an inch to one inch and a half long lay in a compact pile on the side of the operating table.

Tarroconi was injured in a collision in a mile motorcycle race.

One of the contestants in the race was Daniel Kelley, who is said to be a member of the Cardinal club. He and Tarroconi were neck and neck for a considerable distance.

When the third lap was almost finished the two motorcycles came into collision and Tarroconi was thrown off his machine and dragged for almost twenty yards. He was picked up in a dazed condition and taken immediately to the hospital, where his wounds were dressed. Kelley subsequently left the track and later could not be found.

AMERICA MAKES ONE-MOTOR FLIGHT

Satisfactory Test of Transatlantic Flier With Half Power

Hammondsport, N. Y., July 6.—Glenn Curtiss made a test flight in the America, the Rodman Wanamaker transatlantic flying boat, with only one motor runnning. The machine flew steadily, and very little adjustment of the rudder and aileron was required to offset the torque of the single propeller.

It had been held by many that should one motor stop while the machine was in flight, it would be necessary immediately to shut down the other in order to avoid overturning the craft; but Mr. Curtiss flew with first one propeller stopped and then the other, without affecting the machine's balance enough to be noticed by the crowd watching the flight.

THREE MEN DROWN

One of Fishing Party, Intent on Suicide, Capsizes Boat

Poquonock, Conn., July 6.—Three of a fishing party of four men were drowned in the Farmington river here when their boat was capsized by one of the party, intent, according to the survivor, on suicide. The drowned men were: Michael Mitelenonous, 31; John Watyusky, 22, and William Zatazatski, 37.

The survivor is John Sickmanus, and it was from him that the authorities learned the details of the triple drowning. All of the dead, with the exception of Zatazatski, were unmarried.

Although the water at that point was only about seven feet deep, and considerably shallower water was within a very few feet, Sickmanus alone was able to reach shore. He notified the authorities, and the bodies were recovered several hours later.

TROLLEY CAR HITS VAN

One Man Killed and Two Injured In Collision at Hingham, Mass.

Hingham, Mass., July 6.—A head-on collision between a van and a trolley car here caused the instant death of one man and injury to two others.

John Rooney of Fellows street, Roxbury, driver of the van, was killed. He was horribly crushed when the front part of the car roof struck him and pinned him against his seat.

The injured men are James Gallagher of 18 Adams street, and William A. McCall of 2 Lenox court, Boston. They were taken in an automobile to the Sturgis hospital at Allerton where it was said they were not seriously injured.

$35,000 Blaze at Worcester

Worcester, Mass., July 6.—Fireman Joseph E. Rice fell eighteen feet from a ladder here while fighting a two-alarm fire in the warehouse of the Porter Last company. He is on the dangerous list. The warehouse was partially destroyed with a loss of $35,000. Fire Chief Avery declared the fire incendiary.

HUNT FOR CLEW IN BROOKLYN

Card Found on Lawn of Carman Home In Freeport

ANOTHER WOMAN IMPLICATED

Sheriff Starts on Quest of Mysterious Person Who, It is Claimed, Was Seen Running From Doctor's Lawn a Few Seconds After Shot Was Fired That Killed Mrs. Bailey

Freeport, N. Y., July 6.—What is regarded as the most important clew yet developed in the investigation of the Freeport murder mystery brought the search for Mrs. Louise Bailey's slayer to the Flatbush section of Brooklyn.

A woman whose name and address Sheriff Petit and his assistants will not disclose nor even hint at who is the person sought. It is said that she or a woman closely answering to her description was seen running from the Carman lawn a few seconds after the fatal shot was fired last Tuesday night.

She jumped into a waiting automobile—according to the generally accepted version of the story—and sped away before the members of the Carman household or their guests had recovered from the shock of the tragedy. Herman Schloss, an employe in 47 Railroad avenue, Freeport, says that he stood within 200 feet of says that he stood within 200 feet of the front door of the Carman residence at the time and that he obtained a clear glimpse of the woman.

Schloss' story has been in possession of the authorities for several days, but it was not given full credit until another Freeport resident whose name has not been disclosed called at the office of Sheriff Petit and turned over to him a business card containing the name of a Brooklyn automobile firm which he said he had picked up under the very window of Dr. Carman's office on the night of the shooting.

Asked why he did not turn this card over sooner, the man said that he did not deem it of very much importance until he heard of the story which Schloss had told the authorities a day or two ago.

The card upon which the investigation now turns so strongly bore the name and address, "Farrel Auto company, 1178 Bedford avenue, Brooklyn."

A guard of police and detectives, said to be from District Attorney Smith's staff, has been thrown around the physician's residence with instructions, it is said, to permit no one to enter or leave the building, whatever might be the excuse offered.

A new element of mystery was added to the case when it became known that Miss Hazel Combe, who has generally supposed to have been one of the two women who were in the physician's outer office at the time, had in reality left the house several minutes before the shooting. This leaves the investigators in the dark as to the identity of the two women and unless the point is cleared up the findigs of the inquest will be deficient in that important respect.

A story in circulation about the village had it that one of the mysterious outer office patients was a woman living in Lynbrook and now separated from her husband, but the woman in question emphatically denied that such was the case.

Dr. Carman was shot at three times last night as he drove in his automobile through the town of Baldwin, near here. None of the bullets struck him. The doctor was on his way home from Rockville Center, where he had been to attend a patient.

SLAIN AT CARD GAME

Worcester Italian Laborers Start Row In Stone Quarry

Worcester, Mass., July 6.—Tony Gisto, an Italian laborer, 40 years old, was killed with the butt of a shotgun in a row over cards at a stone quarry in Auburn, just over the Worcester line.

It is thought that several men in a crowd which had been playing cards and drinking in the quarry had part in the killing of Gisto. Two arrests have been made and the police are searching for other laborers who are said to have been at the quarry when the row took place.

Antonio Bruschera, 27 years old, was taken into custody and held on a charge of murder, and Samuel Tarravano, 2d, was arrested and held for drunkenness.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES

Joseph Tetrault, 34, fell overboard and was drowned in South Watuppa pond, Fall River, Mass., when he stood up in his boat to start the engine.

Charles Duffy, 22, Roxbury, was drowned while swimming in Concord river, at West Bedford, Mass.

Three persons were killed and one fatally injured when a Burlington freight train struck a automobile near Shabbona, Ills.

After hatching a chicken with two heads, a hen belonging to Mrs. Mary Day, Roetown, N. Y., batched another with three legs.

DROWNING OFF HOUGHS NECK

Knud Knudsen aged about 25 years of Norwood lost his life by drowning early on the afternoon of the Fourth in Quincy bay. Knudsen with a companion John Peniskar came to Quincy that morning and hired a row boat of John J. Powers of Manet avenue to go out for a row. The men were known to Mr. Powers as they had hired his boats on several occasions.

The two men were perfectly sober but when they reached a point between Beacon rocks and Hangman's Island, Mr. Powers, who was watching them through a glass, noticed that in moving about the boat they had lost the oars overboard.

Knudsen who was a good swimmer undressed in the boat and jumping overboard swam for the oars. He succeeded in reaching them all right and was about to start back toward the boat when he was evidently seized with the cramps for he threw up his hands and almost immediately sank.

Peniskar, who was in the boat was powerless to help his companion as he had no oars. Mr. Powers who saw the plight through the glasses immediately went out to their aid. He and Peniskar searched all the afternoon but were unable to find any trace of the missing man, and at night fall were obliged to abandon their search. It is supposed that the strong current at this point must have carried the body out toward Hull Gut.

As soon as Mr. Powers saw the man fall overboard and sink he notified the police station, and then did all that was possible to recover the body of the missing man.

GRANITE CITY CLUB ENTERTAIN.

From early morning until long after the parade had passed and had been dismissed, the spacious rooms of the Granite City club were thronged with the wives, daughters, sisters, and sweethearts of the members and their friends, for the club as usual on the National holiday kept open house and extended its well known hospitality to all who entered its portals.

The five large front windows of the rooms made an ideal place from which to witness the parade and each of these windows held all it could accommodate. As soon as the parade had passed, the entertainment committee assisted by all members who were present served a lunch consisting of ice cream, cake, fruit of all kinds lemonade and ginger ale. There was apparently no end to the supply on hand, for friends kept dropping into the rooms until long after noon and the supply was just as adequate. An orchestra which was present gave an enjoyable concert during the morning.

The night before the club kept open house to the members and their gentlemen friends and during the entire evening there was a large attendance. Refreshments were served in the dining room all the evening, and an orchestra furnished music. It is hardly necessary to enlarge further on the club's hospitality for it is well known.

MANY PRIESTS ASSIST.

The funeral of Mrs. Ann Hart, mother of Rev. Fr. Francis Hart of East Bridgewater, who died at his home Thursday was held in St. Mary's church Saturday morning, to which she gave a memorial window, an altar and a pulpit. There were many Catholic priests present.

Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady of Somerville, formerly pastor at the church celebrated a solemn high mass of requiem. Rev. Fr. Francis Walsh of Reading was deacon and Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy of St. Mary's church was subdeacon. Rev. Fr. Michael Cuddihy of Dorchester was master of ceremonies.

Seated in the sanctuary were Rev. Fr. Thomas R. McCoy, pastor of St. Marys church, Rev. Fr. William Ryan of Cambridge, Rev. Fr. John O'Donnell and Rev. Fr. Maurice Lynch of Watertown, Rev. Fr. James F. Stanton of Stoughton, Rev. Fr. James Landrigan of Abington, Rev. Fr. Edward J. Fegan of Rockland, Rev. Fr. Dennis Maguire of Canton, Rev. Fr. John J. Powers of Cambridge, Rev. Fr. John J. FOURTH OF JULY ACCIDENTS

Man Crushed Between Autos Loses His Leg

The pleasure of the morning parade in City Square was marred by a serious accident that befell Albert Lorandeau 178 Gilbert street. The parade had just passed the reviewing stand when Mr. Lorandeau started across the street toward the automobile of Postmaster Hammond which stood directly in front of City Hall and was being used by the judges. Just at this minute Dr. Joseph C. Gethro, a Norwood dentist, came along in a new automobile. He lost control of the machine and it crashed into Mr. Lorandeau crushing him against the automobile of Mr. Hammond.

Mr. Lorandeau was terribly injured his right leg being fractured between the knee and ankle, in such a manner that the bone protruded through the flesh. One of the arteries in his leg was also severed and he bled profusely. Dr. E. H. Bushnell, who was near by, rush to the injured man's assistance and with the assistance of one of the police officers a tourniquet was put on to stop the bleeding.

In the meantime word of the accident had been telephoned to Police headquarters and the City Hospital had been notified to make ready for the patient. At the hospital Dr. Burke and Dr. Bushnell found that it was necessary to amputate the man's leg which operation was performed. Dr. Gethro said that the car was a new one and that he had lost control of it, and was very sorry for the accident.

Capt. Charles Ferguson of Troop D, Roxbury Horse Guards was crushed between two horses just before the troop left for the Quincy parade and could not participate. He is under the care of physicians. On the way to this city one of the wagons lost a wheel which delayed the arrival of the troop half an hour. After the parade they pitched their tents on Merrymount Park and camped there over night. They left Sunday. Sergt. Keenan severed an artery in his leg at the camp on Saturday afternoon. He was sitting on the ground and in throwing one leg across another he struck the neck of a broken bottle. First aid treatment was rendered by Quincy troop of Boys Scouts and the wound was dressed by Maj. Fred E. Jones, surgeon of the 5th Infantry, of this city. Sergt. Keenan is not seriously hurt.

A spark ignited a trail of powder at Copeland and Common streets at 2 A. M. on the holiday and Ernest Cislaghi, 21, single, of Quarry street, who was setting the fuse, was badly burned about the face and hands. The sight of both eyes is slightly affected and the hair burned off the top of his head. He was treated by Dr. John H. Ash and taken to his home. His condition is not serious.

Harold, the 4-year-old son of Councilman Charles Barnicoat of South Quincy, received a flesh wound on the face on the holiday when a torpedo, thrown by a playmate struck him on the jawbone and exploded. The accident occurred in the yard at his home. The little fellow ran into the house with blood streaming from the cut and it was dressed by Dr. McCausland. He was able to be with his playmates shortly after.

While trying to avoid two children who suddenly jumped in front of his machine, A. T. Bartlett of Russell street, Atlantic, ran his auto into a trench on Hancock street, near Walnut street, on the holiday. The Misses Gertrude Fratus and Alice McDonald, passengers, were thrown out and slightly shaken up. They were able to go to their homes.

A small boy whose name could not be learned was run down by an automobile the afternoon of the Fourth near the corner of Washington and Elm streets. The boy, who it is said was not badly injured, was taken home in the auto which struck him.

The auto chemical, while leaving the Central station Saturday night, struck the auto of Mark Myatt which was on the side of the road and damaged it slightly. No one was injured.

Flaming Finish.

"My grandfather," said the old-timer, "used to put all his money in his stocking." "Wa-all, things bain't changed much," said his old friend. "My grandson, who's takin' a course in modern department at one o' them eastern colleges, puts most all his money into socks."—Judge.

Some comment was made about City Square during the morning of the Fourth at the bareness of City Hall. Usually the city municipal building has been decorated, but this year it was bare save for the flag flying from the mast head. It was practically the only building in and about City Square that was not decorated in some manner.

Advice for Mother.

The small girl had been exasperating all day, and at last her mother lost patience and administered corporal punishment. The child had scarcely recovered from her sobs when she looked up and said: "Mother, you must try and control that temper of yours."

IRVING'S HEAD.

Why the Spot That Washington Touched Could Not Be Seen.

Among Dr. George Haven Putnam's early recollections was a meeting with Washington Irving. He tells of it in his "Memories of My Youth." The Irving home was near Yonkers and the Putnam family occasionally visited their neighbors. Dr. Putnam remembers one Sunday afternoon when his father was busy arranging some of Mr. Irving's papers and the old gentleman took pains to give him some word about his own childhood. "His mother told him some years later, when he was old enough to be interested in historical events and personages, that when he was a year old the nurse, taking him out in his baby carriage, saw at the corner of Broadway General Washington passing by on horseback. The nurse, holding up the little boy, called out to the general that here was a boy that had been named after him, and she hoped that the general would be willing to give the boy his blessing.

"Little Washingtons were not so plenty in 1784 as they became in later years, and the general was quite ready to delay his ride for the purpose of giving a greeting to his little namesake. He took the boy up on the saddle and, placing his hand upon the little one's head, gave him a formal blessing. I looked up with interest at the head that had been touched by Washington, and then found myself perplexed at Mr. Irving's word that I should not see the spot on which the general's hand had rested.

"I spoke to my father afterward about the incident, and he said, 'Why, you stupid, don't you know that Mr. Irving wears a wig?'"

EMPEROR PENGUINS.

Very Ceremonious They Are With Their Bows and Speeches.

In Sir Ernest Shackleton's "The Heart of the Antarctic" there is a chapter by James Murray, the biologist of the expedition, on those queer creatures, the penguins. The following is an extract:

"Their resemblance to human beings is always noticed. This is partly due to their habit of walking erect, but there are truly a great many human traits about them. They are the civilized natives of these regions.

"Emperor penguins are very ceremonious in meeting other Emperors or men or dogs. They come up to a party of strangers in a straggling procession, some big, important, aldermanic fellow leading. At a respectful distance from the man or dog they halt, the old male waddles up and bows gravely till his beak almost touches his breast. Keeping his head bowed, he makes a long speech in a muttering manner, short sounds following in groups of four or five. Having finished the speech, the head is still kept bowed a few seconds for politeness' sake, then it is raised, and he looks in your face to see if you have understood. If you have not comprehended, as is usually the case, he tries again. He is very patient with your stupidity.

"Their most solemn ceremonies were used toward the dogs, and three old fellows have been seen calmly bowing and speaking simultaneously to a dog, which, for its part, was yelping and straining at its chain in the effort to get at them."

The Provencal Tongue.

Mistral, the great Provencal poet, has been likened to Robert Burns for the work he did. But Burns' task was child's play compared with Mistral's. The Scottish poet found his language fully grown and completely alive; Mistral had to create his means of expression. Provencal had lost every resemblance to a literary tongue, and the new poet-patriot had to mold it afresh, to recreate and to build up on the ruins left by the vineyard and the farm. "Our Provencal," said Mistral, "was a country lass, ragged and wild." She is now a wonderfully beautiful creature, but it is doubtful whether all the genius of Mistral can keep her alive. The educational reformer in France does not like such irregular beauty.—Chicago News.

Newspaper Reporters.

I have always had great sympathy for newspaper reporters—a class of men generally about equally feared and criticised. During a large part of my life since my graduation I have been brought in constant contact with the men of this profession. Only on rare occasions have I suffered at their hands serious injustice, due either to deliberate intent or to gross misunderstanding. I have generally found them courteous and considerate, honestly desirous of getting the truth and of reporting it accurately.—Abbott's "Reminiscences" in Outlook.

SECRET OF THE LOVE BIRD.

It May Be Discovered In the Milk of Human Kindness.

Everything else dwindles into insignificance when the love bird appears. Affection, devotion, tenderness and love burst gladly forth at her magic touch. * * *

The road to happiness is attained through the generous distribution of the milk of human kindness.

Success, achievement, wealth, prominence, are only worth while when shared by your friends. No matter how large you can spell "success," it gives you little satisfaction if your accomplishment is not sincerely enjoyed by many. When surrounded by friends and loved ones, if you are fortunate in the acquisition of a generous disposition and charming personality, what a joy it is to be able to give them cheer, comfort, pleasure and satisfaction!

Who does not feel better for the "God bless you" from an old lady to whom you have shown some trifling kindly attention? Who is not thrilled by the joyous barking of his dog upon returning home?

Fortunate are those who feel the arms of children around their necks, hear the baby's laugh and see the wonderful mites toddling toward them, happy and unafraid.

All these joys sink into insignificance when the one and only one looks into your eyes, tender, true, steadfast. Words need not be spoken; nothing else matters. Then, and not until then, will you know the excess of happiness, the full realization of love, and then is the time to unite yourself steadfastly to fidelity, magnanimous generosity and open heartedness to all.

Unto us a child is born, * * * and his Name shall be called Wonderful.

SURGICAL SHOCK.

Only In a Vague Way Does Science Know What Causes It.

Shock is still one of the great mysteries of surgery. Many theories have been put forward to explain just what it is. Each of these has seemed attractive until its inherent defects were discovered by experience.

In a lecture before the British Royal College of Surgery Dr. A. Rendle Short reviewed these successive theories and described the experiments of himself and others by which they were disproved. But researches by Dr. Crile of Cleveland, Professor Sherrington of England and Dr. F. H. Pike of Columbia university, New York, seemed to him to offer at least a clew to the real nature of shock.

Professor Short did not formulate a definite theory, but suggested that surgical shock was due to an inhibiting or paralyzing of the important nuclei in the region of the fourth ventricle of the brain and perhaps in the cerebellum. These are "continually sending impulses down the spinal cord, maintaining its functional activity and increasing muscular tone." The effect of this paralysis is to cut off these impulses, whereupon the functions of the spinal cord are greatly reduced, muscular tone is abolished, and as a secondary result the blood pressure may fall. The respiratory center and perhaps also the vasomotor center share in this inhibition or paralysis.

"Death," said Dr. Short, "is due to the accumulation of blood in the great veins," so that the flow does not provide a proper filling for the heart.—New York World.

Candid Criticism.

Mr. G. A. Storey, the well known artist, once told an amusing story of a family group he painted one year for the Academy. The picture was accepted and was hung "on the line," and he arranged to escort the family to the Academy to see how it looked. They were all grouped round the picture, each silently admiring his or her own portrait, when two other people drifted up to have a look.

Suddenly Mr. Storey was appalled to hear one of the newcomers say to his companion, "What an exceedingly ugly looking lot of people!"

A Serious Fault.

"It's nice of you to let me see your proofs, Mr. Lavender. Which do I consider the best? That's rather difficult. There isn't one here that really does you justice—photographic justice, I mean."

"Thank you, Miss Lydia. I would esteem it a great favor if you could intimate a preference."

"Really, I couldn't, Mr. Lavender. Each proof shows the prevailing fault."

"And what fault is that, Miss Lydia?"

THE SPIRIT OF '76

Gone but not forgotten—July 4th, 1914.

"We came—they saw—we conquered."

Can we do better next year? Yes!

If you enjoyed yourself on the holiday, and feel today as though you would like to make a contribution to our expense fund, either your first or an additional one, we would appreciate the same, as we are desirous of paying all our bills promptly. It gives Quincy a good business standing.

Last year I asked you this question: Was the day worth all the time that the different committees put into the different features? You answered it this year by your generous contributions, and I desire to thank you.

This is my last. Four your patience in reading my poor attempts at publicity, I thank you.

Good night.

THE NIGHT BEFORE.

As a rule the night before was rather quiet in and about City Square until after midnight. The streets were crowded with people, but aside from the blowing of horns by Young America and the occasional explosion of a fire cracker there was no disturbance.

As the clock struck the hour of midnight several large bon fires were lighted. President Cherrington of the Ward Six Patriotic association touched the match to the huge pile that had been erected on the playground, and Hon. Eugene R. Stone, President of the Quincy association touched off the bon fire on the South Quincy playground. Large fires were also lighted on several promitories throughout the city and the sky was brightly illuminated.

RED CROSS SEALS.

More than 44,000,000 Red Cross Christmas Seals were sold last December, according to a report issued by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis and the American Red Cross. In this way $440,000 is netted for anti-tuberculosis work in various parts of the United States.

New York State lead the country last year with a sale of over 10,500,00 seals or one for each man, woman and child in the state. Of this number, morethan 6,825,000 were sold outside of New York City. Ohio came next with a sale of 2,800,000, Wisconsin third with 2,700,000, and Illinois, fourth with 2,500,00. Hawaii sold the most seals per capita, the total sale being somewhat over two for each in habitant. Rhode Island came second with a sale of two per person.

Beginning with a sale of 13,500,000 in 1908, in six seasons the revenue which these little holiday seals have brought to the anti-tuberculosis campaign has more than tripled, an aggregate for the period of over $1,800,000 or 180,000,000 seals.

In the finals, Favreau, who played in the Quincy High Tennis team last spring, beat Simpson three straight sets, the score being 6-0, 6-3, 6-2.

HOW TO MAKE GLACE NUTS CHEAPLY.

Glace nuts are expensive to buy; but, like small fruits, they may be prepared at home. It is necessary to be a little careful the first time the process is tried.

Have the nuts, grapes, raisins, cherries or berries ready. In a clean agate saucepan put one full pint of granulated sugar, a good gill of cold water and boil until it will thread. Add three tablespoonfuls of vinegar or lemon juice. Boil again and remove from the fire the instant the sirup changes color. Pour it into the farina boiler, which is waiting with boiling water in the outside part. Remove to the table and dip the nuts or fruit in and out as quickly as possible. Try not to coat them very thickly. Drain them on greased paraffin paper.

Another way is to grease with butter generously a platter. Pour the boiled mixture on it and stick nuts or fruit through it. Cool and then break the mass apart with a small hammer.

FOR THE BIRDS.

How to Build Nesting Boxes For Feathered Visitors.

For the benefit of bird lovers the state ornithologist of Massachusetts, Dr. Edward Howe Forbush, publishes in Our Dumb Animals directions for the proper building and placing of nesting boxes for the feathered visitors of the spring. Within the last ten years more than 20,000 bird houses have been put up in Massachusetts at Dr. Forbush's recommendation, but many of these have not proved acceptable to the tenants for whom they were intended and have remained vacant. In his latest bulletin Dr. Forbush is particular to warn against faults of construction.

One reason for the failure of nesting boxes in cities to attract song birds, he says, is the presence of cats. English sparrows and squirrels. Against cats the bulletin offers no plan of campaign, although other experts have recommended placing bird houses on posts entwined with crimson rambler, the briers of which are calculated to discourage pussy from climbing.

To prevent squirrels from entering and eating the eggs Dr. Forbush suggests making the entrances to the boxes too small to admit these voracious little nest robbers. A similar plan is recommended in the case of sparrows, although few birds that one desires to attract are smaller than sparrows. The latter may be discouraged from building in the larger boxes, of course, by the removal of their nests, but a better plan is to keep the boxes closed until the sparrows have begun their housekeeping elsewhere and to open them about May 1, when the native birds have mated.

The entrance holes of the nesting boxes should be one and a quarter inches in diameter for chickadees, one and a half inches for bluebirds or swallows and two inches or more for martins. Pine wood is the best material for a bird house, as it is light, but strong and durable enough. Metal or pottery may be used if put up in the shade. The inside measurements of a box for wrens may be 3½ by 3½ by 6; for chickadees, 3½ by 3½ by 9¾; for bluebirds, 4½ by 4½ by 9¾; for swallows, 5 by 5 by 6½. The longer dimension is always the vertical one. These measurements are not arbitrary. The boxes may be larger, but not much smaller. The swallow box may have a perch, but that is not absolutely essential.

The back board should project two or three inches below the box, so that it may be nailed or screwed to a pole, building or tree. The roof may be horizontal or sloping toward the front, and it should project at least two inches over the entrance hole, which should be near the top.

Most people put up too many bird boxes at the start. The birds quarrel for them and sometimes do not nest at all. They should be placed at least 100 feet apart at first; 200 feet or even more is better. After the first comers have settled and have eggs or young a few other boxes may be put up.

Though this hint for the bird lover may be too late for this year, it is of sufficient importance to be cut out and placed in the scrap book until another spring.

How to Preserve the Yellow of Lace.

Yellow lace is apt to become white if it is washed with soap and water, so that if the owner of yellow lace wishes to keep it yellow she must be very careful of its cleansing.

Cover it first with gasoline, placing it in a covered earthen crock. Shake it about in the gasoline, rubbing soiled spots between the hands. Then cover the crock and leave it for five or six hours. Be sure that the lace is quite submerged in the liquid. At the end of this time shake the lace, squeeze it and hang in the open air until quite dry.

Then place it on a clean ironing board and dampen a little. Pull it into shape with your fingers while it is damp. If it be a lace collar or a wide piece baste it to a thick, damp cloth, stitching each scallop or figure. Then place a thin, damp cloth over it and press with a warm iron.

How to Remove Spots From Table Linen.

Egg stained table linen should be soaked in cold water until almost all traces of the stain are removed. If placed directly in the boiler the stain will set, and it will be almost impossible to remove it.

The grammar school teams ran half the track distance, 176 yards, and the High school boys the full distance, 352 yards. Four teams failed to show up. Handsome cups were awarded the winners and second place teams and blue ribbons were given third place teams.

The events were conducted by the athletic committee, Louis F. LaRose, chairman. The starter was George A. Sullivan and Dr. J. Gardiner Smith was referee. The judges at the finish were Alexander Robertson, Frank Avery Joseph Ryan, Napoleon Hayden. James Neary was timer. The summary:

Grammar school race—won by Massachusetts Field (W. Lindsey, C. Ross, L. Osberg, F. Tobbenboski.) Time, 4 m. 15 s. Cups were awarded to each boy on the team.

BOY SCOUTS.

After the relay races on the Merrymount oval, Quincy and Reading troops of Boy Scouts gave an exhibition which was witnessed by about 1000. The work was under the direction of Scout Master Benjamin Hodgkinson, and was well applauded. The program included, rescue work, first aid treatment, signalling, formations and the general run of the duties of the scouts.

THEATRE SHOWS.

Over 5000 children were entertained at the playhouses in the city as the guests of the Fourth of July Association. Tickets were distributed by the wholesale and as far as was possible complete shows were run. At the Kincaide theatre the S. R. O. sign hung out early and two performances were necessary. The managers of other playhouses in the city had similar experiences.

THE BALL GAMES.

A fine base ball card was offered by the Fourth of July Association and all games were for purses. The numbers that saw the contest were the greatest in years.

The St. Marys beat the Knights of Columbus in the West Quincy league, 12 to 7 and the Hibernians the Copelands 12 to 9, on the Ward Four playgrounds. The score by innings:

Copelands	4	2	2	0	0	3	0	1	x—12

The Holy Name team of St. John's Parish easily defeated the Bigelows 6 to 4, at Merrymount Park. The score by innings:

The Redmen beat the Orients for the third time this season on the Ward Three playground with a score of 7 to 4. The score by innings:

The big ball game of the day was won by the United Shoe team of Beverly which met the Fore River team at Merrymount park late in the afternoon. The score was 4 to 1.

FIREWORKS AT PARK.

It would be interesting to know just how many people were gathered on Merrymount park and in automobiles just outside of the park on the evening of the Fourth, to witness the fireworks exhibition. Fully two hours before the exhibition as due to start people began to wend their way toward the park from all directions in order to be early on the scene, that they might secure an advantageous point from which to witness the display and at 8.30 when the first piece was set off the park was black with humanity and Hancock street adjoining the park was about as thick with automobiles as it was posible to get them. And it was a happy crowd that gathered to see the finale of the day's celebration which had been one of the best ever given in this city.

It was hardly a minute after 8.30 when Ira M. Whittemore chairman of Park Commissioners, applied a slow match to a fuse, and the next instant a stream of fire shot from one end of the field to a large set piece in the centre front, and the exhibition was on. From then on the air was full of bombs and shooting stars until the grand salute that closed the exhibition. This salute was almost deafening and for a minute it seemed as though one of Uncle Sam's battleships was firing a broadside.

The exhibition was the best ever seen in Quincy. There were several new set pieces shown for the first time, and the coloring of some of them was wonderful, especially the set piece that closed with a copper colored imitation of Niagara Falls.

In addition to the program as advertised there was one piece that was a surprise. This was a full twenty-five foot picture of Corporal Haggerty the Massachusetts boy who lost his life at Vera Cruz. This set piece was a donation by George F. Elcock, the chairman of the fireworks committee. The figure of the dead corporal was of heroic size, and very life-like according to Edward Gisburne, the Quincy boy who was near Corporal Haggerty when he received his fatal wound and who himself lost a leg as a result of the fight. Gisburne occupied a front seat in the enclosure and frequently said that the explosions in the air reminded him of the rapid fire guns used at Vera Cruz.

There was one feature at the fireworks exhibition not down on the program that caused considerable fun. This was the actions of a strange dog. The dog, whose owner no one seemed to know, made his first appearance during the morning parade, when his dogship witnessed the parade from the reviewing stand in City Square. People tried to drive him away, but it was not use, he was bound to stay. After the parade he was missed, but as the fireworks started he dashed upon the field and all efforts to drive him off failed. The animal ran back and forth barking at each set piece trying to get them. When a set piece was fired the dog would stand beneath the falling sparks jumping and barking but seemed to escape being burned. Several times he succeeded in getting a piece of hot fire in his mouth, which he quickly dropped. However the dog created considerable fun and at the end of the exhibition disappeared.

Chairman Elcock said if anyone was not satisfied with the exhibition they could get their money back, but up to noon none had applied for their money, so that it is evident everybody was satisfied.

BREAK AT HOUGHS NECK.

William G. Lucas, aged 21 years, of Parkhurst street, was captured red handed about 4 o'clock on the morning of the Fourth in the store of William B. North at Houghs Neck by Officers Farrell and Shea. The officers had their attention attracted to the store and entering found the young man had helped himself to about 30 cigars and fourteen packages of cigarettes. It is said that if he had not stopped to get the cigarettes he would have escaped capture. On his clothing was found a number of two-cent stamps which it is alleged he stole from the skating rink the night before. He was locked up and was arraigned in court this morning.

WOOD'S ALIBI MAY SECURE RELEASE

Other Arrests Are Expected In Peaslee Murder Case

Henniker, N. H., July 6.—State and local officials are convinced that Eugene A. Wood, now held without bail on the charge of murdering Howard W. Peaslee, the rich toy manufacturer, the night of May 22, is innocent of the crime.

Chief Inspector Hildreth of Manchester, who is investigating the case for Attorney General Tuttle, has frankly said that in his opinion Wood did not have the opportunity to commit the crime, and he says he is slowly bringing forth evidence that implicates another person in the murder.

Inspector Hildreth has hinted that the state is about ready to make one or more arrests in the case. The general impression prevails that the state is now trying to pin the responsibility upon on of three people, one of whom is a woman.

Interest in the case among the Henniker people has not abated. They fear that the ultimate result will be the proving of Wood innocent and the failure to bring to justice the person who killed Peaslee in his den.

RESIGNATION DEMANDED

Minister to Greece and Montenegro Williams Asked to Quit

Philadelphia, July 6.—President Wilson has requested the resignation of George F. Williams, American minister to Greece and Montenegro, as a result of Williams' public statements regarding the situation in Albania. This became known after the president's arrival here.

Mr. Williams' own reports on his statements were taken up at the cabinet meeting and afterwards Wilson decided their effect was such that it would be improper for Williams to longer represent the United States in the Balkans.

It has been understood that Williams of his own accord has forwarded his resignation but so far as could be learned here it has not been received by the president.

Havana, July 6.—President Menocal pardoned Enrique Maza, the Cuban journalist who in August, 1912, was sentenced to two and a half years' imprisonment for assaulting Hugh S. Gibson, then charge d'affairs of the American legation here.

Weathered

A Narrow Escape

By ERMINIE HOLLAND

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"He would never have done it," said the girl, straightening herself a moment from her task—"he would never have done it if they hadn't forced him to it. They were always teasing and taunting, nagging and grumbling, until he got sick of it all."

She resumed her work—the kneading of a floury mass of dough—with the energy of an unnatural force within. "They thought because they had saved some money from the fruit of their hard labors they would make a gentleman of him, being the only one they had. And when they had done that they gave him no peace until he married her. It didn't matter about me. It was nothing to them that I had grown to think of him all day long and dream of him at nights. It was nothing to them that I went to school longer than we could afford and read books and studied nights that I might not be too ignorant. And I would have gone away to be a nurse and left them alone, old and feeble as they are, for his sake."

She spoke in a voice that was indistinctly audible, for there was none to hear. The deep breathing from the inner chamber told her that its occupants could be awakened by no such sounds, and she was tired of her silent thoughts.

"I scarcely get time to think in the daytime," she continued, "with the work and the looking after them, but at nights it is different. And on nights like this, when it is blowing hard and the wind moans and the snow drifts and drifts, then it comes into my head, and it won't leave me, and I can't send it away with sleep, for sleep is hard to bring these nights."

She finished in silence, placing the spongy material in a dish and covering it with a white cloth for the night.

Then she went to the door and opened it cautiously. It was wild and stormy without. A snow laden blast swept into the room, making the lamp flame flicker almost to extinction. She closed it hurriedly ere the drift at its base should fall inward.

"It gets worse and worse," she murmured. "The Lord lend his aid to any one abroad in the hills tonight. The storm would blind and freeze and the road would sure be lost. It reminds me of the blizzard of six years back, when I was teaching in Cedar Valley. The storm lasted three days, and"—

She stopped suddenly to listen. An unwonted sound in the wind had caught her ear, like a voice, a hail. Again it came, assuredly a call and close at hand.

In an instant she had opened the door once more and stood peering out into the night.

She did not wait long. A form emerged from out the darkness and the clouds of swirling snow, and a man paused at the stoop to unloose his snowshoes and stamp the white clods from his moccasined feet. Then, with a muffled greeting, he stepped past her into the room.

"It's you, doctor!" she exclaimed.

"Yes," he said, "I am forced to give in at last. I tried it on foot from Brown's, but lost the road just beyond here and all idea of direction."

"It's the worst for many and many a long year," she replied. "And you're new at the Glen. You're not weathered."

"I hope and pray there is no one in sad distress this night, doctor?" she asked anxiously.

"It is Mrs. Graham of the Ridge. She has pneumonia and a weak heart. They think she cannot get through the night." He walked restlessly to the end of the room and back. "I fear they are in sore need of assistance."

The girl's heart beat with great force at his words, but her face showed no sign. She placed a chair for him, filled his cup with tea, pressed him to partake of the cold venison, then sat down on the settee and looked steadily at the fire as it roared and sparkled up the chimney.

"It is a bad trouble," she said at length. Then, as if a sudden thought had come: "You're Dr. Graham. Might you be kin of theirs?"

"No. But I used to know Dr. Jack. We were at college together."

"Has he been sent for?"

"I believe so. But it will take some days to get here if this state of weather continues."

He went on: "I understand he has opened up a practice near my old home in Port Arthur. It is rather strange that I should have done the same thing down here—near his."

"Have you ever seen—his wife?" The girl's voice faltered on the last words.

"I have not," he answered. "We are entirely out of touch lately. I did not know he had married."

"The paper said she was 'talented,' and his mother told me that she was beautiful—and rich."

A long silence fell between them. The doctor leaned back in the old armchair and soon dozed. The girl sat straight up, with her hands clasped together in her lap and her gaze still on the fire. She was thinking, thinking.

Every throb of her heart seemed to repeat two words, "His mother!" Had her time really come, then? She had made one life scarcely worth the living. For that she deserved to die, aye, a miserable death, without a doctor's aid. Perhaps that was why God sent the storm, to work out this small portion of his great plan of justice.

"His mother!" How she had cherished him through all the years of his life! How she had worked and slaved for his welfare! And he was grateful for it. He loved her as a good son should love a good mother. If she had never come between them all would have been well.

Then came the proud thought: Why should they have wished to set her aside for another? She came of a great old line, away back. No one in the wide space of the old Laurentians could boast of better forbears than she—men known in the old land for their loyality, their fearlessness, their love of right. What if the iniquities of an erring son were visited upon his children's children! The blood would revive, and revive again!

A greenwood log in the fire fell with a heavy thud, and the roar of its burning started anew; water oozed from its sawed front with a hissing sound and dropped into the fiery bed.

"Doctor!"

The word recalled him. He started slightly, then sat forward.

"If you had known the other way to the Ridge it might have been possible to get there."

"What do you mean? What other way?"

"There's a way around the south side of the Hewston hill, just a wide footpath in summer, under the rock all the way. It is sheltered from north winds, but the snow drifts in deep. It might be done on shoes."

"I will try it now," he said.

"You could not go alone. I would have to go, too—to guide you."

"You!" he exclaimed. "Impossible! The very devil is abroad!"

"I've been out in as bad as this before," she said. "I had no fear then, and I have none now. It's because I'm weathered."

* * * * * * *

A faint light, alternately visible for a moment and obscured by the clouds of driving snow, sent hope to the hearts of two people struggling blindly forward.

For two long hours they had matched their united strength to that of the storm, now vanquishing it, again all but overcome by its mad force.

But they still stumbled on with eyes fixed steadily upon the beacon.

The next thing was the hum of voices, the soft rubbing of hands and feet and a gradually returning consciousness of identity, of situation and of circumstance.

"Ah, there! She'll soon be round. Just to think of it! She always had grit. Don't you mind how she always walked her two miles to school, storm or sunshine, sometimes wading through snow to the waist? Never missed a day!"

"Aye, I do. And I'll tell ye this: It may not be Christianlike, and it's not a nice thing to say in the house of the dying, but if I were Lena Miller I'd never have done it for her."

The girl's returning senses caught the word "dying," and she raised herself partly to ask, with a weak voice:

"Was he too late?"

"No, dear. He is here to do all that can be done—to give her relief from pain. No one can save when the Lord has called."

A long silence came, broken only by the tick of the tall clock in the corner and the cry of the great storm without. Then some one came through the hallway and paused at the kitchen door.

"Lena Miller is called. She must come."

For a minute the girl scarcely understood. Then, hesitatingly, unsteadily, she rose, and with assistance walked to the door of the sick chamber and there paused.

The room was empty save for the form of the dying woman on the bed. She went in alone, and a hand gently closed the door from without.

Alone with his mother, lying white and still! The face, upon which Death had so surely set his mark, bore a strange resemblance to his in the dim light. It startled her to see a movement of the lips and to hear the words:

"Is it you, Lena?"

The girl bent over her.

"I'm dying. Do you hate me?"

She tried to answer, but no words would come. There was a tightening of the muscles at the throat. Weak almost to the breaking point with physical and mental strain, she could scarcely stand, but she caught a rod of the bed and steadied herself.

The voice went on:

"I'm dying, and I've been a wicked woman. The penalty has been paid. The bodily suffering has been great, but the mental anguish has been dreadful beyond words. I prayed God to send you tonight, and he has been good. Girl, I lied to you and to my son!"

She stopped for breath and strength to proceed. Her voice fast failed her.

"I wrote him a letter, and in that letter I said you had gone away, far away, to become another's wife. I spun the story well, cleverly. Then I let you think he had married and with my own lips told you that she was beautiful—and rich."

The hand that held the iron rod shook, then relaxed and quickly caught at the cold fingers.

"But the paper!" she gasped.

"The paper was the beginning. That was not written of my son's marriage, but of his—the doctor who came tonight. It was before he came to the Glen, and none in these parts knew the right of it. I let them believe the wrong so that you would hear. You heard, and your heart was broken. I know."

The girl fell upon her knees by the bedside, and the pentup anguish of nine long months spent itself in a smothered sob.

RECALL BAIL OF MRS. ANGLE

Recommitted to Jail Pending Inquest in Ballou Death

IS NOT CHARGED WITH CRIME

Woman's Father Brands as Outrage Action of Coroner In Not Continuing $5000 Bond—Anxious to Tell All She Knows Regarding Death of Wealthy Politician

Stamford, Conn., July 6.—Leonard Blondel, wealthy father of Mrs. Helen M. Angle, branded as an outrage the action of Coroner Phelan in recalling his daughter's bail and recommitting her to prison pending the inquest into the mysterious death of Waldo R. Ballou, the aged and wealthy politician.

He believes that the coroner should have allowed Mrs. Angle her freedom under $5000 bail because of her nervous condition. Since the woman was placed in a cell Police Chief Brennan has seen her, but refused to give any intimation as to what took place at the conference he held with her.

Mrs. Angle spent a quiet night in the women's department of the jail. Her rearrest was directly due to the testimony of Dr. Bruce S. Weaver of the Stamford hospital regarding the stains on the rug in Mrs. Angle's apartment and on the steps down which Ballou's body was dragged.

Mrs. Angle is anxious to tell all she knows of the incidents of the night when Ballou met his death, but her counsel has refused to allow her to give her story to the coroner. Her contention is that Ballou fell and fractured his skull, while the theory of the police is that Ballou was assaulted and mortally injured in the woman's apartment.

It was intimated by a relative of the woman that her rearrest was a move on the part of the police to weaken her so that she would make admissions. Nicholas C. Dean, attorney for Mrs. Angle, said he would not ask further action in the case yet and would not apply for a writ of habeas corpus.

The woman is not charged with any criminal offence, but is detained under the statute providing for the arrest of material witnesses so that they cannot flee from the jurisdiction of the court.

Coroner Phelan will probably resume his inquest into the death of Ballou Thursday. Dr. Weaver will then be recalled to testify further as to the nature of stains on the carpet of Mrs. Angle's apartment. It is understood that her counsel will contend that they were made by spilled wine.

AMERICANS CELEBRATE

Most Coveted Aquatic Trophy In World Goes to Harvard

Henley-On-Thames, Eng., July 6.—Americans celebrated a "glorious Fourth" here. Uncle Sam could not lose in the final of the great royal regatta for the Grand Challenge cup.

There was an Independence day celebration of Americans when Harvard beat the Union Boat club of Boston, winning the world's first honors in amateur rowing for the first time an American crew won since the Henley races were established seventy-five years ago.

The American string of defeats by the British, which included the loss of the polo trophy and the defeat of the Americans in the British golf championship, was broken.

As a result of the race the most coveted aquatic trophy in the world will adorn the shelves of the trophy room at Harvard university.

HEAD AND ARM FOUND

Police Think Mohawk River Victim Will Soon Be Identified

Schenectady, N. Y., July 6.—With the finding of the head and right arm of the woman whose torso was discovered in the Mohawk river June 19 the police declare that the mystery surrounding her identity has been largely cleared away and that in all probability they would know her name with forty-eight hours.

Though separate parts of the body have been found ten miles apart, Coroner Jackson said that there is no question about the head belonging to the torso. The head is that of a young woman.

There is a deep scar on the right cheek, but whether this was made before or after death the coroner will not say. The head was wrapped in a cheap cotton handkerchief, which, the police say, may aid in the identification.

COUNTRY HAS SANE FOURTH

Statistics Show Thirteen Killed and Two Hundred Forty-Three Hurt

Chicago, July 6.—Statistics show that the country enjoyed the sanest Fourth in its history. The figures are:

Dead, 13; by fireworks, 6; by gunpowder, 4; by torpedoes, 2; by revolver, 1.

Injured, 243; by fireworks, 105; by gunpowder, 30; by torpedoes, 5; by toy pistols, 58; by cannon, 41; by runaway, 4.

The accidents last year were 32 dead and 1131 injured.

WITH SIMPLE SERVICES

Bodies of Archduke Ferdinand and Consort Placed In Tomb

Artstetten, Austria, July 6.—The bodies of the assassinated Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his consort, the Duchess of Hohenberg, arrived here and were interred beneath the castle chapel with simple ceremonies.

The funeral procession crossed the ferry over the Danube at Poechlarn at dawn in the presence of many people, and the cortege reached the end of its journey at 5 o'clock. The coffins were immediately placed in the chapel of Artstetten castle, where priests and nuns said prayers at the side of the catafalque for several hours.

After the final rites had been given by the clergy the coffins were carried through lines of army veterans and firemen to the family vaults and were placed in their final resting place in the presence of the new heir apparent, Archduke Charles Francis Joseph and several other members of the imperial family.

FORMER POLICEMAN SHOT

Mortally Wounded by Negro Criminals He Had Sent to Prison

Philadelphia, July 6.—Mortally wounded by negro criminals, whom he had succeeded in sending to prison while a policeman, John Garrity, 32 years old, of 2052 Waverly street, is dying in a hospital.

Over the prostrate body of the wounded ex-policeman a crowd of a thousand white men and negroes battled for nearly a half an hour until the arrival of a detail of policemen put the combatants to flight.

Garrity was shot twice, one bullet passing through his left lung and the second through his side near the heart. On the ground near him was found Melville Showdell, 56 years old, a negro, of 2116 Naudian street, who had been shot in the back.

Nightsticks were freely used by the police and almost a dozen men fell under the onslaught. Before quiet was restored twenty-five negroes were arrested.

BOMB EXPLODES IN LAP OF SPECTATOR

Accident at Fireworks Display Injures Fifty People

New York, July 6.—In the ruins of the Lexington avenue tenement house, wrecked by the premature combustion of a powerful explosive which killed Arthur Caron and three other people, the authorities found evidence that Caron's apartment was a center for a distribution of inflammatory literature, which was printed there, and that at the time of the explosion it was apparently a bomb factory, filled with the ingredients of death-dealing missiles.

A small printing press, revolutionary pamphlets and circulars, an electric dynamo, two electric batteries, cartridges and bits of steel were among things uncovered in the search which tend, in the opinion of the police, to show an anarchistic plot at assassination. That a demonstration, halted by the bungling of some one who was preparing an infernal machine for its mission, was planned against the Rockefeller family in Tarrytown, is the theory upon which the authorities are working.

FIFTY HURT BY BOMB

Part of Firworks Explods In Man's Lap on Edge of Crowd

Caldwell, N. J., July 6.—Fifty persons were injured, several seriously, by the untimely explosion of a bomb at a fireworks display provided by the municipality here.

Failing to explode in the air, a bomb was carried 300 feet by a strong southwestern wind and dropped on the edge of the crowd of 10,000 persons. It fell in the lap of Robert Vandell of this city, tearing portions of flesh off his legs and exposing the blood vessels. He was taken to the hospital in a serious condition. His wife and 5-year-old daughter escaped with slight burns.

Miss Mabel Gore of Caldwell had both eyes burned, with danger of loss of eyesight. A dozen cases were attended to by physicians. The remainder, having slight burns, went to their homes. The accident cut short the display.

HUERTA IS FAVORITE

Receives Virtually Unanimous Vote In Sunday's Election

Mexico City, July 6.—President Huerta, it is reported, has received a virtually unanimous vote of confidence in Sunday's election. The returns indicate the re-election of all the present members of the chamber of deputies and the senate.

The lightest vote in many years was cast, both in the capital and nearby towns.

General Huerta appeared to be the favorite candidate for the presidency, and General Blanquet, the present war minister, for the vice presidency.

Report Greek Vessel Taken By Turks

Athens, July 6.—The Athens newspapers publish dispatches from Chios, an island in the Aegean sea, saying a Turkish destroyer on July 3 bombarded and captured a Greek sailing ship which was transporting refugees to Chios.

BUILDING WRECKED

Was Being Raised When It Fell Injuring Two

One man was seriously injured and another somewhat bruised this morning when a building of John Evans situated in the rear of 30 Copeland street collapsed. The building, a one story affair, had been moved onto a foundation and was being jacked up preparatory to building a story under it. It was being blocked up with old pieces of board and small joist and had been raised to a height of about seven feet. Instead of being raised level, as is usually the case, it was on a slant, one side being several inches lower than the other. The result was that the building slid off the blocking and fell with a crash into an adjoining lot.

Fotunately there was no one under the building at the time, but Mr. Evans and two workmen were just outside of the building. One of these workmen, Antone Seine of 30 Arthur street, was caught and buried under one corner of the collapsed building. A crowd quickly collected and he was taken out and carried to a nearby store where a physician was summoned. It was found that he had received a cut over the eye and that his back had been injured, just how seriously cannot be told at the present time. The police ambulance was called and he was taken to the City Hospital.

The other man injured was Mr. Evans, the owner of the building, who received a blow on one shoulder, but nothing serious he says.

The collapse of the building drew a large crowd, and it was generally expressed among the crowd that they were not at all surprised that the building had gone down.

CAPSIZED IN HULL GUT.

A morning paper reports that three Quincy boys had a narrow escape from being drowned in Hull Gut at 10 o'clock Sunday night. They were Albert Edison, Ralph Reale and Alfred Jones. The young men had been sailing in Reales racing dory and were capsized when the main sheet caught and they could not clear it. They clung to the overturned boat for about forty minutes before they were seen by H. S. Morse and Andrew Williams of Quincy, who were sailing across the bay when they saw the overturned boat. The young men were thoroughly chilled and nearly exhausted when rescued. They were taken to the Hull station of the Boston Yacht club and after they had revived and their clothing dried they were taken home in an automobile.

DISTRICT COURT.

Calinet Farni and Raymond Farni were fined $10 each for obstructing a sidewalk at Quincy.

Walter S. Roel of Randolph was fined $10, Michael W. Barry of Quincy $10, Alohousus Kickham of Quincy $15, and John Raisia of Quincy $10 for drunkenness.

William G. Lucas, the fellow caught red handed in a Houghs Neck store, was arraigned for breaking and entering and larceny and was held until July 15 for a hearing.

Pietro Castriatti was arraigned for assault with a dangerous weapon at Quincy. Case continued until Friday.

HOLIDAY FIRES.

The firemen had rather an easy time the night before for there were but four bell alarms during the night. The first alarm was from Box 57 at 12.25 A. M. and was a false alarm.

Box 17 at 1.48 A. M. was for a small boat house at Houghs Neck near the Pandora hotel. The loss will not exceed $25.

Box 48 at 2.49 A. M. was for a fire over the line in Milton.

Box 45 the last of the night sounded at 4.05 and was a false alarm. The department however while at this box was informed of a slight fire at the O. T. Rogers granite plant and extinguished it.

The big Fore River auto engine was on duty all night at the Central station but its services were not needed.

PLAYGROUNDS OPENED TODAY

Located at Quincy Point and South Quincy

The supervised city playgrounds located at the Washington School in Ward Two and at the Ward Three playground started the season today. Wollaston is to support a playground which will be at the Wollaston school grounds. David Goodspeed will be in charge with several volunteer assistants.

Louis F. LaRose of the Y. M. C. A., will again be in charge of the city playgrounds as senior supervisor with the following assistants: Ward Two—Miss Ruth Bass and Alex Robertson. Ward Three—Miss Alice Arnold, Miss Virginia Cleaves and Frank Tirrell.

The grounds will be open daily, except Saturday, from 9 to 12, and from 2 to 5. On Saturdays the closing hour will be at 12 noon.

INCENDIARY FIRES.

There were two incendiary fires in West Quincy during the holiday season but there have been no arrests made in connection with them. The firebug has apparently covered his tracks well and no clue has yet been uncovered.

The first was discovered in the office of the O. T. Rogers Granite company on Willard street Friday evening. The West Quincy apparatus extinguished the fire. The damage was about $10.

Sunday evening the unoccupied office of the granite yards of Badger Bros. burst into flame. Box 45 was sounded. The fire was confined to the upper part of the office where it started.

Quantities of kerosene, or something as inflammable must have been used in large quantities. The office was filled with books and plans, all of which were destroyed. The loss is estimated at $300.

A half hour after the apparatus left, another fire was discovered in the same office, and it was extinguished by the West Quincy company before further damage was done.

While on its way to the fire, one of the horses of Hose 3 severed an artery in its foot and another horse was taken at midnight from the Central station to West Quincy and put in commission.

CUP FOR AREYTO.

The race off the clubhouse of the Wollaston Yacht club on the afternoon of the Fourth for the cup offered by the Quincy Fourth of July association was won by the Areyto, Commodore Drew of the Squantum club, who led the Eleanor by over eleven minutes on corrected time. The Wawenock, Hush, Katrina and Oaxaca were the order of finish of the remainder of the contestants.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT.

The annual open double tournament of the Quincy Tennis club was held on the Fourth of July at the President Hill courts before a large gallery. The tournament lasted all day and was finished down to the finals which will be played some day this week when Collister and Steinway will be pitted against Barker and Broderick.

ARRESTED IN PROVIDENCE.

Chief Burrell went to Providence Saturday night and brought Pietro Castriotto back to Quincy where he is wanted for stabbing Frank Buldoni at the latters home, 145 Sumner street on the evening of June 30, during a row. Buldoni received a bad cut in the stomach from a wicked looking dirk. Pietro was located in Providence where he was arrested and Chief Burrell brought him back to Quincy. He was arraigned in court and the case continued until Friday.

CLASS I BOATS.

A race for Class I boats of the Quincy Yacht club was held off the clubhouse on the afternoon of the Fourth in a moderate east wind. The race was won by the Dorchen who led the Acanthus nearly two minutes.

THE FOURTH AT QUINCY POINT

Town River Yacht Club Hold Races—Open House

The Town River Yacht Club kept open house for the entertainment of members and their friends on the night before the Fourth and all day on the Fourth.

The chief event of the holiday was the boat racing. In this sport Joseph Wrightson proved himself the champion prize winner, for he not only took the first place in the "Bang and Go Back" race, but also captured two cups, the Mellen cup and the special prize cup given by the City of Quincy.

The participants in the speed boat contest were not so fortunate. George Thornton in his new motor boat and Jethro Mellen in the "Carolyn" both got disqualified, so the race will be tried over again at some later date.

The race for small sail boats had to be postponed until late afternoon on account of the absolute lack of any sailing breeze during the morning tide A. Gallagher was the winner of this race.

The executive committee of the club was in charge of the programme for the day, assisted by a regatta committee composed of the following members:—L. Abbott, E. P. Barrows, G. S. Bass, A. T. Gregory and G. Metzer.

FINNISH FIELD DAY

About 2000 Parade From West Quincy to Houghs Neck

It was but a few minutes after the morning parade in City Square on the morning of Fourth had passed in final review and had been dismissed, when there was a sound of music from the direction of South Quincy. A few minutes later the Finnish Workingmens association lodges came in sight. It was the annual picnic of the association and lodges from all parts of the state were present.

Nearly every lodge brought its own band along and it seemed as though there must have been two thousand men, women and children in line. The parade passed down Coddington street to Sea street thence to the field opposite Norton road where a large tent had been erected. They were freely applauded as they marched through City Square.

There was a series of sports during the day and band concerts by the different bands. In the evening some of the picnickers went home but others remained for a dance which was held in Alpha hall.

Sunday the consolidated bands again marched to the picnic grounds where the outing was continued all day.

BENEFIT CONCERT.

The attendance at the Sunday evening concert for the benefit of the Salem sufferers was a disappointment in more ways than one, and instead of several hundreds dollars being secured George E. Wardwell, the manager was able only to tender a check for $50. He deducted but $12 for expenses, all attaches of Kincaide Theatre, the orchestra, operators, ushers, ticket sellers, etc., giving their services free. The Granite City quartette rendered several selections gratis and were well applauded. The feature picture was a six reel film, "The Waifs," and two professional singers filled in between the reels. The concert was not properly advertised by the Salem committee.

MOVING TO HOLBROOK.

Mrs. R. R. Smith of Granite street, who has been quite prominent in Women's club affairs, has sold her home in Quincy and has purchased a fine estate in Holbrook, where she and her daughters Misses Leila and Roberta are moving this week. The Misses Smith have been very popular with the younger set in Quincy, both taking an active part in all of the social events in which the younger set were concerned. Mrs. Smith and her charming daughters will be greatly missed in Quincy.

Mrs. Sten's employment bureau furnishes all kinds of help. 69 Glendale road. 6-6t

BADLY SCALDED.

Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue was badly scalded at the police station this morning when the tin cover blew off an eight quart milk can, filled with hot water. His right arm was burned from the shoulder to the wrist. He was treated by Dr. Fred E. Jones and is now at his home on Dysart street.

VAUGHN HEARING.

The hearing on the appeal of William Vaughn from the decision of Overseer Perry Green who refused to reinstate him as warden of the almshouse has been assigned for Saturday. Judge Avery will review the evidence. Counsel J. J. McAnarney will represent the respondent. City Solicitor Pinkham who acted as adviser to Mr. Green during the hearing will conduct the city's case. Only the witnesses that appeared at the hearing will be heard.

ACCIDENT TO CONDUCTOR.

Arnold Kent of Upland road, a conductor on the Bay State street railway fell from the running board of a swiftly moving Nantasket car Sunday afternoon on Washington street, opposite the residence of John J. Fallon. He struck on his shoulder and rolled several feet into the path of passing automobiles but none struck him. The car was stopped and the passengers rendered what assistance they could. Kent said he was all right but was relieved from duty. He is unable to work today. He is suffering from a severe shaking up and as far as is known no internal injuries have developed.

FLAG RAISING.

The residents of the "Rail" section of West Quincy held a celebration and flag raising on the "night before" which was attended by several thousand people. Open house was observed throughout the district and many were entertained. A concert was given by the Finnish National Band on the land opposite the Gridley Bryant school after which there was a flag raising by James O'Connell, manager of the Rail Reds who defeated the Grove street Blues, 5 to 3 in a sunset game. During the game a foul ball struck Joseph Miller of Hall place, a spectator on the left hand and one of his fingers was broken.

HIS HOUSE THREATENED.

When Nathan Ames demanded pay for a lot of boxes that had been stolen from the rear of his store on Granite street, to supply material for a bon fire at South Quincy, he was threatened that his home would be burned. The dispute was finally settled by a citizen promising to see that the boxes were paid for. A strict watch was kept of Mr. Ames home but no attempt was made to burn it. The threat is said to have been made by a young man about 17 years of age.

SERENADE.

The men at the Central fire station were serenaded by the Italian musicians of the city before dawn on the holiday. There were 28 in the party and all played some instrument. They paid their respects to Chief Faxon Billings and were treated to refreshments. Their concert caused a large crowd to gather and they were liberally applauded.

The summer school for non-speaking English children under the auspices of the Eduactional committee of the Quincy Womens Club, opened this morning at the Lincoln school with Miss Frances Burke as teacher.

THROWN FROM HORSE.

Mrs. Joseph W. Powell of Presidents Hill was thrown in the Blue Hill reservation, Sunday, when the horse she was riding turned its ankle and fell. Mrs. Powell struck on her head and the horse rolled over and crushed her.

She was accompanied by her husband, Joseph W. Powell, president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation. Mr. Powell went to her assistance and after much difficulty succeeded in extricating her. The accident occurred in a lonely spot and after a long delay Mr. Powell was able to arrange for her being carried home.

Dr. George M. Sheahan was called and found no broken bones. Mrs. Powell was badly shaken up and may be confined to her bed for several days. She was resting comfortably at noon.

City Council Adjourns for the Summer Months

Contrary to expectations the order for a four room addition and assembly hall for the Washington school did not come up in the City Council Monday night, and as the Council has adjourned for the summer months, it will be fall before the order comes up, if it does at all. There is such a divided opinion as to building an enlargement to the school that the chances are that instead of building the addition steps will be taken to erect a new building in the Bigelow Park district.

The absent members were Councilmen Corcoran, Sodergren and Thompson.

When the meeting was called to order at 7.45 one of the committees was in session, and in the absence of a quorum a recess was taken subject to the call of the President. The meeting was again called to order at 7.55.

TRACK EXTENSION.

The Street Railway Co. presented a petition for an extension of its tracks from a point on Sea street near the Adams farm house to private property. Laid on the table until later when Councilman Gilliatt offered an order for a public hearing Sept. 21. Adopted.

The Committee on Health reported an order granting Soldiers' Relief which was adopted.

TEMPORARY LOAN.

The Finance Committee reported ought to pass on the temporary loan order for $100,000. Passed under suspension of the rules.

OCEAN STREET.

The Finance Committee reported ought to pass on the order for accepting Ocean street. Passed under suspension of the rules. The money for this street, $2,000 was provided for in a loan order passed at a recent meeting.

POLE LOCATIONS.

The Committee on Streets reported ought to pass on the orders granting the Street Railway Co. a location for poles on Water street the Telephone Co. a location for poles on Sea street, and the Electric Light Co. a location for poles on Clairmont avenue. Passed under suspension of the rules.

NO POLES WANTED.

The Committee on Streets reported leave to withdraw on the petition of the Street Railway Co. and Telephone Co. for a joint location for poles on Elm avenue and recommended that the Council request the Telephone Co. to petition the City Council for authority to lay underground conduits on Elm avenue. Report and recommendation adopted.

On motion of Councilman Craig, Rule 1, was suspended and it was voted that when the Council adjourn it be subject to the call of the President.

Adjourned at 8.24.

Hero Gisburne Proud of Letter Just Received

Edward A. Gisburne of this city, whose deeds of heroism during the first day's attack on Vera Cruz thrilled the country has been officially recognized as a hero by the Navy department. His rating has been advanced and he is awarded a medal of honor and $100 in gold. The following letter was received Friday evening from the secretary of the navy, Josephus Daniels, having been forwarded:

Navy Department, Washington, D. C. June 17, 1914.

To Edward A. Gisburne, Electrician, third class, Naval Hospital, N. Y.

Subject— Commendation, conduct with landing forces at Vera Cruz, in April, 1914. The following extract from a report of the naval operations at Vera Cruz, made by Rear Admiral F. T. Fletcher is quoted for your information:

"Referring to the occasion when private Haggerty was mortally wounded, when he fell and electrician third class (radio) from the Florida, named Gisburne, attempted to pull Haggerty to a place of safety, and although himself wounded while so doing continued his efforts under fire."

The department concurs with the opinion of Rear Admiral Fletcher, commends your conspicuous courage, coolness and skill which were in accord with and added to the best tradition of naval services.

The department is pleased to inform you that in addition to being advanced in rating, a medal of honor and a gratuity of $100 has been awarded you.

(Signed) Josephus Daniels.

Edward A. Gisburne desires to thank the Fourth of July Association through the Daily Ledger for the many courtesies extended during his stay in this city on the holiday.

The young man came here as their guest and when they realized how difficult it would be for him to see all and know all, avoid the crowds and at the same time protect what is left of his right leg, one of the members placed an auto at his disposal for the entire day.

Mr. Gisburne in his note states he is very appreciative of the many kindnesses extended, and in closing wishes the association a continuation of a program which to him was the essence of pleasure.

FOR SIDEWALK OBSTRUCTION.

Two Italians, giving their names as Camalo and Raymondo Fornalli, were arrested Sunday by patrolman Taylor for violation of the city ordinances. The officer alleges that they were two of a crowd of ten that blocked the sidewalk at Washington and canal streets and forced pedestrians to walk in the street in order to pass.

In court this morning, in his testimony, Patrolman Taylor said that foreigners continually made it disagreeable for people passing and that he had asked the defendants with the others to move five different times. He placed Camallo under arrest and when the wagon arrived sent his brother along also.

They entered a plea of not guilty but Judge Avery imposed a fine of $10. The arrests were the first in the campaign inaugurated by Chief Burrell for sidewalk obstruction.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING

Miss Rumsey the Bride of Norman L. Medhurst

Standing in front of a bank of palms and daisies, Miss Mabel Lillian Rumsey, a niece of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Derby became the bride Monday evening of Norman Leslie Medhurst, M. I. T. '14, a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Medhurst of Boston.

The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Derby at 22 Hancock court and was attended by a number of the immediate friends from Boston, Brockton, Whitman, Holbrook and Quincy, the officiating clergyman being Dean Rousmaniere of St. Paul's Cathedral Boston.

The bride was attended by Miss Westa C. Medhurst, a sister of the groom and the groom by William E. Derby, a cousin of the bride.

The bride was gowned in a cream lace, carrying a bouquet of white roses and sweet peas. She also wore a long bridal veil caught up with sprays of flowers. The maid of honor wore a cream voile and carried a bouquet of jack roses.

The bridal party entered the parlor by a stairway entwined with crimson ramblers, to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, the color scheme of the parlor being white and gray.

In the dining room a dainty dunch was served following the ceremony by Miss Catherine Platts of Holbrook and Mrs. C. F. Derby, the bride cutting the wedding cake. Here also, red rambler roses made a pretty decoration.

An informal reception followed the ceremony which was attended by about seventy-five guests. Mr. and Mrs. Medhurst left later in the evening for a month's trip to New Hampshire.

SUICIDE BY SHOOTING

Louis H. Dodge, 54 years, of 36 Shaw avenue, East Braintree, well-known in this city, brought his two years of suffering to a close Monday by shooting himself through the head in his home. Earlier in the day he had purchased the revolver in Boston.

The noise of the shot alarmed his wife an daughter and when they entered his room they found his lifeless body on the floor. A physician was called but he said death was probably instantaneous.

EX-MAYOR STONE A CANDIDATE

Is Urged to Accept Third Term as Mayor

There is a persistent rumor about City Square that ex-Mayor Stone is to enter the caucuses this fall as a Republican candidate for Mayor. It is certain that Charles H. Johnson will also be a candidate, and it is not among the impossibilities that President Whiton of the City Council may consent to become a candidate for the nomination, as many of his friends have urged him to do. From the present outlook therefore it would seem that there will be plenty of Republican Mayoralty timber this fall.

PUBLIC LAUNCHING OF THE NEVADA

Invite Your Friends to Witness Big Battleship Take Her Maiden Dip

Governor of Nevada and Party Are Coming

City officials and many others have received invitations from the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation for the launching of the U. S. S. Nevada which is scheduled to take place Saturday at 1.30.

The Nevada is one of the most powerful battleships ordered for Uncle Sam's navy. She is to be of 27,500 tons, and named for the state of Nevada. Her sponsor will be Miss Eleanor Ann Siebert, of Reno, Nevada, the 10-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Siebert, and a niece of Governor Tasker Lowndes Oddie of Nevada.

The launching will be a notable one for it will be attended by Gov. Oddie and a large delegation of Nevada citizens, who are coming on a special train. Secretary of the Navy Daniels, and Assistant Secretary Roosevelt have also promised to be present, as has also Gov. Walsh of Massachusetts and a number of naval officers who are at present at the Charlestown navy yard.

While the launching will be a public one, many invitations have been issued and those accepting have been provided tickets admitting them to a special launching platform. A special platform about the bow of the vessel has been reserved for the Nevada party.

In addition, tickets admitting to the yard only, have been issued, and holders of these will have to find the best vantage point possible. As there are many places inside of the yard from which a good view can be obtained, these ticket holders will have no difficulty in finding advantageous places from which to witness the launching.

INVITE YOUR FRIENDS.

Outside of the yard there are also many vantage points. First, there is the Fore River bridge and approaches from which a fine view of the yards can be had. At the New Downer Landing which is just across the river from the Fore River yards, the State Sons of Veterans are to hold an outing and as a certain percent of the gate receipts are to be given for the relief of the Salem sufferers a good sum should be realized.

Another fine point from which to view the launch is Hayward's grove and Harbor Villa just across the river in East Braintree. It will be seen therefore that one will not have to depend on a ticket in order to witness the launch. Quincy people should extend invitations to out-of-town friends to witness this big launching.

Immediately following the launching the official launching party and a few invited guests will be entertained by the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation at lunch at the Copley Plaza hotel, Boston, the trip to Boston being made in a special train from the yards. This lunch will be served about 3 o'clock. No lunch will be served in the yards.

THE NEW BATTLESHIP.

The Nevada is 500 tons larger than the New York and Texas, the biggest ships now in the service of the United States, and from her main battery of ten 14-inch guns the Nevada will be able to throw 14,000 pounds of metal at one discharge, each gun throwing a shell 530 pounds heavier than the 12-inch guns now in the naval service, and each gun developing a muzzle energy of 66,000 foot tons, 17,000 foot tons more than the 12-inch guns.

The Nevada is 583 feet long with a beam of 95 feet 2 5-8 inches and a mean draft of 28 feet 6 inches.

The Nevada will be driven by Curtis turbines. The boilers will be fired exclusively with oil and the vessel will carry no coal. The estimated speed is 20 1-2 knots, but it is probable that this will be considerably exceeded.

THE ARMAMENT.

The armor and armament of the Nevada are considerably in excess of any

QUINCY PATRIOTISM.

The Mayor is reported in public print to be "thoroughly disgusted at the attitude taken by the people of this city" relative to responding to the call of Salem, and adds that the benefit concert was "a dismal failure." Who is to blame for this attitude and why was the benefit a failure?

It was the duty of the Mayor's committee, when offered the free use of Kincaide's theatre, to have advertised the concert extensively in the newspapers; to have printed 5,000 tickets and sold them in advance by canvassers at 25 or 50 cents. The returns from these tickets would have been much larger than any tag day.

A good organization is necessary to the success of any movement. This is why the Fourth of July celebrations in Quincy have been so successful. The Quincy Fourth of July Association and the Ward Six Patriotic Association are composed of active hard workers, who know how to raise funds and what the people want for a celebration.

There is no doubt but Quincy people sympathize with the fire sufferers of Salem, and that they are ready to respond as generously as any other city of 35,000. Many have already contributed to the Boston fund, and the Odd Fellows, Knights of Columbus and other societies have contributed through their organizations.

If the Quincy Women's Club or the new city federation of Women's Clubs could be induced to take charge of raising funds for Salem they would be much more successful than the Mayor's committee. A systematic house-to-house tag day covering the whole city would raise $1,000 inside of a week.

The little town of Needham raised $250 in one day, and good returns come from other towns and cities. Quincy wants to do its part, and it is not too late, but the delay has been unfortunate.

A signed appeal should be issued by the city committee, and printed several days in the newspapers and all contributions should be promptly acknowledged in the local press. A little enthusiasm is necessary.

WHAT SANITATION CAN DO.

It was freely predicted, when the United States troops landed at Vera Cruz, that as soon as hot weather came, yellow fever or other diseases would break out. Yet the troops have already been subjected to the strain of hot, stuffy, stifling weather, enervating to a degree unknown in any American city. Yet there has been no unusual disease.

It is the story of Panama over again By the cleaning up of refuse, disinfecting of water supplies, and elimination of mosquitoes, etc., any place on earth can be made wholesome.

Yet while this triumph of science is being accomplished, in a most unfavorable spot, dealing with the ignorant, unprogressive Mexicans, in our intelligent country there will be plenty of preventable disease this summer.

Many people will come home from summer hotels bearing the germs of typhoid. Many children will have scarlet fever from milk contamination And all these losses can be avoided, if boards of health will but do their duty, and if the public will co-operate.

Too bad the Colonel had to go down to those miasmatic Amazonian jungles and injure his health, when there is plenty of sewer gas right in New York.

Mr. Roosevelt will probably take special treatment for his throat trouble, consisting of a 21,738 miles campaign speaking trip.

Lassen peak, the new volcano, is erupting again, but George Fred Williams has remained quiet for some days.

Gen. Villa has a new $400 bathtub. When filled with the blood of his enemies, it ought to give him a pretty enjoyable bath.

While contributions are being taken up for the victims of the Salem fire, everybody is forgetting about the sufferers by the drought existing in the navy since July 1.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF FREE TRIPS

Many of Salem's Refugees Are Leaving the City

STILL DYNAMITING THE RUINS

Extra Heavy Charges Placed Under Huge Walls of Naumkeag Mill Shake Community—Large Manufacturing Plants Asked to Give Work to People Made Idle by Fire

Salem, Mass., July 7.—Refugees contiue to leave stricken Salem and look for new homes. Almost every train leaving the city carries a dozen or more families, who are taking advantage of the free transportation which has been in force since the great fire left thousands homeless.

Houses are being set up in all parts of the city and many refugees are starting anew their suddenly interrupted housekeeping. Many applications are being received for permits to build permanent homes, but no action will be taken until the new commission on rebuilding takes office. Vast changes in street lines are being contemplated by the city officials and it is said that contractors will be given the work to do as soon as plans have been completed by Mayor Hurley.

The committees in charge of the work of rehabilitating the families who lost their homes are constantly urging that more automobiles be made available, as the work of conveying food and clothing must be carried on quickly. At present the number of automobiles at the disposal of the various committees is insufficient.

A rather sudden invitation has been extended to many of the men refugees to leave the camps as soon as possible and search for employment. A "nothing to do till tomorrow" spirit has developed among the male refugees, many of whom spend the greater part of their time sleeping in their tents, eating their meals regularly and all but refusing outright to aid militiamen in the general routine work that has to be done about the camps.

Yesterday afternoon the plant of the Naumkeag Steam Cotton company was dynamited and a dozen or more of the huge walls were demolished. Extra heavy charges of the explosive were used and the reports of the blasts could be heard all over the city and houses shook from the detonation. City officials will continue the work of dynamiting walls and will probably begin the work of demolishing the St. Joseph's church ruins in a few days.

In the Salem district court John Mackervitsky, of 21 Grant street, was sentenced to serve three months in the house of correction for larceny. He got into the line of refugees and was given a suit of clothes, which he sold. He explained in court that he had seen everybody getting clothing and that although he was not a sufferer from the fire, he presented himself as such and was given a suit of clothes. The police are continually watching for such cases and each person found guilty has been given a prison sentence.

Another death attributable to the Salem fire is that of Mrs. Columbo Rossetti of 22 High street, who died in the Peabody hospital, following her removal there from Salem, when she was about to give birth to a child. This makes the sixth death since the fire. Mrs. Rossetti leaves nine children. Preparations are being made for the restoration of the forty babies who are at the Dearborn Street hospital to their parents, as many of the mothers are now able to care for them.

Requests were sent out by the various committees to several large manufacturing plants asking them to cooperate in giving employment to some of the refugees. It is said that work is to be had at the Fore River works and at the Boston Woven Hose company's mills. The committee is desirous of hearing from any mill owners or factory managers who are able to give work to the refugees.

More clothing is needed, but food is available from several sources. The committees in charge of the work of rehabilitating are hopeful of completing their work in a few days, and believe that in that time all the refugees will be cared for.

Birmingham, Eng., July 7.—After impressive funeral services, the body of Joseph Chamberlain was interred here in the Key Hill cemetery. All Birmingham stood in respectful silence as the body of the dead statesman was borne to the Unitarian Church of the Messiah, in which the services were held.

At the same time the funeral rites were in progress here memorial services were being held at Westminster, in London, attended by members of the cabinet and parliament.

RUMOR OF NEW JOB FOR PETERS

May Be Made Assistant Secretary of Treasury

Washington, July 7.—That Representative Andrew J. Peters can have the assistant secretaryship of the treasury if he wants it, is the opinion of a Democrat close to the administration.

Whether this office has been offered to Peters is not known, and as Peters is out of town there can be no confirmation here from that source. It is understood, however, that he is being seriously considered for the position.

If he should be appointed assistant secretary of the treasury, the Democrats in congress would suffer a severe loss. Peters will be, in the next house, one of the topmost Democrats in the lower chamber. His rank on the ways and means committee is high, and the prestige of his long standing in Washington will give him an enviable place.

YEGGS ROB POSTOFFICE

Safe Blown Open at Avon and Stamps and Money Taken

Avon, Mass., July 7.—The safe in the postoffice was blown, by a band of yeggmen, who secured a quantity of stamps and small change and escaped. The police of surrounding cities and towns were notified of the robbery and a search for the yeggs is under way.

The robbers gained entrance to the postoffice by forcing the front door. They knocked the combination knob from the safe door and filled the space inside with nitroglycerin. The explosion blew the door through the window in the west side of the building.

Marlboro Aldermen Turn Down Appointments by Mayor

Marlboro, Mass., July 7.—Mayor Thomas H. O'Halloran's appointments of two policewomen were turned down by the aldermen, but the mayor says they are appointed just the same and that they will serve without pay as police officers, in spite of the aldermen.

The action of the aldermen in refusing confirmation to the two policewomen has kicked up quite a row in Marlboro. The mayor says he "doesn't know what in thunder got into that bunch."

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

WORSHIP DISTURBED

Mayor and Police Criticised by a Citizen

Editor Daily Ledger:—

I am writing to your paper hoping that you will call the attention of the public to a matter which the Mayor and Chief of Police should give immediate attention. On Sunday I was one of a large number of citizens who had gathered in Bethany church for worship. During the services a large band passed the church doors playing as loudly as possible. The noise was deafening and for a few moments nothing could be heard except the din of the band. The incident not only disturbed the worship but was distracting in the extreme.

I am informed that the band did not lead a procession, and was composed of foreigners who probably are ignorant of our laws and customs, for from my knowledge of those people I should not be led to expect discourtesy to their fellow citizens or to anyone.

The blame for such an outrage on public decency should rest with the police, whose duty it is to know the law and the customs of decent civilization, for this the city pays them. An efficient chief and force usually give instruction to such people as to their rights and privileges and the rights and privileges of others on the Lord's day. The Mayor who grants the permit usually stipulates that the band, if parading on Sunday, shall not disturb the public worship of any church. We feel sure the police officials will attend more carefully to such matters in the future, and that our Mayor will see to it that public worship is not again disturbed in any church of this city, no matter what name it may bear.

UNION SERVICE AT WOLLASTON

Three Denominations at One Communion Table

Sunday began the series of union services of the Wollaston Baptist, Wollaston Methodist and Wollaston Congregational Churches for the months of July and August. Reverends Walther and Bailey having gone on their vacations, the service was in charge of Rev. Dr. Sneath, pastor of the Congregational Church. Dr. Sneath preached upon the subject "Always With Us," using Matthew 28:20 as his text, "And lo, I am with you always even unto the end of the world." Miss Ruth L. Hardy sang two solos very effectively.

At the close of the sermon a union communion service was held. The deacons who officiated were Leon F. Besse and George A. Smith from the Congreagtional Church, George E. Thomas from the Baptist Church and Joseph A. Sedgwick from the Methodist Church.

At 6 P. M. the three Young People's Societies held a Young People's meeting in the vestry of the Congregational church, Mr. Roberts of the Methodist church leading. The topic was "Memorials, National and Individual." The participation was most excellent. There was a large audience at the morning service and a fine attendance at the evening meeting. The topic at the Thursday evening union midweek service will be "A Genuine Interest in Christ," John 6th chapter.

NEW YORK'S BABY WEEK.

"I pledge to be a baby's friend
And everybody tell,
Clean air, clean clothing and clean food,
He needs to keep him well."

This is the refrain sung in every public and private school in the City as part of the exercises of Baby Week, a seven day educational and uplift campaign in honor of the baby citizens Beside lessons in the proper care of babies, and exhibitions of what is being done to guard their health, there were free boat rides, and automobile rides for tired mothers—big and little—and their small charges, and baby contests with prizes for the most perfectly developed children in New York's five boroughs.

THE MAYOR'S LETTER.

In a circular letter addressed to the children and sent to be read in every class room in the city, Mayor Mitchell appealed to the children to help save the lives of thousands of babies needlessly sacrificed every year. "More than 13,000 babies under one year of age died in New York City last year," this letter stated. "It is estimated that nearly half of them would be alive today if they had received proper care, and if necessary precautions had been taken during the Summer months. As Honorary President of the organizations which will direct the educational and other activities of Baby Week, I ask every pupil of the schools of this City to help in the work. As future citizens you can do much to help save the lives of babies in this City."

CO-OPERATIVE WORK.

Circulars giving the latest and most practical methods for caring for the little ones, were issued by the Health Department and distributed through the schools, with a request that the children should take them home and bring them to the attention of their parents. Hundreds of Boy Scouts distributed posters and placards bearing the slogan, "Better babies, better mothers, and so a better City." Campfire girls delivered tags to milk dealers which were fastened to milk bottles "Keep baby well by keeping milk clean, covered, cold."

Druggists placed Baby Week pasters on every package sold. Department stores had special sales in infants supplies. In short, no effort was spared to reach every mother in the City with the message of good health and good cheer for the children.

INSPECTION WORK.

Every one of the City's fifty-five milk stations, including those under the control of Nathan Strauss, were opened for inspection, so were the eight diet kitchens run by the city. On hospital and clinic day, people interested were shown what was being done to care for babies and cure their ailments.

At least 1,000,000 children got a free outing on Friday of Baby Week. Several ferry lines placed boats at the disposal of the Committee on Outing Day. There was special music in the parks, and on recreation piers, and every playground kept open all day long.

RESULTS EXPECTED.

Great results are expected from this co-operative campaign. Mr. Laidlaw, Executive Secretary of the New York Federation of Churches, predicts that this successful Baby Week, will cut the infant mortality of July and August to an unprecedentedly low rate, possibly below 100 to the 1,000. There being on an average 134,000 babies a year born within city limits.

EXPERT ADVICE

One of the most valuable features of the celebration was the dissemination of news of the places where mothers could receive expert advice and help gratis, if their babies were ailing. Field nurses, assigned to neighborhoods where their services are most needed, visit the homes and give sensible, expert advice easily understood and followed, securing the services of needed.

They emphasize the fact that the mother's condition is all important for the health of the nursing infant, yet recognize that where the mother is a wage earner, certain modifications of existing rules for the child's care must be made.

Alternate feeding to relieve the mother, and prevent the necessity of too early weaning, is found to be safe and practical. It has been demonstrated that a careful dilution of the best grade of condensed milk, a perfectly pure and sterilized food, is unusually successful as an alternate, with the normal feedings. Eagle brand which is preferred by experts for children's use, is recommended not only for the babies of the tenements, but for more fortunately placed children, whenever alternate feeding is desirable, as a safe uniform food especially in travelling and in places where certified milk is difficult to procure.

FRESH AIR.

It is found that the necessary fresh air can be had on fire-escapes and roofs for the babies who can not be taken to the real country. Recreation piers where pure Ocean breezes circulate save the lives of hundreds of the City's children, and Seaside Homes that shelter tired mothers and puny infants, send them home able to stand the strain of the city heat, and knowing how to fight the foes that lie in wait for the baby's life.

Everyone possessed of a heart to sympathize, and a will to help must rejoice in Baby Week and the civic improvement it stands for.

ANOTHER FIRE AT BADGER BROS.

The mystery of the Sunday night fire in the unoccupied office at the Badger Bros. granite yards deepened Monday afternoon when without warning and with no one in sight smoke commenced to curl through the roof.

John Minihan, a call fireman, who works nearby, ran to the building and quenched the flames which were gaining headway.

The start of this fire is as much an open question as the first one on Sunday. No one was seen in the vicinity before the burst of flame illuminated the sky.

While it is admitted that a firebug may be the work, as far as is known the firm has no enemies. A year ago last Memorial Day season, however, a valuable granite monuments were destroyed in the yard, and it is thought that there is some connection between the person setting the fires, and the one that committed the acts of vandalism.

CELEBRATION AT SQUANTUM

Series of Sports, Concert and Fireworks

One of the most enjoyable celebrations ever held in Squantum was conducted by the Squantum Improvement Association, Saturday, July 4th. The affair was in the hands of the following committee:—Charles S. Bostwick chairman, Charles H. Singleton, J. H. Foster, W. E. Fifield, John Holmes, Frank Anderson, John R. Nelson, John Marden, Roger Mason and John Jepson.

The day's entertainment started at 8 o'clock when 120 children gathered at Loughan's terrace and were presented with flags, after which they saluted the large flag, and all joined in singing the Star Spangled Banner, accompanied by Mr. Bostwick on the cornet, and Mr. Foster and Master Frederick Bean on the drums.

The parade was one of the most interesting features of the day and there were so many original and fancy costumes that it made it a most difficult proposition for the judges when it came to the final decision, in fact, in several instances additional prizes were added to the long list already assigned, as it seemed impossible to choose. Mr. John Holmes was the Chief Marshal of the day. The judges were Messrs. H. W. Orr, S. H. Leonard and J. H. Landers. The following were the winners in the parade.

Best group feature of parade—Misses Helen Loughan, Frances Allen, Ann Allen and Mildred Hersey.

Most original feature of parade—C. F. Westlake, first; Miss Dorothy McKenzie second.

Fanciest features—C. E. Carlson, first; Master Charles M. Singleton and Miss Ducett, second, as Uncle Sam and Liberty.

A special original feature participated in by Holga, Robert and Aurora Gran.

Three prizes were set aside for the boys, but it was finally decided to make the number six instead; namely Carl Frieburg, Allan Reed, Carl Brown Joseph Brown, Carl Rund, and John Holmes.

As in the case of the boys, three prizes had been assigned to the girls, out at the last moment it was decided to give prizes to six, as follows—Ruth Holmes, Evelyn Reed, Dorothy Rund, Lillian Rund, Frances Brown and Mabel Richardson.

At 3 o'clock all gathered at Loughans terrace at Callahan's Stand for the following sports.

Running race for boys under 12 years won by Allen Reed, first; Oscar Dahlquist, second.

Running race for boys 12 to 17 years won by Ernest Johnson, first; Helge Anderson, second.

Three legged race for boys, won by Francis Callahan, first; Ernest Johnson, second.

Girls' race under 12, Hazel Mason, first; Jessie Reed, second.

Girls race over 12—Sylvia Rund, first; Madeline Sullivan, second.

Special race for boys and girls.—Allen Reed, first; Hazel Mason, second.

Special race for men.—Robert Curley, first; James Loughan, second.

Pipe race,—James Loughan, first, Chauncey Paul, second.

Ball throwing for girls under fourteen years.—Glenny Rund, first; Hazel Mason, second.

Ball throwing for girls over fourteen, Lettie McCarthy, first; Thelma Holt, second.

Men's blind race.—Bill Olsen, first; Edward Carlson, second.

Women's wheelbarrow race, Mildred Hersey, first; Annie Morrill second.

At 8 o'clock there was a short entertainment at the Squantum Inn. The opening number was a musical trio consisting of Miss Louise Rund, violin, Miss Bertha Rund, violoncello and Ethel Jones Bostwick, piano. It was an especially fine Hungarian selection and they received great applause.

Charles Westlake rendered a most amusing monologue and sang a catchy song which made a great hit.

Charles Westlake and Mrs. Laura Nunn sang a duet which was well received.

Joseph Uppling and son "Joie" played a duet on the banjo and xylophone, and it was really remarkable to hear the progress the lad has made on the instrument in such a short time, and it was especially noticeable on the encore when he accompanied his father to sing; it was a very interesting number and received a well earned applause.

Mrs. Louise Holt, accompanied by Miss Thelma Holt, rendered "I Want A Ragtime Bungalow" in amost charming manner, and for an encore sang, by request, her great hit, in costume, "Situation."

This concluded the entertainment, after which the prizes were awarded. It was then announced that after a short intermission there would be a display of fireworks, donated by Dr. Ralph W. Place, for whom three rousing cheers were sent up. It was certainly a most wonderful display, including several set pieces, and it was a grand windup for a most interesting Fourth of July celebration.

MYSTERY OF THE EEL.

Just How Its Existence Ends, or Why, No One Seems to Know.

Of all the forms of fish science has studied the eel is the most remarkable and the least understood. Its life history is mysterious and as slippery as its own skin.

Its breeding grounds are the mid-Atlantic, but what depth nobody knows. During the year the larval eel remains at sea it never eats and grows constantly smaller. It finally starts swimming toward the mouth of some fresh water stream—often one that is a thousand miles away.

On arrival at its destination the eel promptly changes from the thinness of a visiting card and a transparency that permits only its glistening black eyes to be seen to the pigmented snakelike fish that is trapped and speared on the coast and in the rivers.

As soon as the eel has brought forth its first spawning of 15,000,000 to 20,000,000 eggs it dies, but just how its existence ends or why it should be cut off so short remains a mystery. One thing is certain, no adults come in from the sea, no adults remain in the streams.

The eel is a vertebrate animal which emerges from an egg less than one-twenty-fifth of an inch in diameter. It grows to a length of three inches in perhaps a year, and during that time is buffeted about on the high seas and drifts over a distance of 1,000 miles or more.

Yet during all this period the eel takes no food whatever and is doubtless incapable of doing so, owing to the unprepared condition of its digestive organs.—New York American.

CURIOUS MULTIPLICATION.

You Need Not Know the Table Beyond "Two Times Nine."

What! Multiply 343 by 177 without knowing the multiplication table beyond the "two times nine?" Yes. If you can multiply and divide by 2 you can get any product in the following simple way:

Put down the two numbers side by side and form a column under each by successively dividing by 2 in the first column and doubling the number in the second column. Discard all remainders as you divide and carry both columns in even rows until the last quotient is 1. Then cross out every line across the three columns that has an even number in the first column. add what remains in the second column and you have the product. In the following columns the numbers in parentheses are the ones to be discarded:

85	708	4
(42)	(1,416)	(8)
21	2,832	16
(10)	(5,664)	(32)
5	11,328	64
(2)	(22,656)	(128)
	60,711	343

The reason why this comes out so nicely may be explained by means of a third column, showing the successive powers of 2. The powers standing in the uncrossed lines will exactly account for the remainders that were rejected. Their sum is therefore equal to the multiplier, 343, and opposite each is the partial product equal to 177 times the corresponding power of 2.—Youth's Companion.

Passing of Old Houses.

Riders and walkers through the New England countryside and villages learn to look for the venerable houses, many of them centenarians twice over, which not only distinguish this region, but fit into its landscapes with a suitability which newer buildings somehow lack. As this interest grows the observer begins to notice that they are all too rapidly disappearing to give place to modern houses which are certainly no improvement in workmanship and architectural design, and not necessarily superior in comfort and convenience if the old houses are properly handled. In losing these ancient buildings we are losing not only parcels of history. We are losing quite as much a dignified and fitting style of domestic architecture which is all the more effective by being severely plain.—Boston Transcript.

Cooling Water Without Using Ice.

To cool water without using ice get a slender glass test tube from any drug store. Half fill it with nitrate of ammonia salts, fill up with water, cork tightly. Shake till the salt is dissolved. Be careful to wipe the outside of the tube dry in order that all traces of the nitrate may be removed. Place this tube into a glass of water and agitate as you would a spoon. The water is rapidly chilled. The nitrate of ammonia salts can be bought at any drug store. This is a far better way of cooling water than putting ice in it.—New York World.

The Sweetest Days.

After all, I believe the nicest and sweetest days are not those on which anything very splendid or wonderful or exciting happens, but just those that bring simple little pleasures, following one another softly, like pearls slipping off a string.—L. M. Montgomery.

Professional Training.

"Oh, Johnnie, can't I ever teach you to put things away?"

"But, mother, I'm practicing to be a salesman, not a stock clerk."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

When men are rightly occupied their amusement grows out of their work, as the color petals out of a fruitful flower.—John Ruskin.

TO MAN THE RIVADAVIA

Detail of Ten From Argentina to Study Armament

The appearance of men wearing the uniform of the Argentine artillery in Thompson's Cafe on Monday created considerable excitement among the hundreds that frequent the place and for some few minutes all believed that the crew of the superdreadnought Rivadavia had arrived.

The men were six petty officers and four corporals and came to this city late Monday afternoon, after a pleasant trip from Argentina. This morning they reported to Captain Moneta of the commission.

The purpose of the men's presence is to study the armament of the ship so that when it is turned over to their government they will be fully acquainted with the mechanism regulating the guns.

They will be here until the Rivadavia is taken to the Charlestown navy yard next month where a new turbine will be installed to take the place of the one destroyed in a chain test.

CHAMBERLAIN'S DEATH ENDS UNIQUE CAREER.

The Remarkable Personality of England's Late Famous Political Leader and Great Parliamentary Debater.

Intensely Ambitious, Immaculate In Dress, Disdainer of Exercise and Passionately Devoted to Orchids.

By WALTON WILLIAMS.

At the time of the Boer war Joseph Chamberlain was referred to as the "best hated man on earth."

He was bitterly assailed by the Liberal and Labor parties in his own land, he was called a Judas by the Irish, he was universally detested on the continent, the Boers hated him as the destroyer of their nation, and even the British Conservatives, with whom he was then acting, regarded him with distrust and deplored his indiscretions. In America he was not popular, although he married an American wife and had been described by Gladstone as the first of the American school of politicians in England. Only in the colonies was Mr. Chamberlain regarded with any great degree of favor, and this was because of his large conception of the British empire and his desire to exalt the greater England beyond the shores of the "right little, tight little isle."

The career of Chamberlain is as unique as his personality. Starting as a red republican who wanted to change the king to a president, to obliterate classes and to give the poor an equal chance and an equal voice in affairs, he ended by being in all essentials a Conservative and an imperialist of imperialists. Without a university education, he grew to be the greatest debater in parliament and a potent force in the party in which a Cambridge or Oxford training counts for most. A man who made his fortune in trade, he was at the last the accepted leader of the idle nobility that anathematizes trade. Serving in both Liberal and Conservative cabinets, he resigned from each in turn to lead what seemed a forlorn hope on a question of principle.

THE LATE JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

A Chapter of Paradoxes.

In the pink of physical health up till within a few years of his death, Chamberlain took no exercise, had no pastimes other than his orchid gardens and tabooed sports. Entering parliament as an extreme radical whom those who did not know him expected to be of the rough, uncouth and hairy type, he surprised them all by appearing in immaculate dress, with the inevitable monocle and orchid boutonniere, dapper, slim, elegant and pale of face. A capitalist in politics, he started his career by being mayor of Birmingham and as such bringing about all sorts of municipal ownership. An employer of labor, he appeared as the champion of labor and held his workingmen constituency in Birmingham through all his changes of party, loyal even to his death. Passionately devoted to orchids, he said that he did not particularly care for the flower, but only wanted to raise better ones than anybody else. Intensely ambitious, he never succeeded in reaching the premiership or even the chancellorship of the exchequer, which it is said he coveted even more, but lived to see his son chancellor and apparently on the road to higher honors. This son, by the way, is almost the exact duplicate of his father, with the same dress, figure, monocle and orchid, and at a distance was often mistaken for the elder. The two worked together in perfect accord, and it is impossible that Austen Chamberlain will some day hand the premiership that "Brummagem Joe" missed.

Joseph Chamberlain was born in London in 1836 and belonged to a middle class provincial family. He had a good school education and entered early in life his father's firm of wood screw makers at Birmingham. As soon as he got into politics he became noted for his advanced radical opinions and his ability as a speaker. In 1873 he was made mayor of Birmingham and was twice successively reelected. From this borough he was sent to parliament in 1876, and his large services to Birmingham will not soon be forgotten in the midland counties. Mr. Chamberlain subsequently served in the second Gladstone cabinet, but in 1886 he withdrew from the third cabinet of Mr. Gladstone, refusing to follow him in his Irish policy. The same year he was returned to parliament as a Liberal-Unionist and became the able, shaping leader of that party. In Lord Salisbury's third cabinet he consented to take office as the secretary of the colonies, being continued in the cabinet of Mr. Balfour. As such he was the most prominent figure in the Boer war, after the close of which he resigned to advocate protection, with preferential duties for the colonies.

Political Epithets.

The high plane upon which political discussion proceeds in England is indicated by the epithets applied to Chamberlain. Some of them follow: "The artful dodger," "imperial knave," "political hamstringer," "miserable trickster," "great panjandrum," "mugwump," "smug face," "imperial bagman," "imperial trickster," "hungry nose," "brummagem bagman," "impudent trickster," "lie factor," "crafty muddler," "lying campaigner," "little loafer," "vulgar ranter," "red herring trailer," "colossal humbug," "red handed despot," "bankrupt statesman," "slippery fellow," "republic smasher," "crafty animal," "Red Herring Joe."

It has been more than twenty years since the world at large called him "Brummagem Joe." It was a hard epithet. Brummagem is worthless or very inferior metallic articles made in imitation of better ones, and Birmingham is the great mart and manufactory of gewgaws, gilt toys, cheap jewelry, imitation gems, mosaic gold and such like.

Mr. Chamberlain's business ability was so great that his firm became paramount in the trade, and in eighteen years his fortune was so considerable that he retired from business to devote himself to municipal affairs. He had three wives. Each of his marriages was tinged with romance. His closest friend was William Kenrick, and William had a beautiful sister, Harriet Kenrick and Mary Chamberlain were as devoted as their brothers, and the upshot of this general affection was that Joe Chamberlain married Harriet and William Kenrick married Mary.

Third Wife an American.

The first Mrs. Chamberlain died in two years, and "Brummagem Joe" took for a second wife her cousin, Florence Kenrick, who left him a widower after seven years of uxorial devotion. There being no more Kenricks available just then, England's colonial secretary remained alone for thirteen long years, wedded only to his political dogmas. In 1887, while visiting the United States as chairman of the fisheries commission (Bering sea), he met the daughter of Mr. Cleveland's secretary of war, Judge Endicott, fell in love at first sight and, notwithstanding his fifty-two years, induced her to become his third wife.

Just as Chamberlain was the best hated he was also the best entertained man on the planet. It will be seen from the following selection that Mr. Chamberlain's protean character did not lack recognition. He was represented as, among other things, a pirate, a carrot, a boat, a missionary, a Salvation Army officer, a juggler, William Pitt, a coster, Napoleon, a ballet girl, a terrier, a candlestick, a Chinaman, Mr. Mantalini, Mr. Turveytop, a clock, Betsy Prig, a nigger minstrel, a pierrot, a bishop, a red Indian, a Roman emperor, a Turkish pasha, a snake, a swordfish, a king, a snow man, a trapeze artist, a dead baby, a champion walker, a mad hatter, Brer Fox, a settee, a blind beggar, a prizefighter and, apart from these, as almost every animal known to zoology.

A Biting Wit.

Chamberlain was always noted as a difficult statesman to interview for a newspaper.

One day while talking with a friend in a London hotel he was approached by a diffident young man with the timed question:

"May I speak with you for a moment?"

"Certainly," said the minister.

"I can't say it here," said the youth. "Let us go to one side."

The bashful young man led Chamberlain into a dark corner, where he explained:

"I am on the staff of the —— and would like to get your views on the Transvaal question."

"Very well," said the statesman, with a dark and mysterious look. "Come with me."

He led the young map reporter through several corridors and rooms to the darkest corner he could find, and then, after looking about carefully to see that the coast was clear of possible eavesdroppers, Chamberlain whispered this piece of information:

"My friend, I really don't know anything about it."

When Chamberlain was a Liberal he was quite as biting in his wit at the expense of the Conservatives as he afterward became in grilling the Liberals. One instance is yet talked of in parliament. It occurred just after the return of Lord Salisbury from his negotiations with Bismarck. Salisbury's speeches in the house of commons, so it is said, contained a number of "ifs," and this gave the cue to Mr. Chamberlain for one of those retorts which raised him in the forefront of debaters. During a speech in the house he said:

"What the honorable gentleman has said reminds me of a rime I learned from my nurse:

"If all the seas were bread and cheese,
If all the rivers were ink,
If all the lakes were currant cakes,
What should we have to drink?"

In his Sunday school days Mr. Chamberlain wore an eyeglass, but no orchid. He always kept on his hat and overcoat and carried his umbrella while teaching. He was fond of walking about the room as he taught, and when, as sometimes happened, one of the tired factory lads in his class showed unmistakable signs of drowsiness the teacher would point with his umbrella to the sleepy boy and say: "Good night, Jones! I have no objection to your going to sleep, only please don't snore."

Chamberlain was distinguished for many things, and one was his aversion to other physical exertion than that necessarily involved in making a speech. William M. Evarts was asked some years before his death what was his explanation of his hale old age. "I do not know," he replied, "unless it is that I take the least possible physical exercise." Mr. Chamberlain might have said the same thing in view of his apparent youthfulness at the age of seventy. He had no physical diversions. He disdained exercise. Climbing stairs was an abomination to him. He would take a bus rather than walk a single block. Here is his own statement:

"I do not cycle. I do not ride. I do not walk when I can help it. I do not play cricket. I do not play football. I do not play tennis. I do not even play golf, which I have been assured is an indispensable condition of statesmanship."

Looked Like a "Ladies' Doctor."

The following is Justin McCarthy's famous description of Mr. Chamberlain's first appearance in the house of commons:

"I can well remember the sensation which his first speech in the house of commons created among the ranks of the Tories after his election to parliament as one of the representatives of Birmingham. The good Tories made no effort to conceal their astonishment at the difference between the real Chamberlain as they saw and heard him and the Chamberlain of their earlier imaginings. Judging from his political speeches, they had set him down as a wild republican, and they expected to see a rough and shaggy man, dressed with an uncouth disregard for the ways of society, who would probably scowl fiercely at his opponents in the house and would deliver his opinions in tones of thunder. The man who rose to address the house was a pale, slender, delicate looking and closely shaven personage, very neatly dressed, with short and carefully brushed hair and wearing a dainty eyeglass constantly fixed in his eye."

"He looks like a ladies' doctor," one stout Tory murmured.

MRS. ANGLE WANTS TO STAY IN LOCKUP

Police Believe Ballou Died In Quarrel With Prisoner

Stamford, Conn., July 7.—On hearing there was a possibility that she might be transferred from the local lockup to the county jail at Bridgeport, Mrs. Helen M. Angle, who is under detention pending the finding of the coroner on the death of Waldo R. Ballou, with her father, Leonard Blondel, made an appeal to Chief of Police Brennan to be allowed to remain here.

She promised if her request was granted, to give as little trouble as possible, and to see practically no callers except her father and her counsel.

It is understood that all theories as to the death of Ballou have been disposed of except one general one, and that is that Ballou and Mrs. Angle had had a verbal quarrel; that Ballou returned to the apartments that night to try and make up; that instead Mrs. Angle was in bad temper, and in the physical encounter which followed, either in the rooms or at the head of the staircase, Ballou was struck. This is the present line of inquiry.

By agreement of counsel the case was continued till July 13. Eisman was held in $1000, which was furnished by his sister-in-law, Mrs. Max Eisman of Boston.

The Dream Fisherman

He drew a fly across a stream—
His heart of hope was full—
And as it split a ripple's gleam
He felt a sudden pull.
A start, a tug, a vigorous rush—
His languor all was gone.
The world its noises seemed to hush,
For, lo, the fight was on!

He listened to the singing reel,
He braced himself, and still
Beneath his fingers he could feel
The keen and welcome thrill.
He took no chance; he used great care;
He frowned; he grinned with glee.
His hopes ran high; he faced despair—
What would the outcome be?

Then just as from the water came
The shining, dripping prize
The boss approached his desk and glared
With stern and searching eyes.
The clerk bent down like other men
To labor close and drear,
But thrilled because he'd caught again
That fish he'll catch next year!

KILL RATS BY THOUSANDS; WHOLE CITY IN ODD CRUSADE

Nets, Traps, Clubs and Poison Used to Exterminate Rodents at New Orleans.

There is the biggest death to all rats campaign going forward in New Orleans that has ever been planned against any American rodents. It will persist until every one of the pests that carry bubonic plague has been exterminated.

More than 50,000 rats and mice were killed in a surprisingly short time. The price for capturing mice alive is 10 cents a head. Thousands of men and boys, black and white, have been chasing up and down the river front with nets, traps, clubs, fire, poison and almost every conceivable sort of weapon.

Only two well defined cases of the plague have been discovered so far. These were in the lodging house and are said to have come from Cuba. For four blocks around this house there has been instituted the strictest quarantine. All moving pictures and amusement galleries are closed and street cars are not allowed to stop in the restricted district. Nor are those who live in it allowed to go visiting or to attend any public assemblage.

Many of the leading business houses of New Orleans are helping the city authorities to enforce the sanitary regulations. A list of strict city ordinances has been prepared and will be enforced. They are:

Prohibition of human occupation of insanitary structures. The rat proofing of all buildings and basements. The requiring of screens for all bakeries and restaurants. Every residence and place where food is served must be provided with garbage cans and scavenger service. Prevention of the dumping of garbage within the city limits. Prohibiting the sale of vegetables grown within 1,000 feet of sewer outlets.

RALLY TO SAVE REDWOODS.

Gifford Pinchot and Others Start Fund to Create National Park.

Launching a movement to purchase a tract of 20,000 acres of the finest virgin redwood timber, opened to sale by the termination of protracted litigation, Gifford Pinchot, ex-chief of the United States forest service; Congressman Kent of California and Charles Willis Ward, both prominent timber owners, have each contributed $25,000 to a popular subscription fund.

The purpose of the movement, as set forth by C. L. Greyson in "Recreation and Outdoor World," really goes much deeper than appears in the announcement that this tract of timber is to be purchased and turned over to the national government to be maintained as a national forest and training school in forestry. It literally amounts to an organized attempt to save the commercial redwood, the oldest and most remarkable growth of merchantable timber on the globe, from disappearing from the face of the earth, as it promises to do in less than fifty years' time if the present rate of cutting continues.

LENT $519,000,000 ON FARMS.

Seventeen Life Insurance Companies Gave Aid In Forty-two of the States.

Seventeen United States life insurance companies carry in farm loans the total of more than $519,000,000. This data, the first authentic statement of the extent of loans on farms by insurance companies, was obtained by the Banker-Farmer, published by the agricultural commission of the American Bankers' association at Champaign, Ill.

This great volume of money is distributed among forty-two states and Porto Rico, the only states not listed being Delaware, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Nevada and Rhode Island. Iowa leads with $100,000,000 invested, and Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska, Illinois and Indiana are next in order.

Would Standardize Trunks.

Freak trunks, embellished with conical protuberances, slant sides and unusual tops, soon may be unpopular among the best trunk society. The American Association of General Baggage Agents will urge the interstate commerce commission to consider a plan for the standardization of trunks, both as to size and construction. The baggagemen want a limit of forty-five inches placed as the largest dimension of a trunk, with the further provision that the trunk must be square or rectangular.

FEDERAL BOARD TO INVESTIGATE

Charges of Extensive Smuggling at Port of Boston

SECRET INFORMATION GIVEN

Claimed Hundreds of Chinese Have Been Admitted Illegally—Said That Hub Is Second Only to San Francisco In Extent of Traffic—Session to Last Three Days

Boston, July 7.—Charges of extensive smuggling of Asiatics into the port of Boston via the West Indies are made by the federal commission on industrial relations which arrived in Boston to make a three days' investigation.

Chairman Franklin P. Walsh declares that San Francisco holds the record for smuggling of Chinese each year and that Boston easily comes second. The commission is in possession of secret information regarding the smuggling so substantial as to lead the members to believe that deep-laid plots have been in force for years to make the traffic profitable.

All the officials connected with the local immigration station have been summoned to give testimony at the hearings, but none of the steamship people have been called upon to give testimony. The three days that the commission will stay in Boston will be devoted exclusively to the smuggling charges. In the fall another visit will be made for the purpose of taking up the question of unemployment.

E. H. Busiek, the secretary of the commission, made all arrangements for the hearings which are to take place behind closed doors at the old aldermanic chamber, city hall. Thomas J. Eagan, sergeant at arms of the commission, has been engaged in serving summonses.

This is the first secret investigation that the commission has conducted since it began work a few months ago. Secrecy was not decided upon when the question was first taken up, but, owing to the nature of the smuggling business, it was feared that the syndicate engaged in it would profit too largely by published testimony.

The members of the commission refuse absolutely to say how long, according to their information, Boston has been made a leading centre of the trade, or to what extent Chinese have entered by this port unlawfully. All they will say relates to the fact that important disclosures have been made from secret sources and that the country is likely to be surprised at developments. It is suspected, however, that the persons interested in bringing Chinese from the West Indies are also interested in the business which has been going on for many years at the port of San Francisco.

It held a three weeks' session in Washington, then went to Philadelphia, Paterson, N. J., and New York. It was felt that necessary time could not be given to the smuggling investigation and a study of economic conditions on this visit, so the latter problems will be taken up in the fall for probably a month. These hearings will be public.

BATTLESHIP SALE IS HALTED

Hitch Is Made Over Technical Meaning of "Original Cost"

Washington, July 7.—Sale of the battleships Idaho and Mississippi to Greece has been temporarily halted because of a hitch over the technical meaning of the word "original cost" at a conference between Secretary of the Navy Daniels and Commander Psoukles, representing the Greek navy.

It was reported the Greeks tried to drive too close a bargain by insisting that certain items should not be included in the original cost which they agreed to pay. Secretary Daniels said the differences were not of a serious nature and that he expected the sale consummated in a day or two.

TWO "DYNAMITERS" PAROLED

Pennell of Springfield, Ills., convicted at Indianapolis with other labor leaders of conspiracy to transport explosives illegally, were released from the United States penitentiary on parole, having served half their three years' sentence.

Cunnane and Pennel came to the prison June 1 last year. They did not leave prison on bond, as many of the labor leaders did.

REQUEST REFUSED

Appropriation Committee Turns Down Salem Relief

Washington, July 7.—By a vote of 3 to 5 the house appropriations committee turned down the request of President Wilson for a $200,000 relief fund for Salem, Mass. The appropriation was refused because of the contention of the Democratic members of the committee that there is no precedent for such action.

Those voting against the appropriation, it was said, are the following six Democrats: Chairman Fitzgerald, Sisson, Johnson of South Carolina, Brynes, Page and White. Those voting for the appropriation, it was reported are: Republicans, Gillet, Good and Vare; Hinebaugh, Progressive, and Rauch, Democrat.

Congressman Gardner will confer with Governor Walsh regarding the matter. Following the conference he will seek Speaker Clark about getting recognition to bring up the resolution in spite of the adverse committee report.

GUARD FOR GIFFORD

Prisoner Downcast Over Failure of Jury to Agree

Albany, July 7.—Malcolm Gifford, Jr., son of a wealthy Hudson manufacturer, who is alleged to have slain Frank J. Clute, a chauffeur, near here fourteen months ago, lost the privileges he has enjoyed while a prisoner in the Albany county penitentiary.

A jury which heard Gifford's trial could not agree and was discharged last Saturday. Since then, prison officials declare, he has appeared downcast and it was believed best to guard him closely. Before the trial Gifford was allowed to receive packages from his friends without having them examined by the guards. Under the new order, nothing will be taken to the prisoner until after it has been carefully examined, and a guard has been placed so that the youth may be watched constantly.

QUICK START TEST FOR FLYING BOAT

Rises With 1800 Pounds In One Minute Fifteen Seconds

Hammondsport, N. Y., July 7.—With a load of nearly 1800 pounds, Glenn Curtiss rose from the water in the America, the Rodman Wanamaker transatlantic flying boat, in sixty seconds after leaving the dock. Planing on the surface for another hundred yards, he was free and clear in the air one minute and fifteen seconds after the start.

During the preliminary run for the first flight one of the temporary braces holding the water boards broke loose, but this impediment did not materially interfere with the flight.

BORAH CONDEMNS TREATY

Calls For Publication of Investigations by Foreign Relations Committee

Washington, July 7.—Senator Borah began a fight to force consideration of the Colombian and Nicaraguan treaties in open session. He presented a resolution also calling for the publication of all investigations by the foreign relations committee. It was put over under the rules.

Senator Borah declared that the treaty was not being negotiated "with the people of Nicaragua or the officers they have set up and elected," but with "puppets we ourselves have set up in their government."

FOUR SLAIN WITH AXE

Believed Murder Was Committed by Maniac as Victims Slept

Chicago, July 7.—A quadruple murder, committed with an axe, was reported in the suburb of Blue Island. The victims were a man and his wife, their married daughter and her child. The report of the coroner indicated that they were slain as they slept.

Whether the butchery was the work of a maniac or of a person seeking revenge was not disclosed in the first cursory investigation. It was learned that the young mother of the infant had been living away from her husband for some time and efforts to find him were begun.

Tries Tobogganing Pike's Peak

Colorado Springs, Col., July 7.—L. J. Kunzer, a Chicago railroad clerk, attempted to coast down Pike's Peak on an improvised toboggan. He was whirled over the edge of a ravine hidden in snow and dropped 100 feet to the rocks below. He is dying in a local hospital with his skull fractured.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES

Max Weyl, 77, the landscape painter, died at Washington, after an illness of four months.

Lady Jane Stone, widow of Sir Benjamin Stone, died at London, four days after the death of her husband.

A launch party near Cleveland, O., on Lake Erie found the headless body of a woman. Life savers brought it to shore.

Auto smashes caused five deaths and nearly a score of badly injured in over Sunday accidents in and around Greater New York.

President Wilson is planning a trip on the presidential yacht Mayflower later in the summer, probably in August.

FIND CLEW IN CARMAN ATTIC

Detectives Discover Box of 38-Calibre Cartridges Hidden

ARREST IS PROMISED SOON

Members of Doctor's Family Deny Ever Having Revolver In House of Size That Was Used to Kill Mrs. Bailey—Expect to Take Woman Into Custody

New York, July 7.—While the police of Freeport, L. I., were searching for a masked man whom Dr. Edwin Carman, in whose office Mrs. Louise Bailey was shot to death, accuses of having tried to assassinate him, Sheriff Pettit of Nassau county received from his detective a box of 38-calibre cartridges which was found in the attic of the home of Dr. Carman.

The finding of the cartridges led at once to a new and interesting line of inquiry for the reason that Mrs. Bailey was killed with a bullet from a 38-calibre weapon and all of the occupants of the Carman home strenuously denied ever having possessed any such revolver.

The officials were more interested in the finding of a box of cartridges than they were in the prospects for getting any substantial help from the testimony of the members of the immediate family at yesterday's inquest.

The cartridges were found only after a long search. They were concealed under a bundle in the attic, almost at the same spot where Mrs. Carman admitted that she hid the dictagraph after taking the machine from the walls of the doctor's office.

Had Mrs. Bailey been standing in the position indicated by Dr. Carman when the crime was reconstructed by the officials, and the shot had been fired from the broken window, the bullet would have taken an upward range and come out of the neck instead of the side of the heart. This physical fact, brought strikingly before the officials, led them to seek a new theory of the killing which would let the course of the bullet fit with the setting of the scene in the doctor's office.

While the inquest was going on H. P. Haff, Jr., of Lynnbrook, reported to Sheriff Pettit that a man had tried to shoot him while he was returning from an automobile ride. Haff bears a resemblance to Dr. Carman, and the story was taken as a partial confirmation of the physician's assertion that an attempt was made to assassinate him while he was out automobiling.

Sheriff Pettit has promised an arrest on the strength of evidence unearthed by him regarding the murder. He suspects a woman.

He announced that the woman would be taken into custody before the end of the week, possibly upon the conclusion of the coroner's inquest. The sheriff said further that the important evidence in his possession would not be presented at the inquest.

Dr. Carman's report of a second attempt to kill him spurred detectives to renewed activity. High power automobiles followed by a posse, were rushed to the scene of the shooting.

Other detectives were dispatched to the nearby towns of Baldwin, Rockville Centre and Lynnbrook.

MINER SHOT BY MAYOR

Butte Man Dies After Stabbing Executive Three Times

Butte, Mont., July 7.—Erick Lantala, the Finnish miner who stabbed Mayor Louis J. Duncan three times Friday night, died at a hospital from the wound in the abdomen which he received when the mayor shot him.

The attack took place in the mayor's office when the city executive refused to deport Frank Altonen, the correspondent of a Hancock, Mich., Finnish newspaper, upholding the policies of the Eastern Federation of Miners, from which the Finnish miners have seceded.

Lantala refused to make any statement to the county attorney in regard to the affair, although to the others he asserted that the mayor shot him before he stabbed the mayor.

Pottsville, Pa., July 7.—Rev. O. H. Strunk fell dead at the home of a parishioner in Schuylkill Haven when about to commence the delivery of a funeral sermon.

THERE'S MANY A SLIP

A STORY OF THE SEA

A. B. ROMNEY from Temple Bar

A hundred miles from Aden, her majesty's troop-ship "Idena" steamed along bound for home.

All day the fierce sun had streamed down with blazing beams which those on board endured, cursed, or grumbled at, according to their various dispositions.

The sensation of the day had been provided by a Lascar stoker who, rushing from the inferno of the engine-room, leaped headlong overboard, mad for one delicious plunge into coolness after enduring the torments of heat.

"Man overboard!" rang out. Engines were reversed. Ladies started from languid recumbency. A smooth-faced subaltern offered a hundred to one against "the nigger being picked up," but no one troubled to listen to him, for the water hereabouts is swarming with sharks. However, just as horror became subdued into resignation, a black speck was seen still swimming vigorously. A boat was lowered and the poor wretch was dragged back, collapsing utterly, when certain of safety.

All this, however, had happened six hours ago. The incident had been discussed commented on and capped by similar cases and long before the dinner-bell rang the customary state of boredom had again set in.

After dinner when the sun had finally disappeared, and the stars shone out of the wonderful luminosity of a southern night, some one (probably the major's wife) proposed a dance, and presently the notes of a valse rose and fell, alluring with its languorous lilt of melancholy sweetness even those who vowed they "didn't dance" to seek out partners.

Among the many who circled round were the officer in command, Captain Assheton, and his partner, Miss Phyllis Welsh.

The ladies of "The Dovecot" denied that Miss Welsh had any claims to the attractive adjective by which the men on board ship described her charming manners and face. They emphatically agreed among themselves that the only epithet she deserved was that of being "an outrageous flirt."

Whatever her character might really be tonight more men than Captain Assheton thought Miss Phyllis Welsh looked "uncommonly fetching!" Her eyelids, heavy with dark lashes, drooped as though to hide the exulting brightness of the eyes they shaded, while excitement restored the bloom which a year spent in Indian sayeties had somewhat paled.

As she glided round she breathed quicker than the heat of the evening, or the motion of the dance, accounted for. She wondered at her own sensations. To experience the delight fear rapture and doubt which had amused her to make others feel half terrified, half charmed her.

Once raising her eyes she met full a glance from Captain Assheton, and a thrill of certainty swept away the last doubt as to whether her love was returned or not.

"Let's come and sit it out," said Captain Assheton: then he added, "I want to speak to you—to tell you Phyllis——" He stopped abruptly on perceiving an orderly coming up to speak to him.

"Please, sir, the doctor says Private Robinson is seriously ill."

Captain Assheton turned apologetically to his partner. "I must leave you for a few minutes. Will you wait for me here? I shall be back in five minutes."

"Yes," assented Miss Welsh, leaning back languidly in a deck chair. "I'll wait for you here if you're not too long."

Captain Assheton and the orderly strode away. Custom had not yet steeled Assheton's heart against feeling a pang of sorrow when called to visit the poor fellows whose dying words it was his duty, when officer in command, to note and report.

When "Tommy Atkins" dies there is no useless fuss made over the event. No loving hand clasps his to strengthen him during the last struggle. No tears fall to tell him that even he, poor fellow has some one who will miss him. No! The doctor merely reports him "seriously ill." The officer on duty comes to stand by his bedside and note down whatever message "Tommy" may choose to send to mother or sweetheart waiting for him at home. Then a few hours later, if on land, "Tommy" is buried in a coffin the price of which government stops out of his pay, or, if he dies on board ship, with some shot tied to his ankles, overboard he is dropped, to sink out of sight and join that weird company of shrouded corpses which stand upright, drifting and swaying in the currents of the sea, half-way between the bottom and the surface of the ocean.

On reaching the stifling deck where the sick, the wounded and the dying lay, an orderly stopped beside the berth of Private Robinson.

Usually the officer in command knows nothing of the man whose dying words he has to report, but, as it chanced, Assheton had heard something of Private Robinson's career. He knew that Robinson was "a gentleman ranker," one of those good-looking, reckless, unlucky fellows against whom fortune seems to have a spite.

As Assheton came to the side of his berth, the dying man stared up with a curious expression of defiant despair. Above him, beside him, all round the deck lay other sufferers, listening and watching to hear what "the poor beggar" had to say.

It was hardly the place for confidences, and Assheton felt fully the embarrassment of the position, Robinson, however, had reached the time when the world recedes into the background of one's consciousness, and what has to be done must be done at once, or left forever unaccomplished.

He feebly strove to take something from under his pillow.

"Can I reach that for you?" asked Assheton gently.

"I've waited too long," said Robinson. "I intended to send this back myself, but somehow I put it off from day to day; I couldn't bear to part with it." He stopped a minute as he succeeded in lifting up an envelope, then he continued—"I want you to send this back to her and tell her that though she sent me to the devil—I loved her to the end." He added, as Assheton took the envelope containing the photo from him. "The address is written at the back of it."

"Is there nothing else I can do for you?" said Assheton huskily.

"Nothing. Thank you, sir," replied Robinson, and Assheton felt he was dismissed.

He turned away in silence and left the hospital deck.

As he again passed through the dancers the valse was hastening to its conclusion, and the laughing, talking company were dispersing in search of ices and comfortable seats.

Phyllis Welsh was still sitting where Assheton had left her.

"You weren't long," she said, smiling. "What did 'Tommy' want to tell you? Do tell me all about it."

Something in her words grated against Assheton's feelings. He sat down and replied slowly. "He asked me to return a photo to a girl, and tell her that, though she played him false, he loved her to the end."

"Oh!" cried Phyllis. "How interesting it sounds! Have you got the photo there? Do show it to me."

"You must not ask me to do that," said Assheton gravely.

But Phyllis was not accustomed to have her wishes ungratified. She leaned forward and looked up with her wonderful dark eyes glowing. "Will you refuse the first request I've ever made you?" she urged.

"Of course, if you insist——" hesitated Assheton.

"I do insist! I must see what the girl is like! Some common, vulgar creature, I suppose, that the poor fellow idealized into a piece of perfection."

"Probably," assented Assheton dryly taking the envelope from his pocket and producing the photograph.

With eager curiosity Phyllis bent over.

For the space of a second she stared, rigid with astonishment, and dismay; then exclaiming, "Give it to me! Oh! give it to me!" she tried to snatch the photograph from Assheton.

It was too late. Assheton, with blank disgust, had already recognized the beautiful likeness.

"Give it to me!" she stammered.

"Certainly," replied Assheton. "It was what I promised to do."

He dropped the photo into her hands and strode away.—A. B. Romney from Temple Bar.

UNPARALLELED CROPS ASSURED

Unusual Yield Shown the Country Over.

FARM JOURNALS QUOTED.

Their Figures Are Borne Out by Banks and Railroads—Tremendous Harvest of Wheat and Corn—Wisconsin Promises to Lead Again In Grain Production—Cheering State Reports.

On the authority of many standard farm newspapers, of officials of the granger railroads and of prominent banks crop prospects throughout the United States are unparalleled.

While the inquiry was not made particularly as to live stock conditions, it appears through market reports that prices are gratifying to producers, and other information shows that there is a marked return to cattle breeding, with renewed interest in the production of draft horses, activity in swine breeding and a big rise in the values of wool and mutton.

Biggest Yield of Wheat In Sight.

Herewith are extracts from various authentic sources:

The Breeder's Gazette.—Never has such a yield of wheat been in sight. Early thrashers' returns add to the estimates materially. Corn is a grand prospect almost universally. Oats have suffered some in the dry belt through the central section of Illinois, Indiana and Ohio, but a fine crop is in prospect in nearly every other section.

Hoard's Dairyman.—The prospects for an unusually successful year for the dairy sections of the United States were never brighter.

The Wisconsin Agriculturist.—Conditions of all farm crops are most promising. Wisconsin will lead all states again this year in the yield of grains and grasses per acre.

The Kansas Farmer.—This year's Kansas crop and live stock products will be worth nearly $300,000,000. Kansas is harvesting the largest crop of wheat in her history. The yield is conservatively estimated at 125,000,000 bushels, but early thrashing reports indicate that the government estimate of 148,000,000 will be realized. Probably 75,000,000 bushels of oats will be thrashed, also a record breaking yield. There is every reason to believe that 150,000,000 bushels of corn will be husked this fall.

The Indiana Farmer.—In spite of the general drought which obtained throughout Indiana for several weeks' investigations indicate that the wheat crop will exceed that of last year by 10,000,000 to 15,000,000 bushels.

Wallace's Farmer.—Never have crop prospects for Iowa seemed better. Wheat and oats are very heavy, and corn promises a bumper crop.

Good News From the Northwest.

The Farmer.—Crop conditions in the northwest are probably more favorable than at any time within recent years. The hay crop is of excellent yield and quality. Conditions have been ideal for the germination of corn, and the crop has never been so far advanced as at present.

The Michigan Farmer.—Crop conditions in Michigan are unusually promising. Conservative estimates indicating that the total wheat yield will be about 1,000,000 bushels greater than last year. Apples promise fully 25 per cent above last year's production.

The Pennsylvania Farmer.—Crop conditions in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland are considerably above the average for the season of the year. There is every indication of bumper crops of wheat, potatoes, late small fruits and midsummer vegetables. The apple crop is expected to exceed the ten year average by a wide margin.

Oklahoma Farm Journal.—Oklahoma is breaking all records for production of wheat and oats.

The Progressive Farmer.—Cotton and corn acreage fully up to last year. Wheat crop greatest in history of North Carolina. Cotton reports to the same paper from Alabama and Texas are also most favorable.

The Missouri Farmer.—We have just about completed the harvesting of a splendid wheat crop in Missouri. The yield will be fully up to the expectations of the last government report of 35,000,000 bushels. Apples promise more than an average yield. Peaches, while below the average in quantity, will be of splendid quality. The cotton crop promises a full average yield in southeast Missouri.

The Prairie Farmer.—The wheat crop in Illinois promises to be one of the largest crops of recent years. Corn is in splendid condition throughout the great corn belt of central Illinois.

Will Exceed First Estimates.

Exchange National Bank, Columbia, Mo.—Wheat crop will smash former estimates. Harvest over and thrashing commenced. Prospect for a bumper corn crop; never better in history of Missouri.

Rock Island Lines, Southwest.—The largest acreage and highest total yield of wheat ever raised in Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Northwestern National Bank, Minneapolis, Minn.—Reports from practically every section of our territory—which consists chiefly of Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana—all point to a bountiful harvest.

RACING FOR SLEEP.

Running Around the Bed Is Said to Induce Drowsiness.

There is nothing in the world quite as exasperating as not being able to go to sleep when you want to, and persistent insomnia is one of the greatest curses of mankind. But many people suffer from insomnia from lack of knowing many of the simple devices that have been used in the past to provoke sleep, and Sir James Sawyer in a recent work points out how valuable some of these simple means have been.

Few plans are more successful, he suggests, than that of running around the bed, particularly if the night is cold. It will be remembered that Charles Dickens, who was greatly afflicted with sleeplessness, declared that if he could lean on the bedpost in thin attire, in which he usually slept, until he got chilled clear through the return to a warm bed would produce a drowsiness that led him along the path of sleep.

William Harvey, the discoverer of the circulation of the blood, was a believer in the circulation of the bed also. He declared that for sleeplessness nothing was better than to jump out of bed suddenly, as though frightened, race around the bed with very little on until the skin was cold and the body heated and then jump back into bed. Not only was the exercise good, he believed, but also the feeling that one was being withheld from going to bed caused a desire for it, which prepared the mind for sleep when once more lying down.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WAR IS WHAT?

Some Varied Points of View That Reach Far, Far Apart.

The Enlisted Man—A chance to break the deadly routine of the parade ground with some real excitement. In isolated cases to provide opportunities for military or political advancement.

The Business Man—A period of economical depression, often followed by large failures and the consequent loss of the public's investments.

The Volunteer—A stern patriotic duty to be entered upon without inquiry as to its justice or injustice.

The Philosopher—An unintelligent and gross instrument for the settlement of the world's unavoidable quarrels.

The Historian—A logical, if somewhat regrettable, method of arranging the world's boundary lines.

The Optimist—The natural strife of humanity, tending toward the general betterment of the social cosmos.

The Pessimist—The natural strife of humanity, tending toward the general destruction of the universe.

The Mother—A long vigil in an empty room and a memory of child voices forever stilled.

The Wife—A husband gone, a home destroyed and a woman's heart broken.

The Seer—The last great barrier between civilization and the millennium.—Life.

Continental English.

The idea that English is to be the universal language of the future seems to be spreading. Certainly thousands of Europeans struggle bravely with its rules and idioms. Here is a sample of the progress that has been made in one quarter. It is taken from the advertising matter that a large continental hotel publishes in the form of an elaborate illustrated booklet:

"Its spacious dimensions, exquisite comfort, elegant fashion of its furnishing, the unobjectionable prerogatives as to the produces of its kitchen and contents of its cellars, beside the distinguished managing, which, assisted by well experienced attendants, does its utmost in always duly treating—all this united already for many years past obtained a general renown, even abroad too."

L'Aiglon's Grave Neglected.

"L'Aiglon," the son of Napoleon, was unfortunate throughout his brief life, and his very memory is now neglected. He lies buried in Vienna, and his tomb is described by the correspondent of a French contemporary as a "melancholy spectacle." Only a copper plate attests to the fact that the little king of Rome is buried there, and not a flower decks the grave. This neglect is the more vivid inasmuch as the surrounding royal tombs, including that of his mother, who was an Austrian, are richly ornamented and surrounded with a luxurious growth of flowers.—London Globe.

A Late Book.

Mrs. Hoyt, who became the possessor of a fortune by the death of an aunt, did not like to admit her ignorance of any subject.

One afternoon she had a call from a prominent society woman, and the conversation turned upon books.

"Have you read Shakespeare's works?" asked the caller.

"Oh, yes, indeed," replied Mrs. Hoyt. "all of them—that is," she added hastily, "unless he has written something very lately."—National Monthly.

Not Good at Figures.

Lady Canvasser—I've called to ask you to give us something for the O. P. O. S. The— Old Gentleman—My dear lady, I already give away one-tenth of my income. Lady Canvasser—Oh, just this year couldn't you make it an eleventh?—London Punch.

Great Luck.

"Hello, Dobson! Any luck yesterday when you were fishing?"

"Great! I was away when six bill collectors called."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Temperance and labor are the two real physicians of man.—Rousseau.

BRICK SUBSTITUTED.

Work making some alterations to the Auditorium theatre on Hancock street have been stopped by Inspector Merrill as they did not comply with the ordinance. The building is located in what is known as district one, and a wooden addition is prohibited. The alterations were being made of wood when the Inspector stopped the workmen and obliged them to get out a permit. The wooden parts already erected have been torn down and brick is being substituted. Last year there was a similar situation when Inspector Parker required an addition to be built of brick.

SALEM RELIEF COMMITTEE

Asked to Meet With Mayor Wednesday Evening

Clarence Burgin, treasurer of the Quincy Salem Relief association, acknowledges the following additional contributions to the relief fund:

Bethany Cong. church	$100.00
Kincaide Theatre concert	50.35
Channing T. Furnald	1.00
Dr. Philip Andrews	25.00
Friend	1.00
John L. Miller	10.00
Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Bent	1.00

J. S. Swingle	10.00
Christian Endeavor Wollaston	5.00

The executive committee of the Quincy Womens club met this morning at the clubhouse to take action relative to the appeal for Salem. Miss Purchase of the Quincy Associated Charities has visited Salem and reported on the needs both now and in the future. She said they were urgent. Although the Quincy club has been asked to forward funds to the State Federation of Womens Clubs, they propose to remain loyal to Quincy, and not only voted to forward Mayor Miller $50, but to send Miss Purchase to Salem for a week, paying her expenses.

The committee considered having a tag day in Quincy. While satisfied it would be a good thing, the club members felt that they could not undertake it now. Miss Purchase should make a valuable assistant at Salem as she was at work at Chelsea after the fire, and is experienced in that line of work.

Those who helped to make the recent "Trip Around the World" a success will be pleased to learn that some of the money is going to Salem relief.

Mayor John L. Miller who is anxious to have the Quincy contribution to the Salem relief fund as large as that of other cities of 30,000 people, has asked the members of the Quincy committee to meet in his office Wednesday evening to discuss ways and means to increase the sum from the paltry $300 now on hand to respectable figures.

Tag day is meeting with such success in other cities that it is possible that one will be held here Saturday, the money secured from the sale of tags to be placed in metal banks which have been offered by C. E. Sherman.

Alfred N. LaBrecque, who went to Salem on Monday as the personal representative of Mayor Miller, reports that the city is badly in needs of funds Former Mayor Little who acted in the absence of Mayor Hurley, said that contributions were coming from distant points, and while there Mr. LaBrecque witnessed the receipt of $100 from a small town in New Brunswick.

GRANITE MEN INTERESTED

The manufacturing, granite and teaming interest of this city await with interest the finding in the suits of Fletcher vs Milne and Milne vs Fletcher, which may be determined after many years of doubt whether or not a man in the teaming business is a common carrier, and therefore liable for goods damaged in shipment.

The suit of Calvin G. Fletcher to recover an accounting for carrying monuments from the granite yard of Andrew Milne, Jr., in South Quincy was entered several weeks ago. Cross action was filed by Mr. Milne who in an action of tort seeks to recover on a monument alleged to have been damaged in shipment. The amounts are about equal.

Judge Avery heard the cases in the district court last week and took the case under advisement. Arthur L. Thomas, counsel for Mr. Fletcher maintains that a teamster is not a common carrier, and therefore not liable unless negligence is proven. He argues that this has not been done. J. J. McAnarney, counsel for Mr. Milne states Mr. Fletcher is a common carrier and was negligent.

Counsel for both men consulted decisions covering a period of ten years and have been unable to find the question determined. It has been the custom in this city for years in most cases, for the granite dealer to assume the cost of stones damaged in shipment.

If Judge Avery decides that a teamster is a common carrier a number of suits mal be entered.

MEXICO NOW AT CRITICAL POINT

Rivals Facing a Decisive Test of Strength.

IS INTERVENTION NEARER?

Observers of Situation Look For Early Developments—Significance Attached to Villa's Halt on March to Mexico City—Indications Are That He Has His Own Junta In Washington.

It is generally admitted here, says a Washington dispatch to the New York Tribune, that the whole Mexican situation, especially in rebel territory, is critical. Commenting on advices to the effect that General Villa had returned from the recently captured town of Zacatecas to Torreon and had taken with him the main body of his troops, the Tribune says that some secret strategical reason is responsible for this withdrawal from the advance on Mexico City. It is declared by his friends that Villa has no intention of turning against Carranza militantly or otherwise. In fact, Villa is said to have telegraphed one of his agents in Washington that he would take no action against Carranza.

Despite the protestations of Constitutionalist agents, it is well known that a most serious situation exists in northern Mexico and that wrapped up in it is the future of the revolutionary movement.

Test of Strength Coming.

While Villa's agents declare that he will not take aggressive action against Carranza, it is admitted that the breach between the two has widened and that the time is rapidly approaching when there must be a test of strength.

In the war department the situation is being watched with keenest interest. Army officers believe that the American army is nearer to active service in Mexico than at any time in several months. Most officers believe that intervention is inevitable, no matter how much the administration may try to avoid it.

An interesting dispatch to the New York Sun from El Paso, Tex., says:

"The tense situation in the Constitutionalist ranks is reflected by the attitude of the representatives of Carranza and Villa at this point.

"While both sides declare for publication that the relations between the supreme chief and his fighting general are strained, they insist that they have not reached the point where there will be a decision by arms.

"Villa came up to Torreon only to go to Parral to attend the military funeral of General Trinidad Rodriguez, who was killed at Zacatecas, say his agents Villa has come north to confer with Carranza's representatives at Torreon say the other men, and it will all be smoothed down by the elimination of General Felipe Angeles.

"It is noted, however, that Lazaro de la Garza and A. Farias, Villa's commercial agents, have begun to talk to Washington over a leased telegraph wire as if he had started an independent junta of his own at the capital They are sending and receiving messages for hours at a time, but they will not say with whom they talk.

"The explanation of the Carranzistas is that Villa has organized a lobby at Washington in order to have the embargo on arms lifted and that he is not supplanting the official junta of the Constitutionalists."

NATURAL HISTORY RESEARCH.

American Museum Sends Out Six Expeditions on Exploring Tours.

The American Museum of Natural History will have six expeditions at work in the western hemisphere this summer. This does not includes the Crocker Land expedition in the far north or the work now being done in Central America by Dr. Herbert J Spinden. The expeditions and their leaders follow:

Alanson Skinner, study of the Kansas and Iowa Indians in Oklahoma as well as of various eastern Sioux tribes

Dr. Robert H. Lowie, work among the Shoshones and Utes in Idaho and Nevada and a continuation of his work among the Crow Indians.

Roy W. Miner, a biological survey of marine life in Porto Rico in connection with the government of Porto Rico, the New York Academy of Sciences and the museum.

Barnum Brown, exploration in the Red Deer river region in Alberta, Canada, for dinosauria.

Nels C. Nelson, archaeological work in the Gallatin valley region of Arizona.

Lord William Percy, son of the Duke of Northumberland, a special study of ducks, with Point Barrow, Alaska, as the base of operations.

Streams Full of Trout In Nine Years.

Plans to restock all trout streams and lakes of the national forests of Colorado, Wyoming and South Dakota within nine years are well under way The bureau of fisheries has promised to furnish the necessary fish fry for distribution to the various forests. Approximately 20,000,000 trout fry of the brook, rainbow and black spotted varieties will be needed. Of this number the bureau of fisheries is prepared to supply something over 4,500,000 this year.

SHOWER FOR MISS READ

Is Surprised at the Home of Mrs. Allan

Miss Maude E. Read of Squantum street was pleasantly surprised Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Coyle Allan's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harding of Botolph street. Miss Read came down to call on Mrs. Allan before she returned to her home in Worcester, and on opening the door leading into the parlor she was certainly surprised to find several girl friends gathered there.

After Miss Read had recovered from her suprise, games were enjoyed in which souvenirs were awarded to Miss Helen Goodell, Miss Julia Barker, Miss Frances Duggan and Miss Mabel Lovejoy.

The guests were then led into the dining room by Miss Read and each girl found her place at the table. The dining room was artistically decorated with streamers of yellow and white crope paper, festooned from the chandelier to the corner of the table, and from the chandelier to the walls of the room. Hanging from the chandelier to the center of the table was a large white wedding bell tied with yellow ribbon. At each cover was a name card each bearing yellow flowers to carry out the color scheme In front of Miss Read's plate was a bride.

A very fine luncheon was served by the hostess after which Miss eRad was asked to look under the table. She looked and to her surprise saw a large basket loaded with useful utensils. She was handed the ribbons hanging from the bell and on pulling these several pieces fell to the table

Miss Read received several pieces of linen, cut glass, a handsome boudoir cap, and various kitchen utensils consisting of irons, aluminum ware, cream whipper, toaster, potato masher, and cookie cutters of various sizes and shapes. She also received a handsome picture.

After Miss Read had opened each bundle the party adjourned to the parlor and enjoyed popular music for a short time.

Those present were the Misses Julia Barber, Mabel Lovejoy, Frances Duggan, Catherine Gay, Helen Goodell Margaret Read, Maude Read, Hazel Davison, Cora Harding, and Ada Harding. Also Mrs. Harry Read, Mrs. Robert Harding, Mrs. Sanford York and Mrs. Coyle Allan.

PRISONERS BREAK JAIL

Two prisoners, confined in the lockup at North Weymouth on Monday afternoon broke jail a short time after they were imprisoned, and although the police made a thorough search of the town and received the assistance of other departments the men are still at large.

The men when arrested at two o'clock on charges of drunkenness gave their names as George G. Bridges and James J. Laverty, both employees of the Metropolitan Coal Co., of Boston. They willingly accompanied the officer who took them into custody and cheerfully entered the cells which were locked behind them.

During the past few days patrolman George Nash has been painting the interior of the station and previous to varnishing the windows he removed a curtain and stood it in the corner, near the cells.

One prisoner reached his arm through the grating, got the curtain, and succeeded in knocking a poker off a nail in rear of the stove, about six feet away. He then pulled the poker within reach and used it in smashing the lock on the cell. The other prisoner was soon released in the same manner and both made a hasty exit in broad daylight.

Their absence was discovered at six o'clock by special officer John Carter who lives opposite the lockup. He made a report to headquarters, All that was left for the police officials on their arrival was the bent poker and empty cells. An alarm was sent out immediately and the homes of the men in Boston visited, but up to noon today both had eluded capture. Additional charges of being fugitives from justice will be lodged against the men when they are again arrested.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Some rain last night.

The many friends of Mrs. Frank Wade, of Read park, will be sorry to learn that she is ill at her home.

Quincy was fortunate in having pleasant weather on the Fourth of July in view of the stormy weather before and since.

How many out-of-town friends have you invited to witness the launching of the battleship Nevada at Quincy on Saturday afternoon at 1.30?

Herman Grages of 327 Washington street died at his home on Monday morning after a short illness. He leaves a family.

Congratulations are being extended to Mr. and Mrs. Douglass B. Evans, nee M. Beatrice Lowe, of 495 Washington street, a son being born to them on July fourth.

Walter Main, John Copeland, William Michael and Robert Booth all of South Quincy are at Deer Isle, Maine, where they will enjoy camping for two weeks.

Four of the standing committees of the City Council met Monday evening before the meeting. They were the Finance, Streets, Licenses, and Health and Poor.

Commissioner Brown advertises today for bids for building the four-room addition to the Atherton Hough school building at Houghs Neck. Bids will be received up to 10 o'clock July 21.

The only piece of fire apparatus that didn't turn a wheel during the holiday season was the Quincy Point. The apparatus has not laid a foot of hose in the past 24 days, an unusual record.

Miss Clauda Wilson of Bigelow street, Miss Laurice Penniman of Goffe street and Miss Dorothy Damon of Marshfield left this morning for North Cornville, Me., where they will spend the summer at Miss Wilson's summer home.

Registering at Hotel Whittier, Hampton Beach, N. H., over the Fourth and Sunday were Mrs. J. S. Pierce and daughter Muriel, Miss Marion White and William Lynch. They travelled by auto covering over 200 miles. They go from Hampton to York Harbor, Maine.

It was announced that Fred E. Tupper would be commander of the fifth division in Quincy's Fourth of July parade, and he got the credit, but in reality the dignity of the position was well maintained by C. Abbott Johnson, son of Charles H. Johnson, who is a member of the Fifth regiment M. V. M.

Nearly every other building along Sea street from the junction of Manet avenue to the Quincy Yacht club house is a store of some kind. The City Council as usual have issued a large number of Sunday fruit and common victuallers licenses in this section. The wonder is how they all get a living.

One of the children who made everybody happy on the Fourth, was Master Louis James Walters, Jr., of Crescent street, West Quincy. The little three year old, distributed hundreds of sparklers to the children of the neighborhood, and it was a pretty spectacle to see the young folks dancing about the Walter's lawn, and shaking the sparklers.

Councilman Charles L. Gilliatt and family of Elm avenue are to leave in a few days for a trip through Nova Scotia. He has not just made up his mind where they will stop, but says that it will be at the first place that strikes his fancy. He will probably close his factory at Norfolk Downs during the next two months as business in his particular line is quiet at this season of the year.

HULL ELOPEMENT CASE.

It is possible that the case of Louis Eisman of Hull, who eloped with Miss Fern Hallian to Maine, and was apprehended, may come into the Quincy court which has jurisdiction over the town of Cohasset.

Chief of Police Reynolds of Hull held a conference on Monday with Judge Avery. He gave out no information but it is thought they discussed the abduction of Fern Hallian by Louis Eisman. Miss Hallian, accompanied by another girl, was in an auto outside the building.

The Quincy Women's Club asks for donations of clothing which may be left at the Clubhouse, Goffe Street. Club women will sort out garments and forward promptly.

PUBLIC LAUNCHING

of her predecessors and involves a new departure for the United States Navy in the arrangement of the main battery of 14-inch guns. This battery is arranged in four turrets, two turrets, having two guns each and two turrets, No. 1 and No. 4 carrying three guns each. This arrangement will give a concentration of fire superior to that obtainable from the ten 14-inch guns of the New York and Texas, which are mounted in five two-gun turrets.

The new 14-inch 45-caliber gun is a far more powerful weapon than the 45-caliber 12-inch gun mounted on the Delaware and North Dakota. The muzzle energy of the 12-inch gun is about 49,000 foot tons, whereas, that of the 14-inch gun is about 60,000 foot tons. Moreover, its shell weighs 1400 pounds as compared with the 870-pound weight of the 12-inch, carries a much larger bursting charge of high explosives, and, therefore, will be proportionally more destructive.

GREAT ON DEFENSIVE.

The principal interest in this new ship lies in its great defensive power; not only will it carry a much greater weight of armor than has been carried or is to be carried by any ships built or building, but the armor will be disposed to greater advantage.

The belt armor, or that which protects the waterline, will be 17 1-2 feet wide and at mean draft will extend from 9 feet above to 8 feet 6 inches below the water. It will be 13 1-2 inches thick and will extend for a length of 400 feet along each side.

There will be two protective decks, the lower one 1 1-2 inches thick on the flat and 2 inches on the slope. The gun deck, which is really an upper protective deck, will be 3 inches thick, these two decks providing an excellent protection against plunging fire and also against fragments of shells which might be exploded in passing through the ship's plating in wake of the gun deck.

The armor of the barbette will be 13 inches thick and the armor of the two gun turrets will be 16 inches thick on the face and 18 inches thick on the three gun turrets, the sides being 9 inches and 10 inches thick, while the roof is 5 inches thick.

There will be but one smokestack, which will be protected by armor 13 inches in thickness, which will prevent perforation of the stack during battle and consequent loss in steaming power, which was particularly fatal to the Russians in the battle of the Tsushima

QUINCY FUND NOW OVER $400

Committee Hope to Increase Total for Salem Relief to $1000 Inside of a Week

Issue an Appeal Printed Today in the Quincy Daily Ledger

Including the $50 voted by the Quincy Women's Club the Quincy fund for the relief of the Salem fire sufferers now amounts to over $400. The Quincy committee feels however that this total is not half what it should be, and today for the first time issues a formal appeal to the people of the city in the Daily Ledger.

Nearly one-fourth of the $400 has been contributed by Bethany Congregational church, and over $50 was profit from the benefit concert. The First Presbyterian church forwarded $28, the Wollaston Congregational $12 and the Syrian Christian Union $10.

The largest individual contributor was Dr. Philip Andrews, but Mayor Miller and A. S. Swingle were a close second.

Quincy men who are in business in Boston have contributed generously to the Boston fund, and Quincy societies have contributed directly to their State organizations.

Clarence Burgin, the treasurer of the Quincy fund acknowledges these contributions to date, being the complete list of all who have subscribed:

BIRTHDAY PARTY.

Twenty-six little friends of Harry Falvey gathered on Monday, at his home 175 Willard street and helped him celebrate his eighth birthday. It was a jolly crowd of "kiddies" and they enjoyed every minute of the time with games and dances. Refreshments were served under the grape vine arbor and at eight o'clock all left for home after one of the best times of their little lives. Little Harry was surprised with many handsome presents.

Mrs. T. C. Hewson and her two granddaughters, Marion and Madeline, left today for a weeks stay at Planting Island, Scituate.

AN APPEAL FOR SALEM

QUINCY FUND GROWING

The calamity which has overtaken the city of Salem in the disastrous fire of Thursday, June 25, presents grave and pressing problems for relief.

Briefly, and as far as this committee has been able to ascertain the facts, there are between 15,000 and 20,000 people, mostly wage-earners, representing probably between 3000 and 4000 families, who have been rendered homeless and destitute.

In addition to this, and of far greater importance, is the fact that the great majority are without employment, due to the destruction of such industries as the cotton mills and many important factories which provided their employment. The problem of rehabilitation will, of necessity, be a long and expensive one.

The committee representing the state and local relief committee appointed by the Governor and city authorities, makes this general appeal for money for the sufferers, believing, after careful investigation, that the extent of the disaster justifies this action. Quincy contributions may be sent to Clarence Burgin, treasurer of the Quincy fund.

NO PARTY ENROLLMENT

Some New in Caucus Ballots This Year

Something new in caucuses will go into effect this year. A bill adopted on the last day of the Legislature provides in brief that there shall be no party enrollment for political primaries; that the names of all the candidates to be voted for at the primary shall be printed on one ballot, all the Democrats in one column, all the Republicans in another, all the Progressives in another, etc., a voter can mark the names of candidates in one column only and if he marks names in more than one column his ballot will be thrown out.

Such a bill allows Republicans to take a hand in nominating Democratic candidates, and Democrats to nominate Republican candidates at any city or state caucus, flopping about at pleasure, without regard whether they intend to support the candidates of that party on election day.

NEW BLOCK OF FIVE STORES

To Be Erected Corner Hancock and School Streets

The Webb Realty Co., consisting of five of the best known business men of this city, meet tonight to take the final steps to incorporate and to complete the transfer of the property at Hancock and School street and Hancock court from the heirs of John Cashman to the corporation.

The property, now known as the Walsh corner, is a fine stretch of land having a frontage on School street of over 200 feet, a business block and the house occupied by Representative Michael T. Sullivan.

The parties at interest, Dennis J. Crowley, Edward D. Barrett, John and Richard Walsh and William Corcoran are to erect a block of five stores, with possibly a second story with apartments.

The Sullivan house will be moved and will front on Hancock court and an unoccupied barn will probably be turned into a small house.

The 1912 valuation book of the Assessors gives the value of this propty as follows:

Block,	$3,700
House,	4,500
Barn,	800
27,430 feet land,	15,000
Total value	24,000

It is said that leases of two of the stores to be erected are already in effect. The purchase of the property by the company had been under consideration but a few days when it was purchased.

Supt. Barbour Declines Offer From New Jersey

Superintendent of Schools Albert L. Barbour and family are at Georgetown, Me., for the summer months. It became known today that last week Supt. Barbour was offered the superintendency of schools in a New Jersey city at a much larger salary than he was receiving in Quincy. The School Committee got word of what was going on and a conference followed, as a result of which it is announced that Mr. Barbour will remain in Quincy,

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER.

A HITCH OVER THE PRICE

Massachusetts Fields School Lot May Not Be Enlarged

The chances are that the children of the Massachusetts Fields school will have to wait some time yet before they have a playground of their own. A year ago the land adjoining could have been purchased for a certain sum, but the order failed to pass that year. Early this year an order was introduced in the City Council to purchase the land adjoining the school building, and the order passed some months ago.

For some reason, however, the land has not been purchased, and now it is said that the city has waited too long and that the land cannot be purchased for the price named in the order.

This means that if the city still desires the land that the City Council will have to appropriate an additional sum. Although the money to purchase the land has been appropriated it has not been borrowed by the City Treasurer and the chances are that it will not until there is an agreement.

FOURTH OF JULY PRIZES READY

The Fourth of July association is to meet Thursday evening, when it is expected the association will balance its books for this year's celebration. There have been several who were awarded prizes for features in the parade who have not as yet claimed their prizes. All those who have not as yet received their prize are requested to visit the rooms of the Board of Trade on Thursday evening If it is impossible to visit the rooms on this evening they are requested to communicate with James H. Elcock, chairman of the committee at his home 326 Copeland street.

NEW INDUSTRY ON GRANITE STREET

A new industry for the city is the Quincy Counter Company which has leased the first floor of the factory on Granite street near the railroad. Machinery is being installed and the firm expects to supply the trade throughout New England. The promoters are Clarence E. Fisher, Thomas L. Healey and Harold Fisher. All have had experience with the Douglas company at Brockton. Clarence Fisher was also for 20 years with the Phinney Counter Company of Stoughton. Mr. Healey formerly resided in Quincy and is familiar with shoe manufacturing having been at Brockton 16 years. All three gentlemen will reside in Quincy and will be active in manufacturing. They hope some day to lease the entire building.

OPEN APPEAL FROM MAYOR MILLER

Thinks Quincy Should Raise $1500 for the Relief of Salem Suffers

Makes Public a Letter from Mayor Hurley

Mayor Miller has today forwarded to the Daily Ledger the following appeal for fire stricken Salem:

Citizens of Quincy:

Do you realize that our sister city, just on the other side of Boston harbor is lying prostrate in ashes while we rest in our comfortable homes, and have our several employments? The dread foe, fire came upon Salem when they did not expect it. Have you any assurance that a like disaster will not befall Quincy.

Not only have Salem's houses been wiped out, but her factories and industries. Her people are deprived of both, and they must of necessity be supported now. If our people will each put their shoulders to the wheel, if every one in nine could give as much as twenty-five cents, we would have $900, and add to this those who could give more, and I have no doubt that Quincy could raise $1500.

Three years ago, a small town in New Brunswick was wiped out by fire. Then New England came to the rescue with her generosity and helped them very materially. Now that small town was one of the first to contribute $1,000 to the relief of Salem.

I fear our people do not realize the magnitude of the disaster, or our fellow citizens would take hold of this as one person and not hold back.

There will be a meeting in City Hall tonight at 7.45 to which all are invited. We have the assurance of many representatives from the different Women's Clubs, and this should be an incentive to work for one object, and that, the relief of the sufferers of Salem.

Attached is a copy of a letter received this morning from Mayor Hurley, which speaks for itself.

Yours truly,
John L. Miller, Mayor.

The Mayor also makes public a letter from Mayor Hurley of Salem:

Salem, July 7, 1914.

Hon. John L. Miller, Mayor of Quincy, Massachusetts.

My dear Mr. Mayor:—Your Mr. Alfred N. LaBreeque called upon me on July 6th, and I explained to him in detail the arrangements we have made for the tag day system. It is very kind of you to remember us in our hour of need, but we certainly are badly in need of money at the present time. I thank you in behalf of the citizens of this stricken city for the benefit you had in the theaters and the collections taken in the church. This money will, in a large measure, alleviate the suffering of many people.

Thanking you again for your kind interest, I am yours very truly,

(Signed) John F. Hurley, Mayor

ABRIDGING THE LAW'S DELAYS.

When the Supreme Court of the United States adjourned for July and August it left but fourteen cases undecided. It gave out 591 judgments since last fall. There has been a popular impression that the court was slow, but this record indicates that the movement for abridging the law's delays is bearing fruit.

To the lawyer, legal delays are part of the day's work. The fact that a client's case has gone over to another court term does not bother him. He may rather rejoice at the postponement, as giving him more chance to collect winning evidence. Also it gives the other side a chance to perfect their game.

To the business man, however, litigation is a most harassing interruption. The losses are not measured simply in adverse judgments and fees of lawyers and sheriffs. Equally serious are the worry and uncertainty of the thing.

Once the business man crosses the threshold of the court, he feels ground through a machine whose forces he can not calculate, nor can he accelerate its progress. The only way to affect it is to throw sand into the cogs and cause a stoppage. A day in court worries the average merchant or manufacturer more than weeks of ordinary business grind.

The business man simply can't understand why court work needs to drag along so interminably. If the spirit of the business world were to prevail, no case would remain finally unjudged a year.

One of the causes of depressed business is no doubt the long time it is taking to clean up the Sherman anti-trust law cases now pending in the various courts. It is good news that the Supreme Court, perhaps feeling the criticism of the law's delays proceeding from the best legal authorities as well as from the business world, is making a serious effort to expedite business.

PREVALENCE OF BLACKMAIL.

When a man of wealth receives a letter ordering him to deposit $5,000 under a certain stone, else his house will be burned or he will be shot, he naturally feels disturbed. Formerly in a good many cases, he gave up the money. This stale trick has been exposed so often, that now he knows that quite likely it is the work of boys even though the dirty threatening scrawl, with its skull and cross-bones many have an ugly look.

Most cases of this kind are nowadays put into the hands of the police. In this way, the recent plot to extort $10,000 from the Cunard Steamship Company, and $35,000 from the New Haven railroad, was promptly uncovered.

But there are still plenty of human reptiles, who in this way live in comfort and idleness by preying on the industrious. In the larger cities, every Italian who accumulates a little nest-egg from early and late toil at his fruit stand, may be the victim of the slimy lizards of the Mafia and Camorra.

A gang of horse poisoners flourishes in all the large cities, the existence of which is a revelation of the cowardice of business men. These vultures in New York City alone collect $100 a month each from 500 stable keepers. The horsemen feel it is cheaper and safer to pay, for 500 horses belonging to non-contributors flop in the streets annually from stealthy doses of arsenic.

Political blackmail still flourishes in half the state legislatures and city councils. Many candidates seek office simply to introduce strike legislation. Like the stable owners of the big cities public service corporations think it is cheaper and safer to pay than come out in the open and fight. But every time they yield they help fasten upon our civic life a political Black Hand far more dangerous than anything imported from Sicily.

AFTER SESSION OF 183 DAYS

Bay State General Court of 1914 Is Prorogued

A GREAT LAST-DAY HUSTLE

Seven Hundred Eighty-Five Acts and One Hundred Sixty Resolves Placed on Statute Books—All the Governor's Vetoes Sustained—State Tax Will Be $8,750,000

Boston, July 8.—The great and general court of 1914 was prorogued last night, after being in session 183 days and establishing a record for longevity which has been exceeded only three times in the history of the state.

The longest meetings, those in 1883 and 1911, extended over a period of 206 days each. In 1909 the legislature met for 196 days.

After an all-day session, which started at 10:30 in the morning and was a combination of serious business mingled with the vaudeville of the annual mock session, hardly more than a quorum joined in the final chorus of Auld Lang Syne shortly before midnight.

Secretary of State Donahue proclaimed the close of the session in the senate at 11:41 p. m. and a few minutes later, at 11:46 p. m., made a similar announcement in the house.

In his statement the secretary stated that 785 new acts and 160 new resolves had been placed on the statute books as a result of the year's work, as against 841 acts and 133 resolves last year.

In addition the governor vetoed eight bills and six resolves which had been enacted in both branches and the vetoes were sustained in every instance. Eleven bills became law without the governor's signature.

Among the important measures enacted at this session of the legislature were the following:

Allowing the New Haven railroad to dispose of its control of the Boston and Maine vested in the Boston Railroad Holding company.

Increasing the benefits to workingmen under the workingmen's compensation act.

Further limiting the issue of injunctions in labor disputes.

Better prevention of fires in the metropolitan district.

Abolishing party enrollment.

Reorganizing the Boston port directors.

Further protecting the United States flag from use for advertising purposes.

Further prohibiting and defining corrupt practices at elections.

Providing for an amendment of the constitution to allow woman suffrage.

Supervision of hyrdo-electric companies by the gas and electric light commission.

State tax of 1914 $8,750,000, as against $8,000,000 last year.

Two recess committees appointed to report to next general court.

Three new city charters enacted.

Fire hazard bill wins after hard battle.

City of Boston to get pumping station at Fort Point channel.

Wellington bridge bill rushed through, Elevated to pay big costs.

Among important measures defeated were the following:

To amend the constitution so as to provide for the initiative and referendum.

To provide for the calling of a constitutional convention.

The "Ellis" milk bill.

To amend the constitution so as to prohibit appropriations of public money for sectarian institutions.

To provide for the redistribution of the corporate franchise tax.

To merge the Boston Elevated, Bay State and "Narrow Gauge" transportation systems.

To provide for the completion of the west wing extension to the state house.

The "Blue Sky" law.

To allow the lease of the Hampden railroad by the Boston and Maine.

To transfer the control of the telephone and telegraph companies from the public service commission to the board of gas and electric light commissioners.

Governor's bill to have corporations pay salaries of public service commissioners defeated.

The usual last-day rush was so much greater than usual that the mock session and the formal presentations to the officers and attaches of the two branches had to be cut short, the best part of the mock exercises coming in the evening.

The large number of rollcalls, many on unimportant matters, is given as one of the reasons for the long session this year. The total in the house and senate is 323, as compared with 247 last year. The number in the house—198—establishes a record for that branch, but that in the senate—125—has been exceeded in other years.

New York Authorities Checkmate the Plans of Anarchists

New York, July 8.—The attention of the entire city administration was given over to the finding of some way to prevent the public funeral planned for Arthur Caron, Charles Berg and Carl Hanson, anarchists and "free speech" demonstrators, killed in the explosion which wrecked a Lexington avenue tenement.

Alexander Berkman, anarchist leader, abandoned his plans for a public funeral when the board of health refused to allow the bodies to remain unburied later than today.

HUSTIS WILL HEAD BOSTON AND MAINE

Entrusted With Task of Rehabilitating Railroad

Boston, July 8.—James H. Hustis, who has served since last October as president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, was elected president of the Boston and Maine and will take up his duties on Aug. 15, as which time Hustis will sever his connection with the New Haven.

It is understood that Chairman Elliott, who is now taking a three weeks' vacation, will then be elected president of the New Haven and will also continue to serve as chairman of the board of directors.

AFTER THIRTY-FOUR YEARS

Blackfoot Indian Serving Life Sentence Pardoned by President

Washington, July 8.—After thirty-four years behind the bars under life sentence for murder Spopee, a Blackfoot Indian, was unconditionally pardoned by President Wilson. He will be released at once from the federal hospital for the insane in Washington to return to his daughter at Browning, Mont., whom he has not seen since she was a baby.

A party of Blackfoot sightseeing in Washington happened upon Spopee, grown gray with his long imprisonment. They established his tribal identity by an Indian song, and one of the interpreters recognized in Spopee the hero of an old legend, who had disappeared a score of years ago into some white man's jail. Blackfoot mothers have been singing their children to sleep with a song about him ever since.

Officials of the Indian office, advised of the discovery, began an investigation which resulted in his pardon.

Spopee was charged with the murder of a white man near the Canadian boundary, north of the Montana line.

Fire Routs Hotel Guests

Rockland, Me., July 8.—Seventy-five scantily clad guests made hurried exit from the Thorndike hotel when aroused by the night clerk, who discovered a fire in a store in the basement of the hotel block. The fire was thought to have been set by an incendiary.

SONS OF VETERANS TO HELP SALEM

When the Sons of Veterans Club of Massachusetts selected the date for their annual picnic and field day at New Downer Landing, the date of the launching of the Battleship "Nevada" had not been selected. Fortunately for them, and as it will prove for the unfortunates who lost everything in the great Salem fire, the Fore River Shipbuilding Corp., made selection of the same day, Saturday July 11, for the launching directly across the river from the picnic grounds.

The Sons of Veterans Club of Massachusetts is always doing something for the needy and suffering. They will donate a good part of the profits from their picnic to the relief of the Veterans of the Grand Army and their families who lost their homes and effects in the Salem fire.

An excellent view of the launching of the Dreadnaught "Nevada" can be obtained at the picnic grounds, so those attending will have the rare opportunity of seeing a monster battleship take its first plunge into its watery cradle.

Besides this chief attraction, many others are offered, such as sports and dancing.

DAUGHTERS OF VIKING INSTALL

In the presence of the officers of Linea circle and members of Avonia circle of Weymouth, Circle Daughters of the Viking, Companions to Foresters of America, held an installation and initiation in Protection hall Tuesday evening.

The installation was by Deputy Grand Officer Mrs. Hannah Davis, assisted by Chief Companion Mrs. J. Johnson of Linea circle. Mrs. Ida Ericson was installed as chief companion for the second term.

The ceremonies concluded, the large crowd present adjourned to Electa hall where dancing was enjoyed until midnight and refreshments served. The committee was Mrs. Carl Bonnivier and Mrs. Hilda Pierson.

ADVANCE IN COAL.

The price of anthracite coal of all grades advanced 25 cents a ton in Boston on Tuesday and another advance of 25 is due before Sept. 1. This is in accordance with the custom of the New England coal dealers association to decrease the price fifty cents a ton in April and to increase it 25 cents in July and 25 cents in September. Wise people have already placed orders to have their coal bins filled with the winter's supply.

AUGUST A SIZZLER.

Quincy in common with other New England cities has been experiencing anything but seasonable weather this summer. There have been a few hot and uncomfortable days during the past two months but most of the days have been cool, especially the evenings which have been rather too cool for one to enjoy piazzas. Tuesday it is reported was the coldest July 7, in seven years. According to one prediction the month of July is to be cool as a rule and August is to be a sizzler.

EMPLOYERS AND EMPLOYEES

Both Appreciate Services of Senator Langelier

Employers associations and Employees unions seem to appreciate the services of the Quincy senator at the State House. One day recently Senator Langelier received these two letters, entirely unsolicited:

Employers' Association of Massachusetts.
88 Broad Street, Boston.
July 1, 1914.

Hon. Louis F. R. Langelier, State House, Boston, Mass.

My dear Senator:—As the session of the legislature is about to close for this year, I desire on behalf of the members of the Employers' Association of Massachusetts, and for myself personally, to thank you heartily for the work which the records disclose as relates to the stand taken by you against great odds when bills were before you for consideration which were detrimental to the best interests of manufacturers and other employers of labor.

It is a great pity that there could not have been more members of the legislature and particularly of the Senate that had the same spirit that you have manifested in all these matters, and we sincerely hope that the people whom you represent will be wise enough not only to return you next year, but to send enough colleagues of the same character to help aid and assist you and others in the work of redeeming or trying to redeem this Commonwealth from the thraldom that it is now in.

Again thanking you, I have the honor to be yours very respectfully,

(Signed) Albion P. Pease,
Secretary.

Trusting to meet you again either as Senator or in a higher place in our civic life, I am yours sincerely,

RECITAL AT BRAINTREE.

The pupils of Miss Mary Dyer gave a pleasing recital in the beautiful music room of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Stedman, Cedar street, Tuesday, afternoon. The pupils taking part were Rebecca Gallagher, Mary Johnson, Ruth Torrey, Dorothy Avery, Frederic Johnson and Graham Jones. During the recital Miss S. Pauline Bergeron of East Braintree, teacher of violin, gave a number of violin selections with unusual skill and quality of tone. Mrs. Stedman brought forth wonderful music from the grand organ. Dr. Gallagher expressed the appreciation of the audience for the afternoon's music and urged Miss Dyer to favor the company with a selection. Although this was unexpected Miss Dyer responded brilliantly.

Here Is Good News for Stomach Victims

Some very remarkable results are being obtained by treating stomach, liver and intestinal troubles with pure vegetable oils, which exert a cleansing, soothing and purifying action upon the lower bowels, removing the obstructions of poisonous fecal matter and gases and preventing their absorption by the blood. This done, the food is allowed free passage from the stomach, fermentation ceases and stomach troubles quickly disappear.

George H. Mayr, for twenty years a leading Chicago druggist, cured himself and many of his friends of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles of years' standing by this treatment, and so successful was the remedy he devised that it has since been placed in the hands of druggists all over the country, who have sold thousands of bottles.

Though absolutely harmless, the effect of the medicine is sufficient to convince any one of its remarkable effectiveness, and within 24 hours the sufferer feels like a new person. Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy is now sold here by Clyde T. Cox and druggists everywhere.

Where Is the Father Who Is Not Interested In the Morals of His Child?

PARENTS, set your children a good example by GOING TO CHURCH SUNDAY. The man of the home who bravely declares that the churches are for women folk as he lies in bed or arranges to spend the day in some ungodly way not only injures himself, but his idle, boastful words are heard by the little boy or girl at home. Children are impressionable, and they quickly accept the father's viewpoint.

WHERE IS THE FATHER WHO IS NOT INTERESTED IN THE MORALS OF HIS CHILD? AND WHERE WILL THE CHILD BE TAUGHT LESSONS OF RIGHTEOUSNESS IF NOT IN THE HOUSE OF GOD? THE EXAMPLE OF A FATHER WHO IS A REGULAR ATTENDANT AT CHURCH IS MORE POWERFUL THAN ANY SERMON THAT CAN BE PREACHED. IF YOU THINK YOU ARE TOO FAR ADVANCED IN THOUGHT, IF YOU ARE SURE THAT THE CLERGYMAN'S SERMONS ARE DRY, IF YOU MUST FOREGO AN HOUR OF YOUR SLUMBER SUNDAY, MAKE A SACRIFICE FOR YOUR LITTLE BOY OR YOUR LITTLE GIRL'S SAKE.

Recall the days when you were a child and how you watched your dear parents trudge off to church on the Sabbath. Of course the world was not as advanced then as it is today. But many of the so called advances really are recessions. In many places, thanks to this advanced thought, the name of God doesn't obtain the reverence it did when you were a child. There is no denying that "going to church" has deteriorated in many of the so called enlightened communities.

This enlightenment is only darkness. Where is the scientist or leader in advanced thought to compare with God? Churches are the houses of God. There you will hear the word of God. They should be filled to overflowing.

Help swell the attendance by GOING TO CHURCH Sunday.

GO TO CHURCH next Sunday!

LAUNCHING AT BAKER BASIN

Large Fishing Boat Takes It Maiden Dip Today

The 78-foot fishing boat, built at the Baker Yacht Basin for William Underwood & Co. of Boston, was launched just before noon today. Several hundred people witnessed the boat take its maiden dip.

There was no christening as the boat slid down the ways but inside of a month she will be given a name with appropriate ceremonies.

The keel was laid only a few weeks ago and construction was not delayed. All the modern appliances are part of its equipment. The boat will be propelled by gasoline engines.

She will be fitted out at the basin and it is expected to be in commission within a month. The ship will be used in the waters off the coast of Maine.

RUNAWAY ACCIDENT.

Charles Roberts, employed by W. F. Loud & Sons, as a driver of an Electric express delivery wagon, is in the Quincy City Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain as the result of a runaway in West Quincy this morning. The horse bolted on Willard street and the wagon collided with a pole near the West Quincy railroad station. Roberts was thrown to the ground. He struck on his head and was taken to the hospital in the police ambulance in an unconscious condition. He is not on the dangerous list. A police signal box on the pole was loosened by the impact. The horse was captured a short distance away.

LAWN PARTY.

The lawn party of the Ruth and Lydia class of the First Presbyterian church, Sunday School, was held in the lecture room instead of on the lawn of the manse on account of the poor weather Tuesday night. The attendance was large and those present had an enjoyable time. The members of the class conducted the ice cream, fancy articles and grab bag tables and presented an impromptu entertainment during the evening. The affair was in charge of the class, headed by Mrs. J. A. Matheson, its teacher.

The members of George L. Gill Rebekah lodge are making preparations to attend the annual picnic at Nantasket on Thursday of this week. The party plans to leave City Square in a special car at ten o'clock.

The funeral of Herman Grages was held from his home at 321 Washington street Tuesday afternoon. Services were held in the Christ church by Rev. R. E. Armstrong, rector, and the body was interred in Gethsemane cemetery, West Roxbury. Mr. Grages was a carpenter by trade.

NEW INVENTION.

A device which is described as "something absolutely new to the motorcycle world" has recently been invented by two South Braintree young men, A. Leonel Brett and Herbert L. Parker. It is called the roller saddle attachment and is said to be practically perfect in absorbing the shocks and impacts incidental to riding a motorcycle over a rough road. It can be adapted to any make of motorcycle and makes a trip on one of the vehicles a positive pleasure. To quote from the circular: "With this attachment there is absolutely no interference or impairment of efficiency between motor and drive and it requires very little reasoning to convince every rider that the roller saddle attachment must be more sensitive to road shocks than any device which has to support a portion of the frame as well as the rider himself and yet be stiff enough not to materially affect the power transmission.

Added to the spring frame, this attachment signifies perfection, for not only is it more sensitive to the downward shocks but it also allows a forward motion that absorbs all impacts.

The new attachment is attracting a great deal of attention and the leading manufacturers of motorcycles are manifesting great interest in it. The roller saddle attachment was patented on March 31st, 1914, and has just been put on the market. It is made by the Roller Saddle Attachment Co., at 138 Pembroke street, Boston.

Herbert L. Parker has very recently returned from a test run to Saratoga, on an Indian motorcycle equipped with the device which he says worked perfectly under all conditions. Today five professionals, riding machines fitted with the attachment will make an endurance run from Worcester to Albany.

"THIRD DEGREE" ANGERS CARMAN

Thinks His Wife Should Not Be Subjected to It

SAYS HE WILL FIGHT FOR HER

Considers Story Already Told by Woman Should Be Sufficient Without Calling Upon Detective Burns to Aid In Probing Murder of Mrs. Bailey—Warfare Among Officials

New York, July 8.—Enraged at the third degree examination to which his wife had been subjected, Dr. Edwin Carman, in whose office at Freeport, L. I., Mrs. Louise Bailey was shot to death, declared that if Mrs. Carman were arrested he would exhaust every resource in his power to fight her battle for her.

"I know an arrest is impending and that my wife is suspected," declared Carman. The physician grew so angry while Detective Burns, who has been brought ino the case to assist the Nassau county authorities, was questioning Mrs. Carman that he threatened to throw Burns out of the house.

"Why don't you stop this man?" shouted Carman to George M. Levy, attorney for Mrs. Carman, pointing to Burns. "My wife has already told her story to the sheriff, the coroner and the newspaper reporters."

Burns ransacked the house from end to end before he departed, while the doctor spluttered with anger.

Mrs. Carman is on the verge of a breakdown and her mother is reported to be dying.

District Attorney Smith will present to the grand jury of Nassau county all the evidence that he has gathered and ask for the indictment of a woman as the assassin who thrust a hand through a window and shot Mrs. Bailey to death.

Bitter warfare has developed among the county officials as a result of the investigation into the murder, and it was learned that this clash was the cause of Burns and his aides being called into the case. In this warfare the district attorney and Sheriff Pettit are aligned against Acting Coroner Norton. The sheriff charged that an attempt was being made to balk justice.

"We will no longer submit to being balked," he asserted. "This case is not an unsolvable mystery. No man murdered Mrs. Bailey. We shall present our evidence to the grand jury on Thursday and an arrest may be looked for at any time after that."

Mrs. Carman again protested her innocence, while admitting her jealousy of her husband. She declared that she realized she was suspected, but blamed her installation of a dictagraph in the office of her husband for turning the shadow of suspicion upon her.

REPRIMAND FOR EVANS

Must Not Discuss Controversial Subjects In Public

Washington, July 8.—The reprimand which President Wilson ordered for Brigadier General Evans will take the form of a letter from Secretary Garrison, admonishing that officer not to discuss controversial subjects in public.

At a banquet recently in New York, Evans was reported as referring to the United States as the "most meddlesome nation." Although he declared he had been misquoted, Evans admitted discussion of American diplomacy.

HIGH SCHOLARSHIP.

A letter to a Quincy attorney from W. E. Walz, dean of the College of Law, University of Maine, makes mention of the high scholarship attained by Frank A. Tirrell, Jr., of Summer street, and Raymond T. Woolsen, his roommate.

Both obtained 83 per cent on their work of the year, but as yet have not made a choice of the prizes offered for first place.

Mr. Tirrell is the son of Frank A. Tirrell, a local lawyer, and since entering the College of Law he has not only been an adept in making progress but has also participated in athletics. He was captain of the college basket ball team. During the summer he is a supervisor on the public playgrounds of this city. The fact that both he and his roommate were practically tied in their work is considered exceptional in college circles.

DESIGNS FOR BATTLESHIPS

Two New Ones to be Similar to No. 39

The Navy department is giving careful attention to the designs for the two battleships which have been provided for in the naval appropriation bill, and matters have gone far enough to warrant the statement, says the Monitor, that the new ships will correspond in essentials to No. 39, now building, which is the latest expression of naval architecture in the United States.

This adherence to design includes armor and armament, although in the former particular it is possible there will be an increase in certain parts, notably as a protection against underwater attack. The 14-inch gun will be retained, notwithstanding the fact that nations are inclining to the 15-inch.

There will also be retention of the triple-gun turret, although that form of mounting the main battery is yet to be tested in actual war. The fact that the French are contemplating the installation of the quadruple turret in the Tourville class is having no influence with American ordinance officers. There are advantages in the triple-gun turret, it is pointed out, for the reason that the three guns may be fired at the same time. The quadruple turret, it is claimed is a step backwards in some respects, since it is simply a twin turret placed side by side with an armored wall between. While there is a saving of weight by this arrangement, only two guns can be fired at one time, it is said.

WEYMOUTH'S NEW STATION

Occupied Last Night for the First Time

The new brick police station in East Weymouth, put into commission on the night before the fourth, was officially named "McGuires Hotel" Tuesday after a man of that name was committed.

The appropriation for the station was passed at a town meeting nearly two years ago and 15 months elapsed between the turning of the first sod and occupancy because of several controversies.

Months ago it was agreed in the community that the place would bear the name of its first prisoner, and a score of interested citizens spent the "night before" at the station to help in the christening.

Someehow, no arrests were made during the holiday season, but this only served to whet their curiosity, and when William B. McGuire, familiarly known as "Hunky Dorey," was brought in last night the crowd gave him a cheer.

John M. O'Connell was booked a short time after, but he was a few minutes late in getting arrested and lost the chance to perpetuate his name.

In the Quincy court this morning they were found guilty for drunkenness. McGuire was sentenced to the State farm and because O'Connell did not have $15 to pay his fine he was taken to the Dedham jail. He was anxious to get started and inquired several times of the court officers why they delayed his trip.

The building is situated on Pleasant street, near the Town Hall, recently burned. It contains eight cells, a strong room, two rooms for the officers and two sleeping rooms. It is well furnished throughout and is equipped with shower baths.

William H. Clapp one of Weymouths most estimable and foremost citizens is dead at his home 70 Front street, following an illness of several months Deceased was formerly a shoe manufacturer. He had been a member of the board of park commissioners since the board was established 20 years ago. He was a son of the late Adorum and Clarissa Clapp and was born and always lived in Weymouth. He was a member of Orphans Hope lodge of Masons. Besides his widow a brother Richmond Clapp and two sisters Miss S. Jane Clapp and Mrs. Maria Pratt survive him. The funeral will take place from his late residence Thursday afternoon at two o'clock.

STATE-WIDE PROHIBITION

Asked In Appeal to Keystone State Legislature by Convicts

Philadelphia, July 8.—Out of a total of 1478 prisoners confined in the Eastern penitentiary, 1008 have signed a petition which will be submitted to the next legislature asking state-wide prohibition.

The petition is probably the strongest sociological argument ever made against the liquor traffic. Without a word or even a suggestion from Warden McKenty the prisoners signed their names, and in many instances volunteered to go before a legislative committee and tell how drink has wrecked their lives.

Three months ago The Umpire, the little paper published by the convicts, started a crusade against drink. Letters began to flow in telling the personal stories of prisoners who claimed that were it not for whisky they would not now be serving time in prison.

The editor of the paper, himself a prisoner, was so impressed with the letters that he drafted a petition and sent it around the prison for signatures.

STORSTAD AT AUCTION

Ship Which Cost $260,000 Two Years Ago Brings $175,000

Montreal, July 8.—The Storstad, the collier which sank the Empress of Ireland on May 29 last at Father Point, was sold at auction here for $175,000.

The Prudential Trust company bought the vessel for foreign agents, believed to be the original owners of this ship. She cost $260,000 two years ago.

The Storstad was held as security for damages in the $2,000,000 action brought by the Canadian Pacific railway, owners of the Empress, against the collier's owners. She will now be released as soon as the purchase money is paid into the court, pending further litigation.

WELSH CAPTURES LIGHTWEIGHT TITLE

Ritchie Loses In Fine Exhibition of Clever Boxing

London, July 8.—Fred Welsh, the lightweight champion of England, last night outboxed William Ritchie, the American champion, and on the refereee's decision won the lightweight championship of the world in a twenty-round bout.

The fight took place at Olympia, and the 8000 spectators witnessed a fast and clever bout, in which rapid footwork and a good deal of in-fighting were pronounced. Although Welsh scored the greater number of blows, those of the American appeared to be the most telling.

It was a fine exhibition of boxing throughout. Neither man went to the floor, and the struggle during the last six rounds was of hurricane character.

MEDIATION IS EXPECTED

Carranza and Villa Said to Have Patched Their Differences

Washington, July 8.—Reports from Torreon that the peace conference between representatives of General Carranza and General Villa has ended and that the differences in the constitutionalist ranks have been adjusted satisfactorily served to encourage officials of the Washington government and constitutionalist agents here, who are hopeful that mediation of the Mexican imbroglio soon may be successfully concluded.

The mutiny which has broken out among Mexican federal soldiers near American outposts at Vera Cruz is a subject of keen interest in American official quarters, and several messages on the subject were received from General Funston, who reported that fighting between the federals and mutineers was in progress.

The Mexican federal commander previously had warned Funston that the mutineers had threatened to attack the American lines, and with this information to guide him, Funston ordered his forces to be on the defensive but not to consider any such irresponsible movement as an attack.

BUT TEN "DIE HARDS"

Irish Home Rule Amendment Is Passed by House of Lords

London, July 8.—The house of lords passed by 273 to 10 the second reading of the bill to amend the Irish home rule bill.

That the house of lords would pass the bill in order to amend it in committee was a foregone conclusion, but there was surprise that only ten "die hards" could be found to vote for the motion for its rejection.

After division was taken, notice of several amendments was handed in providing for the exclusion from home rule of the whole of Ulster.

ASK AN EIGHT-HOUR DAY ON RAILROADS

Ultimatum of Eighty Thousand Men on Western Lines

Chicago, July 8.—Eighty thousand railway employes, through their representatives, went on record here as determined to strike if they do not get the railroads to change the working day from ten to eight hours, without reduction in pay.

The unions represented were the railway clerks, freight handlers and warehousemen, locomotive firemen and enginemen, engineers, maintenance of way men, oilers, engine wipers and trainmen.

Resolutions were adopted that provide for a strike vote by the unions that have not already voted, with the delivery of an ultimatum to the railroads not later than July 14 that a strike will immediately follow unless the eight-hour day is granted.

The roads involved are sixty-seven trunk lines and subsidiaries west of Chicago.

MENTALLY DEPRESSED

Head of Connecticut Manufacturing Concern a Suicide

Meriden, Conn., July 8.—Philip J. Handel, aged 48, head of the P. J. Handel company, makers of art lamp shades, shot himself with fatal effect while in the garage connected with the plant.

He left a note, and from its wording the medical examiner formed an opinion that Handel was suffering from temporary mental depression. His associates, however, say he had been in excellent health and spirits and was arranging to leave with Mrs. Handel for Montana next Monday to visit a brother.

IMMIGRATION AND THE IMMIGRANT.

Essay by Mary L. Cappannari at the Plymouth High School Graduation. Published in the Old Colony Memorial.

Immigration! We might exclaim, Yes; immigration! That long-discussed question which today has reached even the doors of the legislatures. But let us give it a fair hearing, lest we form prejudices which can never be eradicated. To begin with, I myself am an immigrant daughter of a naturalized American citizen. I myself am the daughter of a race, against which, along with the Jewish race, Americans feel the most prejudice. The "Sheenie" and the "dago" or the "guinea," as you prefer, are contemptuous slang terms which, I presume, are familiar to you all, and which are indicative of our attitude toward the foreigner. In my opinion we are all immigrants. To me America is the true home of the Red Indian and of nobody else. The difference lies merely in the fact that some of us were fortunate enough to come on an earlier boat. And we must remember that Ellis Island is only another name for Plymouth Rock. The same spirit of liberty and the same high moral virtues continue to flow into the country with every ship load of immigrants. We say that the immigration of today isn't what it used to be. Does not every generation cry out that children are not what they used to be, that society isn't what it used to be? The "good old times" and the "old immigration" may be twin illusions of limited human vision. We say that our present immigration is made up of the scum of Europe, but an investigation will tell us that we are getting the bone and sinew of all the nations. Go to the public schools and to the colleges and you will find the names of the immigrants topping the honor ranks nine times out of ten.

Go from the public school to the public library and you will find that the classics have the greatest circulation in the immigrant quarters of the city. Draw up a list of names that appear prominently in book reviews, in theatre notices, in announcements of art galleries and lecture halls, and how many of them have a foreign sound! America is proud of the self-made man. Let any one compile a biographical dictionary of our "self-made men" and see how the smell of the steerage pervades the volume! A certain senator has recently stated that the tendency toward the preservation of natural resources demands the restriction of immigration giving, as his reasons, the fact that with our doors open to the immigrants, the national resources will be a benefit to their sons instead of to the sons of the natives. But who, may I ask, is going to dig that coal bed, or hew that forest? That senator is not going to do it. The immigrant, whom he wishes to exclude, is the one to whom this work is assigned. Yes! We always have a job for the immigrant wherever rough work and low wages go together. The prouder we grow the more we have to lean on the alien. The Wall Street magnate would be helpless if it were not for the army of foreigners who execute his schemes. The magic of stocks and bonds lies in railroad ties and in quarried stone and in axle grease applied at the right time. A Harriman might sit till domesday gibbering away at the telephone and the stock exchange would take no notice of him if a band of nameless "dagoes" a thousand miles away failed to repair a telegraph pole. Our brains, our wealth, our ambitions, flow in channels dug by the hands of immigrants.

Alien hands erect our offices, rivet our bridges and pile up the proud masonry of our monuments. Ignoring the fact that oftentimes the engineer as well as the laborer is of alien race, we owe to mere muscle a measure of recognition, proportionate to our need of muscle, in our boasted material progress. Whatever merit there was in hewing and digging in the days of the first settlers, still inheres in the same operations today. Yes, and a little extra, for the stick of dynamite is more dangerous to handle than crowbar and the steam engine makes more widows in a year than ever did the Indian with bloody tomahawk and stealthy arrow. In this age of the newspaper we do not base our opinions of the immigrant on common sense. The newspaper is devoted to the portrayal of the abnormal immigrant. Half a dozen Italians draw knives in a brawl on a given evening, and the morning newspapers are full of the story. On the same evening hundreds of Italians are studying civics in the night schools, inquiring for classics at the public library, rehearsing for an historical pageant at the settlement, and not a word about them in the newspapers.

Note the fact that whenever a murder is committed the newspapers print only the name of the murderer, except in the case of an Italian, when the name does not suffice, but his nationality has also to be written after it. So also is it the business of the police to record the fact that a Greek was arrested for peddling without a license, while it is nobody's business to report that a dozen other Greeks chipped in their spare change to pay his fine. The tendency of the newspapers has always been to write things detrimental to the foreign name and the reader of newspapers is convinced that the foreigners are a violent and lawless crowd.

But judgments based on newspaper evidence alone indicate the absence of the sense of proportion. In the whole catalogue of sins with which the immigrant is charged it is not easy to find one in which we Americans are not partners. The immigrant is blamed for the unsanitary conditions of the slums, when sanitary experts cry shame on our methods of municipal house cleaning. The foreigner undoubtedly contributes to the congestion of population in the cities, but this is our own fault. If the government would only take a hand in the intelligent distribution of immigration, as Argentina does, this fault could be remedied. Some things we say against the immigrants sound very strange from American lips. We speak of the corruption of our children's manners through contact with immigrant children in the public schools, when all the world is scolding us for our children's rude deportment.

Finer manners are grown on a tiny farm in Italy than in the roaring subways of New York, and contrast our lunch counter manners with the table manners of the Polish ghetto where bread must not be touched with unwashed hands, and where a pause for prayer begins and ends each meal. We say that the immigrants come only to exploit our country because some of them go back after a few years, taking their savings with them. The real exploiters of our country's wealth are not the foreign laborers, but the capitalists, who pay them wages. The immigrant who returns home with his savings leaves us an equivalent in the products of labor, a day's service rendered for every day's wages. And of those who return to Europe not all go back in order to spend their American fortune. Some return to recover from ruin, encountered at the hands of American land swindlers. Some go back to be buried beside their fathers, having lost their health in unsanitary American factories. And still others are helped aboard on crutches, having lost a limb in a mine explosion that could have been prevented. When we watch the procession of cripples, hobbling back to their native villages, it looks more as if America is exploiting Europe! Oh! that the American people would learn where their enemies lurk! Not the immigrant is ruining our country, but the cheap politicians who try to make of the immigrant the scapegoat for the sins of untrammelled capitalism. The personal devotion which is manifested in the life of the tenements in repeated acts of self-denial, awaits but the fanning of a great purpose to leap into a flame of abstract devotion.

The question is sometimes raised whether so many different races can fuse into one harmonious nation, devoted to one flag. A recent illustration will suffice to prove that we need not worry about this matter. One of the first four to be killed in the capture of Vera Cruz was Gabriel DeFabio, a young Italian, twenty-four years old, gunner's mate aboard the battleship New Jersey. Few of us, I am sure, know of the fact, for the newspapers withheld the news. Nevertheless, the American people must never forget that the blood of my race am sure, know of the fact, for the honor and glory of the American flag, the Latin blood, that generous blood, which our politicians and newspapers call undesirable, unworthy to put foot on American soil. Before we seek for measures to restrict immigration, such as the "Literacy Test Bill" (Which I hope will never be passed,) we must prove beyond a doubt that the evils we complain of are not the result of our our sins. In picturing the immigrant I do not wish to picture a saint by any means.

The immigrant, like all of us, has his own faults; but I do think that his good qualities, to do him justice, ought at least once in a while to be brought into the limelight, for his bad ones too frequently are. No matter what our personal attitude toward the immigrant may be, we can all agree to stifle the voice of prejudice, not for the purpose of shielding the immigrant, but for enhancing our own reputation and our own self-respect, for prejudice does more harm to the person who utters it than to the person toward whom it is directed. Above all, if it is true that little grains of sand help to make up the beautiful earth upon which we live, if it is true that the welfare of any nation depends upon its individual responses if it is true that the individual is the prototype of the state, then it behooves me to make this final statement, that I, as an individual, will strive even more than I have striven in the past, to prove a worthy representative of Italy, the land that gave me birth, and a worthy citizens of the United States, the land that gave me, with the exception of birth, all that I possess.

Outfits For Al Fresco Meals Include Gay Lawn Umbrellas

FOR LAWN TEA PARTY.

CHARMING accessories for the porch or lawn are shown this season. It is now a fad to serve luncheon or tea outdoors, and the manufacturers have met the demand by supplying a great variety of tasteful outdoor furniture. The huge lawn umbrella is a picturesque novelty. It is made of heavy canvas in gay stripes or decorated in colors. There is a little table into the center of which the umbrella handle slips. Since the lower part of the table is heavily weighted, there is no danger of it upsetting, and tea may be served from it. When circumstances or the condition of the weather makes it advisable to take the lawn set under shelter the umbrella may be removed from the table and closed and the entire outfit carried indoors conveniently.

WHAT TO EAT IN THE HOT WEATHER

By Exercising Care In the Choice of Food One May Be Cool Even on Sultry Days.

THE regulation of the diet in summer will do much to obviate suffering from heat. With the arrival of hot weather certain foods should be banished from the bill of fare and certain others substituted in order to balance the menu. Pork, bacon, fried foods, too much pastry, heavy puddings and oysters should be eliminated.

It is a mistake to leave meat altogether from the bill of fare, but red meat should be eaten sparingly in the sultry term. White meats like fish and chicken are light and not heating and are not included in the prohibition. Red meat should not be served more often than four times a week.

Iced drinks and iced desserts should not be partaken of recklessly. While they temporarily lower the temperature of the body the reaction leaves it more uncomfortable than before. Most iced foods are indigestible, especially when enjoyed between meals.

The iced part of the meal should be limited to an iced pudding or salad and simple iced drinks.

One does not require so much food in hot weather as in cold, and the appetite often needs stimulating. Therefore the fare should be as dainty and varied as possible.

A certain amount of meat is required. For hot dishes, lamb, veal, chicken and duck should be used; beef is best cold, either roast or boiled, with a good salad.

Foods to be avoided are those which are especially heating, thick soups, substantial pudding and rich entrees.

Every kind of salad, if properly made, is a very acceptable addition to the summer menu, and also nearly all dishes made with eggs and cheese, either hot or cold, for both, while exceedingly nourishing, are not heating.

Omelets of the simpler kind, with fine herbs or a small amount of grated ham, not rich kidney omelets, should be served frequently at lunch and breakfast.

The regular meals are so light as a rule in summer that it seems an excellent idea to serve afternoon tea with dainty sandwiches of cress or potted meat with lettuce or cress. This extra meal will be fully appreciated by all members of the household.

The human system seems to demand some form of cooling drink in warm weather, and for this purpose iced tea seems specially well designed. This beverage can be made in such a way as not to be any more harmful than plain lemonade. The water should be poured on the tea leaves when first boiled, and then the leaves should be removed before any of the tannin has dissolved into the water. This tea should be mixed with an equal amount of cold water and put on the ice to become chilled. Then one lemon should be squeezed into each pint of iced tea and sugar mixed in to taste.

Another delicious drink is made in much the same way with a quart of grape juice and a few oranges added. This makes a very cool, refreshing liquid for the hot weather. Neither of these drinks should contain ice, but should be chilled next to the ice.

THE HOUSEHOLD IN THE SUMMER

Timely Precautions That Will Add to the Comfort and Good Health of the Members of the Family.

DURING the summer cleanup day should be every day. Daily inspection of screens will eliminate much suffering. In the country, no matter how well the house may be screened, mosquitoes will find their way inside. They come in on the clothing, they slip in when doors are swung wide, and they worm their way through the tiniest cracks. About sunset the little pests come out of any retreats they may have crawled into and with unerring instinct make for the screens. They buzz over them, trying to get out. Here they may be slaughtered before the house is lighted. Few are likely to enter between then and bedtime, and thus a comfortable night's rest may be assured to the family.

The yard should be kept scrupulously clean. Long grass and weeds should not be allowed to grow near the house. Keep the lawn trimmed and surrounding grass patches cleared. There are in most country places men who are willing to cut grass free of charge if they may have it for the use of their horses or cattle. If the grass is kept short you will be less troubled with gnats and mosquitoes than otherwise.

Flies breed and flourish where there is garbage or waste of any kind. Hence garbage pails should be kept covered and must be emptied regularly. No waste should be allowed to accumulate on the premises.

All drains, waste places and cellar sinks should be flushed with a good disinfectant. Kerosene is one of the best disinfectants against disease and flies. If you live in your own house be sure that the fitted screens are the best possible and especially that they cover the upper part of the window so that a perfect ventilation of air will result.

Be particular about screening your kitchen windows and back doors. Sometimes even the simplest mosquito netting all over a kitchen window is more efficient than half a screen. Notice also the screening of your cellar windows, because often flies, especially the large bluebottle and more dangerous kinds, come into the cellar and thus into the house.

Many who clean house thoroughly do not clean up the back yard thoroughly and are inclined to leave refuse, which is the best place for flies to develop. The only way to treat the fly nuisance is to take it in advance, and in this case certainly an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

Then there are also various kinds of fly traps. An excellent one is designed especially for attaching to the outside garbage pail. This trap was used with great success in many cities last year and catches the flies at their original source, the garbage pail or manure pile.

If there is any waste water or similar low place around your grounds disinfect it with kerosene, as such places are the spring breeding ground of the mosquito.

Chloride of lime and kerosene are the two best and cheapest disinfectants and should be used unsparingly.

MILITIA FORCES LEAVE SALEM

Establishment of Constabulary to Perform Guard Duty

REFUGEES FOR POLICE FORCE

City Marshal to Appoint a Hundred of Best Physical Specimens—Precautions to Prevent Spread of Disease—Undesirables Run Out of Town—Steady Growth of Relief Fund

Salem, Mass., July 8.—Colonel Graves, who has been in charge of the militia detailed here since the night of the big fire, was relieved from duty last night and sent to their home stations the remaining militia over which he had charge.

City Marshal Lehan announced that he will swear in about 100 men to augment his force. These men are to be taken from the refugees, and are to be the finest physical specimens he can find, though no civil service requirements will be asked.

Colonel Cutting has as his constabulary for the camps 108 picked men. Cutting, in choosing his men for constabulary service, has given the preference to members of the militia who have been burned out, so that they may earn the money which has been appropriated for this purpose.

The question of housing still continues to be a serious one. There is one special reason why many men have refused to go out of Salem and find homes elsewhere temporarily. This is that many of the men either have work here or have found it since, and that the car service makes it impossible for them to get to the nearby cities after their work for the day is done. The cars to some of the towns stop at 10:30. This is to be taken up with the street car companies.

Health is becoming more and more the most important thing in the city, even taking precedence over the immediate relief work and rehabilitation. The anti-typhoid fever campaign is to be carried on more vigorously than ever, for one thing, and the list of "notifiable" disease has been added to.

The milk and water supply of the city are to be examined daily, and the people are to be taught how to pasteurize their milk at home.

The use of lime is urgently advised to everybody, and even in the temporary houses to be built immediately in the burned district, no sanitary arrangements which do not connect directly with the sewers will be allowed.

The police have begun their campaign of running undesirables out of town. They made a canvass of the hotels after 10 o'clock at night, and made the clerks and proprietors give all the information they had about those registered. No raids were made, for the reason that present conditions have made it necessary for many persons to be in hotels without baggage, but the lines are to be stricter.

The relief fud has jumped to $412,073.38. Slowly the funds for the houseless, foodless and penniless is climbing to the half million mark—and then, so the relief workers say, the sufferers need a half-million more.

Every day the list of contributions, ranging from a nickel to thousands, reveals new romances, new hints of pathos. Even in the mere signatures of those who help may be read life-stories of grief or joy.

YIELDS TO THE LAW

"No Vote, No Tax," Leader Notifies Assessor She Will Pay Taxes

Chicago, July 8.—"Mrs." Belle Squire, head of the "No vote, no tax" league, who refused for a number of years to pay taxes and who maintained her refusal after the granting of partial woman suffrage by the Illinois legislature, has hauled down the flag of revolt and notified the assessor she will pay.

Though a spinster, she assumed the title "Mrs." as a right, asserting men had no right to indicate her wedded or unwedded condition.

EVEN CRAWL INTO STORES

Grasshoppers Invade Business Section of a New York Town

Gloversville, N. Y., July 8.—A rain of grasshoppers descended on the business section of this city and half an hour later it was impossible to walk in the main streets without stepping on them. They crawled into many of the stores.

Farmers in town declare the grasshoppers are the thickest they can remember. They fear they will destroy the crops.

Suspected of Posing as Hero

New Britain, Conn., July 8.—Authorities believe that John C. Calhoun, 21, a former section foreman at Danbury, wanted to be a hero by flagging a New York express after placing ties on the track. He is held in $2500.

Feared Insane Asylum

Houlton, Me., July 8.—Fear of being taken to an asylum was given as the motive for the suicide of Eben W. Hare, a prosperous farmer, by shooting.

Woman's World

Titled Daughters of Society Leaders Make Newport Season Gay.

DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH.

Newport is congratulating itself on the brilliancy of its social season. There are many distinguished guests present and expected. The beautiful and clever young Duchess Consuelo of Marlborough is the guest of her mother, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, at Marble House. Other titled daughters of American families who may take part in the social festivities of Newport during the season are Lady Granard, the daughter of Mrs. Ogden Mills; Lady Camoys, daughter of Mrs. William Watts Sherman; Countess Szechenyi, daughter of Mrs. Vanderbilt, and Countess Guy de Lasteyrie.

The rank, beauty and public spirit of the Duchess of Marlborough have made her exceedingly popular in London society. Even Queen Mary has shown her liking for the young American woman who has been so generous with her wealth in relieving the London poor and devoting time and money to many movements for public betterment.

Her entertainments at Sunderland House are brilliant affairs, often graced by the presence of some member of the royal family.

Like her mother, Mrs. Belmont, the duchess is a suffragist, though not a militant one.

Her two boys, the elder of whom, the Marquis of Blandford, is heir to the dukedom, are in England in the care of their tutors.

THE VINE SCREEN.

Beautiful Effect In Nature That May Be Copied For the Lawn.

There is a beautiful curtain of hanging vines, stretching from one tree to another in a certain country place. It is the outgrowth of years, but it could be easily copied on a smaller scale by any one who has patience.

The curtain in question hangs from two old elm trees which stand about twenty feet apart. Virginia creeper is trained to grow up the trunk of the two trees to a height of about fifteen feet, and then it is trained along a strong wire fastened from one tree to the other.

The long tendrils of the creeper have grown many feet, and they hang down and intertwine until now they form a curtain, thick and strong, which reaches to within a few feet of the ground.

This curtain would make a satisfactory substitute for a conventional hedge in some situations. It could be copied with one of the thick growing annual vines, like hop or canary bird vine or balloon vine. Such a curtain could be trained to hang on one end of a sunny porch or veranda.

Of course the vines forming it would need gentle urging. The soil in which they are rooted should be rich and fine, and the vines should be scrupulously watered.

It might be better, in a sunny position, not to train the tendrils of the vine over wire, for wire becomes excessively hot and sometimes burns. Strong cord would be better.

Two Summer Hints.

To remove flyspecks from gilt picture frames beat the white of an egg lightly and add a half teaspoonful of baking soda; wipe the frames with this and then finish with a soft cloth. The legs of silk hose or the long arms cut from silk gloves make excellent cloths for this purpose. They are easily kept clean with soap and water and are easier to use than chamois.

To clean a willow chair scrub with soap and water, rinsing thoroughly in tepid water in which a tablespoonful of borax has been dissolved. This will prevent its yellowing. Then pour warm water over the chair and set it in the sun to dry to keep it from getting brittle. This also serves to tighten the willow.

Leather Furniture.

Milk that is heated is excellent for cleaning leather furniture. Use soft cotton cloths and rub all over to take off spots and dirt. Then take a mixture of beeswax, melted and mixed with turpentine, one part wax to two of the turpentine. This should be rubbed in and soft, clean cloths used for rubbing off so dust will not settle.

UNDER NEW MANAGEMENT.

The firm of Charles H. Penniman & Son, for many years, proprietor of the livery stable in the rear of the Greenleaf has sold its interest in the horse business and will devote itself in the future to automobiles.

Byron H. Brown, son of Mrs. William Brown of Mechanic street, a well known young man about the city succeeds that firm. The new owner contemplates the purchase of additional equipment. For several years Mr. Brown has been an owner of horses and hacks but because he could not secure the proper accommodations he was unable to branch out in this line.

PLANS FOR THE LAUNCHING

Tickets Will Be Required for Admission to Yard

While no luncheon is to be served to the guests attending the launching of the battleship Nevada on Saturday, at the Fore River yards it is announced that after the launching the foremen and leading men of the yard will be given a lunch in the mould loft.

The Governor and special invited guests from Nevada will be the guests of President Powell at a private dinner party at the Copley-Plaza hotel, Boston.

The launching stand which is to be erected about the bow of the vessel will be for the exclusive use of the official launching party. In the rear of this is a raised platform for the use of the newspaper photographers.

Near the bow will be a large stand known as stand A, and it is this that will be used by those holding red tickets.

Still further along on the ground will be an enclosure which will be used by those having yard tickets.

The launching is not to be a public one, as has been announced, as admittance to the yards can only be had by ticket. However a thousand or more tickets have been issued for stand A and the inclosure, so that a large crowd is expected inside of the yard.

This however will be a small part of the number that will witness the launch for there will be many floating craft in the river while the many vantage points along the shore of the river are sure to contain their contingent of sightseers.

The official launching party will arrive from Boston on a special train which will take them back to Boston after the launching.

Miss Eleanor Ann Siebert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Siebert of Reno, Nevada, and a niece of Gov. Tasker Lawndes Oddie, of Nevada, will carry a magnificent bouquet of Richmond roses.

It might be added for the general information of those who will attend the launching, that the general admission will be through gate No. 2, at the lower end of Howard avenue, and that admission for invited guests will be through gate No. 1. also situated at the lower end of Howard avenue.

FOR CARRYING A REVOLVER

Man Arrested at Shipyard Fined $50

Tuesday afternoon Chief Patrick H. Bradley of the Fore River yard police arrested an Italian giving the name of Angelo Cantra for trespassing on the Fore River property. The man was sent to the police station where a search brought to light a fully loaded revolver which the man carried in his hip pocket. This morning in court in addition to being arraigned for trespass, he was arraigned for carrying a revolver without permission. The case for trespass was placed on file. For carrying a revolver he was fined $50 and the revolver confiscated.

CITY BOOKS OUT.

The annual City Reports are out, inside the time limit of the contract which was awarded to the Geo. W. Prescott Publishing Co., on May 12. The contract called for smaller type and as compact as possible. Some of the financial reports have not been duplicated as in past years, and the volume makes but 320 pages as compared with 586 last year. There seems no good reason why the contract should not be awarded in February, as formerly, so that the reports could be issued earlier.

STATE TAX IS HIGHER

Quincy's Assessment This Year Will Be $68,250.00

The bill assessing the State tax passed the Legislature on Tuesday and Quincy's assessment will be $68,250.00 There are only eighteen cities and towns in the State wealthier than Quincy as shown by these assessments There are eleven with a tax of over $50,000.00 and less than $80,000.00, as will be seen below. Salem, Haverhill, Pittsfield and Fitchburg are just ahead of Quincy and below Quincy are Everett, Milton, Waltham, Chelsea, Taunton and Medford.

Salem	$77,700.00
Haverhill	74,550.00
Pittsfield	71,837.50
Fitchburg	70,262.00
QUINCY	68,250.00
Everett	66,112.50
Milton	60,462.50
Waltham	59,675.00
Chelsea	56,175.06
Taunton	56,000.00
Medford	53,900.00

The Quincy assessment in itself requires a tax rate of about $1.75.

Quincy's State tax last year was $62,400.00 and the county tax was $26,139.41.

HOUSE OF RESOURCES.

The daily Mexican news tells of death, destitution, and paralyzed industry. Our people do not realize what a reservoir of resources and wealth is tied up as the result of human folly.

The original resources of the United States are to an extent depleted and squandered. Land is high, and food of all kinds will eventually cost much more money than today. Mexico's idle land can feed millions and her mines and forests can set industry in motion.

Mexico is a natural field for the enterprise of American business men. If order can be restored, a great deal of this wealth will legitimately flow into the United States. The profits of mines, forests, and fields will be spent here. This is possible without exploiting the Mexican people, or denying them their fair share of the product.

In one church in Guadalupe, the altar vessels, railings, candelabra, etc., include 50 tons in silver. This is but a slight suggestion of the abundance of the precious metals. Rich as are these treasures, it is said the country would be four times as wealthy today had its fields instead of its mines been developed.

The wasting of the forests by this profligate race is almost unbelievable. The nomadic tribes of Guerrero are accustomed to burn over rich lands yearly to obtain fields for their sickly gardens. The next year they move into some new locality and destroy more of these wonderful trees for the same temporary purpose. A great tree will often be cut by the Mexicans to get a single board.

Mexican civilization has had many fine aspects and there must be elements of stability that at last will assert themselves. Irritating and costly as is the present turmoil, there will be a rich reward if peace can again be restored. A country that for many years under Diaz had a regular treasury surplus ought to be a valuable neighbor.

Many people feel it is useless to bother to swat the fly, as it doesn't light on anything but the food.

A LONG WAY OFF

Hoax—I see that the motormen of this line who struck for stools to sit on while working have won their strike.

Joax—Yes; I guess after awhile even the passengers will be able to get seats.

SERIOUS LOSS TO HINGHAM

Plant of Rhodes & Ripley Destroyed by Fire

The Rhodes & Ripley clothing mill, one of the largest manufacturing establishments in Hingham was destroyed by fire this morning. The interior was gutted and all that remains of the structure is the outer walls which will be torn down immediately.

The fire is thought to have started on the second floor and although an investigation has been made no cause has been assigned by Chief Engineer Cushing.

A passerby who noticed smoke curling from a broken window at six o'clock sounded an alarm, and when the apparatus arrived the flames had communicated to all parts of the building. A company of firemen guarded the surrounding property on Elm street and prevented a possible conflagration.

The building was valued at $7,000 and is a total loss. Its equipment, which cost about $4000 was destroyed and nearly $4000 worth of manufactured goods, ready for delivery, were prey to the flames.

The largest stockholder is E. Bedelle Ripley of Hingham. The property is fully covered by insurance.

BUNGALOW FIRE AT SQUANTUM

Hot Air Explosion Blows Off Roof of Building

The alarm from Box 84 at 9.35 this morning gave the department a long run to Squantum. The fire was in a small bungalow on Pratt road owned by Abraham Jacobson. Chief Billings was at the Atlantic station when the alarm came in, and was one of the first to arrive at the fire. Two lines of hose were laid by the Atlantic combination and one of these lines was manned by the Chief.

The building however was practically doomed before the fire was discovered. A few minutes after water was being poured into it there was a hot air explosion that blew off the roof. None of the firemen however were injured. The loss on the building will not exceed $1,000.

The bungalow was occupied by the owner who lived there alone. There was a stove in the kitchen but no chimney, the stove funnel passing up through the roof and acting as a chimney. It is supposed that Mr. Jacobson built a fire to get breakfast this morning and when he left for Boston for his work the fire was still burning, that the funnel became heated and set fire to the woodwork.

There was a rumor that the firemen had to wait for water but Chief Billings said that this was not true, that there was plenty of water and that the pressure must have been fully 90 pounds.

In a Strange Place.

Little Alice was visiting her grandparents in an eastern city. One Sunday grandpa took her to church with him. When sermon time came Mary looked around a little, and, seeing a relative up in the gallery, whispered shrilly: "Oh, grandpa, look up there! See Cousin Mary sitting on a shelf!"

$50 FROM EAGLES.

The Eagles fund for members stricken by the Salem fire was given a substantial increase in this city with the appropriation of $50 by John Adams aerie at its meeting Wednesday evening.

Secretary Peter M. Dackers, who attended the conference of officials of the order in Boston a week ago, reported the scarcity of funds, and spoke of the work being done throughout the state by the society. His message was no sooner delivered than a motion to that effect was unanimously carried. President Frank J. Duffy presided.

MOONLIGHT SAIL OF MAKARIA

An enjoyable moonlight sail in the harbor was held Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Makaria Fraternity of the Bethany church. The evening was not confined to the members of the fraternity but included the ladies and many friends of the society. The party left Quincy in a special car in the early evening for Houghs Neck, from which point they embarked on the steamer, Houghs Neck.

The trip took the party down the harbor and was most enjoyable in every way. There was music during the trip and light refreshments were served. The water was calm and it is reported that none of the party experienced that unpleasant sensation of sea sickness. The return was made late in the evening at which time a special car brought them to Quincy.

IMPORTANT TO BUSINESS

Hearing Tomorrow on Fore River Improvement

An important hearing is to be held Friday at the office of the United States District Engineer, room 1017 Barristers hall, Pemberton Square, Boston, relative to the bill now before the United States senate for the dredging of Weymouth Fore river to a depth of 24 feet.

Every merchant and business man in Quincy who is benefitted by the extremely large pay roll of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation should either attend this hearing or write a letter to the engineer's office stating that the proposed improvement would be of vast benefit to his business.

With the channel as it now is, it would be impossible for any battleship or merchant steamship of large proportions to get to the Fore River plant without lighting in the lower harbor, which in most cases would not be practicable.

If the channel were made to 24 feet as desired, it would be possible in case any of the battleships or merchant steamships needing repairs, to come to the Fore River yards, whereas now they would have to go to Virginia.

During the year 1911, Commissioner of Water Front and Waterways, Frank Fessenden Crane, succeeded in getting a bill through congress appropriating $140,000 for the improvement of Weymouth Fore river. Owing to the great ability shown by Col. F. V. Abbott of the United States District office of

SERIOUS FALL OF FOREMAN

A morning paper reports that Leon P. O'Toole aged 32 years, Quincy, employed as a foreman of a gang of workmen, building a garage in Somerville, sustained a fracture of the skull about 5.30 Wednesday evening by falling from the roof of the structure, a two story building.

The police ambulance happened to be passing at the time, returning a woman home from a hospital. The driver of the ambulance hastily drove to a nearby store where he left the woman and then turned and took O'Toole to the Somerville hospital. His condition is said to be serious.

The Quincy directory gives the address of Mr. O'Toole as State street, Houghs Neck, and his occupation as superintendent.

SUDDEN DEATH IN SOUTH STATION

William Weatherbee, 30, of South Braintree, died suddenly in the South Station Wednesday afternoon while waiting for a train to take him to a vacation point. He was employed by the New Haven railroad as a flagman at South Hingham. A physician was summoned and said the man was beyond aid. Several hours elapsed before the body was identified at the city morgue by his father. The cause of death has not been determined by Medical Examiner Leary.

The many friends of Mrs. Alexander MacDonald of Warwick street will be glad to learn that she is recovering from her recent operation.

QUINCY WOMEN RALLY FOR SALEM

Will Have a Tag Day on Saturday and Cover the Entire City

Have Effected a Systematic Organization

Only two or three of the committee of men appointed on the Salem Relief Committee responded Wednesday evening at the second meeting called by Mayor Miller, but it cheered His Honor to have present a large gathering of ladies representing all parts of the city, members of our wide-awake Women's Club, and it was not long before the Mayor turned over all the work to them. It was voted to hold a Tag Day on Saturday of this week, and the women will be in charge.

Mayor Miller called the meeting to order in the Council chamber. At the outset, he said, he thought the men ought to sneak out by the back stairs as little had been done. He told of the urgent need of funds in Salem.

Such calamities as befell Salem are almost needed to remind the people of the Nation that they are expected to bear one another's burdens. He thought money could best be raised by a Tag Day.

A. N. LaBrecque told of his visit to Salem and reported that there was great need of funds. A wonderful relief work was being done there.

President Whiton of the City Council endorsed the Tag Day suggestion and thought Saturday the day of the launching of the battleship Nevada just the date. His motion that Saturday be observed in Quincy as Tag Day was adopted.

Mr. La Brecque moved that the 20 ladies present be chosen a committee to make all arrangements, and offered to donate all the tags needed.

Mr. Whiton favored having some men on the committee, and volunteered to do what he could.

City Solicitor Pinkham wanted to hear from the women whether they were willing to act as a committee.

Mrs. C. W. Smith, the president of the Quincy Womens Club suggested that it would be a good work for the

QUINCY TAG DAY FOR SALEM

THIS WEEK SATURDAY

LET EVERYBODY HELP WITH A DIME OR MORE

At the request of Mayor Miller, the women of Quincy have arranged for a Quincy Tag Day on Saturday for the relief of the people who lost all in the conflagration in the City of Salem.

The work in each ward will be under the direction of sub=committees who will appoint canvassers to visit every house and place of business in the city.

Each canvasser will be provided with a small bank which is locked and can only be opened by the Treasurer of the Committee.

The Boy Scouts and others will be at railroad stations and at the street railway transfer points in City Square to tag all who leave home early.

The generous public are urged to buy the Quincy tags, and deposit in the boxes whatever they will in payment thereof---be it 10 cents, 25 cents, or $1.00, or more. A little from each and every one will raise a large fund.

Young ladies and young men who are willing to act as canvassers are requested to notify any of the following ladies who serve on sub-committees.

MRS. J. R. MELLEN, the Treasurer, will be at Y. M. C. A. building this afternoon, between 5 and 6, and all day Friday, to supply the sub-committees with tags and banks, and explain how they are to be used.

The collectors should return their banks to the sub-committees Saturday evening, and the committee will make return on Monday to Mrs Mellen, at City Hall, from 2 to 4 P. M.

Although Villa is sulking, it is believed that the other Constitutionalist generals will be able to run fast enough to avoid capture.

So far none of the Congressmen have moved to pension those who are injured in the observances of July 4, but that is bound to come.

So far John D. has not asked the President for the pen with which he proposes to sign the anti-trust bills.

RACIAL ANTAGONISMS.

The assassination of the heir to the Austrian throne and his wife by a Bosnian fanatic was a black crime. Yet it is what might have been expected when Austria bagged Bosnia and Herzegovina and proceeded to denationalize them and extirpate their race traditions.

If you address printed matter to a resident of Bosnia, it is held up in the the post office under Austrian military guard, and censored for frivolous reasons. Race questions are handled differently here. Instead of trying to stamp out the languages of alien stocks, many cities buy Polish, Swedish, Italian, and other foreign books for public libraries. The new stocks are encouraged to save their traditions.

European governments have never used common sense in dealing with these conflicts. The races that reach the top maintain their hold with blood and iron. Bosnia and Herzegovina have been the scene of a repression dogging the daily footsteps of citizens with deadly suspicion. The result is the murder of two harmless royal personages.

In this country there is plenty of race antagonism, it expresses itself rather harmlessly in scrambles for political office, newspaper and theatrical caricature on occasional broken heads. But never has there been any attack on a public man that could be attributed to race repression.

The success of the United States in handling a composite population may well be the marvel of Europe. The new immigrant's enthusiasm for our liberal government is almost pathetic. Some day he will see the tawdry yellow streak of dishonesty in our public life. But at least the United States is several centuries ahead of Europe, in the idea of fair treatment to all races, and recognition of the valuable contribution brought by every alien strain.

CAUSED DEATH OF MRS. BAILEY

Charge Upon Which Mrs. Carman Is Placed Under Arrest

"NOT GUILTY" PLEA ENTERED

Held Without Bail After Arraignment In Her Home—Shows No Confusion When Warrant Issued by Coroner Is Served Upon Her—At Once Taken to the County Jail

New York, July 9.—Mrs. Florence Carman was arrested late yesterday, charged with the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey. Jealousy is alleged as the motive.

Mrs. Bailey was shot down one night last week as she was leaving the office of Dr. Edwin Carman, Mrs. Carman's husband, after a consultation.

The shot was fired through the office window by some one outside. The murderer propped the screen aside with a shingle, broke a pane of glass and fired.

The warrant for Mrs. Carman's arrest was issued by Acting Coroner Norton shortly after he had concluded his inquest into the death of Mrs. Bailey. The coroner has been in conflict with District Attorney Smith and Sheriff Pettit in the case, but it now appears the two parties have come together.

The warrant issued by Norton was entrusted to Smith and Pettit, and they with their assistants went to the Carman home. Mrs. Carman had expected arrest. She was with her husband and her attorney, George M. Levy, when the officials appeared.

When the warrant was served upon her she showed no confusion or alarm, but accepted the situation with perfect composure. It was evident that definite action, even of such a nature, was welcome to her after the suspense since the murder, when she has been accused in innuendo and hint.

Mrs. Carman was at once arraigned. Norton had followed the sheriff's party to the Carman home and decided to hold a special court there at once.

He arraigned Mrs. Carman on the warrant charging murder. Her attorney, Levy, answered "not guilty" for her. She was held without bail for the present, and was taken forthwith to the Nassau county jail at Mineola, L. I.

The arraignment of Mrs. Carman was an impressive scene. Besides the officials there were present a reporter or two, Carman and Elizabeth Carman, 10-year-old daughter of the couple, whose testimony at the inquest was in conflict with a portion of Mrs. Carman's story.

Carman and his daughter were calm and showed no alarm or grief. They had had time to collect themselves, for two days ago Carman said: "I know my wife is suspected and that an arrest is imminent."

Mrs. Carman herself was the calmest person in the room. Everyone else was excited and nervous; and the authorities were obviously in a hurry to finish the formalities and lodge Mrs. Carman in jail. The accused woman kissed her little girl when the arraignment was over.

"Never mind," she said to her husband, "everything will be all right. I have nothing to fear."

The coroner who went to Mrs. Carman's home and read to her the accusation of murder hated his job. The sheriff who touched her officially upon the shoulder and placed her under arrest was genuinely sorry that his duty ran that way. And even the district attorney, who had been irritated and harassed, humanely sympathized with this woman of splendid bearing and keen mind when the blow fell upon her.

As the automobile conveying Mrs. Carman, her husband and the sheriff rolled through Hempstead on its way to the jail, it passed a frail little girl in black. She was Madeline Bailey, 17-year-old daughter of the murdered woman. She was not aware that a woman held as her mother's slayer was passing, nor did other members of the Bailey family know that Mrs. Carman, on her way to jail, passed within a few blocks of their home.

CROSSES LINE FIRST

But Vanitie Loses to Resolute on Time Allowance

Newport, R. I., July 9.—After leading throughout the contest, the cup class yacht Vanitie lost the first of the actual trial races for the defense of the America's cup, the Resolute winning on her time allowance by one minute and nineteen seconds.

Three miles from the finish of the thirty-mile windward and leeward course, the Vanitie had the race apparently well in hand, but the Resolute, bringing up a freshening breeze, cut the lead of the Vanitie to thirty seconds at the line.

The Defiance, the third cup cadidate, broke down when she was scarcely outside the harbor.

The estate just outside of Tarrytown is in a state of siege. Armed guards are at each of the seven gates. No one is permitted to enter unless he is known and expected by the sentinels. At night the guards are doubled and watchdogs are turned loose.

RESPONSIBILITY RESTS ON ALL

Up to Men to Change Any Bad Conditions

"Responsibility" was the subject of the address by Secretary Bromley of the Y. M. C. A. before the members and their friends of the Fowler chapter of the Methodist Brotherhood at the Hall Place M. E. church on Wednesday evening.

Mr. Bromley said there were two stories in the Bible that interested him The first was of a man going on a trip late at night, who was met by men and knocked down and robbed. Other men came along, one was a minister or priest; and then a Levite, a man set apart for holy work, but he did not seem to feel any responsibility for that man, and it was left for the despised Samaritan to feel any responsibility for that man. The thing that appeals to him, was the responsibility up to that man that accepted it or was it a part of the responsibility of the other men?

The other story—the rich man and Lazarus. Lazarus has been lauded to the skies and the rich man put down the other way. He could not help but feel that Lazarus had some responsibility for his position.

Mr. Bromley said his talk was principally for the men, an dthat he was speaking of men who had only one or two talents and that these kind of men are apt to get behind the fellow with five or ten talents.

In speaking or responsibility, he said the responsibility for going to church is shoved off on somebody else. We do not accept the responsibility of the foreigner in our own land, if we did it would not be necessary for Mayor Miller to call a second meeting to secure aid for Salem.

The speaker emphasized the fact that the men must get down to the point where they feel the responsibility of putting the right people into office, and when there is an opportunity to the caucus and vote to go, and every man ought to be fined who won't go. It is up to the men to change any bad conditions existing in Quincy today. He said he could not see that human nature has changed much and thought our Ancestor Adam responsible for a whole lot coming out in us.

He further spoke of the responsibility of bringing up children and urged that the best way of getting on the best side of the boy is by chumming with him.

This was the regular meeting of the Brotherhood, the meeting having been changed from Thursday to Wednesday on account of the change in the prayer meeting.

After the address ice cream and cake were served and a social hour was enjoyed.

MAN DROWNED FROM SLOOP

Albert M. Ashland of 22 Beebe road, Quincy, fell overboard from the sloop of James S. Hoffses of 810 Winthrop avenue, Beachmont, Wednesday afternoon and was drowned near the Revere breakwater. Guy B. Fisher of 24 Campbell avenue, Revere made a valiant effort to save the life of Ashland, but he probably died while Fisher was rowing to him in his tender.

A few minutes beforee Fisher passed the Hoffses sloop when Ashland declined an invitation to sail with the party. When he had rowed about 150 feet away he saw Ashland fall overboard and commence to struggle in the water. A cry for help went out from Hoffses and accompanied by Adam Benene, of the Narada, Fisher rowed as fast as he could back to the place where Ashland went overboard. The latter swam a few moments and then sank, coming to the surface a few minutes later and floating with his face down. Fisher found him in this position, unconscious, but to his mind alive.

While bringing the man ashore, Benene succeeded in getting a quantity of water from Ashland's lungs. They landed at Ocean Pier and shouted for a doctor but one did not arrive for fully 20 minutes.

They failed to resuscitate Ashland while waiting and Dr. W. E. Brown worked over him with no better results. The body was taken to the Metropolitan Park Police station. Ashland has lived in Germantown for two years. He was employed by the National Wholesale Beef Co., and was married and leaves a wife and son. He was a member of Manchester, N. H. lodge of Elks. He was 47 years old.

CRUSHING THE KAFFIRS.

Treated Like Slaves, Even by White Children In South Africa.

In "The Real South Africa" the author, Ambrose Pratt, says that the Kaffirs are not only enslaved by the Boers, but it would seem also by the other whites, who ought to know better. The white children born in South Africa acquire incurable dumps of pride and indolence before they reach their teens. Their manners are haughty and overbearing:

"The first day I landed in South Africa I witnessed a small incident that will tell its own story. Strolling through the city of Durban in the early morning I saw a great hulking Kaffir carrying a bundle of papers to the door of a news agency, where a little boy about ten years of age was waiting to receive them. The Kaffir very respectfully placed the bundle on the steps at the child's feet and moved away. He was immediately recalled and most imperiously. 'You cheeky devil!' shrilled the child. 'How dare you leave the papers there! Take the bundle into the shop at once and untie it!' The Kaffir silently and humbly obeyed.

"'Now sort the papers!' ordered the child.

"Again the Kaffir obeyed. When his task was completed the little boy contemptuously pointed to the door. 'Get out!' he said.

"The Kaffir inclined reverently and backed out of the shop as though taking leave of royalty. The child did not even smile. The sneer on his face was fixed."

PITY THE POOR LIONS.

Hunters In Africa Actually Kick the Brutes Out of Their Way.

A globe trotter and a hunter, by name Percy Stanhope, is an Englishman who may or may not have a sense of humor. Here is what he said in New York recently about lion hunting in Africa:

"You hear them talk of lion hunting in Africa as though it were the king of sports. It's a beastly shame the way they treat the poor beasts. Why, when I was out in British East Africa two years ago there was a movement on foot to punish lion hunters for cruelty to animals. In fact, they were seriously taking up the question with the home government.

"The lives of the poor lions are being made a burden to them. I can remember when the lions would come in out of the jungle and sit on the platform of the railway stations, and some of those cruel Englishmen actually booted the beasts out of the way. Think of it, the cruelty of it all!

"There being no foxes available, the sportsmen out in those parts have a habit of stirring up a lion and pursuing the poor beast with whoops and yells until it drops dead of exhaustion and actual fright. The poor beasts have been so terrorized that when they see a white man they whimper from fright. This fear shortens the life of the lions, and unless drastic steps are taken to put a stop to the cruelty there won't be any of the animals left in Africa."—New York World.

Fear Is Useless.

Phobism is an addition to fear (another name for worry). If smugness be unlovely from a social point of view phobism is fatal to its victim. Did it ever occur to you that fear can become a habit and a luxury, just as smoking is? But phobism is the more hazardous. We fear poverty, we fear disease, we fear death, we fear that we shall be snubbed socially. And each separate fear impairs our capacity for work in a definite, measurable way. I know many people addicted to the use of fear. Some of them use it to excess. To the psychologist fear is the most expensive of all habits that people indulge. Ninety-nine and forty-four one-hundredths per cent of fear is as useless as a deckhand on a submarine.—Eliott Park Frost in Atlantic.

How to Win an Author.

"There's no greater fallacy," said an author at the Authors' club, "than the popular one to the effect that writers don't like you to talk to them about their work.

"Mark Twain exploded this fallacy well when he said that there were three ways of pleasing an author—first, to tell him that you have read one of his books; second, to tell him you have read all his books, and, third, to ask him to let you read the manuscript of his forthcoming book. The first way wins his respect, the second wins his friendship and the third wins his love."—New York Tribune.

He Thought He Was Handsome.

"So she has quarreled with that ugly beau of hers! He is the ugliest man I have ever seen. What did they quarrel about?"

"She thought she would make him feel good and remarked that handsome men were never worth enough powder to blow them over the fence."

"And it didn't have the desired effect?"

"No; it made him furiously angry."—Houston Post.

ILLUSTRATED TALK AT CLUBHOUSE

There was an attendance of upwards of 200 members of the Quincy Yacht club at the clubhouse Wednesday evening to listen to the talk by A. J. Burns, publicity agent of the Cunard Steamship Co.

Mr. Burns talk was illustrated by a large number of stereopticon views showing the first of the Cunard fleet as well as all of the present fleet. The views showed a number of interior views of the floating palaces. Other views showed interesting places in Belfast, Glasgow and Liverpool. An interesting feature of these latter views was added by songs which were sung by Miss Kelliher, which included "The Lakes of Killarney" and "Auld Lang Syne."

Mr. Burns gave a history of the Cunard company which he said was first organized to carry mails for the British government. The first vessel was one of the wooden type. From this he traced the growth and development of the company up to the present time, the company's latest product being the Auretania which was a floating palace.

He gave the tonage and other measurements of the different vessels of the fleet saying that the length of Auretania was over 900 feet and her tonage 50,000.

Some of the best views shown were interior pictures of the Auretania showing the state rooms, parlor, dining room, gymnasium, smoking room, bath, etc., also the large dinamo room.

His talk was a most interesting and instructive one and at its close he was given a rising vote of thanks and three cheers loud and long for the Cunard company.

ANOTHER FIRE AT BADGER'S

The Fourth at the Plant Since Sunday

For the fourth time since Sunday, a fire fiend, applied his torch to property owned by the Louis Badger Co., of West Quincy when an abandoned engine house at the old Wigwam quarry was discovered in flames.

The fire was discovered by a man waiting for a car on Copeland street who saw the building, which is situated on a hill a short distance from the West Quincy station, in flames. He sounded box 46 an dthe department arrived in quick time and made short work of the fire. The damage is less than $10.

Sunday evening the fiend's work resulted in over $300 damage to an office building of the firm on Willard street and three times since then fires have been discovered there. Last Friday night the engine house at the O. T. Rogers Co., was set afire.

During all the fires there has been a strong smell of kerosene, but it is thought that the fiend operating has not intended to destroy the buildings, because he set fire to the most prominent parts. Arthur H. Kimball of the state fire marshals office is in Quincy today making an investigation.

LITTLE GIRLS ASSAULTED.

Joseph Marono of Weymouth was arraigned on two charges of serious assault on two Weymouth girls, aged 12 and 14, respectively, in the district court this morning. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $2000 on each charge for examination next Friday.

Marono was arrested in Revere on Wednesday night and was brought to this city by Special Officer Scholfield of Weymouth. The police say they have evidence of a most revolting nature and allege that Marono enticed one girl to the Weymouth woods and she was accompanied by the other on a promise to show her a short cut to a store he claimed to own.

Both little girls, with their parents, were in court this morning, the picture of childish innocence, while in the prisoners docket, just beyond sat their alleged assailant, a handsome Italian with the features of an Apollo Belvidere. In a firm tone he pleaded not guilty and his counsel secured the continuance.

Eggs Long Used as Food.

Just how long people have been eating eggs is not known, certainly long before breakfasts were "invented" or made a custom. There is no doubt mankind in a barbaric state had learned of the use of certain eggs as a food.

DORCAS SOCIETY LAWN PARTY

A largely attended, successful and enjoyable lawn party was held Wednesday afternoon and evening by the Dorcas society of the Universalist church at the home of the Misses Hanson at 963 Hancock street.

During the afternoon and evening, tables for the sale of ice cream and cake, tonics, sandwiches, etc., were arranged about the lawn, and during the evening the grounds were made as light as day by many Japanese lanterns that were hung about the grounds.

One of the interesting features of the party was an exhibition of articles of an antique nature, which was in charge of Miss Kimball. Among the many articles shown were a Chinese ginger jar, said to be 150 years old, and pieces of china that had once been in the Adams family, which had been damaged and repaired abroad.

During the evening there were piano and violin duets by the Misses Walker of Atlantic and graphophone selections.

Tables and booths were arranged on the lawn in charge of the following: Ice Cream, Mrs. George E. Sprague; candy and lemonade, Mrs. John Smith Ring Toss, Misses Louise Prescott, Beatrice Coburn, Bernice Stoddard and Mildred Stoddard.

From 5 to 7 a lunch was served at small tables by Mrs. George F. Spooner and Miss Hanson assisted by several young ladies.

MACHINE BESTS MEN AT CHESS

Device That Protests When Human Opponent Cheats.

IT HAS SENSITIVE ORGANS.

Automatic Apparatus Constructed So That Competitor Is Obliged to Play Strictly According to Rules of the Game—When These Are Violated Lighted Lamp Gives Warning.

Is the day near at hand when science will be able to create a human being? This question may well be asked when one considers the latest invention of that king of automat inventors Senor Torres y Quevedo, member of the Spanish Academy of Sciences. Senor Torres caused a sensation some thirty years ago by inventing a machine which would solve algebraic equations. Then he invented a balloon which would direct itself and could attain a speed as great as the fastest Zeppelins.

The latest product of this wonderful laboratory, says a Paris dispatch to the New York Sun, is a machine which plays chess and which seems actually to accomplish the work of a human brain. Senor Torres thus describes his own invention:

"It is true that the game which the automat plays is not very complicated, but, nevertheless, for its opponent to win he must know how to play. The automat uses the white king against the castle and the black king. Its game is won in advance, but it must follow a certain course which leads it up to the finish.

On the Watch For Fraud.

"When the automat's opponent moves the black king the automat begins by seeing if the movement conforms with the rules of the game. If not it protests by lighting a lamp. If the move is according to the rules the automat, taking into account the position of the three pieces, decides what is the best move and then makes it. Thus the game continues until the automat has checkmated the black king.

"If the automat's opponent should make a mistake, as I said before, the automat protests by lighting a lamp. But it will tolerate only three mistakes. Then all its lights go out, and you may move your pieces as much as you want—the automat has finished. If you wish to begin a new game you invite the automat by a special movement to play another game. If it accepts it will turn out all its lights, place its pieces on the board in their original positions, then wait for you to make the first move.

"The old automats, the most celebrated of which were those of Vaucanson, imitated the appearance and the movements of man. Today this idea has been abandoned, and intricate machines, which look like nothing but machines, have taken their places. The self directing torpedo is a good example of an automat. The difficulty does not lie in the work of its helmsman, but in the determination of the movement to be executed. The machine deduces this movement from indicators by purely mechanical means. This, as in the calculating machines, is the brainwork of the man that the machine accomplishes.

Sensitive Mechanism.

"It is not to be denied that automats can have sensitive organs (monometers, thermometers, compasses, etc.,) permitting them to recognize the circumstances which determine their movements, but science refuses to admit that they can possess the analogue of a brain. But I believe I have shown that this possibility theoretically does not offer the least doubt. Automats can be made as complicated as one may wish.

"I believe that there is no limit in this domain and that theoretically at least the time will come when all factory operations, even those which demand the intervention of engineers, can be executed automatically."

BALDHEADED MATES BEST?

Club of Smooth Pates Meets Rebuff at Start of Inquiry.

The Baldhead Club of America, headquarters at Winsted, Conn., which holds its next banquet Oct. 29, is seeking information on "Why do baldheads make the best husbands?"

A woman who signed herself "The Hairy Man's Wife" wrote as follows: "I presume the members of that Baldhead association who are to banquet in Winsted will try to make it appear that they are the most model husbands. My husband is not baldheaded, and no woman could ask for a better husband.

"But I have a baldheaded brother-in-law and my sister assures me confidentially that he is conceited and thinks more of his own personal appearance and comfort than he does of hers. My answer to your question, 'Why do baldheads make the best husbands?' is 'Because they don't.'"

Rings Bell to Keep the Crows Away.

In order to keep the crows away Cyrus Dunham of Skowhegan, Me., has hung a bell in an apple tree close to the cornfield and attached a string to it that runs to the house through his bedroom window. In the morning, about daybreak, when the crows begin to visit the field, Dunham pulls the string, and the result is satisfactory.

"STRING" ACT REJECTED

New Haven Directors Prefer Suit to Sacrifice of Stock

New York, July 9.—The New Haven directors, at a meeting here, reiterated their refusal to accept the conditions imposed by the Massachusetts legislature in the disposal of the Boston and Maine stock owned by the New Haven through its ownership of the Boston Holding company.

The effect of this action, if approved by the stockholders, is to overturn the pending settlement agreement, in which the United States has been a party, and to invite the filing of a dissolution suit by the United States under the Sherman law.

The directors balk at the so-called "string" bill, passed by the legislature, which they declare will involve "such severe and unnecessary loss to the stockholders" that they feel they have not the right to accept.

The result of this action by the directors will, it is thought, mean receiverships both for the New Haven and the Boston and Maine.

DUPED YOUNG WOMEN

Indictment of White Slavers Who Sold Girls at $10 Each

New York, July 9.—That at least fifty girls have been lured from their homes and held prisoners by the gang of white slave dealers who made their headquarters in the Bronx and Westchester county, that these girls have been delivered at $10 a head by agents and then sold as so many cattle, was some of the testimony given by detectives to the Bronx grand jury.

This testimony followed the handing down of indictments against nine men and one woman on evidence given by Mrs. Delia N. Hanson, a Bridgeport widow, who was found almost crazed by abuse and beating after having been a prisoner of the gang.

In addition to the ten true bills three secret indictments were found against a man said to be the leader of the gang and two other members, all three of whom are at large.

NEGRO PREACHER SORRY HE RESIGNED

Makes Effort to Have Old Government Job Restored

Washington, July 9.—Rev. Albert E. Mooty of Georgia, the negro preacher who surprised Chief Clerk Chance of the postoffice department by resigning with the announcement that he could not serve God and the government, has found he was mistaken, and desires reinstatement.

In a letter asking for another chance Mooty says:

"My occupation was cleaning spittoons and making ice water for the building. I resign to preach. I resign for that cause. I was not dismissed. Since I have been out of the postoffice my family has been sick and I have suffer for something to go on.

"Please write Mr. Adamson, congressman, and tell him to telephone to postmaster general to have me reinstate. Anything that Georgia want in the government she can get it. I am a Georgia nigger."

Representative Adamson intends to intercede for the negro preacher, and Mooty probably will be reinstated.

DECREASE IN ACCIDENTS

Figures Show Success of "Safety First" Campaign In Boston

Boston, July 9.—A decrease of 80 percent in fatal street accidents and of 30 percent in all street accidents is reported by the safety committee of the Boston chamber of commerce as a result of the first week of the safety first campaign.

Figures furnished by the police department show that during the first week of July, 1913, there were 62 street accidents, of which nine were fatal, 10 serious and 44 minor. During the corresponding week this month there were only 43 accidents reported, two of which were fatal, 14 serious and 27 minor.

MUNYON GETS DIVORCE

Medicine Man Says He Has Had Enough of Matrimony

Philadelphia, July 9.—Among those who were freed from their matrimonial troubles in the summer divorce mill here was James M. Munyon, the patent medicine man, who was granted a decree from his wife.

"This is my last matrimonial venture, that is, if I am in my right senses," Munyon said. "Mrs. Munyon was a very beautiful woman, but it was purely a case of desertion. She was an actress and loved her work, and I wish her every success. I shall spend the rest of my life in the pursuit of happiness."

AN APPEAL FOR SALEM

QUINCY FUND GROWING

The calamity which has overtaken the city of Salem in the disastrous fire of Thursday, June 25, presents grave and pressing problems for relief.

Briefly, and as far as this committee has been able to ascertain the facts, there are between 15,000 and 20,000 people, mostly wage-earners, representing probably between 3000 and 4000 families, who have been rendered homeless and destitute.

In addition to this, and of far greater importance, is the fact that the great majority are without employment, due to the destruction of such industries as the cotton mills and many important factories which provided their employment. The problem of rehabilitation will, of necessity, be a long and expensive one.

The committee representing the state and local relief committee appointed by the Governor and city authorities, makes this general appeal for money for the sufferers, believing, after careful investigation, that the extent of the disaster justifies this action. Quincy contributions may be sent to Clarence Burgin, treasurer of the Quincy fund.

Massachusetts the work was completed, and all improvements asked for made approximately $80,000 leaving an unexpended balance of $60,000.

In July 1912, Commissioner Crane acting for the City of Quincy, appeared in Washington before the United States Army Engineers and asked for a survey of the river to a depth of 24 feet and also for the expenditure of a portion of the unexpended balance for certain improvements which he at that time advised.

On this visit he was accompanied by President Bowles of the Fore River Corp., Capt. Joseph Kemp, and F. O. Wellington assistant to President Bowles. Also by all of the Senators and Congressmen from Massachusetts then in Washington.

A survey was ordered, and was made by Col. Mills, district officer at Boston in 1913, which report approved the expenditure of $21,000 which would widen the river to the proper width for further excavations to 24 feet deep.

This report however did not reach Washington in time to be included in the River and Harbors bill of this year. Commissioner Crane however made three trips to Washington and assisted by Senator John W. Weeks and Senator Henry Cabot Lodge and Congressmen from Massachusetts, was able to have the $21,000 included in the Rivers and Harbors bill.

Through the special efforts of Senator Weeks, in whose hands Commissioner Crane placed all data in regard to the 24 foot channel, the Senate Committee on Commerce has asked for a consideration of the report and examination of the Weymouth Fore river for a depth of 24 feet.

It is on this matter that the hearing will be held in Boston on Friday, in order that the City of Quincy, the City of Boston, the towns of Weymouth, Braintree, Hingham and any other community interested in the improvement of the Weymouth Fore river may appear and advocate the further improvement of the river to a depth of 24 feet, the estimated cost of which is $389,958.80.

NOTE WAS FORGED.

Wednesday afternoon a boy appeared at the window in City Treasurer's office at City Hall and presenting a note asked for the pay envelopes of William Duane and William Johnson, two employees in the highway department.

As the notes seemed to be all right the money, $34 was paid to the boy. A little later Messrs. Duane and Johnson came for their money and declared that they had not authorized anyone to draw it for them or that they had had given a note to any one.

This is the third time this trick has been pulled off at the City Treasurer's office, the last time being in April, when a boy drew money for one of the city employees. It is thought that it was the same boy who did the trick Wednesday.

NEW BRIDGE AT GRANITE STREET

Many have noticed for a week or more that a gang of railroad men have been at work on the railroad bridge over Granite street, and doubtless have wondered what is going on. The workmen however are uncommunicative, but from observation it is very evident that the bridge is being rebuilt Or rather that the present bridge is to be replaced by a new structure which when completed will be large enough to accommodate four tracks.

It is understood that the line of the railroad will be straightened somewhat at this point, which has always been considered by locomotive engineers as a dangerous curve, and that the grade will be raised several inches.

One of the first things a railroad company does when it starts in to separate grade crossings is to make the necessary changes in the bridges. This is just what is now being done. The general impression therefore among those who have looked at the work in progress is that this is the first step toward separating the grade crossings at Saville and Water streets.

While it has not been given out officially, it is reported on good authority that the railroad intends to lower its tracks somewhat beneath the Beale street bridge so that the present almost prohibitive grade on the east side will be eased off considerably. The same thing may also be done at Dimmock street, so that grade will be eased somewhat. There is a still further rumor that some agreement may be entered into that will solve the excessive grade at the School street bridge.

It is evident that now that the crossing problem is settled that the railroad intends to commence work immediately abolishing the grade crossings in Quincy.

LIBRARY NOTES.

The Thomas Crane Public Library has just subscribed for a new magazine issued quarterly by Henry Holt & Co., entitled the Unpopular Review. Its avowed purpose is "to dispel agreeable fallacies and to disseminate disagreeable truths," thus anticipating its own unpopularity. But the publishers state that the tone of the review, nevertheless, is to be optimistic and that remedies are to be dealt with more gladly than defects.

The first three numbers of the review may be found on the periodical case and may be borrowed for two weeks unless its popularity makes a shorter period advisable.

The circulation at the Atlantic Reading Room was 2232 for the month of June; largest day's output, 206. This is an increase of 895 over June 1913. It is hoped that the new room on Sagamore street which the Bennett Bros. are building for our occupancy will be finished this month so that August 1 will find this Branch in more commodious quarters.

The Central Library misses for the rest of the summer the three apprentices who will make themselves more valuable in the fall by the six weeks summer course at Simmons College. We shall be glad to welcome Miss Whittemore, Miss Kingsbury and Miss Prout the first of September.

CASE DISMISSED.

The case against Leo J. Cutler, the local newsboy, was called in court this morning and dismissed for want of prosecution. The charges on which he was arraigned grew out of a misunderstanding between members of an organization with which he was affiliated and himself over finance. When the facts became known the complainants dropped their charge.

IS IT YOUR KIDNEYS?

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. A Quincy Citizen Gives a Valuable Hint.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is where danger often lies. You should realize that these troubles often lead to dropsy or Bright's disease. An effective remedy for weak or diseased kidneys is Doan's Kidney Pills. Read the experience of a resident of Quincy who has tested Doan's.

C. P. Russell, 37 Washington street, Quincy, says: "My kidneys were weak and acted irregularly. I also suffered from pains in my back. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and the first box relieved me. I intend to continue taking this medicine."

Roosevelt Declines to Run For Governorship of New York

New York, July 9.—For two hours the Progressive leaders of New York state used every argument at their command to force Theodore Roosevelt to agree that he would accept the nomination for governor.

After it was all over Roosevelt said he had nothing to say at this time, and would not change his previous statements declining to run. It was understood, however, that the question was still an open one.

ON TRACK OF TWO SUSPECTS

Police Have Description of Alleged Dynamiters

HOUSE IS PARTIALLY WRECKED

Official of Wakefield Rattan Company, Where Strike Has Been In Progress, and His Family Escape Injury When Bomb Is Thrown Through Kitchen Window

Wakefield, Mass., July 9.—A reward of $500 will probably be offered for the discovery of the perpetrators of the Wakefield dynamite outrage.

State ad town police, equipped with a general description of two suspects, with measurements and photographs of footprints and with a box of matches the bomb throwers left on the scene, are tracking in Boston two men who are believed to have dynamited the Wakefield home of Richard S. Stout, assistant superintendent of the Heywood Brothers and Wakefield Rattan company.

The deadly missile, dropped through a kitchen window after the glass was smashed, partially wrecked the house, causing $1000 damage. The inmates were all on an upper floor and escaped injury.

The police believe the men hid for hours in the second yard east of the Stout residence, and at a favorable moment smashed the kitchen window with a club, tossed in the lighted bomb, and raced down Main street in the direction of Melrose Highlands. The whereabouts have been established of certain men, who, the police say, might have had an interest in doing damage to Stout's property or person.

One of the Wakefield organizers of the I. W. W., Caleb F. Howard, offered the following statement:

"The I. W. W. protests against any intimation charging the blame of this explosion on the workmen. I have spent much time in Wakefield. The men mean to win by striking, not by force of arms. Violence makes sympathy for the other fellow. Our men have received much support from Wakefield in this strike. They intend to deserve it by merely striking and waiting to win."

A conference was held between the selectmen of Wakefield and President Langdon of the factory to arrange the details of a reward to be offered for information leading to the conviction of the man or men who dynamited Stout's home.

The A. F. of L. has forwarded sentiments of regret for an occurrence that might injure the union cause, coming at such a critical time.

RECOVERED FROM EMPRESS

Bodies of General Hunter and His Son Found by Divers

Montreal, July 9.—Two bodies were recovered from the sunken Empress of Ireland off Rimouski, when divers went down to begin operations of salvaging the bullion the vessel carried.

The bodies were those of Brigadier General Hunter of the Indian army and his son. His wife's body was picked up the morning after the Empress sank. A daughter was also drowned and her body has not yet been recovered.

There was $2,000,000 worth of silver on the Empress, and the divers have set to work to reach the treasure.

WANTS TO BE NEAR WIFE

Governor of Michigan Will Not Be Candidate For Re-election

Lansing, Mich., July 9.—"Mrs. Ferris asked me not to be a candidate again this year," said Governor Ferris. "She said she might not have long to live, and she wanted me to be with her as much as possible."

It is believed among the governor's closest friends and advisers that he will heed Mrs. Ferris' request. The governor, worn and haggard, admitted he had slept little in the last month because of Mrs. Ferris' condition.

"UNDER MARITAL CONTROL"

Woman With University Degree Cannot Practice Law In Quebec

Quebec, July 9.—Although she holds a perfectly good "B. L." degree from McGill university law school, Mrs. Annie Langstaff was barred from law practice in Quebec by the board of examiners.

Their ruling followed English decisions that a woman may not practice before the bar, and, inasmuch as she is a married woman, the Canadian law also holds that she is "under marital control."

Triple Drowning Accident

MOLD ATHLETIC STARS FOR 1916

Olympic Team Developing In Schools and Colleges.

TO DISPLACE OLD CHAMPS.

Three-quarters of American Team at Berlin Will Be Made Up of Newcomers, Say Authorities—Intercollegiate and Scholastic Meets Have Uncovered a Wealth of Good Material.

Practically an entirely new Olympic team is being molded into shape for the games which will be held in the Berlin stadium in 1916.

As a result of the recent collegiate meets experts are predicting that three-fourths of the next American Olympic team will be composed of athletes representing educational institutions. All the collegiate meets have produced men who warrant the belief that they will win their way to Germany to battle for world's honors.

ence at St. Louis, the western conference at Chicago and the Pacific coast meets sterling performances were made.

The Mississippi meet at St. Louis uncovered a young quarter miler who is likely to develop into a record breaker. He is a sturdy lad named Cowman, from Rolla School of Mines. In the quarter mile race he defeated a big field on a rather slow track in the exceptionally fast time of 48 2-5 seconds.

From Chicago comes word of remarkable performances in the middle distance events by W. A. Goelitz of Illinois, Sanders of Illinois, Haff of Michigan, Stegeman of Chicago, Williams of Wisconsin and East of Purdue. Ward of Chicago and F. W. Kelly of California demonstrated at the Penn relays that they are as good as any high hurdlers in America.

Bond and Seward of Michigan and Reller of Cornell are expected to develop into the sprinters who will make the team. Howard Drew of the Southern university of California is now in a class by himself as a sprinter, but it is a question of whether or not he will hold his form for two more years. He is nearly thirty years of age, and experts say he will lose his great speed before the next Olympics. Dave Caldwell of Cornell, Ted Meredith of Pennsylvania, Donald Lippincott of Pennsylvania, Speiden of Cornell and Madeira of Pennsylvania are middle distance runners who are expected to be on the next American team. All of them showed great form last spring, and each is likely to improve with training and competition.

Other collegians who have shown Olympic form are Beatty of Columbia in the shot, Bailey of Vermont in the hammer throw, Richards of Cornell in the high jumps, Whitney of Dartmouth in the hammer and discus throws, Hoffmire of Cornell in the distance runs, Nichols of California and Oler of Yale in the high jumps, Ferguson of Pennsylvania in the low hurdles, Cline of Colorado in the middle distance runs, Brown of Yale in the half mile, Longbridge of Yale in the hammer, Barron of Harvard in the quarter mile dash, Camp of Harvard in the pole vault, Nordell of Dartmouth in the broad jump, Preble of California in the high hurdles, Bingham of Harvard in the quarter mile dash, Mackenzie of Princeton in the mile run and Kohler of Michigan in the discus.

While the collegians undoubtedly will be in the majority, the clubs have many youngsters who promise to make records before the selection of the team. A few of the veterans, such as Pat McDonald, Matt McGrath and Aled Kiviat, are likely to retain their form in their specialties, but most of the contenders for places on the team are likely to be youngsters.

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Cohasset, bounded and described as follows:—

Northwesterly, Northeasterly and Westerly by land of Thomas W. Thacher; Northerly by the Sea; Easterly and Northeasterly by land of Albert F. Fine New Machine Embroideries That Look Much Like Handwork

NEW WHITE GOWN.

MACHINE embroidery on sheer batiste is here combined with shadow lace. The full frilly effect about the lower part of the gown is a French idea for making the skirt more convenient for walking or dancing. A girdle of Bermuda pink ribbon is adorned with pink satin rosebuds in a deeper tone. A wide hat of leghorn and buttoned strap sandals give the finishing touch of chic.

DECORATIVE JEWELRY.

Beautiful Effects Achieved With Semi-precious Stones and Beads.

Jewelry, whether real or imitation, is an important feature of the toilet of this summer season of 1914. It does not seem to matter greatly whether the jewelry is real or imitation, since it is worn to add a color note or to emphasize one already in the costume. Huge strands of beads are donned with dressy waists, and for evening wear the variety of jewelry which is permissible is really astonishing. Those who have handsome enamels, old fashioned cameos or fine corals can now bring them out with complacency, for all these are worn and approved.

With the vogue for imitation jewels approved by really smart women, others less chic have followed their lead, until at present there is a veritable craze for imitation gems and beads of all kinds. It is a pretty fashion and one that can be made most effective if the wearer uses discretion.

A vivid note of color may be given to a somber costume by placing a string of coral, jade or amber beads about the neck, or a finishing touch may be given a gown by wearing earrings and beads in a contrasting or harmonizing shade.

Eartings continue to hold all their popularity and are to be found in all kinds of stones to harmonize with the necklaces.

Illustrated here are a pretty lace pin of silver and imitation pearls, an enameled watch set with a pearl and suspended on a gold chain set with amethysts. The little bow of black tulle is run through a tulle slide.

SCALLOPED TOMATOES.

Drain the liquid from one can of tomatoes, saving it for tomato soup. Add to the pulp one and a half cupfuls of fine bread-crumbs, one egg, one tablespoonful of butter, with salt, pepper, sugar and onion juice to suit the taste. Mix all thoroughly, put in buttered ramekins or an earthen dish, cover with buttered crumbs of bread or cracker and bake about twenty minutes until firm and brown.

STORING SILVER.

When Not In Use Pack It Away From the Air.

Silverware not in use should be packed away from the air. Take an ordinary wooden starch box or other box of convenient size and put the articles to be stored in it, covering with flour. If polished when put away they will be ready for immediate use when taken out and the flour brushed off.

Or put the silver away in unbleached outing flannel bags or bags made of canton flannel. Be sure the material is unbleached, for the chemicals used in bleaching will discolor silver.

The daily silver should be kept in a drawer lined with canton flannel or chamois. It should be cleaned well every day and polished once a week.

First wash it thoroughly in soapsuds with a little soda in the water. Boiling the silver in the soapy solution for a few minutes is good. Then pour off the suds and pour on clean boiling water. Dry and polish with chamois skin.

Whitening wet with alcohol or sweet oil, prepared chalk and cream of tartar make good polishes for silver, or the whitening may be moistened with soapy water rubbed on the silver, permitted to dry and then rubbed off. Use a soft brush to get the whiting out of carved or engraved parts. Where spots on silver do not come off easily try rubbing with the wet surface of freshly halved potato.

A way recommended broadcast for cleaning tarnished silver is to lay it in a tin dishpan—it must be tin—with a piece of zinc and enough water to cover and boil for a few minutes or until tarnish disappears.

A Testing Fork.

A clever housewife has invented a kitchen tool. Taking an ordinary long handled, three pronged cook's fork, she filed off the two outer prongs, leaving only one, and uses this to test whether a vegetable or piece of meat is tender. The one prong makes less mark and is less apt to break the food than the three piercings. The fork is good also to remove caps from milk bottles and especially so in taking olives and other foods from long necked bottles and cans.

Dainty Gifts.

Sachets, glove cases, veil cases, shoe bags, handkerchief cases, mending bags and needlecases of cretonne make nice gifts.

TWO REFUGEE CAMPS GONE

Concentration of Refugees Is Begun at Salem

LAYING PLANS FOR NEW CITY

Congested Districts Likely to Be Abolished—Temporary One-Story Buildings Being Rushed to Completion—Forty-Three Hundred Persons Still In the Bread Line

Salem, Mass., July 9.—Two of the refugee camps in Salem have been abolished. Two hundred homeless people who have been sheltered and fed in Bertram field and 150 at Bessom's Beach since the conflagration were transferred to the Forest river camp, where eventually all of the fire sufferers will be concentrated.

Instead of 4000 or 5000, as was generally believed, there were actually only 1325 men, women and children in the concentration camps established for the persons who lost their homes in the fire of June 25, Mayor Hurley announced.

At a meeting of the relief committee of fourteen, the finace sub-committee reported that appeals for assistance had been sent to 6700 clergymen, 800 theatres, 3500 hotels, 5000 individuals, 800 boards of trade, 660 Young Men's Christian associations, 1200 banks and 37 baseball clubs.

Citizen constabulary, commanded by Colonel Cutting, is in complete control of Salem. At Forest river a big tented city will be established.

The rebuilding commission, which was appointed by Governor Walsh, met for an informal session to discuss getting things under way as quickly as possible.

City planning, as well as home building, is to be a big part of the work of this commission, and many plans are already under discussion for the new Salem.

Perhaps the most interesting of these is the plan to spread out the city, and to do away with the congested districts, which, it is admitted, were in great measure responsible for the spread of the disastrous fire and have always been responsible for much of the city's ill health, as well as for much of the crime.

Salem is teeming with industry in the devastated section. The noise of the hammer and the saw is mingled with the detonations of dynamite as temporary buildings are springing up in the burned sections. More than 100 building permits have already been issued.

Salem is springing up like a mushroom city in the west. Scores of men are being put to work daily as permits are issued for the erection of buildings. Most of the buildings going up will be one-story affairs to be replaced later, when definite plans for the rebuilding of the city are completed, by substantial permanent buildings.

Two immense towers of the Naumkeag mills, each more than 100 feet high, were dynamited. Volunteers from the Second corps cadets, who had been mustered out of service, furnished protection while the dynamiting was going on.

After thirteen days of relief work 4300 persons are still dependent on the Salem bread line for food. It is expected by relief workers that Salem's bread line will continue another week at least, although it is decreasing rapidly.

Government to Give $200,000

Washington, July 9.—Largely through the work of Governor Walsh of Massachusetts, Senator Hollis' amendment providing $200,000 for the relief of the sufferers of the Salem fire was adopted by the senate without a dissenting vote.

SHOTS HIT THE MACHIAS

Dominicans Quit When They Get Reply From American Gunboat

Washington, July 9.—Recklessly firing, Dominican rebels sent several shots against the hull of the American gunboat Machias in Puerta Plata harbor and drew upon themselves a warning volley from the Machias' three-pounders and automatic rifles.

The shooting from the shore stopped at once.

A few days ago the gunboat used her main battery of four-inch guns to silence President Bordas' batteries, which were bombarding the rebel garrison holding the city, in violation of the agreement that the lives of foreigners and other non-combatants would not be endangered by artillery fire.

New Union of 400,000 Members

London, July 9.—A joint conference of representatives of the various unions of transport workers agreed to amalgamate under the title of the National Transport Workers' Federation. The new union will have a membership of 400,000.

Railroad Wreck In Vermont

Sheldon, Vt., July 9.—Seven persons were injured when a train ran into a washout near Sheldon Springs. The roadbed had been washed away by a rainstorm.

Three Perish on Submarine

Paris, July 9.—Three members of the crew of the French submarine Calypso perished when the craft was sunk during maneuvers.

Americanized Vera Cruz; Amusements of Soldiers During the Occupation

BENEATH the portals on the northern side of the Plaza de la Constitucion, at a vantage point before which Vera Cruz—the unique American-Spanish Vera Cruz of today—passes and repasses, I transfer some varied impressions to paper, writes a correspondent of the New York Herald.

To my right have been swung back the ponderous doors which once concealed from the vulgar gaze veiled sisters, who told their beads and murmured the sacred litany under the fronds of tropical plants. The great doors are now plentifully pitted with bullet holes, for the self same patio was more recently a battleground contested desperately by Mexican volunteers against the onslaughts of United States bluejackets and marines.

The nuns went away nearly half a century ago. The Mexican soldiery were carried away a few short weeks ago, dead and wounded, for they fought pluckily at this point. The patio is the most remarkable of ballrooms, and the dancers who nightly trip the one step and glide through the graceful movements of the hesitation waltz are no less remarkable than the quaint history of the place itself.

Sun tanned army and marine officers in stained and worn field uniforms, with their heavy Colt automatics hung from their cartridge belts, present a picturesque contrast to their partners—American, English and German women. A further bright touch is given to the picture by the immaculately clad navy officers, their dancing as faultless as their glistening white uniforms.

Many of the women cared for the Mexicans who were shattered in body and limb by the bullets of the troops commanded by their dance partners. Then the patio was a veritable shambles.

Intermixed with the uniforms of the officers can be seen the somewhat incongruous habiliments of the newspaper correspondents. The regulations of the war department prescribe olive drab for the newspaper men, but no stipulation was made concerning sartorical design; hence the assortment, uniform only in color. Each man has donned that which he conceives to be the most appropriate garments for the work in hand and as tailoring artists may have not proved altogether successful.

The attitude of all during the early days of the occupation of Vera Cruz has undergone a change. In the beginning nothing short of a street skirmish and the capture of an additional portion of the city by the Americans or the report that General Maas was concentrating a strong attacking force upon the outpost line was sufficient to stir the listless diners. Now the arrest of a peon maddened with pulque who has been trying to carve some of his friends with a knife and has defied all efforts of a native policeman to take him into custody is sufficient to attract the attention of every one seated around the plaza.

Generally a word from one of the marine sentries drives the drunken marauder within the portals of the police station. Through the pulque fumes comes back the recollection that the "sea soldiers" tolerate no nonsense, and he goes to his cell unaided, to appeal to the military court in the morning.

At the eastern end of the plaza is a color scheme which vies with that of the cloistered ballroom of the Universal. There the enlisted men of the army, the marine corps and of the international fleet in the harbor meet and exchange anecdotes. It is the delight of the American and British bluejackets to order that which they desire to eat and drink in what they conceive to be faultless Spanish.

QUINCY WOMEN

newly organized City Federation of Womens Clubs.

Mrs. Wilson Marsh, president of the Federation, said that the Federation was so recently organized, and so many ladies were away, that it seemed too great an undertaking for the Federation.

Mrs. Arthur D. Ropes, the president of the Wollaston Womens Club, was willing to do her part. She favored the selection of a chairman with experience in Tag Day work.

President Hamilton got the ladies to say by a show of hands that they were willing to undertake the work which a Tag Day involves and it was then voted that the ladies be a committee to make all arrangements.

Mr. LaBrecque told of the banks owned by the C. E. Sherman Co., which could be used. They are numbered and can only be opened except by a key.

The men's meeting then adjourned, and left the ladies to organize for a Tag Day. The Mayor and others waited down stairs for awhile, but the ladies showed no sign of adjournement What they did is best told by the official announcement in this issue of the Daily Ledger.

At first Mrs. Wilson Marsh presided and Mrs. Frank F. Prescott was secretary. The ladies selected sub committees for each ward of the city and the seashore resorts. They accepted the offers of tags and banks. They voted to have posters printed, and to advertise in the local newspapers. They also voted to enlist the services of the Boy Scouts, the "Minute Men" of the Atlantic Memorial church and young people generally as canvassers. Only those supplied with banks are authorized to collect, and the public is requested to put funds into the banks.

Mrs. Marsh had to retire early and Mrs. J. R. Mellen succeeded her as chairman. Later it was decided to take President Whiton at his word, when he said he would do what he could, and he was elected general chairman of the committee.

Mr. Whiton had gone to the clubhouse of the Quincy Yacht club, but he was reached by telephone, and agreed to accept. The ladies wanted a conference with him right away, and promised to wait at City Hall for him to come. After awhile Mr. Whiton responded and details were completed but it was nearly 11 o'clock before adjournment was reached. Mrs. J. R. Mellen was elected treasurer.

The public should read the official announcement in the Daily Ledger and be ready to assist with their services. and respond with their money.. Some arrangements will be made to "touch" those who attend the launching of Nevada.

AUTOMOBILES IN COLLISION

A high powered auto, said to have been travelling at rapid speed and operated by a woman, smashed into the auto of William R. Dimmock, the contractor and builder, as it stood opposite the residence of Thomas G. Smith at 286 Washington street about 11 o'clock Wednesday night.

Mr. Smith, a prominent member of the Granite City Club, was on the sidewalk, reaching for his crutches, when the machine sprang out of the darkness and headed toward the Dimmock machine. Although handicapped by the recent loss of a leg he hopped to one side in time to avoid being struck and then collapsed. He was revived but is today suffering from the shock.

Mr. Dimmock was assisting Mr. Smith secure his crutches and did not see the approaching machine in time to jump. Besides a severe shaking up he was cut about the face with flying glass.

The woman operating the other machine, said by the police to be owned by George A. Smith of 10 Roland street Charlestown, and the passengers, escaped injury.

Both autos were badly smashed. The Smith machine was towed to the Central garage and the Dimmock auto has been left as it was after the accident.

It is not known whether the police will take any action but within a few days suits will be entered against the owner of the Charlestown machine.

POLICE MAKE SEVERAL RAIDS

Two squads of police, under command of Capt. D. R. McKay and Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue made nine raids in different parts of the city Wednesday evening and by 11 o'clock they had secured 10 kegs of beer and about 200 bottles of beer. Only two arrests were made.

Alphonso Farnada of 11 Sumner street and Rosari DeBella of 139 Sumner street were arrested on charges of keeping and exposing intoxicating liquors for sale.

The police commenced activities shortly before 6 o'clock when the squad under Capt. McKay commenced raiding in the Point district. Inspector Goodhue and another squad operated at the same time in the Water street district.

In several places the men narrowly escaped becoming embroiled in arguments with the men charged with conducting the places, but no serious trouble developed. Several appliances including tubs to bottled beer were seized.

Farano and DeBello were arraigned in court this morning and pleaded not guilty to charges of keeping and exposing with intent to sell intoxicating liquors. The cases were continued to July 17.

Warrents were issued for the occupants of the other houses on complaints of the police this morning. Their cases will be called Wednesday morning.

Warrants were issued for Guiseppi Passarello, 51 Water street; Salvatore Renna, 71 Water street; Stefano Murachino, 34 Union street; Calogero Alfano, 71 Water street; Calogero Maligno, 46 Summer street.

As the police auto stopped at 139 Sumner street an express team drove away, after leaving a consignment of liquor. This was seized. On Elm place an express man did not deliver liquor because the police were making a raid.

The raiding session was the second held by the police within a month and the third will soon follow. Evidence of all kinds has been secured against the defendants and it appears strong enough to secure a conviction in each case.

THREATENED TO SHOOT WITNESS

The case of Sam Cantor of 1 Linden street, charged with keeping and exposing liquors, took a sensational turn this morning when the defendant threatened to shoot Mike Thomas a Russian, in open court.

Thomas was a government witness and gave strong testimony against Cantor. As he left the stand Cantor made the threat. It was overheard by Judge Avery who recalled Thomas and asked what had been said. The witness repeated the threat, and Inspector Goodhue who was prosecuting, asked if it was not time something was done, as the defendant had passed remarks to every witness after testifying.

Judge Avery overlooked the threat but in imposing a fine of $50 said the defendant had not acted the right way during the trial. He was given ten days to pay the fine.

Thomas H. Buttimer of Hingham represented Cantor and made a strong fight for acquittal.

WON BY TAFT.

OMENS IN BASEBALL.

A Manager's Method of Turning a Superstition to Account.

Writing on baseball matters in the New York Tribune, John J. McGraw has this to say about the superstitions of the players:

"I recognize the superstitions of ball players. For example, back in 1904, when Bowerman was with the team, he came to me one day and said:

"'As I came in today I saw a team of white horses driving past the Polo grounds. That's a good sign. Watch me kill the ball this afternoon.'

"He did. The belief in his superstition had given him confidence. Bowerman spread the tidings of the white horses around the clubhouse. The next day somebody else saw the white horses, so the day after. By the end of the week the entire team was hitting like a house on fire. They all believed in the superstition, and it gave them confidence. One day my shortstop, Dahlen, remarked:

"'Funny those white horses always happen to drive past the ball park just when we are coming into the clubhouse. It's certainly lucky.'

"I heard him and couldn't keep back a smile. On the day Bowerman told me he had seen the horses I made up my mind that everybody else would see them as long as it helped their batting. So I engaged a man to drive past the Polo grounds every day. That is a fact, and it shows the lengths to which a manager will go to cater to ball players' superstitions."

DALTON'S EXPERIMENT.

Showing What a Genius Can Do With Crude Apparatus.

The great English chemist Dalton was a schoolteacher. He worked without a laboratory and with crude apparatus, mostly made by himself from simple materials. Here is an example described in his own words:

"Took an ale glass of a conical figure, two and a half inches in diameter and three inches deep; filled it with water that had been standing in the room and consequently of the temperature of the air nearly; put the bulb of the thermometer to the bottom of the glass, the scale being out of the water. Then, having marked the temperature, I put the redhot tip of the poker half an inch deep in the water, holding it there steadily for half a minute, and as soon as it was withdrawn I dipped the bulb of a sensible thermometer into the water, when it rose in a few seconds to 180 degrees."

He then determined the temperature of the water at the bottom after five minutes, after twenty minutes and after an hour and found that it rose gradually from 47 to 52 degrees. This simple experiment proved that water has the power to conduct heat, which had been denied by no less an authority than Rumford.—Youth's Companion.

The Conscientious Chinese Child.

One of our missionaries, writing of a little girl in the school under her care, says: "Last night Wah Noo told me she wanted to be 'a whole Christian,' as she called it. So we had a long talk and tried to think of all the wrong we had done that day and confess it to each other. She counted these wrongs on her fingers: 'I did not brush my teeth as you told me to do; I did not take off the lower sheet on the bed when I made it up, and I know I ought to always; I got angry with one of the girls at school; I did not use my soap when I took my bath; I did not try to do my example in multiplication; all the other girls did theirs wrong, so I thought I would too.'"—Cor. Christian Herald.

Poetry and Punctuation.

In his poem "Narcissus" Robert Bridges, the English poet laureate, has banished the comma entirely, so that a procession of adjectives may be taken, at the reader's option, as separate qualities or as qualifying each other. Thus one may call his hero "almighty wondrous" or regard him as being both. Mr. Bridges' principles of punctuation are not obvious. He loves the exclamation mark, using it five times in the twenty-eight lines of the poem, and sprinkles dashes about with prodigality. He adopts the colon and does not slight the interrogation mark, while using now and then a full stop.—Chicago News.

A Lucky Escape.

"I owe my success in life to politics."

"I was not aware that you were a politician."

"I'm not, but I thought I was once and got myself nominated for an office that, if I had been elected, would have paid me about $1,500 a year. I was so badly beaten that I dropped politics forever and took up the business that has brought me a fortune. It makes me shudder when I remember that if I had been elected I might now be afraid of doing something that would deprive me of the lodging house vote."—Chicago Herald.

Reckless.

Mr. Sapleigh—No, I'm not feeling very well, you know. I have thought once or twice lately— Miss Keen—Good gracious! And then you wonder why you are feeling ill. You really should not do such reckless things.—Boston Transcript.

The Retort Courteous.

Nell—That girl has a finger in everything. Belle—Yes, she's had it in some engagement rings you'd like to have.—Baltimore American.

DISTINGUISHED GUESTS AT QUINCY LAUNCHING

Secretary of Navy, Members of Congress, Governor of Nevada and Others Expected

Miss Siebert, the Sponsor, Is Now in Boston

Miss Elcanor Anne Siebert, the 11 year old miss who is to be the sponsor for the battleship Nevada, at the launching in Quincy at 1.30 on Saturday, arrived in Boston on Thursday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic J. Siebert, and her brother Frederic J. Siebert, Jr. The party went immediately to the Copley-Plaza where they will be joined today by Gov. Tasker L. Oddie who arrived in Boston two days ago, and who has been the guest of friends in Gloucester.

Miss Siebert, who is a niece of Gov. Oddie, spent a part of Thursday in visiting the shopping district in Boston, and today will go on sight seeing tours.

Although but 11 years of age, having been born in Tonopah, July 23, 1903, she has travelled over a greater part of the country west of the Mississippi with her father, who is a well known mining engineer.

Secretary Daniels of the Navy will arrive at the Fore River plant in the government boat Dolphin Saturday morning. In the secretary's party are Mrs. Daniels and their four sons, Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman of Nevada, Mrs. Newlands, wife of Senator Newlands of Nevada and Commander Needham L. Jones.

Dr. and Mrs. John W. Counglin of Fall River, personal friends of Secretary Daniels, will join them at the Fore River yard Saturday morning.

Senator Newlands of Nevada will also attend the launching if possible. He is chairman of the Committee on Interstate Commerce, which is now considering the Trade Commission bill, and is particularly busy at this time.

Gov. Oddie and the official launching party will come to the Fore River plant Saturday morning on special cars which will be attached to one of the South Shore trains. This car will be met at East Braintree by one of the Fore River locomotives and taken to the plant, landing the party within a few feet of the launching stand.

Thousands of tickets have been issued for the yard and stand A, as it is called, and the launch is expected to be witnessed by a very large crowd, for aside from those holding tickets to the inclosures, the shores of Weymouth Fore River will be lined with thousands of sightseers.

The final details for the launching of the ponderous fighting machine were completed last night and if it were necessary to send her down the ways today the hull could be released from its cradle at a few minutes notice.

Over eight tons of steaming hot tallow have been smeared along the ways. Although it hardened over night the friction caused by the slipping of the hull will quickly soften it, and by the time she reaches the waters edge heavy clouds of black smoke from the burning grease will hide the sides.

Government inspectors have pronounced the hull of the Nevada the "tightest" ever built. In the tests the past week thousands of gallon of water have been poured into the hold and she has leaked less than a tubfull.

Hon. Josephus Daniels will be given the Secretary of the Navy's salute of 17 guns as the Dolphin passes through the draw of the Fore River bridge.

Edward A. Gisburne, Quincy hero of Vera Cruz, who was recently informed by Secretary Daniels that he had been awarded a medal of honor, and advance in rating and a gratuity of $100 in gold for extraordinary heroism under fire, will be presented to the secretary by President Powell of the Fore River company on the launching stand.

It is estimated that the entire cost of launching the battleship Nevada will be $20,000. This amount involves only the actual cost of preparing for her maiden dip.

BODY FOUND ON BEACH

Proved to be Knud Knudsen Drowned on Fourth

The body of Knud Knudsen of Norwood, who was drowned on the afternoon of the holiday, off Houghs Neck, was recovered this morning, having come ashore in the morning tide. The body was found near the old gunning stand on Norton road by Mr. Hallan. The police were notified and the body was taken to Hall's undertaking rooms.

Mr. Knudsen and a companion hired a boat from John Powers on the afternoon of the July Fourth. When between Beacon Rocks and Hangmans Island they lost their oars overboard. Knudsen, who was a good swimmer, undressed and jumped overboard and swam out to recover the oars. He reached them all right but was seized with cramps and sank almost immediately. His companion in the boat being without oars was powerless to render any help.

Mr. Powers saw their plight from the shore and put out in a boat to the rescue. A search was made for the drowned man but no trace of him was found. The strong easterly wind Thursday night brought the body ashore. The police will try and get in touch with the man's relatives in Norwood.

THREAT CASE TAKEN IN COURT

Edward P. Powers, candidate for Mayor, tonsorial artist, real estate agent, etc., was the complaint in court this morning against John Hester whom he alleged threatened to do him bodily harm.

The case grew out of money affairs. Sometime ago Mr. Powers arranged matters so that Hester could get possession of certain property at Houghs Neck. According to Mr. Powers his bill was $100. Hester he says paid $25 on account and still owes $75. Hester however claims that Powers borrowed the $25 from him, and that in addition he owes him for board and lodging.

Last Wednesday Mr. Powers claims that Hester came to his place of business and demanded the $25, and that he, Powers, said there was $75 due him on account. He then alleges that Hester threatened to do him harm. "I will make you a case for the undertaker, before I get through with you." "I will beat your head off," and "I will take your life" are some of the threats Powers claims that Hester made in City Square on Wednesday afternoon and later on in a pool room at Houghs Neck.

When the court asked Mr. Powers if he was afraid that the defendant would do him bodily harm, he replied "I sure am." After the hearing the case was continued until Aug. 5.

SALEM FUND IS GROWING

Plans All Complete for Tag Day Tomorrow

Everybody in town has heard through the local press that Quincy will have a Tag Day on Saturday, for the benefit of Salem people who lost all in the conflagration that swept their city.

The women on the Quincy Relief Committee put in a busy day Thursday, and before night had the city well mapped out for canvassers who will start out early on Saturday morning.

Many well known women have volunteered to assist in the canvass and the committee have been much encouraged by the willingness of everybody to assist. Thus far no one is known to have declined to assist in the Tag Day work. Many of the Boy Scouts have volunteered.

The only thing that bothers the women much is the fact that the number of banks available is not as large as reported, less than 200. They do not expect to get 200 banks full of money, but they did expect to have over 200 canvassers. Ways and means however, will be provided.

President Powell of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation regrets that it would not be expedient to allow Tag Day canvassers within the shipyard, but he has no objection to their selling tags just outside the gates.

Posters have been printed and posted and tags and banks are all ready in the hands of those who will make the canvass of the city. It is hoped that everyone will give at least ten cents, and the committee hope to receive several dollar bills. There is much speculation as to how much will be collected in the city. Some say not over $200, but with pleasant weather the committee expect a much larger sum.

Treasurer Burgin of the Mayor's committee today acknowledges these additional contributions to the Quincy fund, which places the total over $750

MISSISSIPPI AND IDAHO

Will Be Names of Two New Battleships

Two of the three new battleships to be built this year will be named the Idaho and Mississippi and will take the place on the naval register of the vessels sold to Greece. One of the ships will be built, as required by law, at the New York navy yard, but against the judgment and recommendation of the Navy department, which claims that there will be delay in the completion of the vessel. The other two ships will be built in private yards, and competitive bids for their construction will be invited as soon as practicable.

The facilities of construction at the New York navy yard will not be available until battleship No. 39, which probably will be known as the North Carolina, is out of the way, which will be next summer.

The plans of the three new ships will be practically a reproduction of those for No. 39, save for minor details.

NO LICENSE REQUIRED HERE

Permit Only Is Necessary to Move Building

There has been some comment because anyone and everybody who complies with the building ordinance is allowed to erect a building. The comment at this time is due to the collapse of the building on Copeland street last Monday, it being argued that no person unless he is amply qualified should be allowed to undertake such work.

The trouble is, however, that the ordinance has nothing to say about the matter and there is no ordinance in Quincy that prevents any person from undertaking building work. In some cities a building contractor must be licenced before he can do any building work. This is particularly true in Boston where a contractor must hold a city license in order to do work such as moving, altering or erecting buildings.

SILLY STUFF SAYS POWERS

Objects to Funny Paragraphs in Newspapers

Editor Daily Ledger:

I welcome any discussion and criticism of any political platform, projects and plans but I beg to inform the public that I am not a bachelor and am not pursued by marriageable young women. I therefore respectfully suggests that funny newspaper paragraphs about my "matrimonial" prospects cease. The Ledger did not print any of that silly stuff.

Let us discuss the real issues of the coming campaign.

REFERENDUM ON NEW CAUCUS ACT

Abolition of Party Enrollment to be Submitted to Voters at State Election

Will Not Go Into Effect If Adopted Before 1915

For the past several years, in fact, since the present primary election system was put into operation, the abolition of party enrollment in connection with primaries has been one of the hottest fights before the General Court. The Republican forces, headed by the Hon. Grafton D. Cushing, have fought it bitterly and the Progressives and all of the Democrats except Martin Lomasney and a very few others have tried equally hard to do away with party enrollment.

The advocates of the present system have been able to hold their own by a small margin for the past few years, but the General Court of 1914 declined to act definitely either way, and have turned the matter over to the tender mercies of the voters through the convenient medium of the referendum.

On the tail end of the ballots next fall will be the following question, peaceful sounding enough, 'tis true, but nevertheless one of the hottest issues of the campaign.

"Shall the act passed by the General Court of 1914, providing for the abolition of party enrollment at primary elections, be accepted?" And echo answers, "Shall it?"

The bill in its present form provides for a single primary ballot divided into columns, and each column devoted to the candidates for nomina-

Many baseball pitchers would be more successful if they did not try to get 27 put-outs for their own record. Give the fielders a little something to make some averages out of.

It was all right for the Suffragists to go calling on President Wilson, provided the old man wasn't fed on cold roast beef that day.

"SWEET CHARITY."

The American people are rather large hearted. The proceeds of charity entertainments are enormous. But the "sweet charity" of these functions is sometimes mixed with dross, the glitter of pretty girls, stylish gowns, and the desire to climb socially. So they are not always a true criterion of the giving spirit. The real test comes when public aid is asked for some big calamity like the Salem fire.

People who canvass for such causes often find a pathetic willingness to help on the part of those who themselves are in need of assistance. The woman with the bare cupboard sometimes gives just as much in cash as another with a lavish dwelling, but whose means are narrowed by social competition.

Many people will never give to any kind of a cause unless they are personally solicited. And the omission is not necessarily because they have forgotten the appeal. The fear lest a solicitor size them up as parsimonious influences them more than the sufferings of the needy.

There is an enormous amount of giving going on all the time that never gets reported in the papers, nor is it found in the records of any charity society. In country life the sick neighbor finds that in some mysterious way his crop has been harvested, or his wood pile put under cover. In city slum streets the warm hearted poor often seem to have practically a common purse.

It renews one's faith in human nature to find money flowing in freely after such a disaster as the Salem fire. But it is unfortunate that some people are moved only by the sight of physical want. They will give money to feed the hungry and clothe the naked, which merits the highest praise. But somehow they so lack vision as to refuse help to the school that would help the children of the hungry and naked to rise above the need of charity.

THE PERIL OF FIRES.

No matter how efficient fire department may be, no matter how complete the equipment of apparatus and water pressure, conditions constantly occur in towns of any size that threaten sweeping fires. Salem is the latest victim, with its $40,000,000 blaze. What place comes next? Shall it be Quincy?

Such a devastating fire elicits at once the suggestion that many fire perils would be avoided if the American people would depend more on brick, cement, and other fire-proof construction. The wooden house requires a constant expenditure for repairs and paint that makes it costly. Unless well kept up, it soon looks tawdry, and its unattractiveness depreciates its value. Fire proof work may be cheapest in the long run.

Of course insurance rates are low. They may be less than the interest on the additional cost of fire proof work. But when you reflect that insurance rarely pays the total loss, the economy of the wooden house seems doubtful.

Fire-proof construction substitutes dignity for flimsiness. It lends itself much less to architectural gewgaws, and raises the value of real estate in a neighborhood.

Of course the American people will continue to build wooden houses for many years. But at least a stop should be put to the mushroom growths a few feet apart that rise like a bad dream in so many places.

Such crowded residence districts are a damage to any place. They provide no outlet for child life. The pure out door air is thick with human contamination. These conditions may not be realized by the average man, but catastrophes like the Salem fire should awaken public sentiment to one of the more obvious dangers. Let people spread out more into the outskirts, secure more space around their wdellings, exercise their leg muscles, or pay the car-fares where necessary, through lower rents and gardens.

SOME DOUBT AS TO TESTIMONY

Case Against Mrs. Carman Is Admittedly Weak

GRAND JURY HEARING HALTED

Investigation of Bailey Murder Deferred Until Next Tuesday, Although Prosecution Tried Hard to Secure Week's Delay—Cook In Prisoner's Home Is Quizzed

Freeport, N. Y., July 10.—The case against Mrs. Florence Carman, arrested for the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey, is admittedly so weak that the prosecutor hesitates to take his scraps of circumstantial evidence before a magistrate or a grand jury.

Doubt has been thrown upon the testimony of the two most important witnesses, George Golder and Ellwood Bardes. Golder made an affidavit practically repudiating his identification of the doctor's wife as the woman he saw on the porch a few minutes before the murder, and Flora Raynor, a young woman of this village, says Bardes was with her at a time so close to that of the murder that it seems impossible, if her story is true, that he could have seen and heard all that he testified to.

It is barely possible that District Attorney Smith has evidence in reserve which he intends to produce at a strategic moment, but, as the case stands superficially, nobody in Freeport believes Mrs. Carman could be indicted, much less convicted.

District Attorney Smith tried to secure a postponemet of the hearing set for July 13 by Coroner Norton. Smith wanted a week's delay but George M. Levy, counsel for Mrs. Carman, would not consent, but the grand jury at the meeting yesterday agreed to defer all investigation of the Mrs. Bailey case until Tuesday.

The prosecution appears to be concentrating upon a rather frightened negress who has suddenly become of enormous importance to the district attorney and Detective Burns. Celia Coleman, Mrs. Carman's cook, has suddenly become the important figure in the case. Prosecutor's men and Burns' men have ding-donged after her until the simple minded creature doesn't know whether she is white or black. They have demanded of her that she correct her testimony given at the inquest.

Mrs. Carman broke down in jail and the jail physician had to be summoned. She was in a semi-hysterical condition when the physician arrived and she had a pulse of 100. A nerve sedative was prescribed for her, and by the time her husband arrived to assist the jail physician, she was calm once more.

The jail physician called upon Mrs. Carman again last night. He directed that she be placed upon a diet, and said absolute quiet was essential. The physician said he believed his patient would be her normal self again in a couple of days.

Tax Collector Has Disappeared From a New Hampshire Town

Stratham, N. H., July 10.—As the result of the mysterious disappearance of Wilfred H. Batchelder, tax collector of this town, warrants have been posted for a special town meeting to be held July 17.

Batchelder, whose wife and several children live here, disappeared June 24, and after being traced as far as Boston all trace of him was lost.

Examination of his books show them to be in orderly condition and no loss of funds has been disclosed. The town meeting is for the purpose of electing his successor.

GENERAL LYDECKER DEAD

Had Held Many Important Positions Since the Civil War

Detroit, July 10.—Brigadier General Garret J. Lydecker, U. S. A., retired, died at his home in Detroit. He was born in New Jersey in 1843.

After the Civil war, Lydecker was in charge of the river and harbor improvements, surveys and the building of various defensive works until 1869, when he became assistant professor of engineering at the United States military academy. Later he was chief of engineers on the staffs of the commanding generals of Pacific and Missouri divisions, and took part in the Modoc war.

TRAGEDY IN WOOLEN MILL

Rejected Suitor Shoots Three Persons, Two of Whom May Die

Worcester, Mass., July 10.—Enraged by the rejection of his love, Thomas H. Bombard, a mill hand, walked into the din of the noisy loom room at the Pondsville woolen mills in Auburn, where he had formerly worked, and twice emptied a 38-calibre revolver in an attempt to kill Mrs. Exilla King, whose suitor he had been for three years.

He shot down Mrs. King, Erhhardt Reithel, the assistant superintendent of the mill, and Reithel's daughter, Miss Alma Reithel.

Mrs. King and Reithel are said to be dying at the Worcester city hospital, and Miss Reithel is on the dangerous list.

In the confusion which followed his fusillade of bullets, Bombard walked out of the loom room, reloading his gun, and disappeared. He was captured late last night by Officers Butcher and Swan of the Worcester police. He took his arrest nonchalently.

BODY FOUND IN FIELD

Murdered Man's Wife and Former Friend May Know About Crime

Beverly, Mass., July 10.—The body of Gaetano Barleto, missing from his home since July 4, was found in a field near Montserrat last evening, bearing wounds suggesting that he was murdered. His wife and erstwhile friend, Gateano Davalo, are missing.

Mrs. Davalo told the police that her husband eloped with Mrs. Barleto after confessing that they took Barleto into a hay field in the country and killed him. She said her husband cleaned a bloody stiletto on the morning of July 5, that he took all his money on July 7 and set out for Boston, accompanied by the wife of the missing man.

The police believe Barleto's wife and Davalo lured Barleto to a lonely place to pick blueberries and killed him. They say the crime surpasses in its features of duplicity and cold premediation anything in the criminal annals of the city.

SAYS THERE IS NO REAL "DEPRESSION"

President Cheered by Ford's Visit to the White House

Washington, July 10.—Formulation of the "peace protocol" between the Wilson administration and "big business" went forward with giant strides when the White House was the Mecca of men prominent in the business world, all of whom were received gladly by the president, who characterized the conferences as "mutually instructive."

Among the visitors was Henry Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer and the first American employer to indorse the sentiment that a minimum day's wages should be $5. On leaving the White House Ford Said:

"I went over existing business conditions with the president. I told him there was no cause for alarm. Business is improving all the time—the so-called depression has no real foundation in fact."

At the White House it was stated that the president had "greatly enjoyed" his conference with Ford and that he had been pleased to find they both agreed that there is no real business depression.

BAN ON JAMAICA GINGER

Supreme Court of Kansas Declares It to Be Intoxicating Liquor

Topeka, July 10.—Jamaica ginger was placed under the ban in Kansas when the state supreme court held that it is intoxicating and that a druggist who sells it may be prosecuted for violation of the prohibitory law.

The court also held that lemon and vanila extracts, cologne, camphor and similar tinctures, extracts and essences are to be classed as intoxicating liquors.

DEATH OF FRED BUSSE

Ex-Mayor of Chicago Lost $123,000 In Recent Bank Failure

Chicago, July 10.—Fred A. Busse, mayor of Chicago from 1907 to 1911, died unexpectedly.

Busse lost $123,000 by the failure of the LaSalle Street Trust and Savings bank. Busse and William Lorimer were life-time friends and political allies.

Sculptor Loses Second Wife

Rome, July 10.—The second wife of the Italian scultor, Filippo Cifariello, was burned to death through the explosion of a lamp. Cifariello shot and killed his first wife in a fit of jealousy. He was acquitted after a sensational trial.

Faribault, Minn., July 10.—Fifteen persons were injured, several probably fatally, when a trolley car collided with a train near here. Seventeen other passengers were badly shaken up.

Mosquitoes and Malaria.

That the mosquito is a carrier of malaria is supposed to be a recent discovery, but it was suggested in a medical work written in Ceylon 1,400 years ago.

GOING TO ISLES OF SHOALS

Quite a party of Quincy ladies leave Saturday for the Isles of Shoals to attend the Unitarian summer meetings which will be held July 12 to 26. The meetings of the first week will be devoted to church work and the official delegate from the Woman's Alliance of the First Parish is Mrs. William B. Nichols. The second week will be devoted to Sunday School week, and the delegate from the First Parish Sunday School is Miss Minnie Packard, who has recently been elected as superintendent of the First Parish Sunday School.

Others who will attend the meetings are Mrs. E. B. Marsh, Mrs. J. B. Groce, Mrs. Eugene Atwood and daughter, Miss Beatrice Morrison, Miss Dorothy Edwards, Miss Harriet B. Pierce, Mrs. J. H. Slade, Miss Elizabeth Faxon, Mrs. George F. Pfaffmann and Mrs. W. F. Hodgkinson, Jr. It is expected that some of the men of the parish will attend a part of the meetings.

GAVE FALSE NAME.

That the party who ran into the automobile of William R. Dimock on Washington street Wednesday evening, desires to hide his identity is evident, for the name he gave Mr. Dimock was not the correct name. On the night of the accident he gave the name of Smith, but it has been learned that the machine does not stand in that name. The name of the owner of the car, a Rambler, it has been ascertained, is Alfred B. Carhart of 8 Ridefred road, Winchester.

After the accident the man seemed very anxious to get away before any police officer arrived on the scene, and thinking that his own car was all right urged the crowd to pull the cars apart that he might go on before an officer arrived.

When the cars were pulled apart however it was found that his car was so badly damaged that it would not start, and by that time an officer had arrived and taken his number.

The officer however neglected to ask the man if he had a license as a driver. As soon as the cars stopped the woman made haste to get out of the way and keep away so that her identity is not known. The driver of the car told several stories about himself. One of his claims was that he was a dentist and could not afford to pay for the damages.

However Mr. Dimock said Thursday evening that he had placed his case in the hands of a lawyer and the party will evidently hear from him unless he comes to time and pays the bill for damages which will amount to fully $200.

MIDNIGHT ASSAULT.

Miss Mary Doyle, a prominent beneficiary in the will of the late Colonel White, was assaulted on Miller Stile road about midnight Thursday by a man who followed her from the Quincy railroad station. She broke away from him and ran to her home on Elm street.

Miss Doyle left the 11.35 train at the station and on Chestnut street first noticed that she was being followed. She quickened her step, but her pursuer overtook her and in the shadow of a tree he jumped and placed both his arms around her. Miss Doyle screamed loudly for assistance and fought her way clear. She ran to her home on Elm street and with her brother joined in a search for the man. They found no trace of him. They reported the matter to the officers about City Square but their search met with no better results.

Five Boston Boys Confess to Seventeen Robberies

VALUABLE LOOT RECOVERED

Youthful Bandits Make Abandoned Sewer Their Headquarters, Which Was Fitted Up Like True Burglars' Den—Two of Gang Confess Guilt When Arraigned In Court

Boston, July 10.—Lurid stories in dime novels and evil companionship are held responsible by the police for seventeen robberies in the Dorchester district of this city which, they say, five boys now in custody have confessed they committed. The police are trying to round up the rest of the gang.

Samuel Hull, 14 years old, and Clarence Peltier, also 14, pleaded guilty in the police court to breaking into the house at 1428 Blue Hill avenue and stealing several articles. Their cases were continued under $300 bail until next Tuesday.

Albert Ohlund, 22, was also in court, charged with receiving two gold watches which the boys stole. He was held in $300 bail until next Tuesday. Ohlund recently paid a fine of $100 for his activities with the notorious Lauriat avenue gang, several of whose members are now doing time.

Information in the possession of the police lead to the belief that their housebreaking achievements were directed by a man of mature years, somwhat similar to Dickens' character, Fagin.

Policeman Foster started the expose when he took into custody Allen Grant, 14, and Clifford Whitehouse, 14. The youthful pair were selling cigars to people waiting for cars at the Grove Hall car station.

Under sharp questioning at the police station, the pair gave information which led to the capture of the Linehan, Peltier and Hull boys.

Questioned collectively, the five boys made a clean breast of their depredations, the police say. Next followed a visit to their headquarters in an abandoned sewer in a meadow off Woodrow avenue, where considerable loot was collected by the police.

Like stories in yellow novels, the police say, the boy bandits held councils of war every night in their rendezvous, at which they planned various breaks. All of the boys, according to the police, were armed and carried a bunch of false keys with which they were able to gain entrance to any apartment or building in Dorchester.

When the police raided their den they found gold watches, diamond rings, jewels, cigars, cigarets, tobacco and other articles which the boys admitted they had stolen from various places. The "den" is hidden by abundant meadow grass and entrance was gained from a cover over its roof.

Everything that would make a burglar's den complete was found in the boys' rendezvous, the police say. Guns and knives were hanging on the walls. On little shelves which the boys had built in around the walls the loot was found nicely packed away. Cheap novels with flaring titles were scattered all over the den.

Seventeen houses in all were robbed, and other members of the band are sought by the police.

GREEN PIG ON TRAIN

Unusual Sight Drives Many Imbibers to the Water Wagon

New York, July 10.—A number of New Yorkers went on the water wagon yesterday—and this is why:

Otto Schmalz won a pig at a raffle. The porker escaped and upset a bucket of green paint over his pink body. When Schmalz brought the green pig to New York on a Long Island train there was a small-sized riot by all those aboard who had taken a few openers.

Most of them decided to swear off the stuff.

Hundreds in this state alone have taken this remedy and tell today of the benefits they received. Its effects come quickly—the first dose convinces; no long treatment. Here is what two who have taken it say:

MRS. CLARE SHAW, 21 Majestic Avenue, Norwood, R. I., wrote: "I received your sample treatment and it saved my life. I am better now than I have been for 20 years."

Mrs. Shaw had been treated both here and abroad and had undergone an operation. She found relief quickly. These statements come from letters among thousands. The remedy is known everywhere for its true merit.

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy clears the digestive tract of mucoid accretions and poisonous matter. It brings swift relief to sufferers from ailments of the stomach, liver and bowels. Many say it has saved them from dangerous operations; many are sure it has saved their lives.

Because of the remarkable success of this remedy there are many imitators, so be cautious. Be sure it's MAYR'S. Go to Clyde T. Cox's drug store and ask about the wonderful results it has been accomplishing in cases they know—or send to George H. Mayr, Mfg. FASHION GLEANINGS.

New Capes—Fichus and Mantillas—Importance of Accessories. Accordeon Plaiting—A Smart French Gown Much Copied.

One of the most popular models for the dancing frocks that everyone likes, is copied from a Premet original. The underskirt, plain and narrow, was of striped silk on the first dress, but has been made up successfully in plaids and in floral printings.

The over dress, gathered at the waist, with the fullness at hips and knee drawn up into irregular puffs, is of plain taffeta, or shot silk, in the shades of the petticoat.

Bodice loose and full, opens in V shape to show a surplice chemisette of thin muslin. Girdle wide with a flat bow at centre back. Narrow long sleeves below the kimono cap, are of silk or muslin, and finish with a scant ruffle at the wrist.

CAPES AND WRAPS.

Capes are the foremost mode for Summer. They have gained the most fashionable adherence since their Paris debut a couple of months ago. The Parisienne wears them in regular penwiper cut, without arm slit, throwing one side over the shoulder in true Toreador fashion, an adjustment suited only to youthful slenderness.

Developed with contrasting waistcoats in pastel tones, plaids or stripes, capes are suited to a much wider clientage and combine smartness and comfort for motor wear, made up in various frieze cloths, and black and white checks lined with silk in bright colors.

Spanish capes of black charmeuse lined with yellow, or other decided contrasts, make a wrap that finds favor with people who are looking for the sort of wrap that goes anywhere, and can be worn with anything in one's outfit.

White broadcloth capes with waistcoats in pastel colors are an excellent investment where one wants a maximum of effect at a minimum of cost.

NEW GLOVES.

To be well dressed one must be well gloved and well shod, according to the much quoted French maxim, and surely shoes and gloves were never more important than this year when the cut of skirts and sleeves brings them into special prominence.

Silk gloves of the best quality are the popular choice for dressy wear from now on through the Summer, and there is quite a tendency to match the color tones of the dress or its trimmings. For general wear however white remains first favorite, and a new beautifully cut and finished silk glove marked with the name "Glover-silk" is most satisfactory in wear as well as in style and quality.

The above designs are by The McCall Company, New York, Designers and Makers of McCall Patterns.

CIRCULAR CUTS.

It would seem that the circular lines associated with the whirl of accordeon draperies in the dance have invaded all fields of dress designing most of the new coats are infected with the circular cut or have circular cape attachments.

Accordeon pleating is a growing fad employed not only for skirts, but for blouses and even capes, made up in the endlessly popular shot taffetas of this season's revival.

Indescribably varied are petticoats designed for the danseuse. Crepe-de-chine is perhaps the most popular material, but pleated chiffon is enticeingly made, and both these materials and filmy laces, and nets are combined in endless prettiness to give the right note of daintiness in the dance.

Fussy frocks have the lines of the pull back skirt of 1870. The hem drawn well above the ankles at the back, leaves the feet free, and is a great improvement on the overdone slit styles which are fast being relegated to the limbo of over-popular modes.

LET EVERYBODY HELP WITH A DIME OR MORE

At the request of Mayor Miller, the women of Quincy have arranged for a Quincy Tag Day on Saturday for the relief of the people who lost all in the conflagration in the City of Salem.

The work in each ward will be under the direction of sub=committees who will appoint canvassers to visit every house and place of business in the city.

Young ladies and young men who are willing to act as canvassers are requested to notify any of the following ladies who serve on sub-committees.

MRS. J. R. MELLEN, the Treasurer, will be at Y. M. C. A. building today to supply the sub-committes with tags and banks, and explain how they are to be used.

QUINCYS LOSE POLICE GAME

Score Was 8 to 4 in Favor of Boston Officers

The Quincy police lost to the Boston officers on the Ward Three playground Thursday by a score of 8 to 4. The game was a good one and was witnessed by a gallery of enthusiastic fans.

Four of the Boston runs were made on errors, while the other four were earned. Quincy tallies resulted from inside base ball.

The feature of the game was the pitching of Canavan, who pulled himself out of two holes during the game. In the third inning, with the bases full and one out, he fanned two visitors, and in the sixth with the indications against him he presented a goose egg.

Connolly, the Boston pitcher, a former twirler for Montreal, was due for a pounding but escaped. He was touched for eight hits, Duane getting two doubles. He fanned ten men, against eight for Canavan, and tied with him in issuing passes. Catcher Smith was a backstop for the Pittsburg team several years ago and played a good game. The summary:

To Save Closet Space.

Metal towel racks, that have flat places at each curved end to screw to a wall, will almost double the capacity of your closet if screwed to the bottom of the lower shelf. A dozen garment hangers may be suspended from each one.

Sick-Room Light.

If there are electric lights in the sick room they will generally be found too brilliant, hurting the eyes of the patient, and not every sick room has the electric lights that can be turned up or down. Make a little green silk bag and fasten it over the incandescent bulb and it will give a good but subdued and harmless light.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

OBREGON TELLS OF BIG VICTORY

Personally Leads Rebel Forces Into City of Guadalajara

FEDERALS ARE BADLY BEATEN

Five Thousand Taken Prisoners, With Large Quantities of Artillery and Ammunition—Those in Flight Being Pursued by Cavalry—Fighting Zone Extended Over Eighty Miles

Douglas, Ariz., July 10.—Telegraphing from the governor's palace in the city of Gaudalajara, General Obregon informed F. S. Elias, border representative of the constitutionalists, that he had captured the city and utterly routed 12,000 federals commanded by General Miel, federal governor of the state of Jalisco.

In a fierce battle extending over a zone of eighty miles, the federal army was cut to pieces by Obregon's force of less than 10,000 men. Five thousand federals were captured, Obregon said, besides all the artillery and ammunition of the enemy. Those who escaped are being pursued by costitutionalist cavalry.

General Blanco was sent to cut off all communication with Mexico City. He tore up the railroad line and prevented the federals moving any stores out of the city.

Very few of the attacking force were killed or wounded, Obregon reported. He informed Elias that he led his forces personally into Guadalajara. The city went wild with enthusiasm over the entrance of the revolutionary forces and it is now estimated that Obregon will obtain 15,000 recruits in the city before marching on Irahuato, the railroad junction on the Mexican Central railroad connecting the City of Mexico with northern and western Mexico.

Perfect order is being maintained in the city, Elias said Obregon telegraphed him. Celebrations are going on in all the towns of northern Sonora, where news of the victory was received.

Pena May Succeed Huerta

Mexico City, July 10.—General Pena, who is considered the most likely candidate for head of the prospective provisional government, was placed on the retired list of the army yesterday at his own request.

Pena recently was in command of the federal forces in Vera Cruz, and was summoned to the capital by President Huerta, with whom he has had several conferences. Much political significance is attached to his retirement from the army.

MANY ARE LEAVING SALEM

Seventeen Hundred Refugees Now Quartered In One Camp

Salem, Mass., July 10.—Only 1700 of the 3800 or more people who were burned out in the Salem fire are now quartered in tents in Forest River park, the camp at Bertram field having been abandoned yesterday.

Many young men and women left for Manchester, N. H., where they will be given employment in the mills there. The only big problem now confronting the relief committee is the manner in which the remaining refugees may be employed.

As yet no definite plans have been made for the disposition of the great umber of refugees still left at the Forest River camp.

The loud reports of dynamite blasts continue to resound throughout the city and walls and chimneys are being demolished steadily.

GREAT SURGICAL FEAT

Helpless Dwarf Being Transformed Into a Normal Youngster

Altoona, Pa., June 10.—The Blair County Medical society, by the use of thyroid glands of lambs and sheep, is transforming a young dwarf of Hollidaysburg—Jules Schroeder, 4 years old—into normal proportions.

The boy is suffering from cretinism, but under treatment his arms and legs are lengthening, it is said by members of the society.

The experiment is being watched with interest by the medical fraternity.

FRIENDS SAVE HIS LIFE

Badly Burned Man Has Eighty Square Inches of New Skin

Pittsburg, July 10.—Seventeen months from the time he was admitted to a hospital here, Everly Jacobs of Charleroi, Pa., was discharged with eighty square inches of new skin.

Jacobs, while employed in a mill, was badly burned and his father and nine young friends gave the cuticle which saved his life.

Surgeons regard the case as one of the most remarkable in skin grafting.

PROMENADE DESTROYED

Fire Wipes Out the Famous Dufferin Terrace at Quebec

Quebec, July 10.—Fire destroyed practically the whole of Dufferin terrace, Quebec's famous promenade overlooking the River St. Lawrence.

The flames set fire to the row of residences on Des Carrieres street, a thoroughfare raised about twenty feet above the terrace. Two wooden buildings were destroyed. The others, of stone, were only slightly damaged.

The fire quickly swept the entire length of the promenade. It was three hours before it was brought within control.

The promenade is 1200 feet in length and from 100 to 150 feet in width. The outer retaining walls are of granite, but the entire promenade is built of wood, and under the plank surface the great wooden timbers are all open. It is believed the fire resulted from a lighted cigar being carelessly dropped through the planks of the promenade, smouldering for some time before the blaze was discovered.

CITY RESPONSIBLE FOR CATASTROPHE

Forty-One Killed and Hundreds Hurt When Pier Collapsed

Los Angeles, Cal., July 10.—The city of Long Beach was held responsible for the condition of its municipal pier when it collapsed during a celebration on May 24, 1913, killing forty-one persons and injuring more than 200.

FORTUNE HIDDEN IN AN OLD TRUNK

Woman Finds Stock Certificates In Grandfather's Bible

St. Louis, July 10.—The discovery by Miss Juaita Rieves of this city of shares of stock issued forty years ago to John G. Shelton, her grandfather, which today are worth approximately $100,000, has become known.

While rummaging through an old trunk which belonged to John G. Shelton, son of the original Mr. Shelton, Miss Rieves discovered the papers in an old Bible. They were placed in the hands of William Sacks, attorney. The estate of John G. Shelton, who died in 1869, will have to be reopened to divide the value of the stocks among the ten heirs now living. The estate was closed in 1876.

UNHAPPY HOUSE OF HAPSBURG IS HAUNTED BY TRAGEDIES

Emperor's Reign Marked By Many Severe Afflictions.

Fate Appears to Have Pursued the Dynasty.

TRAGEDY has haunted the unhappy house of Hapsburg. Four great personal sorrows have afflicted Kaiser Francis Joseph, whose reign has outlasted that of all the sovereigns of Europe enthroned at his accession. His brother, Maximilian, was executed by republican soldiery on the downfall of his Mexican empire. Then came the violent death of his son, the Crown Prince Rudolph; the assassination of his consort, Empress Elizabeth, and finally the assassination of his heir, the Archduke

EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH AND THE IMPERIAL PALACE IN VIENNA.

Francis Ferdinand, and of the archduke's consort, the Duchess Sophie of Hohenberg.

These last three fatalities are most strangely linked together. The eccentricities of Empress Elizabeth became more marked after the death of her son, and it was the love of travel and of solitude that took her to Switzerland, where she was slain. And, but for the death of Rudolph, Francis Ferdinand would hardly have been a mark of sufficient importance for the bullets of a Serb anarchist.

The tragic death of the Crown Prince Rudolph in 1889 made the Archduke Charles Ludwig, the emperor's brother and Francis Ferdinand's father, heir to the throne. But he, on account of age, begged to be excused from the succession and left the way clear for his son.

Rudolph was a sportsman and bon vivant. He was married at the age of twenty-three to Princess Stephanie of Belgium—a union of convenience purely and one which never made any pretension of being a success. For some years after his marriage he amused himself in the ways common to princes unhappily wedded, but there was no serious attachment in his life until in 1887 he met at a charity bazaar the Baroness Marie Vetsera, a Viennese girl just out of a convent. Their affection was of such rapid growth that before long the Princess Stephanie was vainly requesting the emperor to interfere. No action was taken, however, until it was reported that Rudolph was petitioning the pope to annul his marriage with Stephanie and let him marry the baroness. Then it is said that the emperor sent for his son and told him that he must give the girl up.

The details of the tragedy that followed the public has never known. The bare facts are that on the morning of Jan. 30, 1889, the prince and Baroness Vetsera were found dead in his hunting lodge at Meyerling. The official report given out stated that the archduke had died of apoplexy, but this was so obvious a falsehood that it was soon abandoned. As to what really happened the rumors are innumerable, but if any one outside the immediate family knows the truth it has never been told in such a way as to convince the public.

The Crown Princess Stephanie later married Count Lonyay and is living at Budapest.

The Empress Elizabeth, wife of Francis Joseph, was killed at Geneva on Sept. 10, 1898, by an Italian anarchist, Luigi Luccheni. At the time there was no European sovereign who would have seemed less likely to fall a victim of an anarchist outrage, for since the death of the Crown Prince Rudolph the empress had withdrawn entirely from public affairs and had spent her time going from one Mediterranean resort to another in search of diversion.

The Empress Elizabeth was the younger daughter of Duke Maximilian

ARCHDUKE CHARLES FRANCIS JOSEPH AND HIS WIFE, DUCHESS ZITA.

Joseph of Bavaria. There had been plans on foot to arrange a marriage between Francis Joseph and her elder sister, Helena, but on the young emperor's first visit to the court of Bavaria he fell in love at sight with the young Elizabeth. Their marriage, however, was an unhappy one after the first years. The empress was devoted to riding, smoking and Munich beer, all of which, combined with her Bavarian accent, made her unpopular in Vienna.

Next to the death of his son and his wife, the emperor was perhaps most deeply affected by the fate of his brother, Maximilian, who tried to set up an empire in Mexico with the aid of the army of Napoleon III., but was captured and shot at Queretaro in 1867. His wife, Carlotta of Belgium, who at the last made a trip to Rome to try to persuade the pope to aid her husband, went mad during an audience with his holiness. She never learned the fate of her husband, and she is living yet, insane, at the Castle of Bouchoute.

The Archduke Johann Salvator, a cousin of the emperor, fell in love with an actress in the later eighties and renounced his title and estates to marry her. Under the name of Johann Orth he sailed away with her to the south seas, and outside of numerous novels neither of them has ever been heard of since. Johann Orth's brother, the Archduke Louis, is living in practical exile in Minorca with a family of illegitimate children.

The Duchess d'Alencon, a sister of the Empress Elizabeth, was one of the 150 persons burned to death in the fire at the Paris charity bazaar in 1897.

It is to be hoped that the new crown prince, Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, will not be heir presumptive to the tragedy that has haunted his house. Both he and his wife, the Archduchess Zita, are very popular throughout Austria-Hungary and are reported to be a happy and well mated couple.

TAX RECEIPTS CLOSE TO ESTIMATE OF $75,000,000.

Returns For Last Day Alone $26,161,782—Year's Deficit Only $1,000,000.

June 30, the last day of the fiscal year, was unprecedented in the history of government finances. The rush to pay income and corporation taxes brought into the United States treasury vaults, in the matter of income and corporation taxes alone, the sum of $26,161,782.82, about a third of the collections for the entire yeaf, and the total receipts for the day were $32,462,229. As a result the deficit for the year, as estimated by Mr. McAdoo, is reduced to $1,010,058.81. This shortage which is to be charged against the general fund, would have been a surplus if failures to pay income and corporation taxes promptly within the limits of the fiscal year had not held back more than $3,500,000, which will be carried into the business of the fiscal year 1914-15, says the New York Times.

In other words, the deficit of about $5,000,000 which Secretary McAdoo estimated in a statement which he gave out has been whittled down to a deficit of a little more than $1,000,000 and if it were not for the ten days' grace allowed by law would have been wiped out entirely and a surplus would have appeared on the treasury books of more than $2,500,000. This sum, which can be called a moral surplus, is to be compared with a deficit last year of $400,000 and a surplus for 1912 of $1,897,000.

Secretary McAdoo's apprehension of a serious deficit was based on the assessments of individual income tax liabilities, which he estimated last year would be $53,000,000 and which fell short of that amount by $28,000,000.

As a result of the heavy receipts June 30 the net balance in the general fund of the treasury was $145,835,502.

CURED BY MONKEY'S GLAND.

A Cretin Turned Into a Quick Witted Boy—Operation Unique.

The radical cure of a cretin—one suffering from cretinism, a disease characterized by physical deformity and imbecility—by grafting the thyroid gland of a monkey was described at the Academy of Medicine in Paris by Dr. Voronoff, a well known surgeon.

The patient, a child of fourteen years, was attacked by myxoedema at the age of eight as an after effect of scarlet fever. His physical and intellectual growth stopped. Six months ago Dr. Voronoff, in the presence of nineteen doctors, grafted on the child's neck the right lobe of the thyroid gland of a large baboon.

Almost immediately the patient began to improve, and marked development took place in body and mind. While previously the patient was apathetic and stupid he became active and quick witted.

Members of the academy consider the operation of great importance and tending to confirm the great possibilities of constructive surgery as introduced by Dr. Alexis Carrel.

OCEAN AERO TO CARRY 24.

Cincinnati Man Building Great Machine to Cross Ocean In Three Days.

The building of an airship intended to be capable of crossing the Atlantic in three days is to be undertaken by Joseph Ostand of Cincinnati. Ostand says it will be able to carry twenty-four passengers.

The airship will be about forty feet high, and will be motor driven and specially constructed for dynamite hurling, should the government adopt it as a military machine. Inflated bags and powerful propellers will support and drive it.

Ostand's device will be equipped with powerful searchlights, and the passengers will be sheltered by a sort of cabin encircling the engine room.

Alexander Graham Bell Says Aeroplane That Could Support Itself Two Miles Up Might Cross Ocean In Thirteen Hours—New Facts About the Flying Boat America.

The possibility of a transatlantic ocean flight in a heavier than air machine in thirteen hours is pointed out in a communication to the National Geographic society, at Washington, from Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone and former president of the society.

"The distance from Newfoundland to Ireland is less than 2,000 miles," says Dr. Bell. "This means that if you go at 100 miles an hour you will cross the Atlantic in twenty hours—less than a day. We already have machines that could cross the ocean if their engines can keep going for twenty hours. Of course, these are exceptional machines, but even the ordinary machines of today make fifty miles an hour with ease.

"Now, a flying machine flies faster as you go higher up, because the rarer air offers less resistance to the motion, while the propeller gives the same push with the same power, whatever the elevation. As you get into the rarer air the propeller spins around faster. A fifty mile an hour machine flying two miles high in the air—and we have machines that have gone twice as high as that—will fly much faster than fifty miles an hour. Then at an elevation of two miles high in the air there is a constant wind blowing in the general direction of Europe having a velocity anywhere from twenty-five to fifty miles an hour.

America to Europe In a Day.

"As a net result of all these things there can be little doubt that any ordinary machine that is able to support itself in the air at an elevation of two miles high will attain a speed of at least 100 miles an hour in the direction of Europe, and that means going from America to Europe in a single day. Calculation shows that, taking all these circumstances into consideration, our best machines should be able to cross the Atlantic in thirteen hours. I hardly dare say it aloud for publication. It is sufficiently startling to know that it is not only possible, but probable, that the passage may be made in a single day. But if, as I imagine, it can be done in thirteen hours you may take an early breakfast in Newfoundland and a late dinner in Ireland the same night."

Here is a general description of the Rodman Wanamaker transatlantic flying boat, the America, in which Lieutenant Porte will attempt to cross the ocean:

Length over all, thirty-four feet; length of hull, thirty feet; width of hull, four feet; depth of hull, six feet; length of cabin, seven feet; height of cabin, five feet; width of cabin, four feet; spread upper wing, seventy-four feet; spread lower wing, forty-six feet. Weight, empty, approximately 3,000 pounds; weight, full loaded, 5,000 pounds. Speed, from sixty-two to sixty-five miles per hour in still air. To this add or substract speed of wind machine is traveling with or against.

Within sight of the operators are the aviation instruments, tachometers, to show the speed of the two motors; aneroids, to show the altitude of the machine; wind speed gauge, showing speed of the machine through the air; inclinometers, showing the lateral and longitudinal flying angles; fuel and oil gauges, showing contents of tanks. In the after part of the cabin are Lieutenant Porte's navigation instruments—his sextant, chart table, gauges for showing drift, speed over the water, etc.

Description of the America's Wings.

The wings of the flying boat are composed of seven sections—a center panel of 10 by 7 feet above the power plant, four main sections (two upper and two lower) approximately 18 by 7 feet and two overhangs on the upper surface measuring 15 by 7 feet each. The shape of the wings is known as the N. P. L. wing section, which, after experiments at the national physical laboratory, Teddington, England, was considered most efficient for this work. The wing frames are built up solidly of ash and spruce, covered with a heavy ribbed silk, which is coated with a special water and fireproof material.

The aerial rudder for turning from left to right has a depth of five feet and a length of four and one-half feet. The flippers, or rudders for steering up or down, are located on either side of the main rudder, and their dimensions are 6 by 4½ feet.

Two propellers, one to each motor, are bolted direct to the motor shafts. They turn at a maximum speed of 1,250 to 1,300 revolutions per minute.

Stops "Rubbering" at Postcards.

In the weekly bulletin issued by Postmaster Fay of San Francisco there was an announcement that "hereafter five demerits will be imposed where it is shown that a distributor is wasting time looking at the pictures on postcards or perusing the correspondence on the reverse side of the postcards."

BOTH HAD NEW REVOLVERS

Boys Arrested On Railroad at 3 This Morning

About 3 o'clock this morning Officer Malone found two young fellows walking on the railroad tracks near the Quincy Adams station. When held up they said that their home was in Somerville and that they were walking home from Brockton.

Officer Malone sent them to the police station where on being searched both were found to have brand new revolvers in their hip pockets, although the weapons were not loaded and they had no cartridges on their person.

They gave their names as Walter Blood, aged 15 years; and George W. Pinel, aged 19 years. On further questioning they said that their home was in Brockton and that they were on their way to Boston and that eventually they might try and settle the little difficulty the United States was having with Mexico.

They were given a bed for the night and this morning were brought to court. The older of the boys, Pinel, was arraigned for carrying a revolver without a license and was fined $50. The revolver was confiscated. The younger boy being a juvenile was given in charge of the Probation Officer until July 23. The boys claimed to have found the revolvers in a freight car.

BAND CONCERT AN ATTRACTION

Although the weather was foggy and rather disagreeable Thursday evening there was a large attendance at the band concert given under the auspices of the Metropolitan Park Commission on the Quincy Shore Reservation at the foot of Beach street, the program being an excellent one. The concert was given by the Naval Brigade band. The next Quincy concert will be given at the same place Thursday evening, July 23, by the Ninth Infantry M. V. M. Band. On Aug. 13 and 25 there will be concerts on the Furnace Brook parkway.

VILLA'S VOICE WINS VICTORY

Rebel General's Influence With Soldiers Wonderful.

THEY FIGHT LIKE DEMONS.

At Command of Chief Troops Sweep All Before Them—Villa Likened to Scottish Chief Whose "One Blast of Bugle Horn Was Worth a Thousand Men."

Jimmy Hare, an American newspaper photographer, returned to El Paso from Torreon, where he witnessed the battle of Zacatecas, says an El Paso dispatch to the New York American. Of General Villa and the battle of Zacatecas Hare said:

"Villa has been compared with Grant and Lee and Washington and Napoleon and other famous warriors, but after seeing him in action at Zacatecas and seeing the effect of his presence upon his soldiers I am more inclined to liken him to Roderick Dhu, the famous Scottish chieftain, of whom it is said, 'One blast of his bugle horn were worth a thousand men.'

"When Villa arrived upon the scene at Pimiento, an outpost of Zacatecas, and gave the order for an attack in force upon the almost impregnable positions occupied by the federals his soldiers became demons rather than men and fought their way over seemingly insurmountable obstacles. Three hours later they had not only captured the city and all it contained, including munitions of war, but destroyed an army almost equal to their own in number.

Hills Covered With Dead.

"The carnage was something frightful. The surrounding hills were literally covered with dead, and bodies of men and horses lay in heaps in the streets of the city, where they were mowed down by machine gun fire as the panic stricken federals attempted to seek safety in flight.

"After being driven into the city and finding that it could not hold it General Barron's army attempted to get away to the southward through the pass leading to Laguna de Guadalupe, and here is where the greatest loss of life was sustained.

"In the tortuous six miles of narrow canyon which constitutes the road from the southern gateway of Zacatecas to Guadalupe the bodies of between 2,500 and 3,000 horses and between 3,300 and 4,000 men were found.

"The disposition of this great mass of carrion before it began to taint the air and cause an epidemic of disease was in itself a stupendous as well as a grewsome task. Nearly the entire Constitutionalist army, or at least that portion of it not required in similar effort on other portions of the battlefield and not including those sent in pursuit of the few federals, was put at work at burying and burning the bodies. Great quantities of lime were used in order to cause quick disintegration and at the same time disinfection.

"The mountains around and about the city of Zacatecas are honeycombed with mine openings of all sorts, and many federals, finding escape cut off, sought refuge in shafts, pits and tunnels in the surrounding hills. The Constitutionalists, suspecting that the mines would be used as places of refuge, searched the district promptly after the order was given to cease firing, and thousands of prisoners were captured in this manner.

Praise For Hospital Service.

"Other parties who had succeeded in cutting their way were overtaken and either captured or killed if they put up a fight."

Of the loss in killed and wounded sustained by the Constitutionalists Mr. Hare said that he could not talk intelligently because of the lack of facts and figures on which to base a statement.

He was loud in his praise of General Villa's hospital service and said the wounded on both sides were given splendid care as rapidly as they could be brought to the hospital trains while the battle was in progress or to the hospitals in Zacatecas after the occupation.

RATS FREE FROM PLAGUE.

New York Health Department Traps Hundreds Under River Piers.

Health Commissioner Goldwater of New York city said that the department was taking effective steps to prevent the entrance of bubonic plague into the city. As rats are the principal source of the spread of the disease, the health department has had hundreds of rodents trapped under the piers and along the water front. The laboratory reports show that the search for the plague bacilli has been of negative results.

Of the rats brought into port on steamers and sailing vessels, there are, Dr. Goldwater said, three classes in particular recognized as carriers of the dreaded plague bacilli—the Norwegian, the western and the Indian rats. Specimens of each have been captured along the Manhattan and Brooklyn water fronts in the last two months, but examination has proved them to be free from plague bacilli. Dr. Haven Emerson of the board of health has charge of this work, which will be continued as long as there is any danger of the disease being brought into New York.

AN APPEAL FOR SALEM

QUINCY FUND GROWING

The calamity which has overtaken the city of Salem in the disastrous fire of Thursday, June 25, presents grave and pressing problems for relief.

Briefly, and as far as this committee has been able to ascertain the facts, there are between 15,000 and 20,000 people, mostly wage-earners, representing probably between 3000 and 4000 families, who have been rendered homeless and destitute.

In addition to this, and of far greater importance, is the fact that the great majority are without employment, due to the destruction of such industries as the cotton mills and many important factories which provided their employment. The problem of rehabilitation will, of necessity, be a long and expensive one.

The committee representing the state and local relief committee appointed by the Governor and city authorities, makes this general appeal for money for the sufferers, believing, after careful investigation, that the extent of the disaster justifies this action. Quincy contributions may be sent to Clarence Burgin, treasurer of the Quincy fund.

REFERENDUM

tion in one party. Voters desiring to register for the primaries will not be required to state party affiliations, but simply their names and residences. Voters will not be permitted to vote for candidates of more than one party and if crosses are found in more than one of the columns, the ballot is dropped gently but firmly into the pile of discards.

Of all the motley collection of bills that turn up yearly to worry the Legislature, the party enrollment proposition seems to have most plausible arguments on both sides.

The "abolishers" declare that workingmen are subsidized into voting as their employers vote, that the American citizen objects to being tagged, and that one half the citizens do not take part in party nominations under the present system, and that all of the citizens dislike it.

The opponents of the bill contend that the abolition of party enrollment will destroy parties and will result in voting along racial or religious lines and say that a man who is ashamed to declare himself the member of a party should not be allowed to take part in the nomination of its candidates.

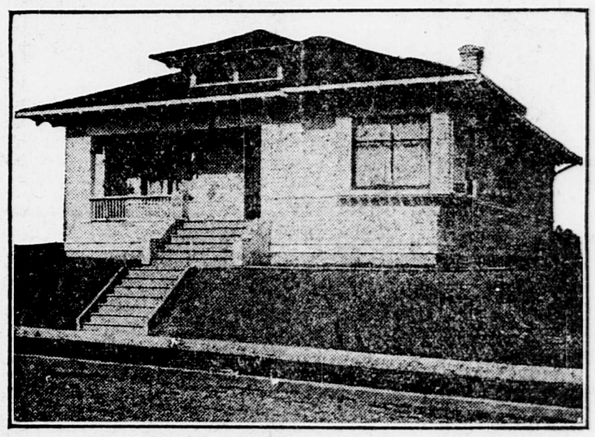

The friends of the bill are more than confident that the people will decide to do away with party enrollment and the enemies of the bill promise that there will be a great fight before the bill is accepted at the polls.

If adopted the new system would not go into effect until after the Quincy City election in December of 1914. There is more to it than the abolition of party enrollment.

BIG LAUNCHING ANOTHER GALA DAY FOR THE CITY

SECRETARY OF NAVY DANIELS EARLY ARRIVAL AT SHIPYARD

Governor Oddie and Others from Nevada at Launching of the Superdreadnought Nevada at Fore River

Governor Walsh of Massachusetts, Congressmen and Other Notables Among the Guests

Long before noon today crowds began to wend their way toward the Fore River shipyard district in order to obtain an advantageous point from which to witness the launching of the battleship Nevada. Indeed it is a gala day for Quincy. Some of the crowd gathered along the Quincy Point bridge from the southerly rail of which, a fine view could be had of the launching. Others gathered along the shore near Hayward's grove and Harbor Villa. Still others sought vantage points near the coal sheds of C. Patch & Son.

One of the best places from which to view the launch was the picnic grounds at New Downer Landing, which is directly opposite the shipyard. One sitting in the grove here has an unobstructive view of the vessel as she slid down the ways to the river. The State Sons of Veterans' association are holding an outing at the grove today and the fact of the launch resulted in an increased number being present.

Of course from any of these points it was impossible to get a sight of the little miss who stood as sponsor for the ship or of the official party which included the following:

LAUNCHING STANDS.

These people occupied the launching stand that had been erected about the bow of the boat, and which was reserved exclusively for their use, none being admitted to this stand outside of the immediate launching party, and newspaper photographers who occupied a special stand raised above the main platform, from which they could focus their cameras over the people on the platform.

Just to one side of the private platform, another large platform was located. This was for the use of the invited guests, who included all of the officials of the City of Quincy and their ladies, and many others.

Both of these platforms were gaily decorated in the national colors, and these with the varied colored costumes of the ladies made a sight pretty to look upon.

On the ground near the ship was another inclosure, to which tickets were also necessary for admittance. This inclosure was also crowded with sightseers.

The ship itself certainly looks like a monster. While not as long as the Rivadavia, she is of more tonnage and massive in every way.

Along her deck from stem to stern were strung the flags of the international signal code, and in addition to these there were also the National flag and the private flag of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation while from the forward truck was the Nevada State flag.

Beneath the vessel was a crowd of several hundred workmen, hammers in hand, waiting for the signal to begin to drive home the wedges which would lift the tons of steel onto the ways.

GUESTS ARRIVE.

Most of the special guests came from Boston in automobiles. Gov. Oddie arrived at the yard about 10 o'clock in order that he might have an opportunity to look about the yard and inspect some of its machinery and appliances before the launching.

Secretary Daniels who arrived in Boston Friday night also came to the yard by automobile.

Mrs. Daniels, with her sons, Assistant Secretary Roosevelt and their immediate party came on the dispatch boat Dolphin. The Dolphin anchored just below the Point bridge, the guests being brought to the yard in launches.

Miss Siebert, apparently not a bit nervous, and fully realizing the important part which she was to take in the ceremonies was taken to a small raised platform at the bow of the ship.

Usually the bottle of wine with which the ship is christened is suspended from the bow by a tri-colored ribbon. On this occasion however a pint bottle of Mumm's Extra Dry was used. This was enclosed in a steel mesh from which were short red, white and blue ribbons, tied in a bow and looped at the end, so that they were fastened to the wrist of the little miss. When the bottle was smashed therefore the remnants of it were retained in her possession, the steel mesh keeping the broken glass from cutting her. Later this bottle will be encased in a handsome blue leather box, on the outside of which was the following: "Christening bottle U. S. S. Nevada July 11, 1914."

On the red ribbon in gilt letters were the letters and words "U. S. S. Nevada". On the white ribbon, "Eleanor Anne Siebert, Sponsor" and on the blue ribbon "Launched July 11, 1914."

President Powell also presented Miss Siebert with a gold locket on one side of which was a large blue white diamond. On the reverse side was the inscription "Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation, presented to Eleanor Anne Siebert, Sponsor, U. S. S. Nevada, July 11, 1914, Quincy, Mass."

Accompanying the locket was a long pearl studded chain which hung about the neck.

At 1.30 the signal will be given to saw through the soul pieces, the last pieces of planking which holds the ship on the ways.

As soon as the ship is in the water she will be surrounded by tugs and taken to the fitting out dock in Bent's creek where she will be made ready for her official trials.

This afternoon about 3 o'clock the special guests at the launching will be entertained at lunch at the Copley-Plaza by President Powell.

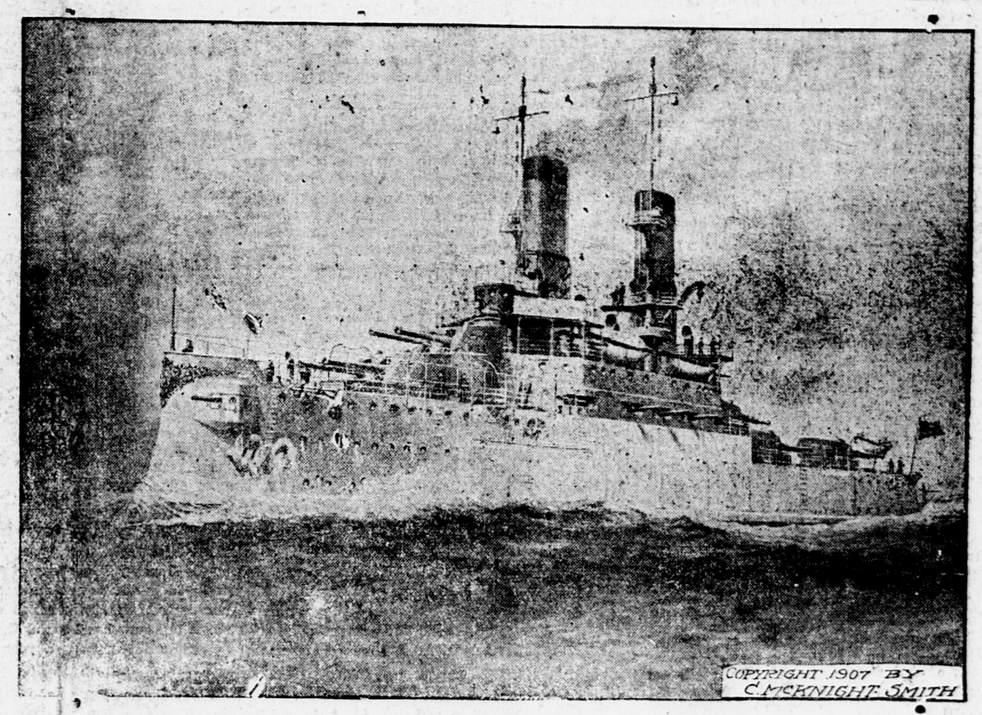

Friday evening President Powell entertained Gov. Oddie, Mr. and Mrs. Siebert, Miss Siebert the sponsor, and the Nevada party, at lunch at the Touraine after which the party visited one of the theatres.

Gov. Oddie who was in Boston on Friday paid a short visit to the Fore River yards during the afternoon, but his visit was unofficial and he was recognized by but few of the men in the yard.

No lunch will be served today the other guests in the yard but a lunch will be served to the foremen and leading men to whose efforts in a great measure the construction of the battleship was due.

Many school teachers are equipping themselves with light summer reading, consisting of the works of Darwin, Huxley and Spencer.

In view of the warnings Col. Roosevelt has received from the doctors, he ought not to try to cut down more than an acre of old hard wood trees in one day.

OPEN AIR MUSIC.

It has often been said that the Americans are not a musical race. A city of 100,000 people has difficulty in maintaining an orchestra equal to what will be found in a German town of 10,000. But the enormous number of bands that perform outdoor music through the summer months suggests that there is a growing musical feeling.

Good band music is by no means confined to city parks and summer resorts. The smallest country town may have its "band boys," whose more or less amateurish tootings stir the cross roads heart and feet. The country band often does good work. It has time to practise. A familiar evening sound is some instrument echoing across the empty acres in preparation for next concert night.

In large towns band concert night is about the most typical festival occasion of our hurrying American life. Ball games and horse races and athletic meets have the note of competition and miss the festival spirit. The cattle show has much of that atmosphere, but is at least theoretically an industrial and business gathering.

At the band concert the Americans cast aside the stress of the game, and for once meet for pure enjoyment. There is always a disagreement as to what class of music a band should play. Some demand airs reminiscent of old scenes. Others want banging Sousa marches. Still others call for the poetry and fire of the classics. The wise bandmaster of course tries to please all tastes.

Music that has the quality of permanence is more apt to build up a support of real music lovers. If a composition has been handed down from one generation to another, or has the qualities that will hand it down, it must have a keener appeal to the human heart than something tossed off by the ballad singers of yesterday to be thrown in the waste basket tomorrow.

THE TEACHER'S SERVICE.

The public school teachers have concluded their work, and are now supposed to be care-free until September. There is a popular impression that this long vacation makes their job a soft one. But many of them spend the vacation helping mother in the kitchen, and in most cases their summers are apt to be laborious.

The parents turn over their children much as they would check their babies at a day nursery. It gets them out of the way, leaving mother free to go to the bridge party. The parents can only partly control their own little flocks. Yet they expect a teacher to take forty of these unsubjugated little wills, reduce them to an orderly discipline, keep them sunshiny and working, and turn them out equipped with the fundamentals of daily life.

At home the cross-grained habits of children are excused on the ground that they are nervous, or that they inherited these traits and are not to blame for them. When the teacher undertakes to reduce the youngsters to order, the children are irritated at unfamiliar restraints. If a $10 a week teacher does not display the diplomacy and self-control expected from a $5,000 executive, the parents petition her removal.

In large towns the teacher lives an isolated life. Low salaries keep her moving from place to place. Social success is a matter of give and take, and as she has no favors to offer, her engagements are apt to be limited to church socials.

The blooming girl who enters the school room at 20 frequently comes out at 30 with a thin, pale, drawn face. But nevertheless the school room is a place of good cheer. The songs of the children, flowers, pictures, give a sunny atmosphere. The teacher renders an incomparable service. She is entitled to high honor. It is a pity that parents do not make more effort to welcome her, and make her life socially agreeable.

GIVE UP AFTER A LONG SIEGE

Federal Forces Evacuate Garrison at Port of Guaymas

NOW OCCUPIED BY ALVARADO

Authorized by Carranza to Agree to Armistice Allowing Safe Departure —Rebel Leaders Regard Capture of Mexico City Within Few Weeks as Absolutely Certain

Saltillo, Mex., July 11.—Guaymas, on the west coast, besieged for months by the constitutionalists under General Alvarado, has been evacuated by the federals, who left by sea.

Alvarado was authorized by General Carranza to agree to an armistice to permit the evacuation. The armistice was granted at the request of foreign consuls at Guaymas and the captains of American vessels in the harbor for the safety of non-combatants and to prevent unnecessary damage to property.

Alvarado, in his dispatch transmitting the request for an armistice, reported he had been informed by the Guaymas consuls that the federal garrison had received orders to embark immediately. Assurances were given him, Alvarado declared, that the federal gunboat Guerrero, now in the harbor, would refrain from bombarding the city after it had been occupied by the constitutionalists.

With Guadalajara in the hands of the forces under General Obregon, news that General Jesus Carranza had attacked San Luis Potosi is expected here momentarily. With the fall of the latter city the road will be open to Queretaro and Mexico City.

The constitutionalist leaders regard the capture of Mexico City within a few weeks as an absolute certainty. The fall of Guadalajara puts the second largest city in the country under their control.

Obregon is now within 275 miles of Mexico City and is believed to have the best chance of reaching the capital. All communication with Mexico City was cut off by the victorious army and the federals who escaped are scattered.

Carson Says Ulster Volunteers Are Prepared For Action

Belfast, July 11.—"When the proper time comes we are prepared to translate words into action."

This significant statement was made by Sir Edward Carson, leader of the Anti-Home Rule forces in Ulster province, following the first meeting of the members of the Ulster provisional government.

"The Ulster volunteer force is prepared for immediate mobilization," Carson continued. "The volunteers, 100,000 strong, are well equipped with arms and ammunition."

Belfast authorities have drafted 100 reserves in addition to the regular police reserve force to assist in keeping order on Sunday, Orangeman's day.

CARE OF INSANE PEOPLE

It Costs State of Michigan More Than Its University

Lansing, Mich., July 11.—It cost Michigan more last year to support its insane, epileptic and feeble-minded than the entire cost of maintenance of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor.

The university cost the state $1,373,834, according to the annual report of State Treasurer Haarer, while the insane and mentally deficient cost $1,491,253.

Among the other expenditures from the general fund during the last year was $405,000 required to maintain the militia in the copper mining district during the strike.

THE BALLOU INQUEST

Again Postponed by Coroner For "Public Reasons" Not Stated

Stamford, Conn., July 11.—The inquest into the death of Waldo R. Ballou was again continued until July 20 by Coroner Phelan.

The cause of the continuance as given out was that the analysist, Dr. Weaver, had not fully completed the examination of the supposed blood-stains found in the apartments of Mrs. Helen M. Angle and "other public reasons." The other reasons were not specified.

GLYNN IS WILLING

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 11.—Governor Glynn will accept the nomination for governor on the Democratic ticket, if his friends offer it to him.

This was officially announced here while the governor attended a clambake, given in his honor by automobile clubs of Poughkeepsie, Newburgh and Kingston.

House Votes $200,000 For Salem

Washington, July 11.—By a vote of 161 to 66, the house agreed to an appropriation of $200,000 for the relief of the Salem fire sufferers. The senate has already agreed to the appropriation.

EVIDENCE OF PISTOL DUEL

Badly Wounded Man Is Charged With Murder of a Woman

Washington, July 11.—With their bodies lying in pools of blood and two revolvers beside them, Mrs. Lulu Naylor, 25, and William Poland, 38, were found in a room of an Anacostia boarding house. Mrs. Naylor was dead. Poland had two bullets in his abdomen, but may recover.

Poland made several conflicting statements to the police. A pistol duel between Mrs. Naylor and Poland was first suspected, until Poland declared "the landlady" did it. Later he accused Mrs. Naylor's husband.

A formal charge of murder was made against Poland. His landlady, Mrs. William Wilkins, said she and her husband broke into the room upon hearing the shots, and that Mrs. Naylor, before losing consciousness, cried out, pointing to Poland: "He shot me."

John Naylor, husband of the murdered woman, produced a perfect alibi, the police declare. He was asleep in his room in another part of Washington until notified of his wife's death.

AN UNUSUAL ROMANCE

Phillips Weds Ex-Wife of Stepson Following Double Divorce

Boston, July 11.—Society people along the North Shore were given a surprise when they learned that Eben B. Phillips, member of the millionaire Phillips family of Swampscott, and Gertrude M. Phillips, divorced wife of the bridegroom's stepson, Harry F. Phillips, were secretly married and are now spending a honeymoon in the middle west.

Every precaution to keep the wedding quiet was taken. Rev. Dr. Penniman, pastor of the Universalist church at Peabody, performed the ceremony. There was no display and only intimate friends of the couple were let in on the secret.

The wedding is the sequel to a double divorce and two romantic courtships which the bride had with two members of the Phillips family. She is 25 years old and her husband is 40.

MILITANT ATTACKS KING IN SCOTLAND

Smashes Glass In Automobile and Is Nearly Lynched

Perth, Scot., July 11.—A militant "fury" narrowly escaped being lynched here after she had made a personal attack upon King George.

While the king was riding through the city in an automobile the woman dashed from the police lines and leaped upon the running board, shouting: "You must stop forcible feeding; we will tolerate it no longer."

The woman then tried to open the door of the automobile to get at the king, but was unable to do so. She had smashed the glass and was reaching to unlock the door from the inside when a policeman dragged her from the automobile.

OUTSAILS HER RIVALS

Resolute Beats Vanitie by Three and Defiance Over Four Miles

Newport, R. I., July 11.—In typical Sandy Hook cup racing conditions, a long greasy roll and faint airs, the Resolute so completely outsailed her rivals that she led the Vanitie three miles and the Defiance four and a half miles at the finish of their thirty-mile contest.

The Defiance was so far behind that she quit racing as the Vanitie crossed the line, although the committee waited a few minutes for her to reconsider.

The Resolute's margin in elapsed time over the Vanitie was 31 minutes and 21 seconds, which her time allowance increased to 33 minutes and 7 seconds in corrected time.

HELD IN $6000 BAIL

Three Charges of Attempted Murder Made Against Bombardt

Worcester, Mass., July 11.—No hope is held out for the recovery of Erhardt Reithel or Mrs. Exilda King, who were shot by Thomas Bombardt in the Pondville mill at Auburn.

Bombardt was arraigned before Judge Utley and was held in $6000 on three charges of attempted murder.

Miss Reithel may survive, but her condition is critical. As for the others, death is expected to be only a matter of hours.

All the states in the union but nine will be represented by a dreadnought of the latest type when these ships are completed.

Consumers Benefit by Oil War

Granite Street Railroad Bridge to be Replaced

The iron structure that has served as a railroad bridge on Granite street has been pronounced unfit by the Railroad Commissioners and workmen during the past week have been cutting out the framework so that it can be lifted out of place Sunday and replaced by a new structure.

All of the rivets have been driven out, and bolts substituted, so there will be no delay when operations commence at daybreak.

The new bridge will be three feet higher from the street than the present one, and give the headroom required by the Railroad Commissioners. It will set on cement piers and built so that it can be extended to take care of a four track system. It will be placed so the curve near Quincy freight yard will be more gradual.

The heavy iron side will be sawed and lifted onto flat cars by a crane. They weigh in the vicinity of 40 tons each.

NUTTER—FEARING.

Wednesday evening a wedding of interest to many Weymouth friends, took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Fearing of 467 Main street, South Weymouth when their daughter Miriam became the wife of William J. Nutter of Brookline, Maine. The ceremony was solemnized at quarter past seven by Rev. Henry C. Alvord of the Old South Congregational church, the double ring service being used.

Waldo B. Russell was best man and the ushers were Justin L. Fearing and Allen C. Fearing brothers of the bride and Harry B. Alvord and Alan Monroe of South Weymouth.

The bride wore a white satin gown with lace trimmings and carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. The tulle veil, which was caught up with orange blossoms, was one of pleasant association as it was worn by the bride's mother at her wedding. Miss Laura S. Fearing the maid of honor wore pink satin with lace trimming and carried pink sweet peas. Mrs. Frank E. Loud played the wedding march.

Following the ceremony a reception was held, the parents of the bride, and the groom's mother Mrs. Henry J. Nutter of Brookline, Maine, and the maid of honor and best man assisting in receiving.

The bride is well known and popular, being a graduate of the Weymouth High school and also the Massachusetts Normal Art school. She has been supervisor of drawing in the schools of Chelmsford and Wilmington. Mr. Nutter is a Harvard graduate and is headmaster of the East Bridgewater High school.

After a wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Nutter are to reside at East Bridgewater where they will be at home to their friends after Sept. 15.

W. R. C. AT NANTASKET.

At the meeting of Corps 94 W. R. C. Braintree, Monday, the president, Mrs. Jennie I. Loring extended an invitation to the Corps to visit her at her new cottage at Nantasket Beach on Thursday. The morning was a fair one and thirty-three members, with Mrs. Baldwin, president and Mrs Mahoney, past president of Corps 102 Weymouth and a few invited guests making a total of forty-five responded to the invitation, leaving South Braintree on the 8.45 car arriving at the cottage soon after ten.

At noon all sat down to an excellent dinner of clam chowder and fish, provided by the hostess, with sandwiches, pastry, fruit and coffee carried by the members. The bracing air had given to all a good appetite and everyone partook freely of the bountiful repast set before them.

The afternoon was spent socially some enjoying pleasant strolls upon the beach while others engaged in a quiet game of whist and other games. Late in the afternoon refreshments were served and a brief entertainment enjoyed. At six o'clock, after extending to Mrs. Loring a hearty vote of thanks for her hospitality, the party left for home, all feeling that the day had been a most enjoyable one.

CLUBHOUSE AT ATLANTIC

Improvement Association Are Talking It Up

At the meeting of the Atlantic Improvement Association last evening in Music hall, the Fourth of July Committee reported on their float and while somewhat disappointed a little as to results the men felt that the object lesson of the bank was worth while.

The discussion was again debated as to the need of a club room and hall in Atlantic and several expressed their willingness to form a social organization in connection with the Improvement Association that would meet with this need in Atlantic.

The best plan suggested to meet the need was that of a two class membership. One costing only one dollar a year, where the interest was only working for improvements in Atlantic; the other paying five dollars in excess of the improvement dues for the privileges of the club.

A committee was appointed to sound the men of Atlantic as to their willingness to support such a club, find a house that could be used as a club house or some plan of leasing or building a hall and financing it. Several were enthusiastic in regard to leasing a building and forming the club, others expressed their willingness to help it along, but stated they were more interested in the Improvement Association idea.

It was voted that the entertainment committee get up an entertainment or next Friday evening in Music hall he proceeds to be used ins praying he places when mosquitoes breed. The plan is to have all men and women invited who are willing to help ight the mosquito pest.

AN APPEAL FOR SALEM

QUINCY FUND GROWING

The calamity which has overtaken the city of Salem in the disastrous fire of Thursday, June 25, presents grave and pressing problems for relief.

Briefly, and as far as this committee has been able to ascertain the facts, there are between 15,000 and 20,000 people, mostly wage-earners, representing probably between 3000 and 4000 families, who have been rendered homeless and destitute.

In addition to this, and of far greater importance, is the fact that the great majority are without employment, due to the destruction of such industries as the cotton mills and many important factories which provided their employment. The problem of rehabilitation will, of necessity, be a long and expensive one.

The committee representing the state and local relief committee appointed by the Governor and city authorities, makes this general appeal for money for the sufferers, believing, after careful investigation, that the extent of the disaster justifies this action. Quincy contributions may be sent to Clarence Burgin, treasurer of the Quincy fund.

SALEM FIGURES AS REVISED

Two hundred and fifty-three acres were burned over in the fire which laid waste more than one third of Salem June 25, and 26,500,000 gallons of water were used by the firemen in fighting the flames, according to official figures issued by the city engineer and the water department Friday.

All of the 248 fire insurance companies doing business in Massachusetts have completed returns to the Insurance Department in accordance with the request of Insurance Commissioner Hardison as to the approximate extent of their losses due to the Salem conflagration.

Of these companies, 196 have filed estimates bringing the total insurance loss up to $11,744,000, about $1,500,000 higher than was at first estimated by expert adjusters. Fifty-two companies nearly all of which do little business in the Commonwealth, reported that they have no loss at all.

WILLIS H. WETHERBEE.

Willis Hines Wetherbee son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick B. Wetherbee of 11 Safford street, South Braintree, passed away very suddenly Wednesday afternoon about 1.30 o'clock, death resulting from heart disease, a malady from which he had long suffered. Mr. Wetherbee had announced his intention of witnessing a ball game in Boston and as near as can be learned had just alighted from a train in the South Station and was on his way to the grounds when he was stricken. He was placed in an ambulance and taken to the City Hospital but died before reaching there. The body was taken to his home on Safford street Thursday afternoon and funeral services will be held there this afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. Tyler E. Gale, pastor of the South Congregational church, officiating. Interment will be in the family lot in Blue Hill cemetery.

Willis H. Wetherbee was born in Hyde Park, June 29, 1887. He had been a resident of South Braintree for the past five years, living at home with his parents. He was employed by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad Company as night flagman at North Cohasset and had worked there about a year.

Mr. Wetherbee during his life time had suffered from four attacks of rheumatic fever and had been in poor health since he was fifteen years old, his heart having been seriously affected. He is survived by his parents and three sisters, Mallie B., Louise T. and Mrs. H. B. Zabriski all of South Braintree. Mr. Wetherbee was of a peculiarly lovable nature and made and kept many friends who sadly regret his early death.

TO SNAPSHOT SUN 20,000 FEET UP

Professor Todd Will Photograph Rays During Eclipse.

TO SET ALTITUDE RECORD.

Hopes to Solve Mystery of Sun Which Has Baffled Astronomers For Ages. Amherst Professor Has Had Considerable Experience In Ballooning and Is Expert Photographer.

Professor David Todd of Amherst college has sailed from New York for the purpose of carrying out a unique experiment in Riga, Russia, next month. Professor Todd intends to ascend 20,000 feet in an aeroplane and make photographs of the sun's rays during an eclipse which will occur in August.

The announcement caused much interest in aviation circles, inasmuch as in order to carry out his plan Professor Todd will have to set a new mark for an altitude record, says the New York Tribune. The present record is a trifle over 19,000 feet, and in making it the aviators found it necessary to use oxygen helmets and other methods to prevent being overcome by the changes in pressure incidental to the high altitude.

Professor Todd has had considerable experience in ballooning and is an expert photographer. If he succeeds in finding an aviator and a machine capable of taking him to the great height mentioned above there is a possibility of his hanging up a new mark for both aviators and photographers to shoot at. Professor Todd expects to solve the mystery of the corona of the sun, which has baffled astronomers for ages. Before he sailed he said:

"There are two predominating reasons for my selection of an aeroplane to study the eclipse, which will occur on Aug. 20 and 21 and will be visible only partly in the United States. The first reason is because unfavorable weather conditions could make my long trip and laborious preparations all result in vain. I can rise easily above any of these factors in an aeroplane and will go just as high as a French aeronaut will dare to carry me.

Expects Fine Photograph.

"The second reason is because of the peculiar power of absorbing the light of the corona that is contained in the atmosphere immediately surrounding the earth. From the ground it is impossible to reproduce the corona on a photographic plate with any absolute accuracy. And the correctness of reproduction means much toward solving the mysteries of the phenomenon.

"Twenty thousand feet above the earth the power of absorption is materially reduced, and I expect to obtain the best photographs of the corona that have ever been taken.

"This is the smallest expedition that I have ever taken. My wife, my daughter Millicent and one or two immediate members of my family will form the party. My first work after reaching Riga will be to select a site for observation and pick out a suitable place for the starting and landing of the aeroplane. The Russian government has co-operated with me most graciously, having furnished passports, free transportation for my party and instruments and offering the services of a guide and interpreter.

To Engage French Air Man.

"Once settled I plan to go direct to Paris and engage an aeronaut and aeroplane. I do not anticipate any difficulty in engaging one, for I feel that the spirit of the undertaking will appeal particularly to the inherent love for scientific advancement that seems to be a part of every Gaul.

"Now, just bear in mind that the eclipse is due to occur at approximately 12:30 o'clock in Riga, which would be about 7:30 o'clock in the morning in New York, and that it will last only two minutes and fourteen seconds. Everything that is to be done must be planned to the minutest detail."

The mystery of ages which Professor Todd's photographs may solve is whether the great bands and streamers of pale light, some straight and some curved, proceed from the gigantic upheavals of vaporized metals and gases in the sun itself and are reflected to the earth by comparatively cold gases or concrete particles forming the corona or whether the light comes from incandescent material in the corona.

Women Win Right to Jobs.

Women of New York state who were disappointed over being excluded from the civil service examinations for the posts of directors and superintendents in the new state bureau of employment will have another opportunity to qualify for these places, according to Commissioner James M. Lynch of the state department of labor. At Commissioner Lynch's suggestion the civil service commission will hold a new examination, which will supplement the previous test, open to men only.

Fly Fighting In Panama.

As a further safeguard to public health the canal government has proposed that the numerous livery stables in the heart of Panama City be concentrated in one location, where they can be supervised and cleanliness maintained. The present stables are great breeding places for flies.

SAYS SENATE MUST CONFIRM WARBURG

Wilson Will Not Name Substitute For Reserve Board

Washington, July 11.—"The senate will have to take the responsibility of an incomplete federal reserve board. President Wilson will not send any name to it as a substitute for that of Paul M. Warburg. He will stand or fall by Warburg."

That is the position of President Wilson as officially outlined. It was the last word from the White House in the controversy which has resulted in an almost complete split between the president and many Democratic senators.

The administration forces are lining up for the fight that is to be made in behalf of Warburg and Thomas D. Jones, the Chicago financier, upon whose nomination an unfavorable report is to be presented by the senate committee on banking next week.

Braintree people are justly proud of their shade trees and the fine condition which they are in this summer. The spraying has kept the leaf eating pests in check and the foliage looks hardy and healthy. In all sections of the town, the trees whether on the highways or in the fields and woods seem remarkably free from bugs or beetles and the only material damage seems to have been done by the tent caterpillars on the smaller growth, but even these crawlers are practically all dead now, thanks to the ravages of a fatal epidemic among them. We should be grateful for healthy trees and plenty of them.

MAY REVERSE HIS DECISION

Possibility of Coroner Ordering Mrs. Carman's Release

COUNSEL EAGER TO PROCEED

Will Attempt to Break Down Testimony of Witnesses at Inquest—Swarm of Detectives In Neighborhood of Carman House and Jail—Letter From "Nurse" Admits Crime

Freeport, N. Y., July 11.—The attacks upon the testimony of witnesses at the inquest into the death of Mrs. Louise Bailey has led to predictions that Coroner Norton will be forced to reverse his decision and order the release of Mrs. Florence Carman on Monday next, when she will appear before him for a preliminary hearing on the charge of having murdered Mrs. Bailey. District Attorney Smith, however, regards his case as much stronger than when the arrest was made.

The prisoner's counsel objected to a proposed postponement of the preliminary hearing until July 20, and is eager to have it held next Monday, in the hope of being able so to confuse the state's witnesses on cross examination as to force the coroner to release Mrs. Carman. If he succeeds, friends of the accused woman believe the case will never reach the grand jury, which convenes at Mineola Tuesday.

The grand jury which Smith will ask to indict Mrs. Carman on a charge of murder in the first degree is made up of farmers, merchants, building contractors, real estate agents ad several wealthy residents of Nassau county.

Mineola and Freeport are fairly swarming with private detectives. Dr. Carman, husband of the accused woman, is trailed by sleuths, and every foot of ground about the Carman home has again been gone over.

Every effort is being made by the Mineola jail physician to strengthen Mrs. Carman, who has shown signs of a nervous breakdown. Mrs. Carman seems to have recovered somewhat and sits in her cell reading books furnished by the warden's wife.

Detectives say they have found a new witness who casts doubt on the testimony of both Mrs. Carman and Celia Coleman, maid in the Carman home. These two testified that Celia Coleman was in the kitchen and that Mrs. Carman was lying on the bed in her own room. The new witness, Mrs. Alfred Paris of Rockville Centre, has a different version.

The authorities received the following anonymous letter purporting to be from a trained nurse:

"For God's sake free Mrs. Carman. She's a good, honest woman. I am the one who fired the shot. I meant to get Dr. Carman, and he knows why. I did not mean to hit Mrs. Bailey. I will get him yet."

A woman who appeared at Hempstead and told a strange story of the shooting has been sent from the village, the authorities believing her insane, and Myer Newman, who arrived at Mineola, is now to be examined as to his sanity. Newman claimed to know a gunman who was paid $50 to fire the shot for Mrs. Carman.

TWO WITNESSES

Alleged Eyewitness of Tragedy and Daughter of Accused

Photos by American Press Association.

The testimony of these two witnesses was largely instrumental in causing the authorities to formally charge Mrs. Carman with killing Mrs. Bailey. They are Madeline Carman, 14-year-old daughter of the accused, who contradicted several of her mother's statements, and Elwood T. Bardes, who says he was an eyewitness of the tragedy.

SISTERS HELD FOR KILLING BROTHER

Each Tries Her Hand at Shooting Him Down

Sterling, Ills., July 11.—Mrs. Lee Hutton and Miss Lillian Byers, sisters, were held without bail for the grand jury, pending investigation of the killing of their brother, Emanuel Byers.

According to the story told by Byers as he was dying, partly corroborated by the admissions of the sisters, one of the women deliberately shot Byers as he was at work on a farm. She then fainted and her sister finished discharging the revolver.

The women made no effort to escape arrest and coolly stated that while they were sorry they had killed the brother he deserved it.

Byers' mother died several months ago and left all her property to the son, cutting off the daughters.

The Divorcing Umbrella

How It Settled the Trip to New York

By WILLIAM HUGO PABKE
Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Benjamin Franklin Todd sat down on the plush seat beside his wife of two hours and thirty-seven minutes, pulled down his white waistcoat to fit snugly that portion of his anatomy that it was intended to fit, and peered past Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Todd into the mystery of the darkening train shed.

"Huh!" he exclaimed, puffing out his chest proudly. "The folks back home said we couldn't get to N'York city alone, did they? I'll show 'em. Why, Pansy, the worst is over; we're on the right train, anyway."

"They don't know how smart my Benjy is," she averred cooingly. "Course we'll get there!"

Benjy assumed an expression of vast pride. He was bursting into speech when a sudden panicky thought forced the glance of his china blue eyes upward toward the baggage rack overhead.

He made a quick mental inventory of his and his bride's belongings.

"Pansy!" The shrill treble held a note of utter horror. "I forgot the umbreller!" he wailed.

A glance at his watch reassured him that the train would not leave for six minutes.

"Oh, Benjy! And it was our weddin' present from Uncle Elihu!"

"I'll get it. It's in the lunch room," he declared, with importance.

"You'll get left sure," worried his wife. "Don't go, Benjy. It'd be just awful to get separated so soon."

"Leave it to me," ordered the young husband. "If you're nervous while I'm gone just walk to the very last car of the train, an' you can see me comin' back."

He trotted through the car and hopped down the steps.

A boy in a shabby uniform and visored cap passed close by.

"Say, boy," piped Benjy, "want a job?"

"Don't mind," said the boy sadly.

"My umbreller. I left it in the restaurant. Upstairs, you know—across there. It's a weddin' present. You bring it here, an'—an' I'll fix you up, I will."

"A' right, a' right." The boy turned away wearily. "Wait here," he threw over his shoulder.

Benjy waited obediently, but nervously. When he was sure that the boy had been gone half an hour at least he looked at his watch. There was still a minute to spare. He grasped the hand rail of the last car and held on with grim determination. At any rate the train could not escape him.

A tall, gangling man in overalls, carrying a lantern and hammer, passed, regarding him curiously.

"Hey!" called Benjy. "Train f'r N'York leavé on this track?" he queried to make conversation.

"Yep—track 13."

The bridegroom shivered; he was naturally superstitious. The next moment he caught sight of the boy coming through the gate with the precious umbrella in his hand.

"Here y'are!" said the boy, holding out the umbrella, ferrule first.

Mr. Todd offered a dime, which was scornfully rejected, augmented the fee with a quarter and turned to fly, coming into violent contact with his gangling friend.

"Where ye goin'?"

"To catch my train!" gasped Benjy.

"Too late; it's went," said the tall one placidly.

The belated bridegroom's hands shot up and clutched the reassuring brass rail again.

"It ain't went! It ain't went!" he shrilled. "I've got aholt of it!"

With the contemptuous calmness of his class, the railroad man pulled Benjamin Franklin to one side and pointed. The car had been left.

"My wife! My wife!" shrieked the youthful husband wildly. "Oh, what will I do? I've lost my wife!"

"Come with me."

They raced across tracks, through car vestibules, up a flight of iron stairs and burst into a large room where a myriad of telegraph instruments chattered their unintelligible gossip all at once.

To Benjy they seemed to mock his plight in a guy abandon of meaningless sound. The overalls came to a halt beside a young man with a green shade over his eyes, whose fingers rested idly for a fraction of a second on his key.

"Herb, this kid's lost his mother—I mean his wife. She went out on 44. Shoot a message to Clancy, will yer? An' see if you c'n get 'em together again."

"All right; catch 'im at Brightside." Herb complied. "Name? Description?" he barked, glancing at Benjy.

"She—she's a big, tall girl," blurted her husband—"about two inches taller 'n me, an' "—

Herb snickered. "Go on," he ordered crisply.

"An' her name's Pansy Butterworth."

Herb was calling BS, BS. "Got 'em," he grunted.

"Wait! No, it ain't!" cried the forgetful husband. "It useter be Pansy Butterworth, but it's Mrs. Todd now—Mrs. Benjamin Franklin Todd. Have you got her on the end of the wire?" he asked anxiously, biting his finger nails.

"I've caught Clancy at Brightside. He'll answer from Newville."

"Better come outside," urged the guide. "Be about five minutes before you c'n get an answer."

Benjy walked out of the stuffy room in a daze, the tall man going off about his own affairs with the promise that he would return shortly.

The crisp air cleared Mr. Todd's brain somewhat, bringing a sharp realization of his unfortunate predicament. Of course Pansy would be found soon, but would be have the nerve to continue that perilous journey to New York after his ignominious blunder?

He clinched his pudgy fists and stamped one tiny foot in impotent anger.

His high friend jogged his elbow.

"Time fer yer answer," he remarked.

Again they confronted Herb.

"Anything doin'?"

"Got Clancy all right. He says there is no such party on the train." Herb grabbed a pencil and became intensely interested in the dot and dashed remarks of a man down the line.

"I've lost her! I've lost her!"

Benjy's wail drowned momentarily the brassy voices of the sounders.

A thick set, iron gray man strode into the room with an authoritative manner.

He glanced sharply at the tiny figure in his path.

"What's the trouble?" he rasped.

"My wife!" choked Benjy. "She's alone in this town an' I ain't with her to pertect her. It's all because the train pulled out on me an' I had aholt of it all the time, an' "—

"Here! Start that all over again," cut in the thick set man bruskly.

Painfully Benjy retraced his declamatory steps and recited his tale of woe.

The human interest element of his story met with no response; his hearer was evidently thinking of more weighty practical matters.

"An' there I was," moaned the little fellow in conclusion, "holdin' on to the last car f'r dear life an'—an' the train just busted in the middle an' up an' went."

The thick set man's frown evinced his sudden interest. Here was something worthy his attention. This was more important than interrupted honeymoons—something practical.

"Somebody call Barton and Manning," he ordered in a flintlike voice.

Two men in uniform appeared and fairly groveled before their irate chief.

"Say," he burst out, "that's the second time this week that you fellows have left a dead car on 13. What do you think we're running here—a civilized station or a guessing contest—hey? I don't suppose the car was placarded, hey?"

No answer except a confused murmur and the scuffling of feet.

"Suppose you left the doors unlocked, too, hey?"

The gangling car inspector had a perfectly good thought. It flashed forth, sending a look of almost human intelligence across his masklike countenance.

He nudged Benjy. "Be back in a minute," he whispered as he dived through the door.

Benjamin Franklin had an indistinct impression that he was overhearing two men getting theirs in no uncertain terms. But he had a decidedly more distinct impression of what he should say to Ma and Pa Butterworth when he returned to Bayfield—alone. Pa was not so bad; he was a sort of weak sister himself.

But Ma Butterworth! The tears coursed frankly down the bridegroom's round cheeks at the thought and dripped dolefully on his gala waistcoat.

His grim reverie was interrupted by the reappearance of the gangling one, who thrust his head in at the door.

"Found her!" he announced laconically.

An amazing leap brought Mr. Todd to the threshold. Two more landed him at the foot of the stairs. By dint of the utmost effort he kept the flying overalls in sight, over tracks again and through vestibules.

They came to a final stop beside the fatal car.

"Seen her inside," vouchsafed the inspector and discreetly disappeared.

Benjy flew up the stairs—and paused. In the superexalted cerebration with which the next moment was fraught burst into refulgent being the reputation for impregnable strength that would be his forever—so far as his wife was concerned.

He opened the door and entered the car jauntily.

There, among her various belongings, sat Pansy in the sharp radiance cast through the car window by an arc light outside.

"Hello, Pansy!" he greeted her easily. "You all right?"

"When is this train goin' to start?" she asked, a bit anxiously.

"The train f'r N'York? Oh, that's went," said Benjy in an offhand manner. "You don't care such an awful lot about goin' there, do you?"

"I don't much care where we are"—she glanced at him coyly—"so long as we're there together."

"That's the way I figured it out," said Benjy, his chest swelling perceptibly. "You see, I sent a boy f'r the umbreller—here 'tis—an' he didn't come, an' I got nervous. When it got along about train time, course I knew that you'd come into the last car like I told you—an'—an' "— Benjy gave free rein to his imagination. "I told a railroad feller to uncouple it—I didn't want you to have to change again. He kinder kicked at first, but I slipped him—a—a quarter."

Pansy looked up, admiring, awestruck.

"My, but you're smart, Benjy!" she murmured, adopting then and there her lifelong mental attitude.

SUPPOSED DEAD MAN TURNS UP

Appears In Midst of Preparations For His Funeral

ODD CHAIN OF CIRCUMSTANCES

Man Killed In Motorcycle Wreck Had Been "Identified" by Woman as Her Son Through Letters Found In Victim's Pockets and a Remarkably Close Personal Resemblance

East Saugus, Mass., July 11.—Harold I. Holt, son of Mrs. Leona E. Holt, ran up the steps of the house at which his mother is visiting to find himself in the midst of preparations for his own funeral.

Since 8:30 Thursday night, when Mrs. Holt was notified that her son had been taken to a hospital in Chelsea with a fatal fracture of the skull, as the result of a motorcycle accident, until she saw him yesterday, Mrs. Holt had mourned him as dead.

It was not until after Holt visited the hospital that the dead man was identified as Arthur Jackson of Roslindale.

As soon as Mrs. Holt learned of the accident Thursday night she rushed to the hospital in an automobile. There she was told that her son had been identified by letters and cards in his coat pocket, but because she was suffering from a severe attack of heart trouble, as the result of the shock, she was advised not to see him.

She returned to the home of her cousin, Mrs. Gertrude L. Fox, with whom she was staying, and was notified early yesterday morning that her son had died. The undertaker had been summoned when Holt came along from his boarding house, where he had passed a restful night.

The chain of circumstances which led to the mistake in identity is one of the most curious in the history of the Greater Boston hospitals.

Early Thursday night Jackson, who patrolled the North Shore boulevard for the Lynn Automobile association, stopped at Holt's cycle shop in Lynn and borrowed a coat to protect him from the cold on his ride over his route to Boston. It was soon after this that Henry Siegal of Boston heard a crash as he was walking on the Revere Beach parkway, and running toward the sound, found a young man unconscious beside a shattered cycle, with blood streaming from his head.

Siegal asserts that when he came up an automobile was standing still at a little distance, and that the driver was looking back. When Siegal called, the man in the automobile drove away. Siegal stopped a car, coming from the opposite direction, and the injured man was carried to the hospital. Holt's letters were found in the pocket of the borrowed coat, and Mrs. Holt was immediately notified.

Mrs. Holt went to Jackson's bedside, when she reached the hospital, but because she had already swooned twice she was advised not to lift the cloths over the man's badly mutilated face. So she left the hospital and went home convinced that her son was dying. She was the more certain of this because the description of the injured man given by the hospital authorities tallied exactly with that of her son. Both were of the same build and general appearance and both were about 23 years old.

After the funeral preparations had been under way, Mrs. Holt telephoned the news of the accident to her son's boarding house. Word was returned that Holt was asleep in his room, but Mrs. Holt did not believe he was alive until he reached her.

As soon as Holt heard of the accident he visited the hospital. Upon more careful search by the hospital authorities a small memorandum book was found in an inner pocket of Jackson's shirt, bearing his name and address.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

LEOPARD MOTH HAS ARRIVED

Very Destructive to Maples--- How to Attack

The leopard moth has made its appearance in the trees of Quincy. This is a much to be deplored fact, but the only thing to do is to face the fact and fight the pest and exterminate it.

The leopard moth attacks every shade tree and is particularly fond of maples. The female leopard moth lays from 500 to 1000 eggs, so it is easily seen how necessary it is to work on the extermination of these pests at once.

There are two or three ways of attacking them. One is to cut off dead branches or those that are filled with moths and burn them; another way is to insert a bent wire where the tree shows sap running from holes, and draw out the worm which is doing the mischief and burn it.

There is a chemical which will kill this worm. Put a few drops of bi-sulphide of carbon into the hole with the aid of a pen-filler and then immediately close the opening with putty.

In the care of the maple trees, the small openings made by these insects may be closed up with putty and painted over with a heavy paint or a kind of tar that is more or less effective.

These moths are not apparent to the passerby. They must be sought after, because they burrow and bore into a tree, and the weather soon dulls the freshly bored hole. Then unless a close inspection is made this small opening will be overlooked, and the tree is well on the way to decay.

With a thousand small worms from one moth it is easy to see how soon very large holes will appear and that means death to the tree.

This is written as a warning to the citizens of Quincy. Don't wait for the city to watch the leopard moth and let it spread and devastate our city. Let each property owner look out for his trees.

DISTRICT COURT.

John Eloma was arraigned for a statutory offense at Quincy. Following a marriage ceremony by Court Officer Marden the case was placed on file.

John E. Gaffney was arraigned for assault with a dangerous weapon at Braintree on Max Sterman. He was held in $300 bonds until Friday.

John Leary was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

John J. Doyle was arraigned for threats at Randolph and was put under $200 bonds to keep the peace for two months.

The orders passed at the last meeting of the City Council have been approved by the Mayor and have become a law. Two of the most important of these were the acceptances of Ocean street and the temporary loan order of $100,000.

TAG DAY MAY YIELD $1,000

Over 7,000 Salem Tags Put Out Friday, More Today

The ladies of the city became so enthusiastic over Quincy's Tag Day for Salem that they could not wait for Saturday and authorized the canvassers to start in yesterday. It early became apparent that 3,500 tags would not be enough for the city and 2,000 more were ordered by Mrs. Mellen, the treasurer. Later in the day there was a second extra order, and then a third, making 9,500 in all. At 10 o'clock last night the committee; located at the Y. M. C. A. had put out over 7,000 tags. This morning their was a call for more.

Last evening several banks were returned to the treasurer full of money. Just how much is not known because they will not be opened until Monday, in the presence of several of the committee. One bank however is known to contain a $5 bill.

This morning it soon became evident that 9,500 tags would not be enough and the committee put in a rush order for 5,000 more. In all parts of the city there is activity. Best of all, many banks have been returned filled and the person has usually taken out another bank.

Many well known ladies are personally making house-to-house canvass, but they are assisted by members of the Katharyn Crane club and other organizations and several boys and girls. The Boy Scouts are at the depots and street railway transfer points in City Square and all are successful. Some predict that the collections may net over $2,000. When this is added to other Quincy contributions of $1,300 or more, it will be seen that Quincy is responding generously.

FOURTH OF JULY ASSOCIATION

Meet to Approve Bills and Balance Accounts

A meeting of the Fourth of July association was held Friday evening at the rooms of the Board of Trade. The evening was devoted largely to approving bills, and all which were approved will be paid by check the first of the week. It is impossible for the association to tell exactly at present just how the day will come out financially, for the reason that there are still some bills outstanding, and there are also some promises of contributions which have not been paid as yet.

The association ask that all who have bills to forward them immediately, and all those who have promised contributions which they have not as yet paid are requested to send the same to the treasurer, that the finances may be balanced as soon as possible.

EDUCATIONAL PARTY.

Among the out of town guests at the launching were Mr. R. O. Small, Deputy Commissioner of Education of Massachusetts and Mrs. Small; Chas R. Allen Agent State Board of Education of Massachusetts and Mrs. Allen; Charles A. Prosser, secretary of the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education and Mrs. Prosser and C. T. C. The above party came to Quincy about 11 o'clock, and were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J Gould Spofford at lunch served at Thompson's cafe, after which they went by auto's to witness the launching.

SERIOUS ASSAULT.

James E. Gaffney of South Braintree was arraigned in the district court this morning on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon and was held in $300 bonds for a hearing Friday.

The police allege that in an argument in a South Braintree factory Gaffney struck Max Sterman of 117 Water street over the head with a pair of pinchers and inflicted a deep wound.

Sterman was treated by Dr. Dearing of Braintree and at his home last night he became delirious and was removed to the Quincy City Hospital. He is in a dangerous condition.

MR. PAIGE WILL DECLINE

Has Received Flattering Offer From Navy of Greece

James F. Paige of the Fore River Shipbuilding corporation has received a most flattering offer from Greece as instructive engineer in the Greek Navy. Mr. Paige is an expert and his work has taken him to Japan and various foreign countries. He has been especially busy of late at the shipyard preparing for the launching of the battleship Nevada.

It is understood that Mr. Paige is to decline the offer, and with his family will continue his residence in Quincy, having recently moved from Edgemere road into the Prescott apartments on Spear street.

The weather this morning was hot and muggy. The sky was overcast and at times it looked as though it might rain. None however fell up to noon. Pleasant weather is promised for Sunday.

PARK RULES ON TICKETS

Controversy Over Sale at Merrymount on Fourth

A controversy involving many people of Quincy has developed over the right to sell tickets or score cards at base ball games, a custom in vogue for a number of years.

The discussion grew out of protests made at Merrymount Park on July 4th by people who said they contributed to the Fourth of July Association fund, and felt they should not be asked to purchase a ticket while watching the game.

Officer Fallon, one of several men assigned to police the field covered at the time by several thousand people to whom the protest was made explained it was not necessary to buy a ticket to remain but so vigorous were the complaints he took the matter up with police headquarters.

He was instructed to prevent the sale of tickets because the rules and regulations of the Park Commissioners absolutely forbade it.

The affair during the past days became centered in a search of the city for a copy of the rules and regulations of the commissioners, but none are obtainable as far as is known.

However, it is understood that money cannot be taken for anything on the field if a strict interpretation of the rules are followed.

The managers of base ball teams selling tickets on the holiday did so with the knowledge that they might be brought into court but previous arrangements had been made with the Fourth of July association over dividing this money, and it was figured in the possible income, the purse for the games falling to cover the expenses and they continued.

One of the commissioners has said he realized the only income base ball teams had is from the sale of tickets and if this is stopped they could no longer play home games, and be even with the board. It is thought other members of the board feel the same way, since they follow the national game to its extreme.

The police say tickets must not be sold and quote the park rules to back up their position. Chief Burrell, an old time ball player, does not object to the sale of score cards however.

Most people feel that the ones that made the protest should come out from under and show their colors. Who knows whether they were justified in causing a stringency in base ball finance by simply contributing to the celebration fund.

Someone of course contributed, but did they? If so thousands of others on the field didn't, for if they had, close to four thousand dollars would have been available.

Perhaps the situation is a little different at a city celebration than on other occasions. No tickets or score cards should be sold at a Fourth of July celebration except for the Fourth of July Association.

Fully 20,000 People Saw Battleship Nevada Slide Gracefully Down the Ways

Three Hours Required in Which to Dock the Superdreadnaught

It would be interesting to know just how many witnessed the launching of the battleship Nevada at the Fore River yards Saturday afternoon. Certainly the number ran way up into the thousands, many estimating the number as high as fifteen and twenty thousand. Certainly there was never such a crowd gathered about Weymouth Fore River and in and about the Fore River yards. Even the crowd that witnessed the launching of the Rivadavia did not compare with that of Saturday.

The day was perfect. The weather however looked a little threatening in the morning, but the cloudy sky was dispelled by the sun and at 1 o'clock the sun was out bright and clear and it was hot.

The crowds began to move toward the plant early in the morning and by 1.30 the hour of the launching the shores of Weymouth Fore river were black with humanity. Skipping about the river were hundreds of small power boats, filled with sightseers and it was somewhat of a problem to keep these boats back from the danger line. Had they been too near when the Nevada slid into the water they would have been swamped.

Great preparations had been made by the Fore River Corp. to handle the crowds and they were taken care of with but little difficulty. No one was admitted to the yard unless he or she had a ticket. These tickets entitled the holder to admission. On Howard street there were two entrance gates. One for those holding tickets to stand A and stand C, and one entrance which admitted to the enclosure at the end of the yard near the water.

Stand A was located on the Howard street side of the ship and stand C on the opposite side. Directly at the bow was the stand for the launching party. It required a special ticket for admittance to this stand, which was practically reserved for the distinguished guests who had been bidden to the launching.

At 1.30 the hour set for the launching both stands A and C the private launching stand and the enclosure were packed with people. Long before this however photographers almost without number were flying about here and there taking snap shots while over on one side two moving picture operators had set up their cameras and were grinding out scenes about the launching stand which will later be thrown on the screen at moving picture houses.

The hour of launching was scheduled for 1.30, but at that time the workmen had not succeeded in splitting out all of the keel blocks. Two or three of those near the bow seemed to resist all efforts to remove them, and they had to be split out sliver by sliver, by steel wedges. This delayed matters somewhat and the crowd was apparently getting anxious.

At 1.55 a workman stationed at the bow of the ship pulled a wire and the tinkling of a bell was heard. Immediately there was the sound of the saws as they ripped their way through the six inch planks which composed the sole pieces. Then there was a tearing sound as the sole pieces were rent assunder.

Little Miss Siebert standing expectant with the bottle of wine poised in the air could hardly wait to perform her part and almost at the first sound of the ship starting she had smashed the bottle of wine and given the ship her name "Nevada."

Slowly down the ways went the massive hulk of steel. Slowly at first but gathering headway at every foot. Hardly had her stern struck the water than there came the sound of the stops

TAG BANKS TO BE OPENED TODAY

Salem Day a Great Success in Quincy

There is much speculation as to the proceeds from the Salem tag day in Quincy on Saturday. Unquestionably it was a big success, but the banks will not be opened until this afternoon so that their contents are an unknown quantity.

About 250 banks were in circulation and the canvassers were supplied with over 13,000 tags. Mrs. J. R. Mellen, the general treasurer, and Mrs. Frank F. Prescott, the general secretary, did their work systematically, and have the number of each bank, and know who is responsible for it. When the banks are opened they will be able to tell the contents of each bank, and what was accomplished in each ward of the city. Secretary Bromley and his assistants at the Y. M. C. A. rendered the committee valuable assistance.

Each ward committee was busy all day Saturday; in fact many of them began their canvass Friday afternoon. The ladies say they will be satisfied if the returns total $900 or $1,000, but some set the proceeds much higher. Some boxes are known to contain over $20 each, while others have $1 and $5 bills.

One of the incidents of the day was the attempt of a Grand Army man to corner the market on tags. He bought them from everybody for awhile and put them into his pocket. The generosity pleased the Boy Scouts.

Among the volunteer workers were two mystery women who said they were from a city north of Boston. They were well supplied with credentials, and said they had assisted in tag day work in Boston and elsewhere, and that on Sunday they had been authorized to make a collection at Nantasket Beach.

One of these ladies had trouble in a local store, and declined to leave when requested. When escorted to the sidewalk she claimed she had been assaulted and appealed to the police and sought the advice of lawyers. Both women later returned their banks, one of which was filled with coin.

It was learned today that while in Quincy these women engaged several store clerks and Boy Scouts to make a tag day collection at Nantasket on Sunday. They reported at Nantasket but the women were not at the appointed place, and mystery surrounds them.

All who assisted in the Quincy canvass are entitled to many thanks for their volunteer work, for they worked early and late and were very successful. The committee will meet this afternoon at City Hall to tabulate returns.

PLAYGROUNDS ARE POPULAR

Opening Week This Year Beats All Records

All records for playground attendance for the opening week were shattered with the final total of 4187 girls and boys last week.

Of this number, Ward Three had the honor place with 2180 as a mark. Ward Two had 1507 while Wollaston had an estimated number of 500 for the week. Last year's opening week was 3347.

When the Wollaston grounds are fully equipped there is no doubt that Ward Two will have to look to its laurels for second place, as last week the youngsters had only baseball, soccer football and sand boxes to attract them. It is hoped to put the seesaws and swings in operation today and then the attendance will increase by leaps and bounds.

The regular weekly sports will begin tomorrow afternoon at Ward Three with the 25 yard dash and the standing broad jump as the events for the boys. The girls events have not yet been selected. The dates for Ward Two and Wollaston have not yet been decided upon.

The directors of the various playgrounds will meet tonight at the home of Ira M. Whittemore, chairman of the Park Commissioners, to outline the work, and also to discuss plans for the closing day exercises.

ADAMS STREET ACCIDENT.

An automobile owned by Mildred L. Collins of 428 Talbot avenue, Dorchester, and driven by Fred R. Elder, struck a bicycle on Adams street Sunday afternoon, and Giffety Belaicipsepi, the rider was thrown to the street. He was taken to the Quincy City Hospital in the auto of Capt. Daniel R. McKay where an examination showed he had received no injuries but was badly cut and bruised. Giffety is said to have lost control of his bicycle and to have suddenly swung into the path of the approaching auto. The bicycle was badly damaged.

NARROW ESCAPE.

John Hall of 56 Brook street was thrown to the ground when he attempted to board a moving train at the Norfolk Downs station Saturday morning. He struck on his head and received several bad cuts and sustained severe bruises about the body. He had a narrow escape from being drawn under the wheels of the train. He was treated by Dr. M. T. Sweeney of Norfolk Downs and taken to his home where he is under observation. He is doing well.

Q. Y. C. RUN IN THICK FOG

O ly Nine or Ten Yachts Reach Bass Point

A large fleet of boats from the Quincy Yacht club started Sunday morning on the annual club run to Bass Point and the run gave promise of being the most successful in the history of the club. When the fleet struck Hull gut however they ran into a thick fog bank. The fog was so thick that many of the yachts turned back and picked their way to the clubhouse.

Those skippers who were fortunate enough to have a compass on board kept on, steering by compass, as it was impossible to sail otherwise. When they reached Bass Point the boats came out of the fog into bright sunlight. The run home was made under the same conditions.

Among the yachts to get through to Marblehead were the Iris, with Commodore Harry S. Crane; the Micmac with Rear Commodore Laing, Wanderer, Frank E. Dawes; Meemer, John T. Cavanagh; Edelweis, R. Parish; Juliette, Capt. Picard; Thego, Frank Brown; Gleamer, Capt. Bennett; Eleanor, Capt. Jefferson.

The Woggle with Fleet Captain Hibbard on board ran out as far as Hull gut and then turned back to the club house and after getting a compass started out to hunt up some of the yachts that were fog bound. The Clara, Mudjekeewis and Almira were among the boats that started but had to turn back.

Some of the power boats, whose owners are taking a course of instruction to become affiliated with the power boat squadron, were out, and went through all right, steering by compass.

EASY FOR ARTHUR.

Court officer Arthur B. Hultman who is enjoying his vacation captured a Teddy bear at Nantasket beach Saturday but the claim was not recognized for some few minutes. "Little Art" walked up to a ring toss booth and taking advantage of his unusual height leaned over the front board and simply dropped a ring over a Teddy.

The man in charge declined to award Arthur the prize saying that the toss was not legitimate. He finally kept his agreement.

As Arthur walked along to other booths runners spread the word to beware of an eight foot giant who simply dropped the rings over the articles and the result was our well-known citizen got very little action in games of chance the rest of the day.

LADIES DAY OF WOLLASTON CLUB

Yachts Pass in Review of Commodore Frank F. Taylor---Sail in Bay

Music, Refreshments and Dancing at Clubhouse

Ideal weather was handed out to the Wollaston Yacht club Saturday afternoon for the club's annual ladies' day. The sky was clear, the weather warm and all that was needed to make the day perfect was a little more breeze. An easterly wind prevailed all the afternoon, but owing to the fact that many of the yachts of the club were participating in the race under the auspices of the Squantum club it was late in the afternoon before the review and sail took place. At that time the wind had died down considerably so that full sail could be readily carried without any fear of the fair guests getting wet by the spray.

In the meantime those at the club house had a fine view of the large fleet of yachts participating in the open race of the Squantum club and at the same time could enjoy the concert given by the orchestra.

The committee in charge of the afternoon included Commodore Frank F. Taylor, Rear Commodore Benjamin F. Chase, ex-Commodore Edward A. Bean C. A. Franklin, T. Raiche and F. Bussler.

Unfortunately rear Commodore Chase's yacht, the Samoset was out of commission, but he was fortunate in getting Capt. H. A. Jones of the Almira to forsake what chances he had of securing a prize in the open races, for he placed his yacht at the disposal of the rear Commodore.

The several yachts which participated in the sail were reviewed by Commodore Taylor and Mrs. Taylor on the flagship Thalia. At the close of the sail, light refreshments were served in the clubhouse, and in the evening there was dancing.

The clubhouse was gaily decorated with flags and bunting and in the evening when illuminated presented a handsome sight.

The yachts to participate in the review and sail, with their guests were as follows:

Flagship Thalia, Commodore Frank F. Taylor—Mrs. F. F. Taylor.

Nautilus, Vice Commodore Q. A. Lothrop—Mrs. James A. Smith, Mrs. Frank M. Spicer, Miss Bernice Wight, Mrs. H. C. Seymour, Miss Helen Seymour, Miss Grace Seymour, Master John Brackett, Master Richard Brackett and Master Emery H. Waite.

If there is to be a government deficit how would it do to put a tax on grape juice?

It still remains legal to keep places of business open during the ball games, but such unprogressive conditions can not continue indefinitely.

Now when the coastwise shipping trust wants to go through it will have first to come across.

The administration holds night councils, while congress chants, "Amid the encircling gloom, lead thou me on!"

Investigations of income tax returns may be relied on to produce further employment for the expert accountants and lightning calculators.

The school teachers are always envied for their long vacation, when they have a chance to rest up by doing housework ten hours a day.

The ball players all feel that they are not to blame for what happens in the seventh inning, as the trouble is purely psychological.

While the White House phraseology is more elaborate, the sentiment in Congress is, "We'll fight it out on this line if it takes all summer."

The Congressmen feel very strongly that the public good demands that they return home and go to work for their own re-election.

The children are enjoying the free life of vacation by hanging around the kitchen and asking "what shall I do now, mother?"

Almost any man of wealth would be willing to sign a paper for the Salem fire sufferers for $1.50, if he did not think it ostentatious to have his name in the papers.

Having performed the onerous and patriotic duty of discharging July 4 firecrackers, it is now up to Young America to see that the neighbors are not troubled with a burdensome accumulation of fruit.

Congress is working so hard on the trust bills, that every evening several senators have to quit drinking mint juleps and go into the chamber and address the door-keepers.

JURY "FIXING."

An ugly story is being told at Chicago, in connection with court proceedings, of the alleged work of a gang of some 50 peoples, including saloonkeepers and others, in bribing jurors. The cost of "fixing" a murder jury is put at $5000 to $15,000, less serious cases for smaller amounts.

Is jury "fixing" common? As you scan the faces of the average jury, it does not seem above par as compared with the run of the community. There is a popular impression that juries are rather "shy" in brains. But even if so, it does not prove susceptibility to money influence.

Disagreeable as jury service is to business and professional men, to some it appears an attractive prize. The small fee is a windfall not easily to be acquired by many days' or even weeks' works.

The motive leading such men to seek jury service is not usually corrupt. Rather it is a plum often sought by men who are rather lacking in personal energy. It seems easier to sit in a padded chair and listen to other people's troubles, than to get out after your own business.

The fact that a man has little talent for pushing his own business does not always mean that he will not make an honest and intelligent juryman. He may have acquired from his failures a comfortable independent philosophy, which makes him able to look at things on their merits. Crookedness he despises, and he fears its consequences. He is about the last kind of man that the jury "fixers" could touch.

Many officials who have the duty of making up jury venires are far too easy in handing out this "plum," in so far as it is a plum, to amiable friends whom they like to favor. This tendency tends to lower the intelligence of juries, but not necessarily their honesty.

CARMAN MAID WILL TESTIFY

Important Witness In Murder Case Not Kidnapped

STAND OF THE PROSECUTION

Will Not Allow Coleman Girl to Be Framed Up by Any One—Believed to Have Told New Story Incriminating Mistress In Mysterious Killing of Mrs. Bailey

Freeport, N. Y., July 13.—The Coleman girl will surely appear before the grand jury tomorrow. This was stated by District Attorney Smith in reply to a volley of questions concerning the whereabouts of Celia Coleman, the negro maid in Dr. Carman's household, who is held as a material witness in the inquiry into the murder of Mrs. Bailey at Carman's office.

Smith was indignant when he read the statement of Lawyer Levy, counsel for Mrs. Carman, charging that Burns detectives had kidnapped the girl. That reflected upon him, he thought, although in the statement the lawyer for the defense absolved the district attorney.

"Why is he so hysterically anxious about Celia Coleman? What does he want to get her for? Another affidavit, such as he got from Golder, who changed his testimony after Mrs. Carman's lawyer saw him?

"I haven't kidnapped Celia Coleman. I won't say I know exactly where she is, but I can get hold of her when I want her. And I will tell you one thing—Celia Coleman is not going to be framed up by any one."

That remark also seemed to confirm the belief that the girl has told a new story, not exonerating, but incriminating, her mistress.

"I told Levy," Smith went on, "that I intend to bring out the whole truth in this case and nothing but the truth, and that I won't allow any falsehoods to appear if I can help it. I have told Carman to his face that he was not telling the truth," he said.

Next to endeavoring to learn what the inmates of the Carman house were doing in the hour that elapsed between the time of the shooting and the time the police were notified, between a few minutes before 8 and 9 o'clock, most of the efforts of the state are being directed toward learning about the previous acquaintance of the physician and Mrs. Bailey, the victim, if there was such an acquaintance. The general belief of the authorities is that they were acquainted.

A WOMAN'S REVENGE

Rival Stripped of Clothing and Hair and Husband Arrested

Philadelphia, July 13.—When Mrs. George Reidinger met her husband in company with another woman, Miss Florence Wale, on Moreland road, what happened is best told in the words of Chief of Police Lever of Abington:

"Mrs. Reidinger had all the better of the fight. What she didn't do to Miss Wale was not worth mentioning. She pulled off Miss Wale's store hair and pretty much of her clothing. About all Miss Wale wore to keep out of the September Morn class after the scrap was one undergarment.

"Some friendly bushes sufficed to hide Miss Wale temporarily, while Reidinger took refuge in an electric power plant. Later Mrs. Reidinger obtained a warrant and Reidinger was arrested."

COMING FROM SPAIN

Speculation as to Cause of Ambassador Willard's Sudden Trip

Washington, July 13.—There has been considerable speculation in official circles over the sudden trip to the United States of Joseph L. Willard, American ambassador to Spain, who left hurriedly for this country upon receiving instructions from the state department.

Secretary Bryan declared that Willard's trip to this country was because of pressing personal business which required his attention. At first Bryan declined to discuss it, but later he said that the trip was without diplomatic significance.

Lawrence, Mass., July 13.—Adolph Obst, 32, shot Otto Miller, 35, a neighbor, through the back with a rifle from his second story window at 27 Milk street and then killed himself with the same weapon.

Miller will recover. The police say the suicide was demented and had a fancied grudge against Miller.

HORACE LURTON DEAD

Supreme Court Justice Is Stricken With Heart Disease

Atlantic City, N. J., July 13.—Associate Justice Horace H. Lurton of the United States supreme court died suddenly at a hotel here from heart failure superinduced by cardiac asthma. He was 70 years old.

His wife and son, Horace H. Lurton, Jr., of Nashville, were at the bedside. Mrs. Horace Van Derventer, a daughter, and her husband, arrived later from Knoxville.

Born at Newport, Ky., Lurton was attending school when the Civil war began. Though only 17 years old, he enlisted in the Confederate army and became a trooper under General Morgan. Three years later he was captured and imprisoned. A personal appeal by his mother to President Lincoln brought about his release on parole, and when the war closed he was studying law at Cumberland university.

President Cleveland appointed him judge of the Sixth judicial circuit of the United States in 1893. When the vacancy on the supreme court occurred in 1909, President Taft appointed him to the post. He took office on Jan. 3, 1910, being the fourth confederate soldier to become a member of the country's highest court.

SIX ARE KILLED AS TRAIN HITS WAGON

Tragedy Ends Day For Sunday School Picnic Party

Rochester, N. H., July 13.—Six young persons were killed in a collision between an omnibus and a freight train on a grade crossing at North Rochester. It was the tragic ending of a picnic at Milton of the Baptist Sunday school at East Rochester.

The party of young folk were singing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," as the wagon rumbled down the road toward the tracks and the voices drowned out the noise of the train. The list of dead is:

Leona Blaisdell, 15, daughter of Harry Blaisdell; Muriel Blaisdell, 11, sister of Leona; Edith Blaisdell, 14, daughter of George Blaisdell; Helen Andrews, 16, adopted daughter of William Blaisdell; Ruth Libbey, 16, daughter of John Libbey; Eddie Deveney, 16, of Blackington, Mass.

Hardly a person in East Rochester did not know every one of the dead. They were prominent in the activities of the young folk in their own village and in the city, attending the high school and other select dances and parties. Most of them were accomplished musicians or elocutionists.

WILL NOT RUN AGAIN

Bird Declines to Become Bull Moose Candidate For Governor

Boston, July 13.—Charles S. Bird will not be a candidate for governor on the Bull Moose ticket this fall. He said so at a meeting of the Progressive state committee.

Bird's refusal to run disappointed Bull Moosers throughout the state. He said he preferred to work for the success of the party in the ranks after having "twice borne the standard and twice gone down to defeat."

"Personal reasons, strong and insistent, which I cannot ignore, have prompted me to reach this decision," he said.

Hit Twice by Same Train

Hammond, Ind., July 13.—A train here struck a wagon on a grade crossing and fatally hurt Herman Hacker, the driver. Hacker was knocked out of the wagon and then hit again and knocked back into it.

Death of Lady Hardinge

NORTH QUINCY CATHOLIC CLUB.

The new North Quincy Catholic Club, held its regular meeting at Poland hall, Norfolk Downs. More than seventy-five members attended and the names of many prominent residents of that section were proposed for membership in the club. The site for a club house was taken under consideration. A ladies night is to be held in the near future and a series of whist parties and entertainments during the fall and early winter is proposed. The meeting closed with a very entertaining and instructive half hours talk by Charles O'Malley of Atlantic, on "Catholicity and its environments." This form of entertainment for the members is to be one of the features of all the meetings, and the club expects to have many prominent men of this city and the State give them a short talk at various times.

SUMMER CLASSES.

Under the auspices of the Milton Education society there was opened last week summer classes in millinery, woodworking and basketry, at the High and Thacher schools. The enrollment this year is large, there being 63 in the manual training classes and 26 in the millinery. The pupils are mostly grammar school children. In the manual training classes, the older pupils are permitted to do whatever they wish. The articles under construction include practically everything in household furniture. Some are making chairs which they will cane-seat, and others are re-seating old chairs. The girls' work in millinery is confined chiefly to trimming hats.

FOG TOO THICK.

The Wollaston Yacht club had a run to Cohasset scheduled but only half a dozen boats started and they only got as far as Hull where they found the fog too thick and turned back. It was somewhat difficult getting back however and many used up the greater part of the day in the effort

TELEGRAPH OFFICE OPENED.

Business men and citizens in general will appreciate the fact of the establishment of a telegraph office in City Square, which can be readily reached. The telegraph office was located at the Quincy depot for many years, but when the Western Union was taken over by the Telephone Co. the office was moved to the telephone building on Merrymount road. Here it proved to be a great inconvenience to business men, although there was an arrangement so that a telephone subscriber could send messages from his instrument. To strangers visiting the city however it was a nuisance to travel a half mile or more from City Square to find a telegraph office.

This week the telegraph office has been moved to one of the vacant stores in the Faxon block on Depot street. A messenger boy is kept on duty at the office all of the time, and messages to people not having telephones are promptly delivered.

WASHINGTON PARK.

One of the largest deals in house lots has passed this week and 97 choice house lots at the Quincy-Braintree line are on the market. George H. Hatchard and J. H. Spaulding of Braintree now own eighteen acres of the choice land of the J. Q. A. Field farm and have named it Washington Park. Being restricted, located on a hill, and is an ideal location, we predict that this beauty spot will soon be populated. Mr. J. H. Spaulding is the selling agent and he will erect at once a real estate office on this land. Possibly special inducements will be given the first to buy land and build.

DEMOCRATS TO MEET.

The democracy of Charles C. McHugh will be discussed at the meeting of the Democratic City Committee in Wilson's hall Tuesday evening when his friends from Ward Four will continue their effort to have Mr. McHugh cleared of charges made when he was nominated a candidate for the chairmanship of the committee at the special election recently held.

The controversy was suspended while the vote was taken, and after Edward J. Parker of Ward One was elected it was renewed.

The men who made the charges said their statements were based on information furnished by Charles H. Johnson, the Republican candidate for mayor, last fall, who alleged that Mr. McHugh agreed to support Mr. Johnson during the campaign.

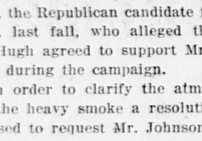

In order to clarify the atmosphere of the heavy smoke a resolution was passed to request Mr. Johnson to appear before the committee and either substantiate or deny the charges he is said to have made. It is not known whether he will be present at the meeting.

The many friends of Mrs. Frank Smith Baker of Tacoma, Washington, formerly of this city, are vieing with one another for the privilege of entertaining her during her brief visit to Quincy. She is a house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Price of Presidents Hill. On her trip from Tacoma to Cleveland, Ohio, Mrs. Baker was accompanied by her two daughters, Betty and Mary and her young son, Elbert, who claims Quincy as his birthplace, also Miss Florence Howell who spent the winter with Mrs. Baker in Tacoma and was a frequent visitor to this city. Mrs. Price gave a tea in honor of Mrs. Baker which has been followed by many pleasant affairs among Quincy friends.

DISASTER DUE TO OFFICERS

Storstad Is Blamed For the Loss of Empress of Ireland

PORTING OF HELM DURING FOG

Responsible For Collision Which Resulted In Loss of Nearly Eleven Hundred Lives—Captain and Crew of Wrecked Ship Blameless—Suggestions Offered by Probers

Quebec, July 13.—The collier Storstad is held resposible for the sinking of the steamer Empress of Ireland and the loss of 1094 lives, in the investigating commission's report.

The accident is declared to have been due to the change of course ordered by the third officer without instructions from the first officer, who was in charge of the collier at the time.

The inquiry into the disaster was begun in Quebec on June 16 by a commission composed of Lord Mersey, formerly presiding justice of the British admiralty court; Sir Adolpho Routhier of Quebec and Chief Justice McLeod of New Brunswick. The commissioners were assisted in their work by Commander Caborne of the British royal naval reserve, Professor Welsh of New Castle, Eng.; Captain Demers of the Dominion wreck commission, and Engineer Commander Howe of the Canadian naval service. Caborne and Welsh were nominated by the British board of trade. Lord Mersey also presided over the inquiry into the Titanic disaster.

The report contains the following leading points:

The Storstad is responsible for the accident because she changed her course, the helm being ported by Third Officer Lundquist when the Empress was at starboard.

It is practically certain that some of the bulkheads of the Empress were not closed at the time of the collision.

First Officer Tuftenes of the Storstad and Third Officer Lundquist must face the blame for the disaster. Criticism was directed at Tuftenes for not calling Captain Anderson of the Storstad when fog came on.

The court held that Captain Kendall and the crew of the Empress had done their duty.

The report found that there was no lack of discipline on board the Empress and that the Empress complied with all the regulations regarding boat equipment, watertight doors, etc.

To prevent such loss of life in the future the commission made these suggestions:

"1—That in foggy weather all watertight doors and port holes below the top of the watertight bulkheads be closed. Preferably they should be closed all the time between sunset and sunrise.

"2—That it might be desirable to consider whether rafts could not be placed in such a position on the upper deck that they would float automatically on the water as the ship sank."

Sherborn, Mass., July 13.—Tons of giant hailstones came with a swirling rush here, destroying gardens, smashing hundreds of panes of glass, and cutting to shreds the foliage of many shade trees. Over 2000 chickens were killed by the hailstones in one henyard.

For a distance of two miles the storm raged, giant elm trees being laid low, while gardens in the vicinity were cut to pieces. Nearly every window on the north side of the houses in the storm section was broken.

PRIZES AWA DED

as they were snapped in quick succession, sounding like the explosions of a rapid fire gun.

These served to check the speed of the ship, so that she came to a stop about half way across the river. She was immediately surrounded by tugs which were to take her to the fitting out dock. They were unable to move her, however, which gave the impression to those on shore that she was stuck in the mud. The fact was however that some of the guy ropes used on the cradle had become entangled in such a manner as to prevent her being moved. It was necessary for Capt. Kemp who was in charge on board the ship to send men over the sides in baskets to cut away the guy wires. For this reason it was near 5 o'clock before she was docked.

Before the ship struck the water a mighty cheer arose from the thousands, which was taken up by the whistles on the power stations, and the air was full of noise.

The launching over, the crowd slowly began to move away and then it was an animated scene. Hundreds of automobiles picked their way slowly up Howard street, which was lined with lunch stands, to Howard avenue, where the crowd divided, some going toward Washington street to take that line of street cars, while others went toward Newcomb Square. The street railway had a large number of extra cars in use on both lines and the crowds were expeditiously handled.

Thousands remained in the shipyard after the launching to make an inspection and they swarmed over the battleship Rivadavia at the dock. Many climbed to the top of the steel mast and others down into the hole.

PRIZES AWARDED.

The foremen and leading men at the yard after the launching wended their way toward the blue print room in the main office building, where they were entertained at lunch by President Powell. Some of the launching party also dropped in to look at the diners, but the most of them spent their time in looking about the yards.

After the lunch President Powell briefly addresed the foremen. Some time ago the company offered a prize to the department which should show the largest per cent. in neatness, and his prize, President Powell awarded at this time. The prize, $150 was given to U. S. Council for the plate and tool ship shop. It was not originally intended to give a second prize, but another shop, the angle smith had made such a good showing that Daniel Scouler, Jr., was awarded a prize of $50 for that shop. Honorary mention was also made to Joseph Lamb, chief engineer of the power plant.

After presenting the prizes President Powell introduced Charles M. Schwab, as the new owner of the plant. Mr. Schwab spoke of the way things had been progressing in the ship yard which he said was due to the policy of the company in dealing with its employees, the company treating them as if they were a part of the concern. He encouraged the men to greater efficiency by reciting to them the fact that the Bethlehem Steel Corp. several of the high officers began as laborers at the works. The policy toward the employees at Bethlehem will be carried out here.

LUNCH AT BOSTON.

Shortly before 4 o'clock the launching party took automobiles for Boston where a lunch was served them by President Powell at the Copley-Plaza.

Joseph Wright Powell, president of the company, was toastmaster. Addresses of a congratulatory nature were made by Secretary Joseph Daniels, Senator Kay Pittman and Governor Oddie. Secretary Daniels declared that the fair young sponsor was a collateral descendant of the first Secretary of the Navy, who was George Cabot of Massachusetts.

Toastmaster Powell presented Miss Siebert a gold diamond studded locket suspended from a long gold pearl studded chain. On one side of the locket was a handsome blue-white diamond. On the reverse was the inscription: "Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation Presents to Miss Eleanor Anne Siebert, Sponsor, U. S. S. Nevada, July 15, 1914. Quincy, Mass."

Three toasts were proposed and quaffed: One each to the President of the United States, to the U. S. S. Nevada and to its youthful sponsor. Brandy cocktails, champagne, a famous table water and plain everyday aqua pura were the liquid refreshments at each place, but it could not be ascertained with what Secretary Daniels drank his toast. One of two Naval men, who were his neighbors at table, when approached upon the matter, laughingly suggested that perhaps the famous Tarheeler used ozone cocktails for the occasion.

GOVERNOR ODDIE.

Governor Oddie spoke of commercial progress in the Silver Queen of the Union and his suggestion that this country ought to rouse itself and rehabilitate our moribund merchant marine was accorded the warmest applause. Everything American afloat, he said, might, for purpose of example, be likened to a brass band. Our fine Navy, he said, would be the bass drum in this band but the rest of the outfit sadly lacking as it was in merchantile expansion, might be likened to a long piccolo.

Senator Pittman responded with marked feeling to the toast to the President. Lamenting the difficulty of his task at the outset, he said, you might easily feel, realize, love and if close enough to him, understand Woodrow Wilson, but that it was impossible adequately to toast him.

The Senator deprecated what he termed the popular impression that Mr. Wilson is a driver, a boss or that he wields a rod of iron. In his own intercourse with the President, he said, he never knew of his urging any one of his measures with undue force.

The post prandial program was somewhat curtailed because of the early departure of Sec. Daniels and his party for Newport, R. I.

RECEPTION.

An informal reception preceded the dinner. Among those present were Sec. and Mrs. Daniels and their four sons, the latter in Naval attire; Lieut. Commander Needham L. Jones, the former's aid; Naval Constructor and Mrs. T. G. Roberts, Asst. Sec. and Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Company, which owns the Fore River works; Gov. Oddie, Gov. and Mrs. John K. Tener of Pennsylvania, Hon. and Mrs. Thomas W. Miller of Delaware, Ex-Gov. and Mrs. Eugene N. Foss, Lieut. Gov. and Mrs. Edward P. Barry, Mayor and Mrs. James M. Curley, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic J. Siebert and their son Frederick J. Jr., Senator and Mrs. Pittman and Senator and Mrs. Frankcis G. Newlands of Nevada, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. MacQuarrie, the former having arranged the affair; Admiral and Mrs. Onofre Betbeder of Argentina, Admiral M. J. Little, Mr. and Mrs. Sampson of Montreal, Capt. J. C. Coffman, commandant of the Charlestown Navy Yard, Miss Evelyn Bagley, the Misses Tener, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dodge, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Brown, Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Col. J. H. Amigo, Mr. and Mrs. H. Brown, John W. Coughlin of New Bedford, Mr. and Mrs. James W. Dodge, Capt. and Mrs. J. C. Donnelly, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph C. Emery, John H. Hammond, Jr., H. E. Lewis, Capt. Jose Moneta, William S. Mitchell, the Misses Meade, Mr. and Mrs. John Platt, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Randall, W. R. C. Stevenson, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Sedgwick, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Smith, Prof. Wilbur H. Siebert, Campbell Turner, H. S. Synder, Chris Zabriski, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Wiley, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Wetherbee of Bath, Me., and Miss Waterman.

DISTRICT COURT.

It was a busy session that was held before Judge Avery at the district court this morning. Most of the cases however were for drunkenness. William Doherty, Thomas Cain, Frank Tracy, Michael Cain and Edward Pyburn of Weymouth were fined $10 each Andrew Sherbatck, Otto Anderson, were fined $10 each. Myles G. McGorril $5, John Hanson, William J. Ahea Dennis F. Russell and James A. Hayes $15 each for drunkenness at Qiuncy.

Harriet Donnell, and Elizabeth Banks were fined $25 each for being idle and disorderly at Weymouth.

Nivola Miccelli was arraigned for violation of the liquor law and for assault at Quincy. Cases continued until July 14.

OUTING IN MAINE.

John R. Graham, of Bangor, Me., formerly of Quincy has extended an invitation to the New England Street Railway club to be his guests at Bangor on Tuesday and Wednesday this week. On Tuesday the guests will pass the day at the famous Graham farm at East Cornish, and in the evening a banuet will be served at the Colonial hotel, which is controlled by Mr. Graham. On Wednesday the guests will inspect the stations and car lines at Oldtown and Orona. John E. Johnson, of Babcock street, who represents the Laconia Car Co., will be in the party, which leaves Boston tonight.

OUT OF COMMISSION.

The police auto went out of commission Saturday night when engine trouble developed during a run to Qiuncy Point. The machine was towed in and a mechanician from the Knox Co. of Springfield acme here today to make the repairs. Autos were used for police work Saturday night Sunday and today. It is expected that the trouble will be remedied by nightfall.

AN APPEAL FOR SALEM

QUINCY FUND GROWING

The calamity which has overtaken the city of Salem in the disastrous fire of Thursday, June 25, presents grave and pressing problems for relief.

Briefly, and as far as this committee has been able to ascertain the facts, there are between 15,000 and 20,000 people, mostly wage-earners, representing probably between 3000 and 4000 families, who have been rendered homeless and destitute.

In addition to this, and of far greater importance, is the fact that the great majority are without employment, due to the destruction of such industries as the cotton mills and many important factories which provided their employment. The problem of rehabilitation will, of necessity, be a long and expensive one.

The committee representing the state and local relief committee appointed by the Governor and city authorities, makes this general appeal for money for the sufferers, believing, after careful investigation, that the extent of the disaster justifies this action. Quincy contributions may be sent to Clarence Burgin, treasurer of the Quincy fund.

HALL PLACE M. E.

"Practically every Christian or every individual finds a difficult time in living what is called a Christian life. There are evil influences at work trying to cause everyone to fall. The temptations that one individual may succumb to may have little if any influence upon another person. But there are no individuals but what have their weak places in their spiritual lives and these places must be constantly guarded and Paul in writing to the Romans realized that these people, like we of today, had weak places in their nature and they needed to guard those places.

Christ when He was talking to the people long ago, likewise realized that human nature had certain weak characteristics peculiar to each individual that needed to be watched and His command was "Watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation" and Paul's word seems to be right along with Christ's words: "Nay, in all these things we are more than conquerors through Him that loved us." Romans 8:37, was the text taken for the Sunday morning sermon at the Hall Place M. E. church by the Rev. P. S. Neldon. The quartette sang "Rock of Ages."

Sunday School followed the morning service.

Camille B. Fuller led the Epworth League devotional service on the subject: "Loyalty fundamental to noble character."

Prayer meeting will be held Thursday evening at 7.30.

The annual Sunday School picnic will be held at Highland Park, Wednesday July 22.

LEAD PIPE STOLEN.

While William Henry, proprietor of the Richmond house at 33 Winter street, was at the launching of the Nevada on Saturday, his house was entered and the lead pipe in his bath room removed. An investigation by the police showed that over six feet of pipe had been cut out, crippling the entire supply of the house. No clue has been obtained to the thief.

QUINCY PLAYERS AT KINCAIDES

Beginning today and continuing until further notice, Wyatt's Quincy Players will be one of thestrong attractions at Kincaide Theatre.

The company consists of 10 talented artists led by Jack Wyatt, who was here with the Kincaide Players last summer, and made thousands of friends with his splendid singing and pleasing personality. Everyone will be glad to welcome him back to Quincy again.

The company is under the personal direction of James Gilbert, who is well known hereabouts. He is the director of the Vincent Club Shows which make such a hit in Boston every year. For weeks he has been daily drilling this company, and truly there is a treat in store for the patrons of this popular playhouse.

It is planned to present a bright, breezy skit which will last just a half hour. Every three days a new comedy will be presented. The opening attraction is a Nautical Act which is staged with loads of special scenery, and sparkles with electrical effects.

There will be vaudeville acts as usual and four fine reels of pictures, including the thrilling, throbbing, soul-stirring "Perils of Pauline."

FORE RIVER WILL PROTEST.

The Fore Rivers lost to Bird & Sons in a manufacturers league game at Walpole Saturday, 5 to 4.

Manager John S. Higgins will protest the game because the ground rules made by Bird & Son were not enforced and resulted in the scoring of two runs, also that Theo Galvin, when hit by a batted ball that went foul, was declared out. The score by innings:

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER.

IS IT YOUR KIDNEYS?

Don't Mistake the Cause of Your Troubles. A Quincy Citizen Gives a Valuable Hint.

Many people never suspect their kidneys. If suffering from a lame, weak or aching back they think that it is only a muscular weakness; when urinary trouble sets in they think it will soon correct itself. And so it is with all the other symptoms of kidney disorders. That is where danger often lies. You should realize that these troubles often lead to dropsy or Bright's disease. An effective remedy for weak or diseased kidneys is Doan's Kidney Pills. Read the experience of a resident of Quincy who has tested Doan's.

C. P. Russell, 37 Washington street, Quincy, says: "My kidneys were weak and acted irregularly. I also suffered from pains in my back. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and the first box relieved me. I intend to continue taking this medicine."

Price 50c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Russell had. Foster-Milburn Co. Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

SECOND BIG AERIAL TRIUMPH FOR BROCK

American a Winner In the London-Paris Air Contest

Hendon, Eng., July 13.—Winging his way through 276 miles of fog, W. L. Brock, an American aviator, won the round trip London-to-Paris air race after a thrilling flight in which he competed against the best talent of Europe.

Brock's elapsed time for the distance was 7 hours and 3 minutes. This was his second big aerial triumph this summer, having won the aerial derby around London several weeks ago. The winner gets a trophy and $4000 in cash.

As Brock passed over Boulogne, Folkstone, Epsom and other cities along the route great crowds cheered him and factory whistles were tooted. Brock used a Morane monoplane which worked faultlessly.

Death at King's Table

Gijon, Spain, July 13.—Major Montes, a royal aide, died suddenly at King Alfonso's lunch table, aboard the royal yacht Giralda. The king was deeply affected by Montes' death.

Lightning Kills Maine Farmer

Morse Senecal, 38, an employe of the Boston and Albany railroad, fell from a freight car at Worcester, Mass., and was run over and killed.

The Vienna city council voted an appropriation of $64,000 to cover the cost of Vienna's separate participation in the Panama-Pacific exposition.

Mrs. Anastasia Bowen died at Peabody, Mass., from hemorrhages following the extraction of five teeth.

Ten-year-old Louis Goldstein was struck by an automobile at Worcester, Mass., and died on the way to a hospital.

William G. Peck, for many years president of the Arlington, Mass., Five Cent Savings bank, has resigned.

Missing his footing while working on the fourth floor of a building at Boston, Michael J. McCarthy fell fifty feet to the street and was killed.

LARGE FLEET AT SQUANTUM

Harpoon and Maria L. Among Prize Winners

A fleet of 68 yachts competed in the annual open race under the auspices of the Squantum Yacht club Saturday afternoon. There was a favorable wind during the greater part of the race. It was light in the early part of the afternoon however and the start was postponed for half an hour. In the meantime the wind freshened considerably making quite a choppy sea at times.

The course was a triangular one of seven miles. In the summary which follows the corrected time only is given. Those boats which moved up in the list by corrected time are marked with an asterisk.

GREAT WAVE OF CRIME

Boston and Surrounding District Infested With Thieving Gangs

Boston, July 13.—Boston and its surrounding municipalities are in the centre of a crime wave almost without precedent.

Lynn, Malden, Charlestown and Medford were yesterday the scenes of daring exploits by skilful and experienced crooks, while hardly a suburb of Boston is free from organized gangs of house-breakers.

Two arrests were made in Charlestown, following the discovery of men in a liquor store. One of the pair was shot by the police and wounded in an attempt to escape.

In Lynn three men cracked a safe in the early morning. The first attempted robbery of a North Shore summer residence this season was foiled by the alertness of a watchman.

Hold-ups and house-breaking have caused a reign of terror in the Medford-West Somerville section.

An unusual feature of the present crime wave is the discovery of bands of juvenile criminals, the thoroughness of whose work compares favorably with that of professional criminals.

GOES DOWN WITH HIS SHIP

Captain of Schooner Is Lost With Two of His Crew

Boston, July 13.—Refusing to leave his stricken ship, Captain John Thomas, master of the five-masted schooner George P. Hudson, went to the bottom with her when she was struck by the steamer Middlesex off Great Round shoal, northward of Nantucket island, in a thick fog. Two unknown sailors were lost with him.

The Middlesex was bound from Boston to Norfolk, and the Hudson from Philadelphia to Boston with a load of coal. The steel bow of the steamer cleve deep into the wooden vessel. In two minutes the schooner had sunk. Thomas went down with his vessel, cying: Don't mind me, boys, save yourselves."

The Middlesex, which was not much damaged, brought the survivors to Boston.

PETER OF SERVIA HAS NOT ABDICATED

Expects to Resume Occupancy of Throne Next Month

Belgrade, July 13.—It is quite clear that the press was premature, if not entirely erroneous, when it announced that King Peter had abdicated if favor of his second son, Crown Prince Alexander.

It is authoritatively stated here that the king, on account of his health, wishes to absent himself from all public affairs for several weeks and for that reason proclaimed a regency, which, however, is not likely to result in abdication.

It is expected that the king will return from Vranja, where he is now taking the cure, some time in August and will then resume his authority as monarch.

SHINDY IN DERRY COUNTY

Orangemen's Holiday Passes In Belfast Without Disturbance

Belfast, July 13.—There was a fight between Nationalists and Unionists late Sunday at Kilven, County Derry. Several revolver shots were fired and there was considerable stone throwing, but the police prevented any serious disturbance.

All the local priests in their sermons yesterday referred to the fact that it was the Orangemen's holiday. They urged the members of their congregations to keep order and strongly counselled them to refrain from provocative action which might bring about disturbances.

HINTS AT SURPRISE

Counsel For Mrs. Angle Claims to Have New Information

Stamford, Conn., July 13.—"We have information which the state did not get. We have thought to withhold it until the case got into the courts, but, if I can persuade Judge Downs, we will put it in at the coroner's inquest when it is resumed and settle the matter then and there. It will make some of the theories advanced to account for Waldo R. Ballou's death sound silly."

So spoke H. S. Finch of counsel for Mrs. Helen M. Angle. He declined to reveal the information.

THE SAME OLD STORY

Mrs. Pankhurst Again Freed as Result of Hunger Strike

London, July 13.—Ill and weak from the effects of a hunger and thirst strike since her eleventh arrest under the cat and mouse act, early last week, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst was again released from jail.

Mrs. Pankhurst was taken in custody soon after her appearance at the offices of the Woman's Political union, where she sought again to assume direction of the suffragette campaign.

When Death Was Sweet

Her Dream Became a Reality

By ETHEL JAMES COANN

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

One morning in June Dr. Severn was walking down the steps of the City hospital in Hanover. As he was about to get into his phaeton one of the internes rushed out and said, "Dr. Arnold wants you to do the operation he has on for 10 o'clock."

The surgeon removed his foot from the carriage step and turned around.

"I don't know anything about the case. Where is Arnold?"

"He's had an accident and can't come."

The doctor meditated a minute or two, then went back up the hospital steps.

A few minutes later the surgeon, in clinic uniform, entered the operating room.

A door swung open, there was a strong odor of ether, and two orderlies carried in a woman on a stretcher. The anaesthetist kept the cap over her face as they lifted her to the table.

As Severn began to operate he laid his fingers for an instant on her wrist, then made the incision for straight laparotomy. In his movements there was no haste.

"I have my doubts about this case," he said coolly as the flesh parted under his steady blade.

The assistant noticed a puzzled look on the surgeon's face as he hesitated in selecting an instrument. A bush fell, for he was feeling his way cautiously.

The patient's breathing was slow and labored, and the sides of her emaciated body quivered with each respiration.

"Let up on the ether," Dr. Severn commanded.

Silently he picked instrument after instrument from the tray offered him.

The work began in earnest—slow, cautious work—till the perspiration stood in great drops on the surgeon's forehead, and the clinic nurse had a white line around her mouth.

Then suddenly, as if the silence were a loud report, they perceived that the patient had ceased breathing. The surgeon spoke one word:

"Air!"

A nurse opened the window, the anaesthetist laid aside the cap, and, without letting go the ligament he was tying, the surgeon rested his eyes upon the still face.

Slowly the patient inhaled the fresh air, and then, by some freak for which there is no accounting, she opened her eyes, looking full at the surgeon, who, with a look of horror that turned his face ashen and drew dark circles underneath his eyes, looked at her.

In a flash the anaesthetist put the cap back and sprinkled ether, but the surgeon stood as if frozen.

A dark eyed nurse who had been standing apart with bandages stepped softly to Dr. Severn's side and, holding a glass to his lips, said:

"Drink!"

When the operation was finished and the orderlies came to carry the patient back to her room the surgeon brushed them aside and lifted her on to the stretcher. As he stood after they had gone his assistant said:

"I thought you were going to flunk. Did you fumble that artery badly?"

"What artery?"

He hastily removed his linen coat and left the room.

Along the corridor of private rooms he met Miss Ashton, the head nurse.

"How is No. 20?" he asked.

"Coming out all right, doctor."

"Is any one watching her?"

"I have just come from there. She is quiet."

"I want to watch. It is a critical case," he said as he entered room No. 20.

On the high cot the patient lay, breathing painfully, moaning from time to time and muttering incoherently.

The surgeon sat down beside her, holding one wrist lightly, shading his eyes with his other hand. At two Miss Ashton came in.

"Don't you want some lunch, Dr. Severn?" she asked.

He roused himself.

"Perhaps I do," he replied. "But I don't want this patient left alone. Has she a special nurse?"

"No."

"Then can you spare that little dark nurse who was in the operating room?"

Miss Ashton rang her bell.

"Ask to have Mrs. Howell sent up to take charge of No. 20," she said to the office boy.

As they crossed the court to the nurses' dining hall Miss Ashton noticed the drawn look on the doctor's face.

When he got back the nurse was bathing the patient's face. When she went out he opened the blinds and carefully studied every feature.

That night he rested on a sofa in the end of the corridor. Toward morning he heard two nurses chatting.

"Dr. Severn is asleep on the sofa by the sun room," one said. "You know he did Arnold's op. today. They say it was a hard one, and he's afraid she's going to die; then Arnold 'll have one on him."

"Good! I hope she will! I like Dr. Arnold."

With a feeling of sickness the doctor got up and went back to No. 20.

The cool gray of early dawn was just merging into pink, and the wind from the lake blew in at the open window.

As he took the chair beside her bed he saw her hand flutter on the counterpane, and, bending over, just as the light touched her, he saw that her eyes were open and on her poor face a look of ineffable content rested.

He took the fluttering fingers in his hand and said, "Nell."

Then she fell asleep.

The pink dawn yielded to yellow sunlight, and still she slept. The surgeon went down to breakfast, and when he returned she had not awakened.

At 10 o'clock the office boy went to the head nurse's desk and asked:

"Where's the main guy?"

"Do you mean Dr. Severn?"

"Yep."

"What do you want him for?"

"His wife wants him."

Miss Ashton called him, and he went out to where Mrs. Severn sat in her automobile.

"Don't you know," she snapped, "that I had to go to the Hunters' dinner party alone last night?"

He brushed his hand wearily across his forehead, and something in his look irritated her.

"I cannot leave here yet," he said.

He watched the chauffeur turn the car around in the narrow street; then he went slowly back.

He made his usual round, stopping to chat with some of his patients.

The next morning at dawn the woman in No. 20 roused again, and the surgeon sat beside her.

This time she could lift her hand, and she extended it toward him.

"Have I been hurt, Jack?" she asked.

"Yes, Nell," he answered.

"Did the horse throw me?"

In a flash the man understood that she had recognized without remembering and that in her mind she was back on the ranch where he had first met her.

"Am I badly hurt?" she continued.

"You are just shaken up."

"I'm tired," she said and slept with her face toward the light.

The fourth morning he sat in his old place beside her, and she asked:

"Where did you get my nurse?"

"I sent for her."

"She is so good to me in the night, when I have horrible dreams and think that I have lived years and years without you, Jack. Then I call her, and she comforts me."

"Do you dream that, Nell?"

"Yes. But it cannot ever be, dear. Don't you remember what I told you the night we became engaged?"

When he spoke his voice was full of suppressed pain.

"You told me, dear, that you loved me so that if we ever drifted apart"—the words had long pauses between them—"you would drift back to me—to die."

"Yes," she said and slept.

The surgeon had performed three operations at the hospital of the Sisters of Mercy, and it was 8 in the evening before he got back to the patient in No. 20.

In the corridor Miss Ashton met him with the chart. He scanned it silently.

"When was the last temperature taken?" he asked.

"At 6. It is slowly rising."

"Does she know she is worse?"

"I don't think so. She is calm and very quiet."

At 9 he sat alone with her while the nurse rested.

"I want to look at you," he said, "if you can endure the light."

He moved the shade from the electric bulb, and she raised her eyes to his—wonderful eyes, with a ring of deep violet around the outer rims of the gray iris.

"Are you better?"

"No."

The brave eyes never faltered, but a mist of tears came over them.

"I know now, John," she said, "the dream is the fact."

He held her to him.

"I love you, Nell."

The swinging light made queer, moving shadows around the room.

Later the house doctor met him on the stairs.

"Internal hemorrhage, isn't it?" he asked.

"I fear so."

Toward morning the nurse called him. When he entered No. 20 the patient was raised slightly in bed.

"Were you asleep?" she asked.

"No, I don't sleep any more," he answered wistfully.

The nurse went out and closed the door.

"Why didn't you write to me?" she asked.

"Why, Nell, I wrote and wrote, and at last I went back to find you."

They could hear the ring of a patient's bell and soft footsteps hurrying along the corridor.

"It was father," she said. "Jose wanted to marry me. The ranch was mortgaged to Jose. Then after you left father died, and I went to my aunt in Denver."

A look of contentment was settling over her face, smoothing out the lines of pain between the eyes, which bore expression of extreme agony.

Another hour passed silently. Then she asked:

"Did you know me when you operated?"

The surgeon shuddered.

"I did not see your face till it was nearly over, Nell, and then"—

"Don't call any one," she said when he lifted her to ease the pain. "I think I am going to sleep, and this"—she smiled softly—"is what I drifted back for."

The sunbeam that crept through the closed blinds stalked slowly along the wall until it touched the head of her bed.

Then the surgeon folded her hands and, like a man grown old, groped out of the room.

PREPARED TO LEAVE OFFICE

Resignation of Huerta May Be Announced Today

FURTHER RESISTANCE FUTILE

Former Cabinet Official Says Dictator Wants to Save Country From Horrors of War and Capital From Capture—Plans to Leave Mexico After Naming Carbajal as Successor

Vera Cruz, Mex., July 13.—To save his country from the horrors of civil war and his capital from capture and perhaps sack by a victorious army, General Huerta intends to resign the provisional presidency and leave Mexico.

The statement as made by Roberto Esteva-Ruiz, Mexican sub-secretary of foreign affairs, who reached Vera Cruz from Mexico City on his way to Europe, Huerta, he said, will surrender the government to Francisco Carbajal, the new minister of foreign affairs, who, in turn, will step aside when the time comes for some other provisional president, wholly acceptable to the constitutionalists. Just when the change will come, Esteva-Ruiz said he did not know.

He was convinced, however, that Huerta would lay down his power during this week, and it would not surprise him, he said, if his resignation were announced today.

Carbejal, he added, was suggested as provisional president by the American delegation at the Niagara Falls mediation conference and agreed to by Huerta delegates and the South American mediators, while the constitutionalists indirectly conveyed the idea that he would be acceptable to Carranza.

Esteva-Ruiz is convinced that unless something occurs to disarrange the present plan, fighting between federals and constitutionalists is over. This, he said, was indicated by the evacuation of Gaudalajara.

Like Porfirio Diaz, who fled from his country in the hope that his going might avert a long and costly civil war, Huerta, according to Esteva-Ruiz, has decided to yield to superior numbers. Both Huerta and General Blanquet, his minister of war, knew that longer resistance was futile.

He expected that Blanquet would leave Mexico City.

ACTION TO BE BROUGHT

Restitution From New Haven Directors Sought by Stockholders

Boston, July 13.—Based on the allegations that money from the treasury of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad had been illegally squandered, a suit for the recovery of $125,000,000 will be filed in the superior court here by the minority stockholders.

The suit is to be instituted against the directors of the road and the facts contained in the complaint will be the transactions that have recently been the subject of investigation by the interstate commerce commission.

Sherman L. Whipple, acting for the minority stockholders, will have charge of the suit and the defendants to be named include the estate of the late J. P. Morgan, William Rockefeller and Lewis C. Ledyard. It is expected a bill in equity will be filed this week.

AID FOR NEEDY FAMILIES

Distribution of Food to Be Discontinued at Salem

Salem, Mass., July 13.—The distribution of food by the Salem relief committee will cease next week. Forty-five hundred persons are now being supplied with their daily rations.

Colonel Spencer, who is in charge of the distribution, says that after next Monday special provisions will be made for deserving families that are really unable to provide for themselves.

Spencer says that about $1000 a day is being spent for food for the refugees. About $32,000 has been spent in all for this purpose. It costs about $7 a week to supply one family of six or seven members.

VANITIE WINS AGAIN

Resolute Gets Lost In Fog and Fails to Cross Finish Line

Newport, R. I., July 13.—The Vanitie won the third official cup trial race with the Resolute and Defiance in one of the strangest finishes that has been witnessed at a yacht race for some years.

The Resolute, some minutes ahead but away to the leeward of the line, lost the mark in the fog and did not finish. If it had been a clear day the Herreshoff boat was so far off that it would hardly have been possible for her to win even with her time allowance.

New Fish Pier Record

Boston, July 13.—More than 85,000 pounds of fresh mixed ground fish, brought to port by Captain Hopkins of the E. C. Hussey, established a new record for the Boston fish pier.

Lightning Destroys Hosiery Mill

Hagerstown, Md., July 13.—Fire caused by lightning destroyed the hosiery mill of the Antietam Knitting company, entailing a loss of $75,000.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

If you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

THE CHURCHES IN SUMMER.

The summer church congregations are less populous than ever. An increasing number of people are worshipping God in Nature, at the rate of 40 miles per hour in their automobiles. There is a hollow echo among the empty pews, as the deacons march about with the contribution boxes.

Some people say the minister is to blame, and that his sermons do not hit modern life. But still, when a clergyman preaches about divorce and the Mexican situation, he does not seem to help things any. The trouble is probably that people's time and attention are more exclusively occupied with other things than formerly. Their business or their job in the day time, the picture show, the club, or motor car at night, occupy their exclusive attention. The feeling of worship has been crowded out.

More and more churches during the summer months are uniting their services. One well filled audience room is better than half a dozen with a sprinkling of attendance. No kind of a public gathering makes much impression unless it has the spirit of enthusiasm. The large united audience gives that feeling, while in isolated handfuls it is lacking.

Two lines of hose were run to the house from the nearest hydrant but Chief Billings was able to extinguish the blaze with the use of chemicals. The loss did not exceed $10.

NEW BRIDGE AT GRANITE ST.

Little Interruption In Travel During the Work

One of the most remarkable pieces of bridge building ever done by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad was accomplished in this city Sunday, when a brand new steel bridge was substituted for the old one at Granite street interrupting traffic only a few hours.

At daybreak 100 workmen and two powerful steam derricks were ready for the job. The old bridge was taken down after the early morning trains went through and the new bridge substituted in sections, one track at a time.

The new bridge is higher from the street by a foot than the old one and gives more headroom. During the morning up to 2 P. M. trains were sent over the branch line at West Quincy and those tracks accommodated more trains than ever before.

Early in the afternoon the westerly track was opened for travel and both tracks were in use before midnight.

It surprised everyone that the work was done so quietly. But there was no riveting; the pieces were bolted together and nuts were used. The men too were quiet and Sunday worship in the church near by was not disturbed. Many people witnessed the work.

The bridge today is painted a brilliant red but will be given a coat of black tomorrow. The change was made without anyone being injured. The work was done by the Boston Bridge Co.

BRIEFS

The Sons of Veterans and Auxiliary 3 will hold a lawn party Wednesday evening at the Adams Academy grounds.

Upwards of 550 members of the Holy Name Society of St. Mary's parish attended holy communion in a body at the eight o'clock mass on Sunday morning. Rev. Fr. Thomas R. McCoy, pastor and director of the society made a short address after mass.

The committee in charge of the field day of St. John's parish met Sunday afternoon and received reports from the chairmen of the sub committee. Another meeting will be held Thursday evening when the final details for the Saturday festival will be made Little Willie Crooker, the 6 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Crooker of Deldorf street, was severely injured on Saturday. The boy was at play, and fell on a bottle, cutting a tendon in his arm. Dr. Sargent was called and took him to the hospital where he dressed the wound. He is doing as well as can be expected.

AUTO ACCIDENT.

A forward wheel on the auto of John A. Johnson of Arthur street, collapsed in City Square at 10 o'clock Saturday night and four passengers were slightly shaken up when the axle struck the street. The machine was towed to a garage and repaired.

HOW TO TRANSFORM THE KIMONO.

It is wonderful to realize how much a small affair like a fichu will do toward transforming the kimono to plain cotton or silk crape into a garment that looks almost as dressy as a tea gown and certainly one in which a matron may receive a comparative stranger rather than keep that stranger waiting while she makes a more elaborate toilet.

The fichu, which is prettiest in dotted net or swiss, should be at least a yard and a half long by twenty-seven inches wide and finished along the outer edge and the two ends with a frilling of plain net or swiss. It is drawn about the shoulders to form shallow little folds across the back and over the top of the arms, crossed above the bust and the ends knotted under a nosegay of satin flowers.

If the front of the kimono is then turned back to give a V effect to the inner edges of the fichu the entire bodice portion of the costume will apparently be a net veiled silk and will have scarcely any of the appearance of a loose negligee.

A BLOSSOM HINT.

How to Preserve Flowering Bulbs and Cut Flowers.

Blossoming bulbs, and especially tulips, should not be left in a hot room all night. Remove them to a cool, but not cold, temperature and bring them back in the morning and you will double the duration of their flowering life.

Plants and bulbs that have not been raised at home want very careful treatment when they first come from the florist or they will wilt and die at once.

It is a piteous and an exasperating thing to see a glorious azalea or spirea or plantagenista reduced in a couple of days from a mass of vivid bloom to a muddle of withered petals and bare stalks.

A draft is usually the cause of this. The plants have been forced in the high, even temperature of a hothouse and have not been long enough at the florist's to get hardened. The only thing to do is to keep them in a warm place. Give them very little water if they seem too dry and carefully cut off the flowers and leaves that have begun to fade. When buying plants always choose those with a few flowers and many buds and ascertain if they have been "hardened."

Such plants will be a joy for weeks and when the flower is over for the season can be placed in a greenhouse or even in a sheltered corner of a balcony for the summer and if properly tended in the autumn will bloom again next winter.

All cut flowers require delicate handling and arranging, but spring blossoms most of all. Snowdrops look best in a shallow bowl filled with feathery moss, in which each blossom is set separately, tinging its white bells.

Long stalked violets are charming set loosely in a little jug of pottery. Daffodils and narcissi should look as if they were growing.

Never put daffodils and jonquils into the same vase. They will kill each other. Mimosa also should be arranged by itself in branches in a tall china vase. It is too strong for other flowers and kills them by contact.

Camellia japonica also must be in long, spiky branches—two or three in a high china jar, with no foliage. A few flowers deftly arranged, with each blossom adjusted separately, showing its stalk and having "room to breathe," are far more effective than a whole lot carelessly jumbled together. And flowers are so sentient and responsive. They know perfectly well when they are deftly and lovingly handled and "act accordingly."

How to Entertain Your Guests Cleverly

If you want to entertain a group of friends and your rooms are not large enough for dancing, and you are tired of whist and bridge, try having a literary party.

First of all select congenial people and have the invitations printed on small folders. If your library is large enough have the guests assemble there and have some one representing a librarian distribute small notebooks prepared in this manner. At any shop dainty miniature booklets are purchasable or if you are clever at making things of this sort they will be even more interesting than those purchased. Attach to each of these as many bookmarks as there are guests. Pieces of narrow ribbon are used for this purpose, and tiny envelopes are then fastened to the ends of the ribbons.

On the flyleaf of each miniature notebook write an incident taken from some well known book. Make fifty words the limit for this description. Provide each guest with slips of paper on which are written the guesses at the name of the book suggested by the description of the flyleaf. Each guest slips his guess into the envelope and seals it, writing his name on the outside.

When all the envelopes are filled select the cleverest guest, who possesses plenty of wit and humor, to open the envelopes and read the attempts at correct guessing. Award an appropriate prize to the one guessing the greatest number correctly. A bookrack, magazine cover, book or library scissors are in good taste. When writing the description on the flyleaf choose amusing incidents and quotations as much as possible.

ASSAULT CASE AT BRAINTREE

In court this morning Everett P. Hull was arraigned for assault with a dangerous weapon on Frank DeCoste at Braintree and was held in $500 until July 17.

When called upon to plead to the warrant he entered a plea of not guilty and claimed self defense.

The case is a somewhat peculiar one, in which a so-called star boarder figures. DeCoste who is 31 years of age claims that when he attempted to enter his home on Liberty street that Hull shot him. DeCoste was struck in the head by the bullet, but was able to stagger to the home of Alfred DeCoste, a brother, a half mile away where he was attended by Drs. Gile and Dame who took several stitches in the wound.

Hull the alleged assailant is employed on the New Haven railroad and is a boarded at the DeCoste house. It is claimed that DeCoste came home and seizing an axe began to chop away the screen door and that Hull thinking his own life in danger got a revolver and shot.

When the police were first informed of the shooting they visited the DeCoste house where the snooting was denied, and the officers took their departure. Later when DeCoste was seen he declared that he had been shot and exhibited the wound in his head. Then the officers went again to the DeCoste house where it was admitted a shot had been fired but that it was in self defense.

Later the police arrested Hull at his employment at the railroad station.

SALEM TAG DAY YIELDS OVER $1,000

Which Places Quincy Grand Total for Relief of Salem Sufferers Over $2,500

Women and Their Collectors to be Congratulated

Quincy people have now contributed over $2,500 to the relief of Salem as follows:

By subscriptions	over $900
By organizations	over 600
By Tag day	over 1,000

Quincy's Tag Day Committee met at City Hall on Monday afternoon for the pleasant duty of counting the cash contributed by the people of Quincy on Saturday which was officially known as Tag Day. That the people of the city had responded generously they were confident, and they were not disappointed, for the total of the Tag Day collection will be over $1,000.

The little banks were unlocked in the presence of Mayor Miller and the contents of each counted and recorded separately by Joseph L. Whiton, Mrs. J. R. Mellen, Mrs. Frank F. Prescott, Mrs. N. S. Hunting, Mrs. W. W. Jenness, Mrs. C. L. Hewson, Mrs. J. R. Richards, Mrs. W. G. Spargo, Miss Frances Burke, Miss Jessie Burke, Mrs. W. S. Pinkham, Mrs. E. J. Badger, Miss Florence Olney, Mrs. A. D. Ropes, Mrs. Levi Turner and Mrs. Wilson Marsh, ably assisted by Secretary A. F. Bromley of the Y. M. C. A., A. N. LaBrecque, W. G. Spargo, Frank F. Prescott, John R. Richards and others. Soiled hands showed that money is dirty stuff.

The amounts in the different banks varied considerably, but there was something in nearly every one, and only a few had less than $1. Twenty or more had over $10 each, and one over $40.

In one bank was found a $10 bill and in two others $5 bills. In all there were nearly $100 in bills in the banks. All the balance was coin—half dollars, quarter dollars, dimes, nickels and of course some pennies, a few hair pins, some common pins, one counterfeit advertising bill, etc. The average in each bank was about $4.

As the contents of each bank were counted they were dumped into a large travelling bag.

The most strenuous task came after the contents of the banks had been ascertained, for there was a second count. The contents of the bag were dumped onto the large table in the Council chamber, and the committee proceeded to sort out the coin into different piles, one for the half dollars, another for the quarters, the dimes, etc. Then these were counted and rolled into papers.

At first it seemed like a hopeless task, and it was a long job, but many

RATE OF $21.20 IN TAUNTON

Larger in Population; Smaller in Valuation Than Quincy

One of the first, if not the first city in the state to announce its tax rate for the year 1914, is the city of Taunton whose population is practically the same as that of Quincy. The rate this year as announced is $21.20, an increase of eighty cents over last year.

The valuation according to the announcement of the assessors has increased a million dollars. In addition to increase in valuation the list of polls has increased 106 over that of a year ago.

The assessors give the cause of the increase in rate, to be increased amounts necessary to run the city. The state tax this year showed an increase of $4,800. This amount is offset to a considerable extent because last year the city was called upon to pay a secondary tax of $3,115 imposed on the city by the state for installing the year before, the new system of accounting.

The valuation of the city of Taunton as given by the assessors is $26,-2555,994, while Quincy's valuation in 1913 was $36,610,560, or about ten million more than Taunton. The census of 1910 gave Taunton a population of 34,250 and Quincy 32,642.

PRESENTATION TO PASTOR'S WIFE

About fifty of the friends of Mrs. A. P. Hanson, the wife of Rev. A. P. Hanson, showed esteem for her on Sunday when they gathered at Bethel Beach and presented her a set of solid silver spoons. G. R. Bloomquist was the spokesman, and on the committee were Mrs. Albert Nelson and Mrs. August Weeden. For nearly four years, Mr. Hanson was pastor of Swedish Baptist church and he and wife were much beloved. On Monday Rev. and Mrs. Hanson left for Jamestown, N. Y. to attend a convention in the $17,000 church which was made possible by the efforts of Mr. Hanson during his ministry there, and of which he may well feel proud.

DISTRICT COURT.

John Leary was fined $15 for drunkenness at Weymouth and John J. Hourihan $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

William H. Welsh was arraigned for neglect to support his family at Weymouth. Case continued until July 23. In the meantime the probation officer will endeavor to find employment for him.

Joseph W. Schwamb and William J. Tilford were arraigned for carrying firearms in the park district. They were fined $10 each which they paid.

SEEKING A LOCATION HERE

Leatherette Company Has Option in Ward Two

The East Weymouth Leatherette Co. is prospecting for a manufacturing site along the shores of the Town river and options have been secured on property in the rear of the Ward Two playground.

The transfer has not been completed because of a strong opposition that has developed among men prominent in the community who object to the locating of hazardous industries Quincy.

The company, owned by George H. Lowe, manufactures a leatherette and uses considerable celluloid in its process. The later is considered to be highly explosive and extremely dangerous because it generates a spontaneous combustion when baled.

The company did business in Weymouth until a fire which started from an explosion in its workroom destroyed the building and threatened the Jackson square section with a conflagration of far more serious proportions than it did assume.

Since then it is understood the officials of the town have declined to give them a permit to relocate in Weymouth and Quincy or Cambridge are being considered.

The option on the Point property holds good for a week, and in the meantime an investigation is being made relative to the industry coming to this city. Inspectors from the fire marshal's office of the State police have been giving the matter some attention.

With their investigation, and a conference between department heads of Quincy, a strong opposition has developed, and if the latter do not fail in their efforts to conserve the city from fire risk of amazing proportions the plant will probably be obliged to go elsewhere.

Chief Faxon A. Billings of the fire department is in the front rank of objectors. He frankly states that a firm specializing on a product in which a celluloid process is used is not welcome as far as his department is concerned, not only because of the liability of an explosion wrecking the factory and starting fires as in Weymouth and in Salem, but because of the effect it will have on surrounding property for other manufacturing or residential purposes.

GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP.

Seven of the members of the Wollaston Golf club are entered for the Massachusetts Golf Association's annual championship at Brae Burn on Wednesday, viz:—J. H. McLaughlin, J. J. Gallagher, G. J. Murphy, C. M. Hart, J. B. Brennen, J. E. O'Connell and C. Macleod.

Miss Nina Martin of Vermont is the guest of Miss Viola Jones of South street for three weeks.

FOR FOURTH TERM.

Chairman John F. Merrill of the Board of County Commissioners is a candidate for that office for the fourth time and papers in his interest are now being circulated throughout the district and meeting with a good response. Mr. Merrill was first elected to the board in 1906. He took office January of the following year and is now serving his third term.

As far as is known he will enter the race this year unopposed in his own party, although there is some talk of Jeremiah O'Leary of Sharon being a candidate on the Democratic ticket.

There will be a number of attractions at the S. of V. and Auxiliary 3 lawn party at Adams Aacdemy grounds including a band concert in the evening.

CATHOLIC CHURCH FOR QUINCY POINT

Foundation for New Edifice on Washington Street Nearly Completed

Will Have Auditorium 82 by 48 and Accomodates 700

The foundation for the new church of St. Johns parish at Washington and Pray street is practically finished and unless some unforseen delay interrupts construction, the Catholics of the Fore River district will worship in their own edifice in the early fall.

The growth in the Quincy Point Catholic population has been great and in all probability that portion of St. John's will be set aside as a separate parish within a year. No name has been chosen for the new edifice but an appropriate one will be given at the dedication which may occur during the last week in October.

Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, pastor of St. Johns church who is in charge of the extension, has considered the erection of a church at Quincy Point since he came to this city and last year purchased what was known as the Tisdale estate. A few weeks ago he awarded the contract for the building to James Mullen of Maynard and work was commenced. The agreement reads that the structure will be finished by Oct. 1.

The church will be a frame building with a concrete exterior and will add beauty to its surroundings. It is of mission architecture and was designed by Edward P. Graham of Boston.

The entire length of the church will be 116 feet and the auditorium will be 82 feet long and 48 feet wide, accommodating approximately 700 people. The gable roof will be overtopped by a tower which will be 60 feet in height to the peak and 70 feet to the top of the cross.

The side walls will be 14 feet in height and the distance to the top of the roof in the auditorium will be 45 feet.

Three entrances will open directly into the vestibule, on the right of which will be the sexton's office and on the left the steps to the choir gallery.

The church will have three aisles one in the centre and two along the sides, and along the latter, near the front of the church there will be two confessionals, set in recesses.

The sanctuary railing, which will extend the entire breadth of the church will enclose the main altar and two side altars.

The church will set on concrete piers and the only excavating necessary will be under the sanctuary where there will be rooms for the articles of devotion, vestments and other material of religious nature.

The boiler will set under the extreme northerly side of the church and on each side will be the coal bins and fuel boxes, and outside the church there will be granolithic walks.

REV. JOHN J. COAN

The census figures of the Catholic population of Quincy Point are not available at the present writing, but it is estimated that they are close to one third the total of St. John's parish.

The announcement that a mission station was to be built for their comfort and convenience was received with much pleasure, and all eagerly anticipate the dedicatory exercises which will formally open their new religious home.

HIT BY ELECTRIC.

A vegetable wagon said to be owned and driven by Isaac Marcus of Roxbury was run into by an electric car on Hancock street Monday night near the corner of Billings road. Marcus was thrown off and somewhat shaken up and bruised. He was treated by Dr. Sweeney after which he was taken to his home.

Now that Mr. Roosevelt has resigned as contributing editor of the Outlook, the frate subscriber may feel like resuming his visits to the office.

Owing to the fact that the American people are suffering from factory shut-downs, the baseball associations are hoping for increased gate receipts.

While Congress is to have night sessions, in case a constituent wishes to see his congressman in the evening it would not be good judgment to go first to the Capitol.

It is regarded as the duty of the newspaper writers to examine closely the immodest gowns worn by the women, so as to be prepared to condemn them intelligently.

There is a good deal of complaint because the picture of McKinley is being removed from the postal cards, but the post-mistresses will still see that no improper messages are being sent.

Oklahoma towns are observing a "Take back what you have borrowed day." It is understood that certain makes of automobiles are exempt.

The Mexican election will of course be declared invalid, as a number of persons who were not office holders succeeded in voting.

It is strange that police forces will go ahead on their own account and investigate the murder mysteries without asking the newspapers how it should be done.

HEALTH FOR WOMEN STUDENTS.

Flat chested college graduates, with all sorts of intellectuality, but with bad digestion and frazzled nerves, are hopelessly out of fashion today. So said President Mary E. Woolley of Mount Holyoke college in characteristic address to the National Educational Association meeting at St. Paul the past week

In primitive times women did manual labor in home and field. The men sat around making arrow-heads. The women must have been their physical equals.

Yet for hundreds of years the idea has prevailed that women were weaklings. It was not until bicycles and lawn tennis came along that out door sports were thought possible for them They sat on the porch doing embroidery while their brothers played baseball.

In spite of Miss Wooley's optimistic statement, in women's colleges the old ideal prevails to an extent. The girls have more vigorous sports than formerly. But some colleges are still fearful of the word "athletics." They think "recreation" sounds much more ladylike. Inter-college athletics are not common for girls. Thereby many abuses are avoided. But a splendid incitement to physical culture is lost.

Still the modern girl, particularly the modern college girl, is gaining greatly in physical power. She can tire out nine-tenths of the men on long country walks.

The physically vigorous girl has a bright face and mery heart. She is personally attractive. People of this type disprove the old claim that college women don't marry and rear families. The time would seem ripe to encourage women to engage freely in every kind of athletics. Give them clothes in which they can run, and they may even beat the boys on the baseball diamond. A physically vigorous womanhood means the disappearance of much of the disease that depresses the human race.

OLD DIRECTORS HELD CRIMINAL

Sensational Report on New Haven Road's Affairs

SUBMITTED FOR PROSECUTION

Commerce Board Finds Loss of Between $60,000,0000 and $90,000,000 by Reason of Waste and Mismanagement—Present Board Aided the Government Inquiry

Washington, July 14.—"Criminal negligence and one of the most glaring instances of mal-adminstration revealed in all the history of American railroading," is the interstate commerce commission's characterization in its findings in the investigation of the New Haven railroad's financial affairs reported to the senate.

In a report of 30,000 words, probably the most drastic in terms of any made by the commission, the New Haven's directors were pronounced "criminally negligent." Evidence pointing to violation of law has been transmitted to district attorneys in Massachusetts, Rhode Island and New York and the federal department of justice.

"A reasonable estimate of the loss to the New Haven by reason of waste and mismanagement," says the report, "will amount to between $60,000,000 and $90,000,000. Directors should be made individually liable to civil and criminal laws for the manner in which they discharge their trust."

All the commission's strictures were upon the management of the New Haven system under former President Mellen.

In justice to the present management, the commission says, it is but fair to say that Chairman Elliott and Walter D. Hines, special counsel, "have co-operated with the commission and rendered it substantial assistance throughout the investigation."

That the monopoly theory of the New Haven road was unsound and mischievous, that its directors were "criminally negligent," and that a substantial part of the stockholders' money was wasted and can be recovered are the high spots in the report.

The commission declares the New Haven directors consciously violated the federal anti-monopoly laws.

No attempt was made to fix the responsibility for the New Haven transactions as between President Mellen and J. P. Morgan, but the report condemned the "control" generally.

It is up to the department of justice to act upon the commission's findings that the New Haven directors were criminally responsible in the New Haven transactions, an interstate commerce commission official stated.

Chief Counsel Folk, who conducted the New Haven inquiry, said the report made the directors directly responsible for more than $67,000,000. The commission put the matter squarely up to the department of justice for action by furnishing it with the complete record of the testimony.

In arraigning the directors the commission said:

"If these directors who were faithless to their stewardship were held responsible in the courts and at the bar of public opinion for the failure to do those things they should have done, the lesson to directors who do not direct would be very salutary."

That the directors should be held responsible for the Westchester, steamship, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Massachusetts trolleys and other transactions was declared.

Here are some interesting points concerning the New Haven:

WITH HAMMER AND PISTOL

Jealous Man Smashes Wife's Skull and Fatally Injures Himself

Utica, N. Y., July 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Edgett were found in bed dying from wounds inflicted, the police believe, by Edgett, in a jealous rage. Mrs. Edgett died in a short time and her husband cannot live.

The scene of the tragedy was their home at Yorkville, a suburb. Edgett, a watchmaker, 55 years old, had suffered long from cancer. For several weeks he had been unable to leave his room and was about to undergo a fourth operation.

Near the bed upon which Edgett and his wife were found was a sledge hammer and under the bed was a revolver. It is supposed that Edgett procured the hammer and crushed his wife's head, fracturing the skull in three places, then shooting himself.

Mrs. Edgett was the mother of thirteen children, eleven of whom are living. Edgett's father died in the Utica state hospital for the insane three months ago and one of the sons has been confined in that institution.

LEADERS ARE DEFIANT

But Commemoration of Battle of the Boyne Is Orderly

Belfast, July 14.—The battle of the Boyne was commemorated in Ireland with tremendous enthusiasm. But there was a more noticeable absence of disorder than on past occasions of this kind.

Following the custom, a great procession marched from Belfast to Drumbeg, where Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader, made his now familiar speech defying the government either totally to exclude Ulster from home rule or to come out and fight.

Lord Londonderry, at Enniskillen, and Walter R. Long, at Garvagh, made speeches in similar vein to other big audiences of Ulstermen, but no disorder was reported at any point.

Salem Fire Refugees Are Being Amply Provided For

Salem, Mass., July 14.—There is no longer acute distress in Salem. Food is abundant, furniture is arriving in quantities, homes are being found for refugees. It is planned to abolish the bread line within ten days, the refugee camps in two weeks.

According to the rehabilitation officers nearly all worthy fire sufferers are now self-supporting. Others appear awaiting complete reimbursement for their fire loss before attempting working for a new start.

Requests for stoves, bedding, food and a few chairs and a table with which to set up housekeeping are now comparatively few.

The relief fund was augmented by $10,000, the gift of John D. Rockefeller. The report of Gardiner M. Lane, treasurer of the relief committee, shows a total of $504,810.66.

Robbers Drug Woman and Move Her Bed to Accomplish Purpose

West Haverstraw, N. Y., July 14.—After drugging Mrs. Eugene Bowman, burglars who broke into her home in West Haverstraw before daybreak moved her bed around the room while she was sleeping.

The bed had stood against a closed closet and the thieves evidently wanted to get the door open. When they did they looted the place. The burglars got $36 in bills, two suits of clothes, including a fireman's uniform; jewelry, silverware and bric-a-brac.

Mrs. Bowman, waking up feeling ill, found herself at the other end of the room. She believes chloroform was given to her.

JOHN D. HOPES TO BE CENTENARIAN

Oil King Wins at Golf on Seventy-fifth Birthday.

MAKES MANY HARD SHOTS.

Shakes Hands With Workmen on His Estate Who Offer Their Congratulations—Apparently Rugged and Well. His Spirits Run High During Game. Mrs. Rockefeller an Invalid.

"Well, it takes us young boys to win!" exclaimed John D. Rockefeller as he and Frank C. Folger, president of the Standard Oil Company of New York, defeated Elias Johnson of New York and A. L. Gifford of Tarrytown in a foursome game of golf.

Mr. Rockefeller was extremely happy, because he won the game on his seventy-fifth birthday.

A beautiful day greeted him when he arose at 6:30. He had breakfast at 7 and then spent an hour reading the newspapers. Soon after 8 telegrams of congratulations began to pour in. They came from all parts of the country. More than a hundred were received.

Reading these messages from old friends put Mr. Rockefeller in particularly good spirits, and at 9:30 he started to dress for his game of golf. At 10 Mr. Folger and Mr. Johnson arrived at Tarrytown from New York. A little later Mr. Gifford and the Rev. Arthur T. Brooks and the Rev. Gordon Lang, Mr. Rockefeller's pastors, reached the house.

Mr. Rockefeller was waiting. When they offered congratulations he said: "Boys, Folger and I are going to beat you today. We will pair the ministers in a twosome and let them fight it out. I don't like to be near a minister when any one foozles."

Wins Birthday Game.

Mr. Rockefeller never played a better game. His whole interest was in winning, and he often made difficult shots that were needed to win a hole. After the party had been playing an hour Mr. Rockefeller complained of the heat and had one of the caddy boys run to his house and get an umbrella. During the rest of the play the boy held the umbrella over his head. The game was over about 12:30. When it was announced that Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Folger had won both smiled seraphically.

Mr. Brooks beat Mr. Lang 8 up.

"Gentlemen, I'm sorry we had to defeat two such good players, but on my birthday this is excusable," said Mr. Rockefeller. "I want you to come into my golf room, and we will have golfers' lunch."

Mr. Rockefeller then escorted the party into his mansion. Ice cold milk, fresh the same day; chicken sandwiches and crackers formed part of the luncheon.

Mr. Rockefeller did not mention his birthday during the talk at luncheon, except to say that he hoped to play as well when he was a hundred.

Although Mr. Rockefeller's score was not given out, it was said he played an exceedingly fine game. He looked rugged and well, and his spirits ran high.

Workmen Congratulate Him.

After his guests departed he went to bed and took a short nap. At 3 o'clock he was out again in his car driving around the estate, superintending new roads and particularly the work of a new lake which he is building in the Buttermilk hill section. This lake is needed for his new fountain. A fifty ton stone for the fountain has just been put in place. Mr. Rockefeller now has 500 men at work on his estate.

As he passed the workmen they offered congratulations. Mr. Rockefeller shook hands with many that he knew.

There was no celebration at night, as Mrs. Rockefeller is ill and has to be wheeled around. Her sister is also indisposed.

"As long as I can play as good a game of golf as I did today I will never get any older," was Mr. Rockefeller's reply to one of the friends who called to congratulate him.

FIRST TO DISPATCH TRAINS.

A. H. Copeland, Pioneer In Telegraphic Supervision of Railways, Still Living.

Illinois claims the disfinction of possessing among her citizens the man who first moved trains with the aid of the telegraph. The original train dispatcher is A. H. Copeland, now living in retirement at Oak Park, and who was agent for the Chicago and Alton at Chenoa for thirty years. It was back in Vermont in the year 1852 that the first known movement of trains by telegraph was recorded, marking one of the most important epochs in the history of railroading. In that year Mr. Copeland was engaged as manager, operator, lineman, messenger boy and battery man of the Middleburg (Vt.) telegraph office.

In those days, when the Morse invention was in its infancy, the telegraph offices were operated in conjunction with the postoffices and occupied a small room in conjunction. In addition to his other duties, Mr. Copeland was employed as clerk in the postoffice. In those primitive days of railroading trains ran by time card exclusively, northbound trains having the right of track over those southbound.

Women Can Do Great Work by Helping Along the Go to Church Movement

IT is up to the women to make the men GO TO CHURCH.

It is unnecessary to say that women have a wonderful influence with men. It is not enough that a woman go to church. She should insist on her father, brother, husband or sweetheart attending divine service. And there is no denying that if the women will take an interest in the GO TO CHURCH movement it will be a wonderful help.

DOES ANY ONE DOUBT THAT THE YOUNG GIRL WHO HAS A SWEETHEART CAN INDUCE HER YOUNG MAN TO ATTEND CHURCH? IF SHE CAN'T PREVAIL ON HIM TO GO TO THE HOUSE OF GOD SHE SHOULD DROP HIM. HE WILL NOT MAKE A GOOD HUSBAND. IF THERE IS A GIRL WHO HAS A BROTHER WHO DOES NOT ATTEND CHURCH LET HER BEGIN RIGHT NOW TO START HIM ON THE RIGHT PATH. LET THE LOVING WIFE PLEAD WITH HER HUSBAND TO GO TO CHURCH WITH THE SAME FERVOR THAT SHE ASKS FOR AN EASTER BONNET. SHE GENERALLY GETS THE EASTER BONNET. IT WILL BE JUST AS EASY—PROBABLY A GREAT DEAL EASIER—TO GET HER HUSBAND TO GO TO CHURCH.

Men will not deny women anything. If some of the women of the country would put one-half the energy into the GO TO CHURCH movement that they do into other uplift work the churches wouldn't hold the crowds. The wife should tell her husband that when he was married he went to church; that when their child was born he went to church. Women can and must make the men GO TO CHURCH. The churches are the very life of the nation. If the attendance has fallen off it is due to carelessness. Men need but to be reminded and they will do their part.

Make the men GO TO CHURCH next Sunday!

Then make them go the following Sunday!

JOY TRIPS COME TO END

Wanted for Forging Order on City Treasurer

Officer Hinchon apprehended John C. McCarthy, aged 14 years, of 72 Crescent street, Monday night, on the charge of forging and uttering, by which he obtained from City Treasurer Curtis last Wednesday two pay envelopes containing $35.50 belonging to Messrs. Duane and Johnson.

The boy it is alleged presented a forged order for the money which was turned over to him, and for which he signed the pay roll in the name of William Duane. When arrested by Officer Hinchon all he had left was $2 in money and a jack knife.

It is alleged that the boy has been having a grand time with the money and that he has entertained his young friends, who were ignorant of where the money came from, in a lavish manner.

The joy trips were wound up last Sunday when he hired a boat at Houghs Neck and took a friend to Nantasket for the day. This trip was an expensive one, and all that he had left when Officer Hinchon got him was as stated above $2 in money and a jack knife.

This is the same boy who it is alleged obtained a pay envelope containing $10 from the City Treasurer on April 29. On this occasion he did not present an order but called for the pay envelope of Patrick Cavanagh, signing the pay roll in the name of John O'Brien.

As the boy is a juvenile the case was not heard this morning, but went over until the juvenile session of the court next week.

IDENTIFIED BY HIS PICTURE

Man Long Sought by Boston Police Caught In Philadelphia

CALLED "GENTLEMAN FORGER"

Lived as Respected Citizen In Suburbs of Boston While, It Is Alleged, He Resorted to Forgery to Secure Thousands of Dollars' Worth of Bonds From Business Houses

Boston, July 14.—Sought in every corner of the civilized globe for the last twelve years by the Boston police to answer to charges of check forgeries totalling $79,417.15, the mysterious "gentleman forger" was discovered by Chief McGarr at police detective headquarters to be apparently A. Gilbert Sargent, a well-known stock broker, who has lived in Boston suburbs, in the height of respecability, for the last sixteen years, and whose name has been in the telephone books and street directories all that time.

While lengthy printed descriptions of the elusive "gentleman forger" were were being sent repeatedly all over the world by the Boston police, and detectives were at work on various ends of the affair, there was entered on the blotters of both the Medford and Boston police last month the fact that the man they sought was missing from his home at 119 Forest street, Medford.

To his wife and 15-year-old daughter, the news of the arrest of the kind and considerate husband and father, who always furnished his home plentifully, came as a severe blow.

To Inspector Farrell of police headquarters fell the task of visiting Sargent's home and completely establishing the identification of Sargent's picture, taken in Philadelphia.

Sargent was arrested under the name of William H. Nash in Philadelphia on June 24 last, charged with obtaining $15,000 worth of bonds from the firm of Barclay, Morris & Co. of Philadelphia, by means of a worthless certified check drawn on the Franklin Trust company.

Sargent had pursued the same methods in that city as he had used in Boston. He hired an office and had the name Nash placed on the door as trustee of an estate. He then began his transactions by letter.

After making a check Sargent used a rubber stamp to stamp the certification on the check and forged the name of the bank teller or cashier.

In Philadelphia he was caught the very next day after the transaction took place and before he could dispose of the selected bonds he had obtained. The police had his picture taken and it arrived here a few days ago.

The picture was shown to the members of the firm of Lee, Higginson & Co., who lost, on Aug. 20, 1913, $8,824.23 by the same method. A member of the firm positively identified Sargent as the man who played the game on his firm.

Inspector Farrell was detailed on the case and after he had shown the picture to several stock brokerage men he obtained a clew whch led to Sargent's home.

When he called on the Medford police Farrell learned that Sargent had been reported by his wife as missing. Sargent after his arrest did not send word to his wife and daughter of his troubles in Philadelphia.

Sargent first came to the attention of the police in 1902 when, described as 5 feet 5 inchest tall, weighing 170, of medium complexion, it is alleged he obtained from the brokerage firm of N. W. Harris bonds worth $18,540.42 by the means of a worthless certified check.

All the railroad stations and steamships were watched at the time but no trace of the man sought could be found. Sargent was living at his Medford home and was in Boston doing business every day. He did not operate again until the following year, 1903, when he set up a new office and caught the firm of G. H. Gay for bonds valued at $15,043.75 by the same method.

Helpful Hints for Vacationists

SWIMMERS IN DANGER.

When It Is Foolhardy For a Person to Bathe—Death From Exhaustion.

It may be well to recall some familiar facts so that the dangers to which bathers often expose themselves may be avoided. One of the simplest of these facts is that, as in all bodily exercises, moderation is beneficial and excess is dangerous. Especially is this true if the bather suffers from organic or functional heart trouble. The man who uses tobacco to excess or who is weakened by long confinement at a sedentary occupation needs to exercise fully as much care as he who has chronic disease of the heart.

No sensible man would attempt to run as far as his strength would permit if at the limit of his endurance he knew that he must go through an equal amount of violent exercise to save his life. Yet foolish men and foolish boys daily try to see how far they can swim, put their lives in peril and alarm and worry the spectators on shore by their exhausted efforts to return. The first dip is especially dangerous, and the expert who "knows that he can make the second buoy because he did it last year" had better rest content in his confidence and try some shorter and safer trip for his first dip of the season.

Almost all the deaths from drowning result either from heart failure or cramp, not from failure of skill or muscular force. A skillful swimmer can rest quite easily "rocked in the cradle of the deep" provided his heart and nervous strength are not already exhausted by violent muscular exertion. If, however, the circulation is impeded or the nervous strength exhausted cerebral congestion, heart failure or nervous spasm is liable to seize even the expert and render him as powerless as a baby in the mighty arms of the ocean's waves.

HOW TO LEARN TO SWIM.

One Lesson Will Teach It if You Follow the Rules.

First.—Observe the motions of a swimming frog.

Second.—Find a beach or pool with level bottom. No "stepoffs" or holes. Lean forward. Take a long breath. Let your head sink into the water as far as it will. Allow the arms and legs to assume their own positions. Then reach forward with the arms and bring up the legs, as you have seen the frog do.

Third.—Bring the arms back with an outward circular motion, kicking the legs back and in at the same time.

Fourth.—At first you may not get your head out of water. Never mind that. Swim as long and as far as you conveniently can under water. You will not be very far under. Your hips will probably be above water, but your mouth and nose under.

Fifth.—Try and try again and keep swimming with your face under as long as you can endure it without pain or inconvenience.

Sixth.—Directly you will find that as the arms start to come back they will elevate the head out of water, so that the mouth is clear. Then take a good deep breath.

Seventh.—As the arms go back the head will sink again. Let it sink. That is the way to swim.

Eighth.—As the head sinks bring the arms forward again and also the legs. Then go through the same motion as before.

Ninth.—Remember each time the arms come back in the stroke the head goes up. Let the mouth just clear the water far enough and long enough to take a full breath of air.

Tenth.—That is the way the great swimmers swim. They do not try to keep their mouths far above water. They bring the mouth just far enough above water to take a breath. That is all.

Eleventh.—What handicaps most beginners is the desire to keep the head too far out of water. Champions could not do what beginners try to do.

Twelfth.—After you have learned to keep afloat and swim a bit you can learn the different strokes and the proper way to apply them from some efficient instructor.

IF YOU FALL OVERBOARD

And Can't Swim Read Here Just What to Do.

In reply to the question as to what one who cannot swim should do if he falls into the water when there is no assistance at hand William H. Daily, champion life saver of the United States, once said:

"When one falls into the water the weight of the body will force it under the water at first, but it will rise again if the mouth is kept shut. When you are under the water clasp your hands behind your back, squaring your elbows so as to balance the floating body, and you will rise to the surface on your back and float until help reaches you or until you starve, as long as you keep your hands in that position.

"The hands clasped and placed on the back of the neck is an equally good position."

HOW TO SAVE THE DROWNING.

Simple Rules to Follow to Resuscitate Unconscious Bather.

It is not impossible to restore life, even after all signs of life appear to be gone, in a bather. Do this:

First.—The first thing, of course, is to get the body to the shore.

Second.—Lose no time in carrying it to a place of shelter. Clear of the water anywhere is the place to begin work.

Third.—Lay the body face downward; stand astride the hips; join your hands underneath the body, raising it with a quick motion once or twice; place a roll of clothing, or, if not available, pile up the sand so as to have the middle of the body the highest. This is to clear the water from the throat.

Fourth.—Turn the body over, having the raised pile under the back at the waist; kneel across the hips, have the arms held over the head by an attendant. If no one but the rescuer is present place them over the head.

Fifth.—With a hand each side of the body at the foot of the ribs, press with all your force upward toward the shoulders steadily while you count four; relax the pressure suddenly; count two, then renew the pressure, and continue this until some movement shows life, a sigh usually being the first indication. Persevere in this treatment steadily. Do not give up for at least half an hour.

The Call of the Canoe.

The canoe enthusiast loves to shoot rapids. He is wise enough to carry all his goods overland to some quiet point beyond the swirl of waters, but not for anything would he miss the thrill as his light craft springs forward with a sudden leap, like a race horse off on the first stretch, plunges through dashing spray with the roar of torrents booming in his ears, and quivers like a wild thing under his guiding hand.

PLANNING FOR UNION PICNIC

Scottish Clans to Have Races and Football Contest

Clan MacGregor, O. S. C., held its regular meeting Monday evening and several applications for membership were acted on. Five candidates were initiated, all of them husky young fellows.

The delegates to the picnic committee reported progress in connection with the union picnic to be held at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury on Labor Day, September 7. It is the intention of the committee to make the games bigger and better than any ever held before, and to attain this it has been decided to run the games on a strictly amateur basis, and to that end a permit from the Amateur Athletic Association has been applied for and granted and to date some of the greatest amateurs in the country have signified their intention to compete.

The games will consist of the usual events which have made this picnic famous, but the star events will be the 100 and 220 yard dashes, and 440 yard and 880 yard runs and as a grand finale a five mile race. There will be competition in this event to satisfy the most ardent sport.

Particularly interesting to Quincy will be the five-a-side Association foot-ball competition. The contestants are limited to registered clubs within a radius of ten miles of Boston. That, of course, includes Quincy, and as the team representing the Fore River Football club have been very successful heretofore, it is very likely that the team wearing the Fore River colors will carry off the honors this year. This game has a large following in this city and many of our citizens will be at Caledonian grove on Labor Day to view that foot-ball game. The prizes for the event are gold medals for the winning team, and silver medals for the second team.

One race that has raised considerable excitement during the past four years is the relay race run by teams composed of members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Order Sons of St. George, and the Order of Scottish Clans. During the past four years the team representing the clans has been victorious, but every finish has been very close. The prizes for this event are gold medals to the winners valued at $40. The race is for one mile, four men to each team, each man to run one-quarter mile so that it is absolutely impossible to tell what may happen until the race is finished.

In order to foster the production of talent in as far as peculiarly Scottish games is concerned, Walter Scott of New York city has furnished gold and silver medals and cups for the winners in strictly Scottish games. He has also furnished medals to be competed for by lady bag pipers, also for novices at the different forms of Highland dancing. These events will be keenly contested without question.

Grand Chief Stewart W. Millar visited the clan at its meet and invited the members to an excursion to Bass Point which is to be held on August 15.

A communication was read from Royal Secretary Peter Kerr, stating that on account of illness, Royal Treasurer David King of Newark, N. J., had to resign from office. Clan McGregor passed resolutions of sympathy with Bro. King. He is vice president of the Broad and Market National Bank of Newark, N. J. His services to the organization have been invaluable, particularly in connection with investments of the $300,000. in the general fund of the order. His sterling business qualities and great good heartedness are well known to the members in general.

At the initiatory services Tanist Charles W. Nichol officiated in the absence of Chief Angus D. Martin. Bro. Nicol filled the Chief's chair with great credit to himself, and demonstrated very clearly that the next chief of Clan MacGregor is already made.

The Mother of a Hero

A crash, a flash, a momentary triumph,
The blaze of sun from out a sky of blue,
And some one flies a heap of huddled garments,
With heart now still that once sang brave and true.
A blur of smoke against the mountains ragged,
A buzzard winging slowly through the sky,
And miles away a little mother waiting
And praying to the gracious God on high.

A moan, a stream of lifeblood ebbing swiftly,
A pair of eyes that close in endless sleep,
A bullet, sharp and sudden in its coming,
That leaves a wound so horrible and deep.
A paper, printed large in glowing headlines,
That says, "He left a mother next of kin;"
A country's loud approval of a hero
And one small woman sobbing through the din.

A fear, a tear, a pair of hands clasped tightly,
A mind that sees a sturdy little boy,
A tiny baby face with roguish dimples,
A sound of laughter filled with childish joy.

. . . . . .

A nation's hero, dying first, with glory!
A man in spirit, though a boy in years;
A soldier shot in battle, fighting bravely—
A little mother smiling through the tears!

MICHIGAN MAY MAKE LAWS AGAINST JAPS.

Like California, Many In That State Oppose Colonization Plan.

Michigan stands with California on the question of receiving the Japanese as settlers if the statements of state officers and county officers express the views of the people. Former Governor Chase S. Osborn announced his candidacy this year for the Republican nomination for governor, saying:

"I know nothing as to the authenticity of the report of a Japanese colonization scheme for Michigan, but such a plan would be neither practical nor desirable."

Secretary of State Martindale, also a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, expressed similar views, adding that he favors exclusion legislation.

State Land Commissioner Carton declared the state should take steps to prevent any move of the sort reported.

Governor Ferris has refused to comment on the proposition pending such time as he has no official knowledge of a movement of Japanese toward Michigan agricultural lands.

Labor leaders are planning to take action, and several have declared that, whether this colonization scheme goes through or not, there will be bills presented at the next session of the legislature to prevent Japanese from owning land in Michigan.

INDIAN BORN IN GERMANY.

Full Blooded Sioux Has Our Consul at Barmen as Her Godfather.

The first full blooded American Indian ever born in Germany recently saw the light of day near Dortmund, Westphalia. The child's father is a Sioux Indian from the Pine Ridge agency, William Bear Shield, and the mother is Mary Bear Shield. The father is now in America, but the mother is a member of an Indian troupe touring Germany with a circus.

The birth took place in a typical American prairie wagon while the troupe was en route from Dortmund to Recklinghausen.

The mother was anxious that her little papoose, who is a girl, should be duly registered in the German records as an American citizen and a Christian. To that end she sought the nearest American consul, George Eugene Enger, who represents the United States at Barmen.

The baby was born on June 29, but as the Fourth of July was approaching the baptism was deferred until then. Mr. Enger stood as godfather for the child, who was christened Maria Consula.

LYNCHERS TAKE LIFE OF NEGRESS

Latter Had Beaten Little Girl to Death With Stick of Wood

Orangeburg, S. C., July 14.—A mob of white men took Rosa Carson, a negress, from the jail at Elloree and lynched her. The woman had confessed to beating to death the 12-year-old daughter of D. F. Bell of Elloree.

Efforts on the part of county authorities to save the woman were without avail. The mob forced its way into the jail and took the woman out. The lynching followed and no trouble is feared.

The killing of the child of Bell was most atrocious. The negress became angry with the little girl and seized a piece of wood, with which she beat the child to death. She was arrested soon afterward and confessed.

IN EFFORT TO CLEAR HERSELF

Mrs. Carman Will Tell Her Story to the Grand Jury

TO FIRST WAIVE IMMUNITY

Counsel For Accused Woman Expects to Break Down Bardes' Testimony—Ground Covered on Day of Tragedy by Woman and Day Following by Husband Examined by Detectives

New York, July 14.—When the grand jury convenes at Mineola Mrs. Florence Carman, now held in jail in connection with the shooting of Mrs. Louise Bailey at Freeport, will appear as a witness.

Before she is permitted to tell her story she will waive immunity. This assurance was given District Attorney Smith by George N. Levy, attorney for the accused woman.

Mrs. Carman will, therefore, by her own story of her movements before and after Mrs. Bailey was shot down, endeavor to convince the jurors that it was another hand which was thrust through a window in her husband's office and fired the shot which took Mrs. Bailey's life.

The attention of the defense is now to be given almost solely to the story of E. T. Bardes, who testified that he saw a woman on the lawn of the Carman home at the time of the shooting. His description of this woman corresponded with that of Mrs. Carman.

Levy is confident he can break Bardes' story down under cross examination and is rounding up witnesses, expecting to show that Bardes could not have been in front of the Carman home at the time of the murder.

Detectives yesterday went over every foot of ground Mrs. Carman said she covered on a shopping tour the day Mrs. Bailey was shot. They also went over the territory covered by Dr. Carman in visiting patients on the day following. Stores in which Mrs. Carman stopped were visited.

It was evident that the purpose of the detectives' trip was to determine whether Mrs. Carman purchased a revolver and whether Carman had thrown the weapon away the morning after Mrs. Bailey was killed.

WOUND PERHAPS FATAL

Monk Who Has Great Influence Over Czar Stabbed by Woman

St. Petersburg, July 14.—A probably fatal attack was made on the mystic lay monk, Gregory Rasputin, whose influence over the czar is said to be very great.

Rasputin, who has been one of the most prominent figures in Russia in recent years, was visiting his native village, Pokrovsky, Siberia, when a woman approached him, pretending to be a beggar. After accosting him, she stabbed him in the abdomen with a long military dirk.

The assailant was arrested. She said she had decided to kill the monk because he was a false prophet and was leading everybody in Russia astray.

Pay of officers and men engaged in aviation work would be increased from 25 to 75 percent of their regular compensation.

Gillooly was arraigned before Judge Keating in the superior court. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $5000 bonds. Thomas F. Callahan and Hugh S. Scannell furnished surety.

Both women were hurled twenty-five feet in the air when the locomotive struck them. Before they apparently had any warning, the express tore around a curve, which had hid it from view, and bore down upon them.

RESIGNATION MAY COME "TOMORROW"

Huerta Expected to Turn Office Over to Carbajal

Washington, July 14.—The Brazilian minister to Mexico, who is caring for the interests of the United States in that country, telegraphed the department that the resignation of General Huerta in favor of Francisco Carbajal, the newly appointed minister of foreign affairs, was expected tomorrow.

Minister Suarez of Chile, one of the three mediators, anticipating the retirement of Huerta, sought in an informal talk with Secretary Bryan to learn what the attitude of the United States would be toward the Carbajal government.

While the Washington government will not recognize Carbajal, Suarez learned that the American government was willing to treat informally with the new administration until a transfer of power to the constitutionalists could be effected.

Immigration Officers Prevent Wholesale Smuggling of Hindus

Vancouver, B. C., July 14.—A shoal of high power launches attempted to rush the steamer Kogamata here and bring off some of the 300 Hindus whose landing has been prohibited by the immigration authorities.

The launches swarmed out from under cover of darkness. First intimation of their coming was given to immigration officials by a stir aboard ship. The immigration launch circled the ship while cries from her decks directed the would-be rescuers.

Upon notice from the immigration officers that shoting would begin the launches finally withdrew.

LURTON'S SUCCESSOR

Belief That McReynolds Will Go to the Supreme Bench

Washington, July 14.—Attorney General McReynolds, it seems, is the most probable choice of President Wilson to succeed Associate Justice Lurton as a member of the supreme court of the United States.

While virtually the whole of Washington is engaged in assisting Wilson in finding a new associate justice on the supreme bench, the belief prevails in well-informed quarters that Wilson has virtually made up his mind to name McReynolds.

THE MASQUERADER AND LUKE TO RACE FOR $22,000 A SIDE.

Details of what promises to be the greatest match race between horses in many years have just become known. The race will take place during the Saratoga meeting and will be for $22,000 a side. This sum exceeds by several thousand dollars the stakes in the celebrated race at Gravesend track years ago between Henry of Navarre and Domino.

The Masquerader is owned by Jere Wheelright and Ral Parr. United States Senator J. N. Camden owns Luke.

The match was the outcome of a discussion between Wheelright and Camden as to the relative qualities of their colts. It started with a proposition for $1,000 a side. Each man then bantered the other to make the side stake more valuable. They bid each other up by $1,000 raises until $22,000 was reached.

AFTER HARMSWORTH TROPHY.

Pugh Builds Freak, Disturber IV., to Lift Motorboat Cup.

A motorboat, in the construction of which all previous laws of hull and engine construction have been largely disregarded, will represent the Chicago Yacht club at Cowes, England, in August in the contest for the Harmsworth trophy, emblematic of the world's championship.

The new boat, Disturber IV., owned by Commodore James A. Pugh, will accompany the latter when he sails from New York on the Minnetonka.

It weighs eight pounds per horsepower, or eight pounds less than any other speed boat thus far constructed. It has an air pump with a pressure of eight pounds to the square inch, which is expected to furnish an air cushion between the hull and the water. It has twenty-four cylinders, developing 1,800 horsepower at 2,700 revolutions of the screw per minute.

The boat weighs 14,400 pounds. Much weight has been saved in the selection of metal. The pistons, for instance, are of magantium, weighing one-third of the same quantity of steel. The propellers have thirteen inch blades, with a sixty inch pitch, which, it is calculated, will give the boat a five foot jump at each revolution.

AYRES, HARVARD CAPTAIN.

Crack Third Sacker to Lead Crimson Baseball Team Next Year.

Russell R. Ayres of Montclair, N. J., the third baseman of the Harvard varsity baseball nine, has been elected captain of the Crimson team for next year, when he will be a senior. His election follows the two year leadership of Dana J. P. Wingate, the Harvard captain who graduated this year.

Ayres is one of the most popular men at Harvard. He played on his freshman team and was the star first baseman of the aggregation that won the series from Yale last year. This season he has been playing at third base and has been up with the leaders in his hitting, having an average well over .300.

Ayres will have a lot of good material coming back to him in Hardwick, Mahan, Gannett, Nash, Frye and Whitney. He is a member of the Institute of 1770, of the D. K. E. and the Digamma club.

The Means And the End

A Question of Law and How a Judge Decided It

By CYRUS TOWNSEND BRADY
Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Enderby was a pitiable spectacle; he was the picture of abject despair as he walked up and down the big office, not daring to look at Beatty, who sat at his desk, staring at his perturbed visitor with mingled amazement and contempt.

"Do you mean to tell me," said the lawyer, as if he could not fathom the depth of Enderby's depravity or realize what he had done, "that you have looted the Home Savings bank?"

"I have," answered Enderby, with increasing nervousness.

"But why on earth"—

"What's the use of dwelling on that? I told you the truth when I came in. What I want to know now is what's to be done?"

"Done? You ought to go to the penitentiary for it," returned the lawyer sternly.

"Yes, I know that too. I don't need a lawyer to tell me that. What I want to know is how to keep out of it."

"How much did you take?"

"In round numbers, $50,000."

"Speculation, I suppose?"

"Yes; sure thing at first and then more to recoup."

"The usual story."

The lawyer thought deeply. Enderby watched him in terrible anxiety. It was he who finally broke the silence.

"You know that Texas land I have?"

"Yes."

"It may be worth a great deal of money in a short time."

"I have investigated it," said Beatty, "for some of my clients who have holdings there. It is worth nothing now, but it is possible, if the railroad project goes through, that it may eventually sell for a good round sum."

"Yes, and if it is worth anything my share will be worth $50,000," said Enderby.

"Well?"

"If you will get me out of this I will give you a deed to the land."

"As a fee?" asked the lawyer coolly, his eyes very bright and hard.

"I hadn't thought of it that way," faltered Enderby. "I meant it as restitution, to pay back what I had—stolen."

"Well, that has saved your life, Enderby. If you had offered me that money to compound a felony, by heaven I would have kicked you out of the office. But if you are willing to deed that land to me to hold in trust and if anything is realized out of it to pay it over to the stockholders of the bank I'll try to get you out."

"I am glad to do it," said Enderby earnestly. "And whatever you are going to do, judge, will have to be done quickly. The bank examiners will be here tomorrow, and I can't cover it up any longer."

"How much money will there be in the vaults when you close tonight?"

"I don't know exactly, possibly $60,000."

"Can you get bold of it?"

"Why, of course. I can take everything in the bank."

"And you say your stealings amounted to $50,000?"

"Yes, in round numbers, maybe a little more or a little less."

"Well, then, go to the bank, get $50,000 in cash and bring it to me."

"You mean that I am to steal $50,000 more?"

"I didn't say anything about stealing it, did I? I said go get it out of the vaults and bring it to me, and I will do my best to get you clear."

"Very well," said Enderby. "I don't understand, but I will do what you say."

At 4 o'clock the president of the Home Savings bank came into the lawyer's office again.

"Well," asked Judge Beatty, "have you got it?"

"Yes," said Enderby, producing a bulky package of bills, "here it is."

The lawyer took the package, counted the bills methodically, satisfying himself that the full amount had been handed to him.

"It's all right," he said. "Now the deed for this land."

"Here it is," said Enderby again, handing the paper to him.

"Good," said Beatty after properly examining it. "Now you go home, don't come down to the bank in the morning, get sick, go to bed, keep away."

The next morning, very early indeed—about 6 o'clock, in fact—the officers and directors of the Home Savings bank, except the president, who was ill and confined to his bed, were summoned peremptorily to meet immediately at the law office of Judge Beatty, the leading attorney of the town.

The character of the messages each received was such as to bring them all there without delay, some of them coming without waiting for the formality of breakfast even.

"Gentlemen," said Judge Beatty when they were all assembled, "I have news of a most distressing character to communicate to you as officers and directors of the Home Savings bank."

"We are not all here yet," said Fowler, the vice president. "Mr. Enderby, our president, is ill."

"I know it. He won't be here, and it is because of that fact that I took the liberty of asking you to meet me here before the bank opened."

"Is anything wrong?" asked Mellen, one of the directors.

"I am sorry to say there is."

"With the bank?"

"Yes."

"What is it?"

"Mr. Enderby has embezzled $100,000 for speculation purposes and is short just that much."

"Good heavens!" exclaimed the vice president. "That will ruin the bank when it gets known."

"Undoubtedly," answered Judge Beatty amid the great perturbation of the other directors, "it rests with you, gentlemen, however, as to whether it gets known or not."

"With us?"

"Certainly. The bank is a fine business proposition for a small town, yet such a defalcation would seriously cripple it, and a run following would ruin it. Now, if you gentlemen want to save the bank and protect your depositors it can be done."

"You haven't called us here, I am sure," said the vice president hopefully, "without having something in mind. What is it?"

"This," said the judge. "Enderby has a number of friends here who are willing to back up their friendship for him with hard money. If you gentlemen will guarantee to keep the thing absolutely secret among yourselves and to refrain from prosecuting Enderby, who will, of course, resign from the presidency and the directorate and move away, his friends will raise $50,000 in cash, and they will place the amount in your hands today."

"If we should accept this offer," said the vice president, amid a general murmur of excitement, "and the ten of us who are here should each put up $5,000, the defalcation would be made good?"

"It would," said Judge Beatty promptly. "The bank would be on a sound financial basis once more, and the $50,000 would be paid back from the profits which are certain under judicious management."

"And if we don't accept this offer?" asked Williams, the cashier.

"The bank goes to the wall, you lose at least $100,000 cold cash and whatever else might be involved in a disastrous and expensive liquidation and the small depositors suffer terribly."

"In other words, you are offering us 50 cents on the dollar," remarked Director Taylor.

"Enderby promises to make good the defalcation; he has certain matters pending of little value now, but which may bring in large returns. I am not able to say just what they will be, but he has put the matter in my hands, and if the returns come in as he expects and as I expect, too, I will be quick to turn over to the bank enough to make good the defalcation."

"What evidence have we got of that?" asked the vice president.

"My word of honor, sir."

"But aren't we all compounding a felony?" asked Director Williams.

"Well," answered the lawyer, "I am afraid, if you ask for a legal opinion on that point, that we are. For my part I don't mind telling you frankly that I am doing it to save the depositors in this bank."

"Mr. Vice President," said a director, "I move you that we accept Judge Beatty's offer in behalf of Enderby, and if he will turn over to us $50,000 in cash we jointly and severally agree to say nothing to any one about the defalcation, and that we further agree to make good the amount over and above the said $50,000 and to reorganize and carry on the bank under new management."

"I second the motion," said the cashier.

"I suppose there is nothing to do but put the motion," said the vice president. "Are you ready for the question, gentlemen?"

And thereafter the motion was immediately adopted unanimously.

Beatty took from his safe the $50,000 in bills which Enderby had handed him the night before, the wrappings and anything else that would have identified it as having come from the bank having been destroyed.

"Gentlemen," he said, "there is your money. Here also is an agreement which I have drawn up embodying the substance of our arrangement, which you will be good enough to sign."

"Gentlemen," said the vice president, "a document of this kind you will all sign with me, and, Judge Beatty, I think you had better sign it too."

"Certainly," said the judge. "As I am to be its custodian, I have no objection."

"That is all, I take it?" asked the vice president.

"That is all," answered the old attorney, "and, while legally our action is distinctly improper, I think we have acted for the best interest of the stockholders and depositors of the bank, especially of the latter."

"Yes, but I would like to get my hands on that scoundrel Enderby. I'd have trusted him with anything," said one of the directors.

"Leave Enderby to me," said Judge Beatty. "He is suffering enough now, and I think he has had a lesson that will last him. I believe that he will pay back all that he took, too, but that's in the future. Good morning, gentlemen."

"Now," said the judge to himself after they had departed as he sat down at the desk and stared at the Texas land deed—which, to anticipate, did finally bring enough to cover the defalcation—"I certainly broke the law of the land. Have I transgressed the moral law, or have I not? I have undoubtedly saved Enderby; I have saved the small depositors; I have saved the bank. Has the end in this instance justified the means, I wonder?"

NEW NAVY SHELL SMASHES DUMMY

Secret Explosive Tears Great Hole In Caisson.

STEEL MASS IS KEELED OVER

Movies Taken—Films to Be Kept by Navy—Inventor Confident No Warship Could Stand Attack—No Vessel Allowed Within Two Hundred Yards of Where Test Was Carried On.

With a great hole in its bottom and its sheets of armor dented and punctured in many places, a steel caisson made to represent a battleship is in a drydock at the Norfolk navy yard, guarded with extreme vigilance.

The caisson was fired on by a submerged shell or mine, loaded with a new kind of explosive.

The experiment was conducted in the southern branch of the Elizabeth river, near the navy yard. Only naval officers and the crews of three torpedo boats were permitted to witness the test.

No vessels were allowed within 200 yards of the spot where the experiment was being carried on. Only one mine was fired. Then, before the smoke cleared away the floating mass of steel keeled over to one side and began to fill rapidly.

Naval tugs hurried to its side and took it in tow. Naval officers refused to discuss the result of the experiments. They said the exact damage the caisson sustained probably would never be known publicly.

A Government Secret.

It was a government secret and would remain one, they added.

The explosives used in the shell or mine are the invention of Lieutenant Ishman. He claims it is superior to any other shell now in use and will do greater damage to a vessel, and no warship, Dreadnought or torpedo boat can resist its destructive qualities. That is his claim.

The caisson used in the experiment is made of the same kind of armor as is used in the construction of the Dreadnought Pennsylvania, which ranks as the greatest battleship.

The shell was submerged to a depth of fifteen feet and was placed thirty feet from the hull of the caisson, which drew twenty-seven feet of water. Lieutenant Monroe of the ordnance department, with a government moving picture operator, was stationed nearest the caisson on a torpedo boat.

Pictures to Show Damage.

The pictures will show the exact damage done by the shell, and they are to be used exclusively by the ordnance department for careful study. The experiment was made under the directions of Lieutenant Schuyler, U. S. N., and Lieutenant Kelly, U. S. N., with Lieutenant Commander Defrees, all of the ordnance department, taking notes.

The crews from the torpedo boats were ordered to witness the test by Secretary Daniels in order that they might familiarize themselves with the handling of torpedo war heads.

Another test of the explosive will be made with torpedoes when the caisson is repaired.

ASPHALT IN PHILIPPINES.

Deposit of High Quality Discovered on the Island of Leyte.

Astonishing discoveries are continually being made in the Philippin Islands. A forester in the islands recently thought he had discovered an outcropping of soft coal, but on taking a sample to Manila and having it analyzed there and in Europe he was overjoyed with the information that he had discovered a deposit of asphalt of high quality, suitable for the finest uses, such as Japanese lacquer work, and which should bring the highest price, about $75 a ton. Paving asphalt brings $35 a ton in Hongkong, so the superior value of this find may be appreciated. The discovery is all the more important, for hitherto, notwithstanding the immense quantities of asphalt used in the far east in paving and building operations, no deposits have been discovered there, and the whole supply has been imported from Europe or the United States at high cost.

The deposit is in the island of Leyte, and as there are thousands of tons in sight the forester may be pardoned for building air castles, as he has something that will give him surer returns than a gold mine. The deposit is near the ocean, and transportation will be easy. The discovery comes at a fortunate time, for the far east is just turning to modern pavements and the general use of asphalt in contracting work. The largest deposit in the world is on Trinidad, where there is a lake of it nearly 100 feet deep. It is also found in lesser quantities in Kentucky, California, Venezuela, Mexico, France, Switzerland and Italy.

To Perpetuate the Cowboy.

The National Order of Cowboy Rangers is the title of a new fraternal society launched by A. U. Mayfield of Denver, Herman Knabe of Medicine Bow and others. The promoters of the order declare it is their intention to perpetuate the old spirit of the west, and they say that Theodore Roosevelt is interested in the plan.

HOT TODAY.

The temperature at noon today was 89 degrees, making it the hottest day at noon thus far this month. The hottest July day at noon a year ago was 95 degrees, which occurred on July 2. There is plenty of time however this month for the temperature to pass the high July mark of last year. The predictions all along have been for rather mild weather during the month of July but a scorcher during the month of August. People will probably get all of the hot weather they want before September.

DOUBLE TRACK PETITION

Not Necessary to Houghs Neck Says Commissioners

(Special from State House.)

The Public Service Commissioners in an order issued this morning practically turn down the petition from Houghs Neck that the street railway double track its Houghs Neck line from the turnout on Manet avenue to City Square.

Early last year the residents of Houghs Neck went to the Public Service Commission with a complaint as a result of which certain things were recommended done. In fact these matters were that a turnout be put in near the corner of Coddington and Valley street and another turnout near what is known as the Willows, also that the company install an automatic block signal system. These things were done.

In an order handed down this morning the Public Service Commission states that the railway was last year requested to install two new turnouts on the line at Coddington and Valley streets, and half way between Shelton road and Sea street, and to install a signal system. That owing to some defect, the signal system was put out of commission for about two months. Since that time however the system has been repaired and is now in working order and the Commissioners see no cause for making any further order at this time.

Passengers on this line of street cars have always made more or less complaint at the service they receive and it can be readily understood with the increase of traffic it is only a question of time when the company will have to double track the line. At the present time there is a turnout near the corner of Coddington and Valley streets. Then commencing near the entrance to the Adams estate there is a long turnout which extends to a point on Sea street near the entrance to Post Island. There is still another turnout near what is known as the Willows and a fourth turnout on Manet avenue at the top of the hill. There is quite a stretch however between this point and the end of the line upon which there is no turnout, although the time of run of a car between these two points is but a few minutes. A five minute wait in a car on a turnout, however, seems like an hour to the man in a hurry.

One of the great troubles is that on trips where more than one car is run, everybody wants to get aboard the first car, with the result that the car is overcrowded while the car following may have plenty of seats.

LARCENY ALLEGED.

Robert Porter of 32 Huntley road was placed under arrest Monday on an indictment warrant charging him with larceny of a manufacturing outfit valued at $4,187.05 from F. E. Cole, formerly of the F. E. Cole Manufacturing Co. of Granite street, Quincy.

Porter it is alleged on Dec. 31, 1913, represented to Cole and the attorney of the latter that he had property worth $14,000 and that part of it was mortgaged, leaving the sum of $6,700 free and clear.

It is alleged that upon the strength of this representation the manufacturing outfit was sold to Porter. The indictment alleges that on the date he made the agreement to purchase the property he was preparing to go into insolvency and that later he did so.

Miss Alethea, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. P. Gould of Adams street street is summering at Wilmot, New Hampshire.

BOY MISSING ALL NIGHT

The lost child call was sounded at 7.30 this morning to summon help to search for Albert, the 7 year old son of Mrs. Catherine Doherty of 46 Elm avenue, who had been missing since about 11 o'clock Monday morning. About that time the little fellow went out to play, and that was the last seen of him by his mother. When he did not return for lunch she became alarmed and began a search among the neighbors, but could find no trace of him. She was consoled however and told that he probably would return home later.

As the afternoon drew on and nothing was heard from him, the Park police were notified and officers searched every conceivable spot along the boulevard and surrounding country for him, but without result. Evening came and no boy showed up, and the mother became almost crazed with grief.

It was after 11 o'clock Monday night before the Quincy police were notified and requested to sound the lost child call. The mother was told that it probably would do but little good at that hour to sound the call, but if the boy did not return the call would be sounded early this morning. The mother spent an anxious and sleepless night and this morning was out bright and early searching and calling for the little fellow. No trace of him could be found however and at 7.35 this morning the lost child call was sounded from Box 515.

When last seen the little fellow was bareheaded and wore a pair of overalls.

It was not long after the lost child call had sounded when the boy made his appearance at his home, although the recall did not sound until 10.35. The boy at no time had been a great ways from home. It appears that a number of boys in the vicinity of his home had erected a tent in which they were playing and that Monday night they decided to sleep there, and the Doherty boy decided to remain there with them. He did not think it of enough consequence to notify his mother where he was.

INDIAN FREED AFTER LONG TERM IN PRISON.

Prison Hero, Lost to Race, Revealed by Tribal Song.

After thirty-four years in prison under life sentence for murder Spopee, a Blackfoot Indian, was unconditionally pardoned by President Wilson. He was released from the Federal Hospital For the Insane at Washington.

A party of Blackfeet sightseeing in Washington months ago happened upon Spopee, who had grown gray with his long imprisonment. They established his tribal identity by an Indian song, and one of the interpreters recognized in Spopee the hero of an old legend who had disappeared a score of years ago into some white man's jail. Blackfoot mothers have been singing their children to sleep with a song about him ever since.

Officials of the Indian office, advised of the discovery, began an investigation which resulted in his pardon.

Spopee was charged with the murder of a white man near the Canadian boundary north of the Montana line. It is thought by the department of justice that the murder probably was committed in Canada and that the territorial courts of Montana which tried him at Fort Benton had no jurisdiction.

Moreover, it is now believed that Spopee committed the murder in self defense. He and another Indian, Good Ridder, asked a white man for food. Their request was denied, and the white man denounced Spopee, finally assaulting him with an ax. The Indian claims to have fired in self defense, and his story is credited by the department of justice.

Commissioner Sells of the Indian office took the case up personally and arranged to send Spopee back to his people.

ROYAL FUNERAL A SCANDAL.

Escort Said to Have Smoked In the Presence of the Dead.

Now that the bodies of the murdered Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife, the Duchess of Hohenberg, repose beneath the castle chapel at Artstetten, a bitter controversy is raging over the manner in which the funeral was conducted.

The newspapers devoted columns to the discussion. Moderate opinion inclines to the belief that the court officials made the ceremonial too painfully correct, while the friends of the duchess are indignant at the emphasis laid on her inferior birth.

According to reports published in the leading Vienna papers, the reception of the bodies at Poechlarn, across the Danube, was attended by scandalous proceedings. A violent thunderstorm upset the ceremony, and the coffins were hurriedly carried to the waiting room of the station, where they were placed on the stone paved floor and remained there two hours or more.

Meanwhile the volunteer firemen, who were supposed to be assisting the local gendarmes in controlling the arrangements, were drinking beer and eating sausages, while the more important persons strolled about smoking cigars in close proximity to the coffin containing the body of the late heir to the throne.

The torrential rain drove everybody into the waiting room and, says one account, "all the ordinary rules of behavior seemed to have been forgotten, and the scene might be described as resembling the turmoil and noise of a country fair."

Room in the Northwest.

Less than 1,000 miles of wagon road have been made at private and municipal cost in Alaska. Here and there can be found short stretches of railroad, chiefly owned and used by mining concerns. The aggregate private ownership of Alaskan territory is said to be only 1 per cent of the whole. What marvelous change may be expected when public owned railroads shall pierce to every accessible part of this great country, where men may come to settle and build towns and cities! It is claimed the climatic conditions are delightful—cold, but dry and still, in winter, equable in summer—a land of new opportunity for thousands of home seekers.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

If you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

Quincy on Route of Boston and Sandwich Stage Line Before Railroads Came

93 Stage Lines Out of Boston in 1832

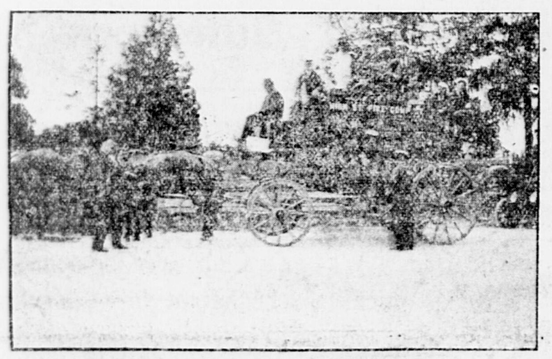

Editor Daily Ledger:

The early settlers of Quincy, who began to arrive in numbers after the General Court had ordered in 1634 "that Boston shall have convenient enlargement at Mount Wollaston" found this region a primeval forest, crossed by narrow trails, made by the mocassined feet of Indians. They were called "beaten paths" in old records, and had much to do with the laying out of the town, for it would have been a toilsome task to break new ways through the wilderness.

The best known of these Indian trails followed along what are now Adams, Hancock, School and Franklin streets, over Penn's hill, through Weymouth, and united the Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth Colonies. In 1641 it was laid out as a road by the General Court and called the "Coast-road" and the "Country road" as many ancient deeds show. Charles Francis Adams, Esq., in "Three Episodes," says, "It was the backbone upon which the new settlement formed itself." From 1641 to 1803 it was the sole thoroughfare between Quincy and Boston.

When the law to enlarge Boston went into effect, the entire water front of Quincy was divided among some half-dozen of the gentry of Boston, as the wealthier class was called, while the poorer settlers or yeoman were granted "Common proprietors lots" or family grants, usually at the rate of four acres for each member. Many of these allotments were made along the old Indian trail which became the "Coast-road." The old allotment plans were not preserved, so Quincy has no "Book of Possessions," as Boston has.

In early days the settlers walked, often carrying a pack upon their backs, or rode horseback, some of the saddles having a pillion or side-saddle attached behind, on which a woman

COL. KINCAIDE FOR GOVERNOR

Was On The Committee Which Interviewed C. S. Bird

Now that Charles Sumner Bird has positively declined to be the Bull Moose candidate for Governor this year, there is more or less speculation as to who will be the standard-bearer of the Progressive party at the November election. Col. Henry L. Kincaide of this city, who was one of the committee of seven who waited upon Mr. Bird to urge him to reconsider his refusal to run again this year, has been favorably mentioned as among the gubernational possibilities of the Progressive party.

COL. H. L. KINCAIDE.

Hon. Joseph Walker the Republican candidate who was defeated by Gov. Foss has also been mentioned, but he is not considered by many party leaders as a particularly strong candidate.

Col. Kincaide is considered as a particularly strong candidate, and is looked upon as a coming man among the Progressives. Col. Kincaide made a strong fight for Congress two years ago as the Progressive candidate, receiving a strong endorsement in his home town.

ATTACK ON NAVAL STATION

The First Corps of Cadets who are in camp at Hingham are engaged today in a war game, the problem which they are trying to solve being the capture of the Hingham Naval station. The four companies went into the field Tuesday afternoon and that night the camp was deserted. The companies are acting under conditions simulating those of real war.

Co. D. under Captain Horton D. Perkins is the Blue force defending the station, and has outposts stationed as far as Norwell in order to guard against a night attack.

The Red force comprizing Co's. A, B and C, under command of Capt. Porter B. Chase, started from camp early in the day, reaching Plymouth, and Tuesday night was encamped somewhere along the route between Plymouth and Hingham.

The forces are supposed to be encamped within four miles of each other and a possibility of a night attack kept them wakeful.

Each detachment carries its own provisions and "pup" tents for shelter. The companies are due back in camp today.

ACTIVE OPPOSITION TO NEW INDUSTRY

Will Probably Be Unable Now to Get Permit to Do Business Here

Regarded As Dangerous to the Surrounding Property

Although no official announcement has as yet been made relative to the locating of the East Weymouth Leatherette Co. in Quincy Point on a site of land on Town river, Representative Michael T. Sullivan said this morning that Deputy Neil of the State police, which has supervision over factories, will not permit the company to build in this city. This is in line with the view of officials of the town of Weymouth who declined to grant the company a permit to do business after their plant was destroyed in a fire which started from an explosion in their establishment.

The negotiations for the land were carried on through the office of Frank F. Crane, the water front Commissioner of this city. He maintains that because there are no buildings in the immediate vicinity the site he had chosen on the river was an ideal one.

Residents of Quincy Point, principally Councilman Thomas F. Griffin, learned the company wanted to come here and rose in protest. Mr. Griffin investigated the process of manufacture and found that the celluloid used in the manufacture of the leatherette was highly explosive and when on fire was not affected by water. He secured the endorsement of Chief Faxon Billings of the Fire department and Chief Frank E. Burrell of the Police department. With a state officer they looked over the territory and sent their views to the office of the State police.

Representative Sullivan called Tuesday about the factory locating here, and just before leaving, Chief Neil told him he would issue no permit to build in Quincy.

Councilman Griffin when informed this morning that the factory would be obliged to go elsewhere was elated. He said he believed Quincy could get along without business of this nature, and said that the character of these plants is such that no fire insurance company will insure them.

The land to be taken for this purpose is close to the public bath house and a short distance from the property recently purchased by the Town River Yacht club for a clubhouse.

The workmen employed in these factories are generally foreigners who have been here but a short time and do not realize the dangers of the material they handle. Their wages are said to be a few cents more than a dollar a day.

The National Education Association demands equal treatment for women teachers, in spite of the fact that they can't coach the ball team.

If the crops are small, prices are raised because of the shortage; and if the crops are abundant, prices are raised because it takes so many men to harvest them.

Now it is proposed in Congress to stop the sending of campaign funds from one state to another. They can't have reflected on the hardship of making the politicians go to work.

It is not necessary to tip the summer hotel waiters, as you can buy ham sandwiches at nearby restaurants, and eat them in your room.

The proper way to celebrate the proposed Maiden Aunt's day would be to send the children over to her to be taken care of while the family goes motoring.

There are still people who pay railroad fares in Tennesseee, but probaly they entertain erroneous political ideas or don't read the newspaers.

Thanks to new legislation in most states, the time has gone by when the size of the firecrackers could exceed that of the boy who discharges it.

It is understood that President Wilson and Mr. Morgan reached a complete agreement on the baseball situation.

It is possible to have a good healthful vacation, even if you don't try to do twice as much work as you would at home.

Why blame speeding motorists for accidents, when the machines they run into refuse to draw up in some one's door yard safely out of the way?

Battle song of the Mexican Federals, "Run, for the ground's your own, my braves!"

Although every one is suspicious of corporation men, Congress should not insist that candidates for office shall have failed in business.

CAMPAIGN EXPENDITURES.

The lower House of Congress passed a bill a few days ago, to limit campaign expenditures in any state to amounts contributed by actual residents of the state. Money for literature and speakers is excepted.

A careful distinction needs to be drawn between legitimate and illegitimate spending. Pay and transportation of speakers, hire of halls, postage, secretarial work, printing and advertising, are legitimate. Anything that tends to bring the real arguments of the campaign before the voters in a logical way is helpful to public intelligence.

Every congressional district has a group of men who claim to hold political influence. They are "mixers," sometimes saloon-keepers, often people who frequent the loafing hang-outs of the neighborhood, or whose business brings them into contact with a wide range of people. They are mouthy fellows, who talk politics from New Year's to Christmas. They claim to sway the convictions of large groups of their fellow citizens. It is commonly understood, that if a man cherishes the honorable ambition to run for office, it is good judgment to "see" these men who have "influoence" at their disposal.

Of course this is not bribery. The time of these workers is so valuable that it must be liberally compensated, to justify them in dropping the onerous duties of their regular employments.

But there is a growing suspicion that this influence, more or less for sale, is not so great as the possessors thereof maintain. It is highly probable, were all political machines and candidates to decline to compensate these workers ,that there would be no difference in the result at the polls. Certainly if Congress and the state legislatures could pass corrupt practice bills cutting off this great source of expenditure, it would meet with the warm approval of every one but the politicians.

MRS. CARMAN'S ALIBI IS BROKEN

Celia Coleman Tells "Amplified" Story to Grand Jury

PROSECUTION'S STRONG ASSET

Maid In Home of Accused Woman Tells How Mistress Came Rushing Into Kitchen Immediately Following the Shooting of Mrs. Bailey—District Attorney Grows Confident

Freeport, N. Y., July 15.—Celia Coleman, negro maid in the house of Dr. Edwin Carman two weeks ago when Mrs. Louise Bailey was murdered, has deserted Mrs. Carman.

She told her "amplified" story to the grand jury and smashed Mrs. Carman's alibi. The girl has been in custody of Burns detectives since the crime.

In the opinion of those who have followed the case closely it spells indictment for Mrs. Florence Carman, the jealous wife of the physician, who is now locked up in Mineola jail charged with the murder of Mrs. Bailey.

The essential part of the maid's testimony, as related to the grand jury at Mineola, is that she was in the kitchen of the Carman home at the time of the shooting; that she heard the fatal shot and the commotion in the doctor's office which followed immediately after and that while she stood stock still in the kitchen, too frightened to move, Mrs. Carman came rushing in from the rear yard.

Mrs. Carman was breathless and excited. The maid said she did not see any revolver, but she not only saw Mrs. Carman, but spoke to her and Mrs. Carman answered.

Until now the maid has been the strongest bulwark of the defense, but now that she has remembered, and related to the grand jury, these important things which she had forgotten at the coroner's inquest, she has become the gtrongest witness of the district attorney.

The theory of the prosecution has always been that Mrs. Carman slipped out the back way, went to the window of the doctor's office, broke it with the butt of a revolver and then shot and killed Mrs. Bailey; that she then ran around to the kitchen door or the other rear door—an entrance into the house from the automobile drive about ten feet from the kitchen door—and got up stairs in time to lead her sister and mother to believe that the alibi she has presented as her defense was a true one.

Celia Coleman's inability to recall that Mrs. Carman had dashed through the kitchen was the weakest spot in this theory, and now that she has corrected her testimony District Attorney Smith believes he has taken the case against Mrs. Carman out of the realms of circumstantial evidence and is able to present to a jury direct, convincing testimony.

Mrs. Carman dictated a statement to the newspapers in which she said: "I only ask that the public suspend judgment upon me until the entire truth in regard to the murder of poor Mrs. Bailey is known. I am satisfied that the truth will come out, and when I am exonerated Dr. Carman and myself will not rest until the murderer is captured."

MEAT BOYCOTT DELAYED

Housewives' League to Further Investigate Present High Prices

New York, July 15.—Although the national executive committee of the Housewives' league is withholding a call for a meat boycott for seven days, pending an investigation of present high prices, an urgent appeal that the consumption of meats be decreased as much as possible went out from the headquarters.

Many consumers have been urging an immediate boycott. The bulletin issued from the league headquarters declared, however, that this was not desired until further investigation could be made.

SECOND TRIAL IS BEGUN

Mrs. Wakefield Once Sentenced to Die For Killing Husband

New Haven, July 15.—The life of Mrs. Bessie Wakefield was placed in jeopardy for the second time here when she was again placed on trial charged with complicity in the murder of her husband, William O. Wakefield. James Plew, who actually killed Wakefield, has been hanged.

The accused woman originally was also sentenced to pay the death penalty. Public sentiment against the execution of a woman asserted itself and Mrs. Wakefield was granted a new trial.

MRS. CARMAN AND BURNS

Detective Who Is Accused of Using Third Degree Methods

Mrs. Carman and Detective Burns were the central figures in a confrontation scene. Burns walked into the Carman home and in the doctor's presence looked his wife straight in the eye and said: "I am going to find the murderess!" Both Carman and his wife received the dramatic announcement without a tremor.

FLEW 1350 MILES IN ORDINARY BIPLANE

Boehm's Feat Brings Confidence to Porte's Backers

New York, July 15.—The record made by Reinhald Boehm at Johannisthal, when he remained in the air for 24 hours and 12 minutes and flew a distance of 1350 miles, has caused members of the Aero club to feel confident that Lieutenant Porte will accomplish his proposed Atlantic flight in the airboat America.

Boehm used an ordinary biplane in his flight and the fact that it was not prepared for an endurance test is an indication, according to Harry Woodhouse of the Aero club, that the America with her special equipment will be able to carry Porte to the Azores without mishap.

The route to be followed by Porte to the Azores is 1140 miles.

American Gunboat Princeton Is Beached In Sinking Condition

Washington, July 15.—Listed heavily to the starboard, and with her main deck awash, the American gunboat Princeton reached the naval station at Tutuila, Samoa, in a sinking condition.

Her commander, Lieutenant Beall, cabled the navy department that the vessel struck an uncharted rock while surveying in the passageway between Tutuila and Aundu islands.

At Tutuila she was beached to prevent sinking, and the dispatch said she was maintaining her position safely. The Princeton is station ship at Samoa and carries a crew of 150 officers and men, none of whom was hurt in the accident.

BOMB WRECKS BUILDING

Owner Had Received Threats From Buffalo Black Hand Men

Buffalo, July 15.—A three-story brick building at 1 Trenton avenue, the ground floor of which is occupied by the saloon of Matteo Orlando, was wrecked by the explosion of a bomb.

The police attribute the crime to the Black Hand, as Orlando, a well-to-do Italian, has received several letters demanding money and making threats against his life and property.

No lives were lost, but the stairway had been blown away and Orlando and a young daughter fell through into the cellar.

Clarence Pelletier, Allen Grant and Edward Linehan were put on probation. Albert Ohlund, 22 years old, charged with receiving stolen goods from the boys, was fined $30.

WIRELESS TELEPHONE FOR WEALTHY ONLY.

Rates So High Only Rich Can Talk Across Atlantic, Says Marconi.

The wireless telephone will be too expensive to become a public service, but it will be a boon to privileged persons, William Marconi declared. He has been experimenting in Fawley, England, since the first of the year on the wireless telephone, with such success that he says he will be able to talk to America before 1914 fades.

It is more the achievement that interests him, than getting money from the people, he said, but admitted that wealthy persons probably would be willing to pay the high rates. He said only one conversation could be carried on at one time between a station in England and one in America, but of course other stations could be built, and then each pair could carry on independent conversations. He would not venture to say how much a station would cost, but the wireless telegraph station at Carnarvon, Wales, cost $400,000, and whether it will be necessary to utilize all the apparatus for wireless telephony he was not prepared to say.

He admitted that $50,000 had been spent thus far in experiments. Night is better than day for wireless talking, he said, and women's voices are heard equally as well as men's, but Italian is better than English, probably because most Italian words have vowel endings. The apparatus has been tried between London and Chelmsford, twenty-nine miles apart. The next step will be between London and Fawley, a distance of seventy miles, and then Marconi will try a conversation across the Atlantic.

SEVENTEEN YEAR LOCUST.

Department of Agriculture Has Defined Its Activity.

The department of agriculture has issued a notice of the appearance of the famous periodical locusts—"seven year," "thirteen year" and "seventeen year." The locust this time has made its debut in West Virginia. The locust takes many years to develop, but there are several recognized broods in different places over the United States.

The brood is common this year all over West Virginia, most of Ohio and with a sprinkling in the counties of Pennsylvania and Virginia. This is the northern variety of the "seventeen year" locust. There is another variety known as the "thirteen year" locust, but this is confined to the extreme south and never extends beyond the Potomac or farther than the southern part of Illinois.

In the grounds of the department of agriculture more than a decade ago some of the insects were collected and allowed to deposit their eggs in the shade trees. A record was made of the time when these eggs were planted, and they hatched out exactly seventeen years afterward, just as the name would indicate.

The locusts really do very little damage and do not injure large trees at all. They may do a little damage to young nurseries or young orchards, where a great many eggs have been deposited in the tender trees, but even with the young nurseries the bulk of the damage can be headed off by a vigorous pruning back after the eggs have been deposited.

Experiments have been tried with carbolic acid washes and numerous other insecticides. Few of them seem to have any material effect in checking the work of the insect.

Faced Death to Save Refugees.

Writing to the Red Cross Magazine from Vera Cruz, Charles Jenkinson, in charge of the field headquarters of the Red Cross, tells of the cleanup work in the seized port and reports many novel and thrilling experiences while rescuing refugees along the east coast of Mexico. On a chartered steamer he visited some eight out of the way ports between Vera Cruz and Progreso and picked up many refugees. He was officially informed at one place that he would be killed. He went ashore alone at another port and found an entire garrison of Mexican soldiers lined up with guns trained on him.

FIRES NUMEROUS DURING YEAR 1914

Chief Faxon A. Billings of the fire department has directed its workings at more fires since he came into office than any of his predecessors in the first six months of the year.

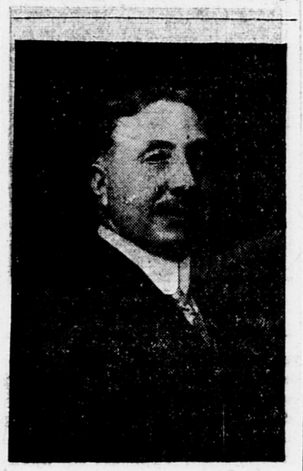

Up to July 1, the department responded to 97 box alarms, a large percentage of which were after midnight and several of which were false. In addition apparatus has been sent to all parts of the city in response to 105 telephons calls.

The department has been all but crippled occasionally through the condition of some horses and at present there are three in service that are not owned by the department. The motor apparatus upkeep has been a small factor so far. It will be but a few weeks before a tractor is attached to its steamer.

ON STATE COMMITTEE.,

Hon. John A. Kiggen of Hyde Park, president of the United Democratic Club of Massachusetts and a well known party man of this County, has been chosen a member of the State committee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late William Kelly of Quincy.

Mr. Kiggen was until a week ago, considered a possible candidate for congress from the 14th district on the Democratic ticket. With the announcement of Richard Olney, 2nd of Dedham, that he would again enter the race, Mr. Kiggen forbade further mention of his name in that connection.

JOHN A. KIGGEN.

CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION.

C. W. Guy has issued a souvenir card announcing himself as a candidate for re-election as councillor from the second district. On this card is an invitation to visit the State House and be introduced to Gov. Walsh and others. It also says that he is a direct descendant of Timothy Guy who gave the war whoop for the Boston tea party, Dec. 16, 1773. On one side is a picture of Mr. Guy beneath which are the words "Author and farmer."

Margaret, aged seven years, was playing housekeeper. As she pretended to wipe the perspiration from her face she turned from the toy washboard upon which was rinsing out a handkerchief, and, addressing her brother, a year younger, said: "There you are sitting at your ease and me breaking my bones doing your washing."

SOUTH STREET TO HAVE POLICE

There has been considerable "woman chasing" in the vicinity of South street during the past two weeks and in consequence of the many complaints made to police headquarters Chief Frank E. Burrill will assign a man to cover the beat permanently.

The time varies from early evening until late at night. The man is said to be a foreigner, but no accurate description has been furnished because the women accosted have been too frightened to do ought else than escape.

The first case was brought to the attention of the police last Thursday by Miss Mary Dolan of Elm street, who was stopped by a Jack-the-Hugger on a dark spot on Miller stile road just before midnight.

Last Friday evening a woman was given considerable trouble on Scammell street, near Quincy avenue, in avoiding a man who followed her.

On Saturday evening three girls were followed on South street and when they met three other girls the chaser turned and walked in the opposite direction, pretending to be drunk.

Monday evening people living on South street found a man hidden in their porch. He opened the door of the house, ran through the sitting room to the kitchen, opened the door leading into the cellar and made his escape.

Tuesday evening no complaints were registered, but people passing through the Bigelow district saw a man acting in a suspicious manner.

The men are considering organizing a patrol of the streets and many of the fathers and brothers are so indignant that if they apprehend the man he may suffer from physical violence.

Most people are of the belief that the man at large is an Italian who lives on Canal street, as a man has been seen examining the territory in daylight who tallies somewhat with the meagre description secured of the hugger.

MEDFORD TAX RATE HIGHER

The City of Medford whose population according to the last census was 23,150, but whose population is now estimated at 28,562, announced its tax rate Tuesday. The rate is $20.40 an increase of $1.40 over the year 1913. The increase is reported to be due largely to increased expenditures for city improvements in a newly developed district, and to the pay-as-you go policy as enforced by the new municipal finance act passed by the legislature in 1913.

The total valuation of the city was given as $29,700,700 as against $28,297,150 in 1913. The number of assessed polls has increased from 7,549 to 8,226.

DEMOCRATIC CITY COMMITTEE

The meeting of the Democratic City Committee in Wilson's hall Tuesday evening was rather an ordinary one and the Democracy of Charles C. McHugh of Ward Four is still undetermined.

Mr. Johnson, as expected, did not attend the meeting to make known incidents in the political activity of Mr. McHugh during the last mayoralty campaign, but remained in his office until a late hour to receive any committees that cared to interview him. None appeared however.

Mr. McHugh, the man directly affected, has not called on Mr. Johnson to either deny or admit that he would have suported Mr. Johnson while he acted as campaign manager of Dr. John H. Ash, the Democratic nominee. His friends have not seen Mr. Johnson on the matter.

Several exciting debates ensued, the main one being over the endorsing of Enos Costa, a candidate for the post of interpreter of Portuguese, Italian and Greek languages at the immigration station in Boston.

His Democracy was challenged, and the endorsement was given over the protest of several members.

Michael J. O'Leary, chairman of the Democratic State Committee was present and gave a talk on organization. He urged all to continue their organization and to become active in naturalization.

TRANSPORTATION

could ride. Carriages were scarce,—as late as 1768 only 22 were owned in Boston, and even in 1798 only 145. Post chaises could be hired, (but only at great expense) with relays of horses every 10 or 20 miles. In 1718 a stage line was started between Boston and Rhode Island probably the first long distance route.

REGULAR CONVEYANCE IN WINTER.

In 1775 it took General Washington twelve days to travel from Philadelphia to Cambridge by coach, and in 1805 Benjamin Franklin wrote, "you can no more get to centre New Hampshire by coach than to Baffin's bay."

Early in the 1800's stage coaches increased rapidly and better roads were demanded. As neither towns nor counties could afford to build them, turnpike corporations were chartered by the State, which laid out roads and collected tolls from travellers. Hancock street, Quincy avenue and Washington streets were originally turnpikes.

From 1800 to 1850 stage coach lines and turnpikes flourished together but when steam railroads appeared both gradually faded away. In 1832 there were 93 stage coach lines running out of Boston, and this was probably the highest point reached. In 1818 most of the New England stage lines consolidated as the Eastern Stage Company, it flourished greatly until steam came in. It was probably the first transportation trust in New England.

At least, as early as 1810, a line of coaches ran between Boston, Plymouth and Sandwich. Leonard and Wood carried on the business, and one of their posters with a picture of four spirited horses drawing a graceful coach may be seen in the Old State House, Boston. It left Boston (Dock Square, Boyden's Inn,) at 5 A. M., breakfast at Leonard's Inn, Scituate; dinner at Nicholson's Inn, Plymouth, arrived at Newcomb's Inn, Sandwich in the evening. The route, with its towns and inns was;—

Boston, Boyden's Inn.
Dorchester, Eaton's Inn.
Quincy, John Newcomb's Inn, residence of the late Col A. B. Packard.
Weymouth, Arnold's Inn.
Hingham, Whiting's Inn.
Scituate, Leonard's Inn.
Hanover, Curtis' Inn.
Pembroke, Magoun's Inn.
Duxbury, Loring's Inn.
Kingston, Russell's Inn.
Plymouth, Nicholson's Inn.
Sandwich, Newcomb's Inn .

Charles O. Ellins of Scituate recalls the old Boston stage, in which he rode when a boy. In snow storms the passengers might have to walk behind the coach through the drifts, but in the warm season the trip was delightful. The fare from Boston to Scituate was $1.25; to Plymouth $2.50; to Sandwich $3.63.

A century or so ago Zedidiah Little carried the mail between Boston and Marshfield in a one-horse chaise. Col. Charles Hatch drove for him on alternate days. Later on a company was formed for a stage between Duxbury and Boston, of which Col. Hatch was one of the originators.

About 1825 the company sold out to Jacob Sprague and Parker Jones, who conducted it until the steamboat began running in summer to Hingham After that the stage ran only to Hingham, and in 1847 when steam trains ran to Cohasset, the stage ran there in winter. On July 1, 1851, Charles Y. Hatch, son of Col. Hatch, brought out the Marshfield to Cohasset line; that from Marshfield to Duxbury being abandonned as the Duxbury people then travelled by way of Kingston.

The accompanying cut of the stage coach shows the type used generally hereabouts. It was built by Samuel Downing of Concord, N. H., in 1850, the seats on top were added later. It is stronger but less graceful than the earlier English models, which carried but nine passengers inside, while this coach seated twelve inside and sixteen outside. The Concord coaches were widely used upon the Great Plains of the West.

Franklin W. Hatch of Marshfield owns this interesting old relic of bygone days. Its great rear wheels are more than five feet in diameter. There are four seats holding three persons each, inside, those in the front and rear face towards the centre, the two in the centre facing each other, having back rests of wide leather bands. The driver's seat holds three, two top seats four each and a projecting seat on behind three more. Thirty passengers was a comfortable load. The roomy baggage rack on behind has a windlass for tightening the baggage strap.

The coach body is hung upon two leather straps running lengthwise to the coach. There are no metal springs, and the flexible straps rock the coach softly from side to side or up and down. The inside is lined with heavy tapestry, the outside is painted a rich red, with yellow wheels and running gear.

The first Boston omnibus was the "Gov. Brooks." It ran from Hanover street to Roxbury in two and one-half hours, fare twelve and one-half cents. In winter some of the conveyances ran on runners and the other cut shows an antique vehicle on the Charlestown line. It may be seen in yard on Quincy avenue, opposite Cedar Crest Inn. Contrary to local opinion, Gridley Bryant's railroad, which was opened on Oct. 7, 1826, to convey stone to the Neponset for use in Bunker Hill Monument—was really not the first railroad in the United States. The Phillipsburg and Juniata R. R. in the Alleghanies preceded it. (See George G. Crocker's book on transportation from which much data here used is taken.)

The tramways of Great Britain were the forerunners of steam railroads. They were merely wooden stringers with a flange to keep the wheels from running off. Later the flange was transferred to the wheel itself.

The writer recently looked over what remains of Mr. Bryant's pioneer railroad plant and enough remains to make the trip extremely enjoyable. If the Historical Society could pursuade Luther S. Anderson to act as official guide and lecturer it would be an ideal field excursion this fall.

Yours truly,

J. L. E.

PLAYGROUND BASE BALL

The Tigers and the Red Sox Each Have a Victory

The Tigers defeated the Athletics 4 to 3, Tuesday morning in the Ward Two Playground League. The game was very exciting and hard fought. The Athletics scored once in the second inning, as a result of some pretty base-runnig by Barr.

Moody of the "A's" pitched air tight ball excepting in the third when he allowed two walks and two hits. These, with an error netted the Tigers four runs.

Ryan of the Tigers held the heavy hitting Athletics to two hits, striking out nine men and allowing only two passes.

A. Kelly, the hustling first sacker of the Tiger team, made the feature play of the game. In the sixth with two on bases and one out, Moody hit a line drive between first and second which Kelly stabbed with his bare hand and tagged first for a double.

Monday the Red Sox defeated the White Sox 12 to 7.

Sentenced at Philadelphia For Forging Certification

Philadelphia, July 15.—Gilbert Sargent of Medford, Mass., alias William H. Nash, was sentenced in Philadelphia to from six to eight years in the Eastern penitentiary. Sargent was found guilty of obtaining $15,000 worth of bonds from a brokerage firm here by forging a check certification.

Since his arrest a month ago Sargent has made every effort to conceal his identity. He admitted his real name yesterday and confessed he had a wife and child in Medford.

When Sargent is released from the Eastern penitentiary he will be turned over to the Boston authorities.

PRESSING ON TO MEXICO CITY

Rebels Appear in Fair Way to Soon Reach Capitol

DIPLOMATS ACTIVELY WORKING

Endeavor to Prevent Bloodshed While Huerta Dallies With Long-Promised Resignation—Administration Policy Attacked by Mondell, Who Speaks of "Abject Surrender" to Mexico

Washington, July 15.—Although the resignation of General Huerta is confidently expected by the state department and Washington diplomats to occur at any momnt, the constitutionalists, unaffected by the news, are pressing hard their military campaign on Mexico City.

Official dispatches reveal that General Villa, with 15,000 men, is ready for a rapid advance on the Mexican capital and that General Obregon's forces at Guadalajara are prepared to sweep onward within a few days.

Although officials have not been given much to prediction, they now believe the constitutionalists will be in Mexico in two or three weeks, regardless of what the Huerta government may do.

Diplomats are working hard to prevent fighting in the capital and still hope that the transfer of power to the constitutionalists may be effected without further bloodshed. Huerta's resignation, it is realized, would not immediately compose the situation, but it would make possible parleys with the constitutionalists through which a change of government could be accomplished peacefully.

The numerous official advices saying Huerta would resign in a day or two, including messages from the Brazilian minister in Mexico City and other diplomats, have raised the expectation of official Washington that his exit from power also would mean his flight from the country.

Others, among them Fernando Calderon and some high administration officials, are not at all convinced that Huerta is ready to abdicate.

They declare that the departure of his family means only that he is preparing for desperate masures, such as a big rally of federal forces which he himself would command.

Another attack on the administration's Mexican policy was made in the house by Representative Mondell of Wyoming. He denounced particularly the mediation negotiations at Niagara Falls and the attitude of the American state department toward the negotiations.

Discussing the provisions of the protocol negotiated at Niagara Falls, which waives, on the part of the United States, all claims for war indemnity, Mondell said:

"What an abject surrender on the part of the administration from its stiff-necked demand for a salute of twenty-one guns and an abject apology is this agreement to demand no satisfaction or indemnity whatever for incidents on account of which the administration rushed a mighty fleet over the seas, sacrificed American lives and now maintains a huge fighting force amid the dangers and discomforts of the tropics."

BOSTON TAKES THE LEAD

Running Expenses Heavier Than That of Any Other American City

Washington, July 15.—In ten years the per capita tax payments of "metropolitan class" city dwellers for the general expenses of government have increased 33.2 percent, or practically one-third.

This big increase is shown in official figures from the census bureau compiled for the census years of 1902 and 1912, just made public. In 1902 the average per capita payments were but $13.02, while in 1912 each city resident had to pay $17.34.

Boston, it is stated, is the most expensively governed of all American cities on a per capita basis. It costs each resident of Boston $28.06 to run the general departments of government, $3.19 for the police department, $2.26 for the fire department, and $6.89 for education.

REMEDY FOR DEGENERACY

Wisconsin Doctor Says It Can Be Found In the Eugenic Program

Chicago, July 15.—"The modern eugenic program makes enirely feasible and practicable a certain degree of social advancement for which it is well worth while to strive," said Dr. Drake of Waupan, Wis., before the meeting of alienists and neurologists brought together by the Chicago Medical society for the discussion of mental diseases.

Drake discussed Wisconsin's fight against degeneracy, and after outlining the conditions in the state and given statistics showing that there were more than 12,000 inmates in Wisconsin charitable, reform and penal institutions, made a plea for eugenics as the solution of the state problem.

Bid Demand For Rat Traps

New Orleans, July 15.—Bubonic plague eradication work will be facilitated by the use of 31,760 rat traps, according to announcement by health authorities.

THREE GIRLS DROWN

Patients In State Tuberculosis Camp Disobeyed Instructions

Westfield, Mass., July 15.—Three girls, patients at the state tuberculosis camp, were drowned while in bathing in the Westfield river in company with about twenty other patients.

The drowned were Fannie Gold, 14, Bella D. Steinburg, 15, and Annie E. Linehan, 13.

The girls were in charge of nurses from the camp and were wading about when four of the party stepped into a hole about six feet deep some distance from shore. One of the number could swim and reached shore safely.

According to the officials of the sanitarium, the girls slipped away from their nurses and went into deep water, from which they had been repeatedly told to keep away. They all drowned but a short distance from shore and went down so quickly that the nurses could not get to them in time.

OPEN SHOP PACT UPHELD

Hat Company Must Pay For Withdrawing From Association

New Haven, July 15.—The right of the Associated Hat Manufacturers to compel, under the by-laws of the organization, its members to stand together during labor troubles and in effect to live up to an "open shop" agreement if the organization votes in favor of such, is upheld by the supreme court of errors of Connecticut.

The ruling was handed down in the case of the Associated Hat Manufacturers against the Baird-Unteidt company of Bethel, which went to that tribunal from the superior court on reservation, and was in the nature of a test case. The supreme court decided in favor of the plaintiff for $5000, with interest from July 14, 1909.

BIRD REFUSES TO BECOME CANDIDATE

Bay State Bull Moose Must Seek Another Leader

Boston, July 15.—Charles S. Bird, urged yesterday by the Progressive committee to reconsider his statement that he will not run for governor, says again that he will not be a candidate "for personal reasons."

Bird made another statement last night, following the interview which he had with the committee. Despite this second refusal a committee will try to enlist the aid of ex-President Roosevelt again.

Bird has been urged by Roosevelt, according to a member of the committee, to reconsider his determination not to run.

CAUGHT IN A RAID

Chicago Society Women Arrested In "Red Light" District

Chicago, July 15.—Twenty fashionably gowned women and their escorts, members of three slumming parties, were among those arrested in a spectacular raid in Jordon's cafe in the old red light district, bundled into patrol wagons despite hysterical protests and booked at a police station charged with being "inmates of a disorderly resort."

All of them gave fictitious names and were released when they furnished cash bond. They summoned a squadron of taxis, and pushing their way through a crowd of jeering "all-nighters" of the Levee district hurried away. The police predicted that not one of the slummers would appear for trial.

FOUND BY BERRY PICKERS

Badly Decomposed Body of Man Is Found In Woods

Stoneham, Mass., July 15.—A skeleton, clad in a faded and weather-worn suit, was the gruesome find of three women in the woods near the northwest corner of Spot pond.

Only a little flesh clung to the bones of the skeleton, and the only information that the police can give regarding the body is that it is that of a man about 5 feet 8 or 9 inches tall. A little tuft of hair was on the head, and this was reddish-brown in color.

A pair of forceps, said to be similar to those used by shoemakers, and a small pocket mirror, were the only articles found in the clothing beside a few matches.

REFUSE TO ARBITRATE

Western Railroad Employes Want to Meet Heads of Lines

Chicago, July 15.—Representatives of 55,000 engineers and firemen on ninety-eight western railroads, who have already polled a strike vote in an effort to obtain higher wages, declared they would not agree to arbitration under the Erdman act.

It was announced that they would agree to an effort at settlement to be made with the representatives of the lins involved.

FIRM SILENT ON FEDERAL REPORT

But Morgan Declares Probers Had Free Access to Books

THE NEW HAVEN SITUATION

Now Out of Hands of Interstate Commerce Commission—Mellen Says Their Report Was Made For Political Purposes—Former President Will Be Vindicated, Says Counsel

New York, July 15.—While J. P. Morgan & Co. refused to discuss the report of the interstate commerce commission, so severely censuring the directors under the administration of Charles S. Mellen for "reckless and prodigate" financial operations estimated to have cost stockholders from $55,000,000 to $90,000,000, J. P. Morgan himself denies the charge that the commission's examiners were not accorded full access to the firm's books bearing on the New Haven.

Correspondence made public at Washington told of Commissioner McChord's directing the chief examiner to cease the work as it "was useless."

Morgan issued this brief statement in reply: "The information with regard to the withdrawal of the interstate commerce commissioner's examiners from the examination of the books of our firm is the first intimation that I have had that they have been recalled."

The New Haven situation is now out of the hands of the interstate commerce commission, and what action if any is taken on the recommendations that the directors be prosecuted lies with the department of justice and district attorneys in the states in which the system has lines.

Directors and former directors of the road generally have refused to discuss the commission's report. Mellen, however, under whose administration the alleged acts complained of were committed, branded it as "A report of a political tribunal made for political purposes."

Mellen's counsel, J. W. H. Crim, issued a statement defending Mellen's actions. He said Mellen's private fortune when he took charge of the New Haven was $1,000,000. Now, he added, it was far less than that.

"There are reams and reams of testimony to be taken," he said, "which will be to the credit of the directors of the New Haven and of Mellen. This testimony, which is all prepared and ready to be presented, never has been made public and will result in the vindication of Mellen. The view now commonly taken of him will change mightily when the public realizes the good he has accomplished."

LOOT SAFELY BURIED

Train Robber's Widow Refuses to Surrender $54,000 Worth

New Orleans, July 15.—Mrs. Charles C. Craven, 20 years old, who, the police say, admits she has hidden $54,000 in cash and jewelry alleged to have been obtained by her late husband in several robberies, was arrested here and is held as a suspicions character.

Her husband and a companion were killed at Wildwood, Fla., five months ago, in a fight with detectives who attempted to arrest them on charges of train robbery and safe blowing.

The police say Mrs. Craven admits burying the money and jewelry near Savannah, Ga., but she will not reveal the hiding place.

NULLIFIES HOME RULE

Amending Bill Passed by Lords Will Be Rejected by Commons

London, July 15.—After passing the last of a series of amendments which would practically kill the Irish home rule bill, the house of lords formally gave the third reading to the amending bill and sent it on to the house of commons.

There is no possibility of the amending bill as it now stands being accepted in the house of commons, and the result will be that the home rule bill as already passed will become a law.

The Mandarin's Mine

Tricky Chinese Nabob's Plan For Revenge Frustrated

By CLARISSA MACKIE

San Yuen's moonlike countenance appeared in the doorway of Gilbert's office in the Foreign Bank building, Shanghai.

He was clad in the richest of his embroidered satin robes and the crystal button on his cap proclaimed him a mandarin of the fifth grade.

Charlie Gilbert looked up at the sound of padded shoes, and his eyes widened with surprise at receiving this unceremonious visit from a mandarin who was known to be jealous of all the honors due his rank.

"Ah, good morning, excellency," said Gilbert, rising to meet his distinguished caller. "I am honored, indeed," he added as he drew forth a carved chair for the mandarin.

San Yuen made suitable response, according to the Chinese code of politeness, but he spoke in English, for San Yuen had been educated in America, and he had been a classmate of Gilbert's at a famous college. They had met several times since Gilbert's residence in China, but only on formal occasions, for San Yuen's province bordered the upper reaches of the Yangtse river.

"I have long desired to meet you again," began San Yuen, folding his fat, yellow hands in his ample lap, and then, with a directness and freedom from dissimulation that Gilbert attributed to his foreign education, the Chinese went on: "I own a large property in Hupwei. I suspect that it is rich in coal. My people are very superstitious and still believe that a dragon sleeps beneath the soil. They are grumbling now at my efforts to ascertain the truth in the matter. They fear the dragon will arise and destroy us if disturbed. I need the money derived from the working of the mine. I have come to you for help."

GILBERT LIFTED HIS EYELIDS AND LOOKED INTO SAN YUEN'S FACE.

"What can I do?" asked Gilbert, with interest.

"You are a civil engineer. I would ask you to accompany me to my province, examine the property, and if my suspicions are well founded I offer you one-half interest in the mine if you will carry on the operations without permitting my people to suspect that I am interested in it."

Gilbert looked at the mandarin in amazement. This generous offer was so contrary to the usual methods of the bargain loving Chinese that it quite took his breath away.

Still Gilbert hesitated, although he sadly needed the money that the transaction would bring him if coal really existed in San Yuen's province.

"I will talk over the matter with my lawyer," he said after awhile.

"My boat sails in an hour. I forgot to tell you that time is limited. If you are afraid, if you distrust me"—He arose and folded his hands within his loose sleeves. "I will go."

Gilbert arose, a troubled look on his face.

"I am not afraid, San Yuen," he said quietly. "You should know that I am not afraid of any man, and I trust you. But the whole thing is very sudden. It means an absence of a week or ten days and my business must be taken care of."

"Your partner, Mellus—you see, I remember him—he also was a classmate! Your partner will take care of the business," purred San Yuen.

"Yes—I forgot. Wait a moment, excellency, while I write a few lines to him. Then I will go to my rooms and pack a bag. I will join you at the boat in half an hour."

"I am gratified," said San Yuen, as he moved stiffly toward the door. I will not wait, Mr. Gilbert. I will expect you on board in half an hour."

When Gilbert was alone he wrote a long letter of directions and explanation to his partner, Dick Mellus, and then summoned a clerk from the outer office.

"Smith," he said to the young man, "When do you expect Mr. Mellus back?"

"Any moment, sir," responded Smith. "He went up to the custom house and said he would return in ten minutes."

"When was that?"

"Two hours ago."

"Very likely he has been delayed. I am called away for a week or ten days. This letter explains everything to Mr. Mellus. Be sure that he receives it the instant he returns."

Charlie Gilbert closed his desk and then went out into the sun smitten street. In ten minutes he was at the public dock, and Po Sing had tossed his bags into the ready grasp of one of the mandarin's servants. The clumsy boat started downstream with the tide, and the silken sails and the long poles in the hands of brawny sailors sent her spinning past the long line of docks, the crowded shipping in the stream and finally out into the wide, yellow mouth of the Yangste river.

During all this time Gilbert was seated in the luxurious cabin of the mandarin in earnest consultation with the Chinese. San Yuen had maps of the coal region, and while they talked the hours slipped away; tea was served, and Gilbert felt a strange drowsiness stealing over his senses.

His eyelids drooped, once, twice. He lifted them and looked into San Yuen's face.

Gone was the urbane smile, vanished was the stolidity of the little eyes.

Gilbert's last recollection of San Yuen was a great moon face distorted with conflicting triumph and evil passions.

Then his eyes closed.

* * * * * * * *

Charlie Gilbert's next sensation was one of sickening nausea. A cool wind was blowing steadily against his temple, and although he opened his eyes on utter darkness a ray of light pierced some crack. Through this crack came the gush of air. His head rocked strangely, and when he sat upright his outstretched hands came in contact with a heavy beam above him.

In five minutes he had recovered sufficiently to sense what had happened to him.

He had been served with drugged tea in the mandarin's cabin. He had been unconscious for some time. He guessed that he was still on the junk, for he could feel the ribs of her hold and feel the rocking motion of her progress up the river. By putting his ear to the crack in the timbers he could hear above the rush of water the shrill cry of the Chinese trackers who were pulling the junk up the river against the tide.

Why should San Yuen openly receive him aboard the junk and then reduce him to unconsciousness? If he wanted to put Gilbert out of the way why had he not killed him at once?

What motive had he for revenge anyway?

Of course there was that time during their college days when San Yuen had got into some trouble with Dick Mellus. The Chinese had attempted to knife the American, and Gilbert's ready fists had saved his friend's life. But they had made up with San Yuen afterward. He had come forward and with unctuous humility had confessed himself in the wrong and had offered friendly overtures. The two Americans had met him halfway, and so far as they were concerned the matter was ended.

But was it ended?

The presence of both Gilbert and Mellus in China afforded an opportunity for San Yuen's revenge if the man desired it, but why had the mandarin selected Gilbert instead of his partner, Mellus? And if he wanted revenge why had not the mandarin ordered them to be assassinated?

As for Mellus—Gilbert drew a long breath—why, for all he knew San Yuen might have accomplished Dick's death this very day! Had not Dick Mellus disappeared about the same time that San Yuen had put in an appearance at the office of the civil engineers?

After awhile he dozed off again, and when he awoke the second time he felt better.

As he moved his foot touched something, and, striking a match, he discovered a bowl of hot rice and a jug of water.

"Prisoner!" he muttered. "Well, I wonder what the beggar has left me?" He searched his pockets and found that all his belongings were intact save his revolver. That had been confiscated.

After he had eaten Gilbert felt quite himself again, and after making a close examination of his quarters he decided to try and cut through the thin partition that separated his prison from the outer hold.

His pocketknife possessed one strong blade, and with this he worked to such good advantage that by nightfall he could remove a large panel in the partition. This he replaced and threw himself down in pretended slumber when he heard footsteps on the deck outside.

It was only a man bringing his supper.

Evidently San Yuen wanted to keep him alive for awhile; otherwise he would not have bothered to feed him.

Then night settled on the river and the junk came to anchor. He could hear the staccato voices of the trackers as they made camp on the shore and the nasal chant of the sailors as they sang over their supper. Then silence fell.

There was not even the friendly crack of light to encourage him. He made himself ready for escape. He had planned to creep on deck and throw himself into the river, trusting to the hostile natives and the chance of finding a friend among the foreign missions in some river city rather than to the questionable mercy of San Yuen.

When he finally removed the panel and crept through into the outer hold Gilbert was his own vigorous self once more. He stumbled over a cargo designed for the mandarin's sumptuous palace in Hupwei—tea chests and bales of cotton goods, cases of foreign delicacies—everything that money could buy to satisfy the pleasure loving tastes of a rich Chinese.

Suddenly he became aware that he was not alone.

There was another human being there in that black and filthy hole.

Undoubtedly San Yuen had set a guard over him. So Gilbert crouched low and waited. For awhile there was no sound save the breathing of two men. Then Gilbert, moving stealthily in the direction where the hatchway might be, felt the touch of human hands, and in a moment he was rolling on the floor in deadly combat with a small, wiry man of prodigious strength.

They breathed heavily, locked in each other's embrace, each one waiting for an advantage, but they were equally matched.

Then a muttered exclamation from Gilbert broke the silence. "Take that, you yellow scoundrel!" he breathed as he thumped the head of his antagonist against the deck.

"Gilbert!" muttered the other. "Is that you, Gilbert?"

It was the voice of Mellus.

"Dick!" said Gilbert weakly, and he drew away from Dick's weakening grasp. "What in thunderation are you doing here?"

"Same errand as you, I reckon," returned Mellus, and he struck a match and revealed his battered countenance.

With mutual joy they hugged each other and then held a whispered conference, during which Gilbert learned that his partner had been decoyed aboard the junk on his way to the custom house by a message purporting to be from Gilbert.

Dick Mellus had been led into the cabin of the junk expecting to see his partner and had been promptly felled to the floor and removed to the hold.

"What shall we do now?" asked Gilbert. "I was going to sneak overboard and swim for the shore; it's only a matter of a hundred yards."

"That was my plan. Let us carry it out together. Sneak up the ladder and see if there is a watchman. Trust me to put him to sleep!" muttered little Mellus fiercely.

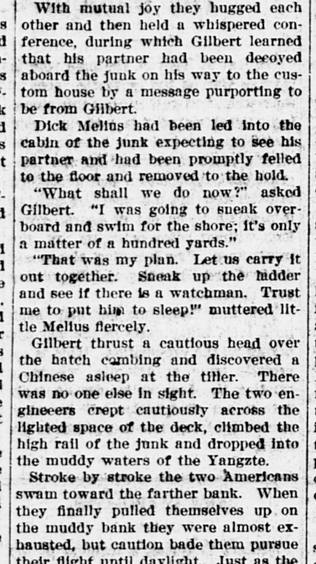

Gilbert thrust a cautious head over the hatch combing and discovered a Chinese asleep at the tiller. There was no one else in sight. The two engineers crept cautiously across the lighted space of the deck, climbed the high rail of the junk and dropped into the muddy waters of the Yangzte.

Stroke by stroke the two Americans swam toward the farther bank. When they finally pulled themselves up on the muddy bank they were almost exhausted, but caution bade them pursue their flight until daylight. Just as the yellow dawn broke behind the rugged mountain tops they stumbled through the gates of a small city that was still wrapped in slumber.

A sleepy watchman accepted a gold piece from Mellus and led them to the nearest mission house, and an hour later they had been welcomed by cordial Englishmen and, bathed, fed and reclothed, were sleeping around the clock. The next morning they resumed their journey back to Shanghai, but this time it was on a river steamer that bore many other foreign passengers.

It was almost a year later before they set eyes on San Yuen's smug countenance again.

Then it was at a crowded reception in the hotel parlor that San Yuen's massive form loomed up. His beady

"GILBERT!" MUTTERED THE OTHER. "IS THAT YOU, GILBERT?"

glance wavered when he saw Gilbert and his partner confronting him, but he recovered his poise almost at once, and his urbane smile creased his wide mouth.

"And the coal mine, excellency?" asked Gilbert drily.

"Ah, Mr. Gilbert, I have abandoned the plan," said San Yuen smoothly. "My people are very superstitious, what you call 'slow.'"

"Then they should take lessons of their ruler," laughed Mellus, straightening his sturdy little shoulders.

And there was a glimmer of admiration in the mandarin's eyes as his classmates walked away.

WITH HUERTA OUT, LOOK FOR PEACE

Arrival of Dictator's Family at Vera Cruz.

REBELS ARE HARD TO HANDLE

They Declare Fact That United States Is Virtual Ally of Theirs Is Detriment Instead of Help—All Parties In Mexico Regard This Government With Disfavor.

The administration at Washington received information that members of General Huerta's family had arrived at Vera Cruz. For some reason this information was guarded rather carefully, and the full significance of the advices received in connection with it could not be ascertained from any authoritative source, says a dispatch to the New York Times. There is no doubt, however, that well informed officials of the government regarded the presence of the Huerta family at Vera Cruz as merely preliminary to the flight of the dictator from the capital.

The advices received were coupled with the information that the wife of Senor Moheno, former minister of foreign affairs in the Huerta cabinet, was with the Huerta party and would wait at Vera Cruz for the arrival of her husband before sailing away from Mexico. From this it was inferred that Huerta and Moheno would leave the City of Mexico together and join their families at Vera Cruz.

There is a growing feeling that with Huerta removed as a factor in the Mexican situation the chief obstacle to a peaceable adjustment of Mexico's troubles will disappear. But the Wilson administration has found it difficult to convince the Constitutionalist leaders that its interest in a speedy settlement is born of a desire to do what is best for Mexico's welfare. As long as the revolutionists found the United States government willing to help along the anti-Huerta cause by its attitude concerning shipments of arms and ammunition into Mexico, they showed an extremely friendly disposition toward the administration. Now, however, they are disposed to forget. At most all that the Constitutionalists are willing to acknowledge is that the refusal of President Wilson to recognize General Huerta as the provisional president de jure of Mexico has been of indirect benefit to their cause.

Our Aid a Detriment.

According to the position of the Constitutionalists, the fact that the United States is a virtual ally of theirs is a detriment instead of a help. Their attitude is that, as all parties in Mexico regard this government with disfavor, knowledge that it was giving active assistance to the Constitutionalists' cause would make that party unpopular. This was one of the reasons for the unwillingness of the revolutionary leaders to recognize the efforts the Washington government was making to support the Constitutionalist side of the issues presented in the Niagara Falls negotiations.

The administration has been tolerant of this attitude. It has been willing to overlook the seeming lack of gratitude involved. The present set purpose of the administration is to bring the troubles in Mexico to an end through peaceful means, and it is not particular as to how that outcome is achieved so long as the danger of intervention is removed. In every possible way it seeks to show the Constitutionalists that it has no desire to interfere in the adjustment of the internal problems of Mexico. It was this spirit that caused the American peace delegates to leave Niagara Falls. Through that course the revolutionary leaders were made to understand that their delegates were free to confer with the plenipotentiaries of Huerta.

There was hopeful feeling that the Constitutionalist leaders have not been unmindful of the motives that have actuated the United States government and the South American governments.

WHY RICH BUTTER IS YELLOW

Due to Carotin In Cow's Rations, Says Department of Agriculture.

The rich, yellow color demanded by the public in dairy products has been shown to be due primarily to the nature of cow feed. This announcement was made by the department of agriculture as the result of experiments carried on in co-operation with the Missouri state experiment station.

The department's conclusion is that, although to some extent a breed characteristic, the intensity of this yellow color may within certain limits be increased or diminished at will by changing the cow's rations.

Chemical tests show that the yellow color in milk is produced by several well known pigments found in green plants, the principal one being carotin, so called because it constitutes a large part of the coloring matter of carrots. The other yellow pigments in milk are known as xanthophylls. These are found in a number of plants, including grass, but are especially abundant in yellow autumn leaves.

This explains the fact that fresh, green grass and carrots increase the yellowness of butter. Green grass, it is stated, is probably richer in carotin than any other dairy feed and cows feeding on it produce the highest colored butter.

ANXIOUS TO TAKE OUT PAPERS

Daniel Twohey, who is after the scalp of Edward P. Powers for the independent nomination for Mayor, is haunting the office of the City Clerk trying to get nomination papers. He does not take kindly to the information that nomination papers are not ready as yet, and will not be for some time, and he evidently has the impression that some one is trying to put one over on him. Tiring of applying to the City Clerk, he tried a new stunt this morning making application to Overseer of the Poor Green, whom he had been told could furnish him with the necessary documents. Here he also was unable to obtain the desired papers, although he met with some encouragement it is understood.

FREIGHT CAR DERAILED.

A freight car being shunted into the siding of the Quincy Beef Co. was derailed early this morning by the spreading of the rails. A wrecker was sent out and the car put back on the iron and a gang of men repaired the tracks. The main line tracks were not damaged.

THE Q. Y. C. CHALLENGE CUP

Eight Entries But None From Quincy This Year

The Quincy Yacht Club Challenge Cup is serving one good purpose aside from creating an interest in amateur yachting and that is in keeping alive the interest in the sonder class boats, which in the absence of international trials is likely to lag somewhat.

The Quincy cup is the only annual challenge cup in Massachusetts Bay, and for several years past has been competed for by the sonder class boats.

There are now nine of this class of boats in Boston harbor and of the twelve clubs that form the interclub association five have challenged for the cup this year. The challengers are the South Boston, Mosquito Fleet, Savin Hill, Hingham and Lynn clubs. In addition to these yachts of the interclub association there are also the Corinthian, Eastern and Manchester club of the North Shore, giving a total of eight challengers for the trophy this year and some interesting races should result.

Unfortunately this year the Quincy club, the parent club, has not challenged and will therefore not be represented in the cup races. The races however will be watched keenly by members of the Quincy club, and another year a challenge will probably be presented and an effort made to bring the cup back to Quincy.

The Boston Yacht club, the present holder of the cup, will defend it with the Ellen of Charles P. Curtis, which successfully defended the trophy last season. After the races the Ellen will become the property of Caleb Loring who will enter her in the international trials.

The names of the boats that will compete in the cup races this season are not known in every case. The Mingo of Commodore Sears will probably represent the Eastern club, and the Sprig, John L. Saltonstall's new boat will represent the Manchester club. The Corinthian club has not named its challenger.

Of the Interclub challengers the Sally XI of Gordon Munroe will represent the Savin Hill club, and the Robin of D. K. James will probably represent the Hingham club. The Lynn club will be represented by the F. A. Breed's Huskie, unless she should be chosen by the Corinthian club. The Mosquito Fleet and the South Boston clubs have not named their challenger.

It was expected that the races would be held off the Boston yacht clubs house at Hull but owing to the wishes of a majority of those clubs which will take part in the series, the races will be held off Marblehead the same as last year.

The first race will be held Monday, Aug. 17, and races will be held every day until some one yacht has succeeded in capturing three races.

HEN THIEVES EMPLOY DOGS

The wholesale theft of hens in broad daylight from poultry fanciers living near the Braintree line has given these men the utmost concern, not only because choice fowls have been stolen but because the method used offers little chance for protection.

The men making the cleanup are said to be operating with the aid of a trained dog that runs into groups of hens and carries one or more back to the owner who awaits a short distance away.

Frank Goodhue whose house is almost on the line, reports the loss of 25 hens and a neighbor has had a similar experience. Both cases were reported in the afternoon.

A night raid was made Friday on the premises of Mrs. M. Miller at 203 Liberty stret and although patrolmen chased the men they eluded capture. Twenty hens were taken.

The daylight thieves are said to drive a covered wagon loaded with empty sacks, under which the plunder is hidden. The officers of Quincy, Braintree and Randolph will co-operate in an effort to bring about their arrest.

MUST ABANDON OUTSIDE CLOSETS

The Board of Health have been stirring things up somewhat at Houghs Neck, for they are getting after those premises where outside closets are being used. People have been rather slow at Houghs Neck in abandoning the use of these outside closets, the best of which are a nuisance.

At a recent meeting of the board it was voted that the use of all outside closets at Houghs Neck should be abandoned and flush closets installed on all premises where city water can be obtained.

In compliance with this vote notices are being served on persons using vault closets to abandon the same and provide proper flush closets connected with the city water and a cesspool. In all of the cases parties are required to complete the work within a certain time.

There are other sections of the city where this rule should be put into practice.

Ralph G. Poulin, one of the clerks at Johnson Bros. market, is having his annual vacation.

Many from Quincy are visiting the camp of the First Corps of Cadets at Hingham each evening to enjoy the band concerts.

William E. Hingston of Wollaston Park, the well known handwriting expert, has joined the ranks of the automobilists. He has purchased a Ford.

Rupert F. Claflin and W. W. Mitchell are the proud possessors of an electric runabout, and are spending their spare time mastering the fine points of their machine.

The firing of the heavy guns down the harbor in target practice is plainly heard in Quincy and those living near the shore report that their houses shake every time one of the big guns is fired.

One of the large elm trees in the First church yard having been killed by the elm tree beetle has been cut down. The old elm trees in and about City Square are fast being eliminated the pest having ruined practically all of them.

Some of the tall electric light poles along Hancock street in front of the Hancock cemetery which have become rotted at the butt are being replaced. It was necessary to change the poles at the present time as a granolithic sidewalk is soon to be put in here.

The members of the Massachusetts Street Railway club are the guests today of John R. Graham at Bangor, Maine. The party 100 strong arrived in Bangor Tuesday and spent the day at Mr. Graham's farm at Cornish. Today they are sight seeing in automobiles.

PLAN TRAINING OF CHINESE DOCTORS

Country Still In Dark Ages of Medicine.

MUST COMBAT OPPOSITION.

Territory So Vast Rockefeller Commission Can't Supply Enough Foreign Medicos—Natives Wary of Innovations—Chinese Apparently Cannot Even Set a Bone.

The Rockefeller commission, which is in Peking investigating China's needs in a medical and surgical way, already has found that a most important point is this: The Chinese must be taught to doctor themselves along modern lines and not rely, except for the present, upon the foreign medical men.

The country is so vast and the need of the medical men so extensive that all the doctors and surgeons in America could be utilized in China. Such a great invasion or even enough to make any wide impression is impracticable. The solution must be the training of the Chinese doctors, says a Peking dispatch to the New York Times. At present there are only a few score of them trained along modern lines, and these have difficulty in making a living. The Chinaman is suspicious of the second-hand training of the modernized Chinese doctor, and if he is moved to resort to foreign treatment he prefers to go direct to the foreign doctor.

The commission, which is represented in Peking by Dr. Harry Pratt Judson, president of Chicago university, and Dr. Francis W. Peabody of Boston, has not gone far enough to commit itself to any definite plan, but its report undoubtedly will be largely concerned with the problem of making the foreign trained native doctor respected in China.

Government Aids.

The United States department of state has temporarily detached Roger S. Greene from his consular post at Hankow to aid the commission as an interpreter and guide in its tour of investigation, and the Chinese government, both central and local, has furthered rather than impeded the work of the commission.

In the medical schools the commission has found various men at work trying to coin medical characters and combinations of characters or expressions in Chinese. It was only three years ago that the first class of Chinese educated in China took their medical degrees from the Union college (where American and British missionary doctors work together) in Peking. Last year the first class, a small number, of women doctors was graduated. Because of prejudices against the treatment of women by men, women doctors will have a valuable place in medical work in China.

While the class of Chinese who prefer the old style Chinese doctors is still in the majority, the foreign doctors have more than they can do. Chinese medicine is a poor thing. The Chinese have had for centuries remedies for certain well known diseases—remedies which are often very effective. But they have never apparently studied anatomy and know little or nothing of the reasons for actions and counteractions. Much, if not most, of their work is quackery. They have very little knowledge of surgery.

Cannot Set a Bone.

As a rule, the Chinese doctor cannot set a bone. Men whose broken limbs could be stuck together by an ordinary man in Europe or America become permanent cripples in China. Such are to be seen even on the streets of Canton, Shanghai and Peking, where the services of the foreign doctors are always available. They are men who have gone to their own instead of foreign doctors and probably have received plasters or even medicine to take internally for their broken bones.

Some of the tales that go through the country about the missionary doctors are to these people like stories of the Bible. A man learns of a surprising cure, which seems to him miraculous. A friend has been shot by brigands or by marauding troops of the government and is paralyzed down one side as a result. The foreign doctor opens his head, takes out a little piece of metal, and the man begins at once to walk and talk. Or it might be in the case of a woman who was blind from a cataract and received sight.

67,812,000 Inhabitants In Germany.

Germany has now 67,812,000 inhabitants, according to the imperial statistical office. The gain since the same date in 1913 is 861,000. As the gain between 1912 and 1913 was 835,000, the rate of increase is being approximately maintained. Since 1904 the population has risen by 8,337,000, or 14 per cent in ten years. During the preceding decade the rate of increase was 15.9 per cent.

Fifty Years For Fifty Cent Theft.

Fifty years for stealing 50 cents is the sentence which a Hale county (Ala.) jury imposed on Frank Williams, a negro, who in 1894 robbed another negro of half a dollar. After serving more than twenty years of the fifty year sentence Williams has been paroled by Governor O'Neal.

LADIES DAY OF THE Q. Y. C.

Several hundred the guests of the Quincy Yacht Club left City Square before 2 o'clock to participate in the annual Ladies' day at the Houghs Neck clubhouse. Extra cars were provided for their accommodation.

The exterior of the quarters have been gaily decorated with the national and signal flags and yards of bunting gives the building a gala appearance.

The owners of craft have made arrangements to take their guests on a long sail while others are preparing the program for the piazza fleet.

A steamer has been engaged by the committee in charge to carry those over the course who fail to secure accommodations in the yachts and motor boats. The review will take place at 3 o'clock and the boats will be back at the pier by 5 o'clock. Luncheon will be served in the hall upon the return of the fleet. Vice-Commodore Edgar W. Emery is in charge of the house committee and assisting them is the reeception committee composed of the most genial of the club members.

CAN EXTERMINATE THE MOSQUITO

William Y. Kenyon, the man who is making war on the mosquito pest at Squantum, was at City Hall this morning. Speaking of this pest he said that Squantum had now become a desirable place in summer for the Improvement Association had succeeded in exterminating this pest and making it possible to be out of doors evenings without being eaten up by the mosquitoes. The breeding places are sprayed every month and it is proving very effectual.

Now that Squantum has had such good luck, other parts of the city are taking up the proposition. This is especially true at Atlantic where a meeting has been called for an early date to see what action will be taken toward spraying breeding places in the ward.

NEW CANDIDATES.

Michael T. Guess, a member of the Ward One Democratic committee, stated Tuesday that he would today take out nomination papers for Leo P. Noonan, as candidate for representative from the Fifth Norfolk district, and for Alfred J. LaCroix, as a candidate for senator from the First Norfolk district. Mr. Guess said the papers would be in circulation by tonight. Mr. Noonan, according to Mr. Guess, wishes to succeed Michael T. Sullivan, the present incumbent.

CAUGHT IN GEAR.

Manuel Palacio, an artillery mechanic of the Argentine Commission, was painfully injured in a turret test on the Rivadavia at the shipyard Monday night. Palacio was testing the turning gear of the turret and had his hand caught in the gears. One finger was so badly crushed it was amputated.

QUINCY YACHT CLUB PROVES GOOD ENTERTAINER

ANNUAL LADIES' DAY A GREAT SUCCESS

Hundreds of the Fair Sex Enjoy Two Hours' Sail and Then Dance

Concert and Refreshments at the Clubhouse

The weather man was kind Wednesday to the Quincy Yacht club on the occasion of its annual ladies' day, for while the aforesaid weather man handed out a variety of weather, such as New England is famous for, the air was clear, and the sun bright during the review and sail.

The early morning did not give promise of an ideal day, but by noon the weather had cleared and the sun came out hot. Then the wind shifted to the northeasterly quarter and the air cooled somewhat at the club house.

A special car which left Quincy at 1.40 took down a large number of participants and later cars brought many others. The ladies in their white suits and the yachtsmen in their white ducks, blue jackets and yachting caps, making a charming picture on the club verandas.

About 2 o'clock it was seen that it was rather foggy off Hull and that the fog was coming in fast and thick. Half an hour later the fog was almost too thick to attempt much of a sail and a flag was hoisted on the float denoting that the review and sail had been postponed for thirty minutes. Before the half hour had elapsed the bright sun had dispelled the fog, and the weather had cleared, making the afternoon an ideal one for a sail. What little air was stirring was from the northeasterly quarter, but there was hardly enough to create a ripple, and the water in the bay was as calm as a mill pond so that timid ones had no fear of seasickness.

As soon as the weather had begun to clear the yacht captains began the transfer of their guests from the club floats to the yachts that were anchored at the moorings.

This was an interesting sight in itself, and one that was enjoyed by a large number on the club piazzas. Captains of the power boats cranked up their engines and came to the club floats for their guests, so that the scene on the floats for a half hour was an animated one.

THE REVIEW.

Anchored just off from the float was the Iris, the flagship of Commodore Harry S. Crane, gaily bedecked with flags, his guests being transferred from the float in the tender. Commodore Crane however remained on the float until the last minute seeing that everything went off according to schedule. He was one of the last of those to participate in the sail who left the float, and at 3.25 a gun from the flagship gave the signal to get ready. A second gun five minutes later, and the fleet was off.

As each yacht passed the flagship, the Commodore was seen standing aft surrounded by a party of ladies and gentlemen. As the passing yacht lowered its colors in passing, the salute was acknowledged by the Commodore who lifted his cap. At the same time the Commodore's flag was dipped and a gun fired.

The review, as seen from the clubhouse was an exceptionally pretty one, being a kind of endless panorama. Once past the flagship the yachts turned their course toward Pig Rock beacon, thence to Black Can buoy in Hingham Bay, thence to Jack Knife ledge buoy, thence to the Red Spar buoy off Sheep island, and to the club house.

STEAMER LORETTO.

Owing to the large membership of the club, it is impossible on such days as these to find yachts enough to accommodate all of the guests, but the club with its usual foresight had looked after this, and had provided the steamer Loretto so that there was ample room for all who desired the sail. The Loretto was in charge of Capt. John O. Hall, assisted by William H. Heey and Charles W. Laing as mates and James A. M. Nash as pilot. Many availed themselves of the opportunity to take in the review and sail in the steamer, and her guests numbered nearly 175.

While on the sail many of the captains served their guests with light refreshments. On the flagship, Mrs. Crane, wife of the Commodore, assisted by her charming daughters served punch and light refreshments.

CONCERT AND LUNCH.

While the sail was in progress, an orchestra gave a delightful concert at the clubhouse. The return from the sail was made shortly after 5 o'clock, and when the last of the fleet had landed its guests a lunch was served by the caterer who conducts the club dining room. The lunch consisted of salads, ices, cake and coffee.

Althought the clubhouse is an unusually large one, it is never any too large on occasions of this kind, and the piazzas were thronged with guests

It was but a few minutes after the return from the sail that the weather took another freak, and a few minutes later a thick heavy fog had again set in that made it almost impossible to see anyone a few feet distant. The sail was over, however and everybody ashore, so that the fog at this time only discommoded those who had planned for a sail in the bay after the lunch.

There was a brief lull in the festivities after the lunch until 7.30, when a concert was given and dancing enjoyed until 10.30, at which time special cars left for Quincy. As a whole the day had been an ideal one, and the ladies' day of 1914 will go down in the history of the club as one of the most successful it ever had.

Assisting Commodore Crane in the carrying out of the arrangements were the house committee and a special reception committee.

GIFT OF $2,500 TO ST. MARY'S

For Marble Altar in the New Church When Erected

The will of Ann Hart of West Quincy, Widow of Bernard Hart, who died in East Bridgewater at the home of her son, Rev. Fr. Francis S. Hart, pastor of the Catholic church at that place, has been filed for probate at Plymouth and several bequests of a religious nature are made.

The sum of $2,500 is left to the new St. Mary's Catholic church on Crescent street, West Quincy, for the purpose of erecting the main marble altar in the upper part of said church when completed; said sum to be paid to the pastor of said St. Mary's church, whosoever he may be, by the executor named. She further directs that her name be inscribed on said altar as the donor of said gift.

The pastor of St. Mary's' church is also given $200 for masses to be said for the repose of her soul, and is named as trustee of $200 deposited in the Quincy Savings bank, the interest from which is to be devoted to the care of the lot in which her body is interred in St. Mary's cemetery.

Provision is also made for a gift of $200 to the Little Sisters of the Poor, Dudley street, Dorchester.

The homestead on Willard street and furniture is given to Lawrence B. Hart a son, and the personal effects and clothing, excepting a gold watch and chain, to Mary A. Shields of Milton, a daughter.

A watch and chain is bequeathed to Bessie Millwood of East Boston, a friend of the deceased.

The remainder of the property will be evenly divided between Rev. Fr. Francis S. Hart, Robert J., William J., Lawrence B. and Joseph E. Hart, all sons, and Mary A. Shields, a daughter.

The will named as executor of the estate the late James F. Burke, and after his death was added a codicil and Father Hart was named as executor.

The provisions for the gift of a marble altar was in keeping with a promise made by Mrs. Hart when the basement of the St. Mary's church was dedicated. During her lifetime she was a generous contributor to the church, having given the altar in the basement, the pulpit and a window in memory of her husband.

TRIAL TRIP OF THE ATLANTIC

Friends of Emery Steamship Co. Were Aboard

The steamship Atlantic, built at the Fore River Corporation for the Emery Steamship Co., of Boston, left the shipyard at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning for her trial trip. Heavy fog in the harbor interrupted some of the runs and for more than half an hour no progress was attempted because of the extreme danger.

The ship registered good marks in its speed trials and consumption tests.

Many people interested in the company and the immediate family of the owners were guests of the company during the trip.

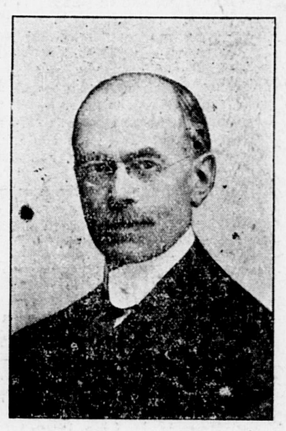

The ship was taken to East Boston at the conclusion of its runs where it will be immediately fitted out for coast to coast trade, via the Panama canal.

The Sunday school of the Atlantic Methodist church had a good time on Saturday on its annual picnic at Franklin Park. About 75 attended.

TOOK POISON BY MISTAKE

Frank J. Pendergast Had Just Treated Swimmer

Frank J. Pendergast, son of Sergt. James Pendergast of Station 11, who died at the Boston City Hospital Tuesday evening from the effects of a poison tablet taken by mistake, was well known in this city, and two years ago Miss Helen Farrell of Willard street, West Quincy became his bride.

Pendergast was general utility man and instructor at the Freeport street baths, and had treated a boy swimming at the beach for a cut on the leg with a solution of three poison tablets which he placed in a glass to dissolve. Soon after he made the mistake of taking the glass to drink water from.

Almost instantly he realized his error and while giving himself emetics he asked for a policeman's assistance. One arrived and sent him to the hospital where he soon died.

Penderfast was a frequent visitor to this city and numbered many Quincy people among his friends. He was popular with young athletes and had acted as their trainer. Besides his wife a three months old child survives him.

DIVORCE LIBEL.

Luella C. Nutting of Cotuit has filed a libel for divorce with the clerk of courts of Norfolk county. She asks for a separation from her husband, Shirley F. Nutting of Quincy, on the grounds of utter desertion. They were married at Quincy Nov. 4, 1897, and spent their wedded life in that city. The wife also asks for alimony.

Miss Eliza Levangie of 5 Stewart street left Tuesday for St. John's, N. B., where she will be a guest of relatives and friends for a month.

BETTER PROTECTION FOR HOUGHS NECK

New Standpipe on Great Hill, Now Part of the Quincy Water System

Water Pressure at Houghs Neck Ninety Pounds

Water was turned into the new standpipe of the Water department on Great Hill, Houghs Neck, for the first time Wednesday afternoon to test it, and it was planned to fill the pipe later in the afternoon This is the stand pipe for which the City Council of last year made an appropriation of $20,000. While standing on Great Hill and looking up at the big bowl, it seems to be much higher than any other point in the city.

Mr. Whitman, superintendent of the Water department, who was present when it was filled Wednesday, said that the height was exactly the same as the stand pipes on Penn's hill and on Third hill, Wollaston and that the main object of the new pipe was to equalize the pressure.

The new standpipe holds 400,000 gallons, so that if at any time there should be a bad break in the line supplying this section of the city, as has happened once or twice, there will be an adequate supply for the section in case of fire and for domestic purposes until the break could be repaired.

Supt. Whitman said that the pressure on top of Great Hill was now about 65 pounds and that the pressure at the lowest point of Houghs Neck between 90 and 95 pounds.

In testing the pipe on Wednesday but a small amount of water was let in at first, to test the plates and especially the manhole at the base of the main upright. This as was anticipated leaked slightly, so that the water was let out in order that the manhole piece might be tightened up. When the water was let out it rushed down the hill through the garden of Archie Baird, into the bay, and it is safe to say that Mr. Baird's garden received the irrigation treatment.

Later in the afternoon the manhole piece was tightened and the water let into the standpipe which was gradually filled.

TELEPHONE: QUINCY 425.

The fact that a man can take a ten mile country tramp by no means proves that he is able to walk a mile to church on his return home.

It looks as if the President this year would get a restful vacation consisting of trolley rides out to the end of the Washington car line.

GENEROUS RESPONSE.

The club women of the city who acted on the Mayor's committee to raise funds for the people of Salem have every reason to feel proud of all that was accomplished in less than a week. They not only raised over $1,000 by the sale of tags, but they stimulated others to give, so that the subscriptions amount to another $1,000 Churches and secret orders have contributed a third $1,000. Quincy's grand total in cash is therefore over $3,000 and in addition considerable clothing and supplies have been forwarded and we have had personal workers in Salem.

QUINCY AND WOBURN.

Quincy real estate owners will probably congratulate themselves that Quincy is not Woburn, when they learn that the tax rate in that city this year is probably the highest any city of the commonwealth has ever had. The rate of Woburn, as announced Wednesday by the assessors is $26 per $1,000 valuation. This is an increase of $5.50 over the rate of last year. The city's valuation is given as $12,333,362 an increase of $263,322 over 1913.

The population of the city as given by the last census was 15,308. It is interesting to know that Woburn became a city at the same time as did Quincy in 1888, and at that time the population was about the same, which was 12,000. Quincy's population today by the last census is given as 32,642. It will be seen by these figures that while Quincy has more than doubled in population since 1888, Woburn has almost been at a standstill.

The assessors of Woburn give as a reason for the big jump in tax rate the establishment of the State system of auditing and accounting, and the enactment in 1913 of the new municipal financing law, which is called the pay-as-you-go system.

Nothing but a big jump in valuation will save Quincy from a high tax rate this year.

CRIME AND PUBLICITY.

Murder is not merely an affair of city slums, mining camps, and lonely farmhouses. Recent mysteries that detectives, newspapers, and public have been trying to unravel have occurred in a setting of conventionalized society.

Civilization and conventional living are often said to be only a thin veneer. Underneath is the same old human tiger of love and jealousy and passion and anger. He devours alike his victims, whether on the fringes of civilization, or in the atmosphere of culture.

Yet it is remarkable how conventional living does tend to exclude the darker acts of human nature. Education and refinement point out to the human intelligence that crime brings its own punishment. The murderer suffers a thousand times more than the murdered.

The greatest deterrent from crime with many people is the fear of publicity. When two foreign born laborers quarrel over their sweethearts, and one deals a deadly blow, the newspapers dismiss it in hasty paragraphs. But if these elemental deeds occur among socially conspicuous people, there are headlines and black type.

As the human mind becomes more complex, it tends to shelter itself from the eyes of the curious. It bitterly resents impertinent prying. It demands the chance to lead its own life secure from observation. Undoubtedly the gossipy habits of country neighbors are one cause why people move to city life.

This feeling receives its sharpest shock when people of refined tastes and conventionalized habits become connected with some deadly crime. One suspects that the questioning by reporters, the space in the newspapers the sordid inspection of one's daily affairs by a whole nation, is more dreaded than even the possibility of the electric chair. There is still enough human weakness and sin so that this publicity performs a most efficient service.

NEW PRESIDENT RULES MEXICO

Carbajal Sworn Into Office When Dictator Huerta Resigns

WAY NOW CLEAR FOR REBELS

Entry Into Capital Not Likely to Be Contested—"Man of Iron" Remains Behind While His Family and Members of His Cabinet Flee Toward Foreign Lands For Safety

Mexico City, July 16.—Francisco Carbajal is now provisional president of Mexico, and Victoriano Huerta is out.

General Huerta presented his resignation as president of the republic to the chamber of deputies last evening through the department of foreign relations.

The resignation was referred to a committee after it had been read. It was reported favorably by the committee and then accepted by the chamber by a vote of 121 to 17.

The galleries were filled with deputies and spectators, who cheered the dictator, and continuous shouts of "Viva Huerta" filled the air.

Francisco Carbajal, formerly foreign minister in Huerta's cabinet, took the oath of office as president of Mexico before the assembled deputies and senators. The new executive then went to the national palace, escorted by the presidential guards. He was cheered lustily by the people along the way.

Everything is quiet in the capital, the people appearing to take the resignation as a matter of course, but there are a large number of followers of both Carranza and Zapata in the capital, and the foreign population are anxiously awaiting the outcome of present events.

Huerta's resignation was accepted in the following terms:

"Article 1—We accept the resignation presented by General Victoriano Huerta as president of the Mexican United States.

"Article 2—We call Licentiate Francisco Carbajal, minister of foreign affairs, to assume the presidency."

Huerta's family and the families of most of his cabinet members as well as the members themselves have left the capital and are speeding toward the coast to seek safety in foreign lands.

It is said that Huerta purposes remaining in Mexico City for the present to give Carbajal the benefit of his advice, hoping against hope that Carbajal will decide to contest the entry of the constitutionalists into the capital and that he may be allowed to lead the federal troops in person.

Those who know Huerta declare that the "man or iron," as he is familiarly known, would die happy could he but administer a crushing defeat to his enemies, Carranza and Villa.

On the other hand, it is known that a British warship is lying off Puerta Mexico, and that the way is all cleared for Huerta to make a flying trip to the coast, whence he can sail for Europe.

No one can tell which way he will go. But most people in Mexico City believe Carbajal will not contest the entry of the Carranza forces into Mexico City.

Treasure, it is understood, has preceded him across the Atlantic that he may live in physical luxury. But, although he is suspected of having looted and benefited from graft, such a course was not really necessary for him.

Huerta was born to wealth. Unlike Diaz, who is of plebeian origin, a mongrel, mostly Indian, Huerta comes of one of the most aristocratic families in Mexico.

Huerta took oath as provisional president of Mexico Feb. 19, 1913, the day after Francisco I. Madero had been arrested at the national palace. Three days later Madero and Vice President Suarez were shot to death on a midnight ride, under guard, from the palace to the penitentiary. The manner of their death has never been satisfactorily explained.

One of Huerta's first acts as provisional president was to telegraph President Taft the following message:

"I have the honor to inform you that I have overthrown this government. The forces are with me and from now on peace and prosperity will reign."

The republic was at once plunged into civil war again, notwithstanding the issuance by Huerta of a proclamation of general amnesty. The Sonora state congress officially repudiated the provisional government before Huerta had settled himself comfortably in the presidential chair and his difficulties have rapidly multiplied ever since.

Resignation May Mean Peace

Washington, July 16.—News of General Huerta's resignation as provisional president of Mexico was hailed by official Washington as the first practical step toward a quick solution of the Mexican problem.

Constitutionalists, diplomats and officials of the United States government did not conceal their satisfaction over the fact that Huerta at last had voluntarily eliminated himself from the situation, and pointed the way to an era of peace in his country.

WOMAN HEARS OF PLOT

Journeys Across the Ocean to Foil Murder of Her Husband

Baltimore, July 16.—Mrs. Barbara Varga of western Hungary, who landed here from the steamship Neckar, startled the immigration officials when she told them she had come to this country for the express purpose of preventing the murder of her husband, John Varga, of Philadelphia.

According to her story she received word from friends about a month ago that her brother was going to kill her husband, for what reason she did not know. As quickly as she could, she got some money together, and started for this country.

She is being held by the immigration authorities, pending word from her husband, who has been notified of her arrival and mission.

STRIVES TO BECOME A POLICEWOMAN

Candidate Loses Twenty-Five Pounds In Five Days

Chicago, July 16.—Determined to be a policewoman, one candidate for the civil service test reduced her weight twenty-five pounds in five days, it was made known from the examiners' headquarters. The outside weight allowed is 180 pounds. The candidate reduced from 225 pounds to 200 pounds in five days.

She did it by sucking ice and lemon peel, instead of eating, and by taking vigorous exercise, she told the civil service commissioners.

"Give me five days more," she pleaded, when told that the extra twenty pounds she carried would bar her. The chance was granted.

LONG PRISONER IN TINY ROOM

No One Visited Woman For Period of Five Years

HAD BEEN IN INSANE ASYLUM

Released as Cured and Placed In Charge of Woman Who Was Paid $3 a Week For Board and Keep—Pitiful Case of Woman Who Was Thought to Have Been Dead

Passaic, N. J., July 16.—A chance remark overheard by Esther Endy of the Young Woman's Hebrew association of Pasasic led to the discovery of a woman who was believed to have died five years ago and disclosed a case of involuntary imprisonment which it is believed will lead to arrests.

As a result of Miss Endy's inquiry, Mrs. Louis Cohen, 48 years old, mother of three sons and two daughters, was found locked up in a tiny room in Garfield, across the Passaic river, at 17 Munroe street. For five years no one had visited her and she was wearing the clothes she had on when she entered the room.

Dr. Nemiraw and City Physician Van Schoop of Passaic, wro were called in by Miss Endy, said the woman was suffering from melancholia and acute indigestion, but was not insane.

Mrs. Cohen was estranged from her husband twenty-one years ago. Fourteen years ago her family obtained her commitment to the asylum at Morris Plains, N. J. She remained there until five years ago, when the physicians of the institution said she was cured. She then was taken to the little room in Garfield, with the agreement that $3 a week would be paid the woman in charge for her board and keep.

Mrs. Cohen, who is now receiving treatment at the general hospital here, told a pitiful story.

"When the food ran low and I complained of not having enough to eat," she said, "I was told my family wished I was dead. Once the 14-year-old son of the landlady climbed up the fire escape, thrust his head inside my window and shouted 'Fire!' hoping, I suppose, that I would jump out and kill myself. But I couldn't do that, because my father in Russia was a rabbi and I would not be buried in consecrated ground."

When Miss Endy went for Mrs. Cohen in a taxicab Mrs. Cohen cried out: "Oh, I was afraid you were one of my daughters! They think I'm insane, but I'm not."

GETS INCOME OF $160,773

Thaw's Long Fight Against Trustees Decided In His Favor

Pittsburg, July 16.—After six months of legal battle, Harry K. Thaw, in a decision handed down by Judge Over in orphans' court, is awarded the income from his father's estate which has been denied him by the trustees since he was adjudged insane after the slaying of Stanford White. By the decision Thaw gets $160,773.

Thaw is legally entitled to the money, decided Over, despite the fact that alienists declare he is suffering from an exaggerated sense of self which would make it unwise to commit any large sums of money into his personal charge.

If you are a resident of Quincy, we suggest that you patronize the merchants of your home city. Why go to Boston for goods that can be bought handily and economically here? We stand for the interests of Quincy, and like the Quincy merchants we give our customers good value. For instance a safety deposit box in our vault for $5 a year that would cost you $10 in Boston.

The Car of the American Family

Completely Equipped With Electric Starter and Lights. Oversize Tires. Demountable Rims, $1200. Prices F. O. B. Detroit.

40,000 Owner-Salesmen

Wonderful stories have come to us from dealers everywhere of the number of sales made as the result of friendly interest shown by Hup owners.

Some weeks ago we instructed Hup salesmen visiting all parts of the country to make a detailed report on this point.

These reports, covering every State in the Union, are now in our hands and they reveal an astonishing and gratifying condition.

Out of 1500 dealers more than 90 per cent. testify that the Hup owner is by far the most important factor in making new sales.

"I will have to admit it," says one big distributor, "even if it deprives me of some of the credit for this season's splendid business."

Sure of the Hup

It seems to us that nothing we might say to you about the Hup could possibly inspire you with greater confidence in the car than this attitude of Hup owners.

We do not mean to imply that other owners of other cars do not feel kindly toward those cars.

But we do believe that such wholesale and unanimous enthusiasm as this is unique.

We do believe that it is unusual for people of all sorts and conditions to go out of their way to help the Hup dealer make sales.

We are certain that they could not so commit themselves if they did not feel sure of what the Hup is and what the Hup will do.

We consider it proof positive of our repeated assertion that the root of Hup popularity is continuous service at a lesser cost.

It shows us that, almost to a man, Hup owners back us in our belief that the Hupmobile is the best car in the world in its class.

And we confidently refer you to the Hup owner and the Hup dealer in your home town.

COMMITTEES AT SQUANTUM

One Man Responsible for Condition of Each Street

An aggressive campaign for local street improvements was started at the meeting of the Squantum Improvement association at the Squantum Inn Tuesday evening. President John R. Nelson is the originator of the idea and various members voiced their approval of the plan.

President Nelson appointed committees which will have charge of improvement work on streets, the beach, and general improvements in each section of Squantum. The members appointed are to form their own committees in the immediate neighborhoods and real community improvement work will be started. The plan is to do as much work as possible on the streets, to improve the beach and to make general improvements that will make the whole of Squantum more attractive as a place of residence.

While no large work can be done on the streets, this matter being up to the City of Quincy when it accepts the streets, a lot of loose stone can be removed and the general surfacing of the street kept in better order by what work the abutters can do from time to time.

The newly elected officers of the association were in charge of the meeting. They consisted of John R. Nelson, president, James Foster, vice president; Warren Fifield, secretary; and Charles S. Bostwick, treasurer.

After some discussion it was voted to pay $10 for the use of the Squantum Inn veranda on Fourth of July night.

Complaint was made of the handling of refuse and this matter will be looked into by President Nelson and a report made at the next meeting. A vote of thanks was extended to Dr. Place for the fine display of fireworks he donated to the Fourth of July committee, and it was voted that he be placed on the roll of membership of the association. Votes of thanks were extended J. H. Loughan and T. F. Callahan for the use of their grounds on the 4th of July and to William Whitley for the use of two horses for the parade on that day.

The report of Treasurer Bostwick showed a balance in the treasury of $99.35. The secretary's report showed that 21 members had been dropped from the rolls owing to their failure to pay their dues for the past year.

James Foster made his report as chairman of the mosquito committee. It showed that $18.11 had been spent toward the extermination of mosquitoes by oil spraying. It was voted that $10 more be turned over to the committee for this work. It was estimated that $30 would cover the work for the season. Mr. Foster reported that he had made his second spraying of all pools with oil and that so far as he knew there had been no complaints of mosquitoes being a nuisance this season.

President Nelson appointed the following permanent committees:

Cities desiring tabulations for smaller areas than would ordinarily be provided, such as city blocks, may procure such tabulations at their own expense. It is also understood that some facts will be obtained relative to pensions, etc.

There is a Heap of Solace in Being Able to Depend Upon a Well-Earned Reputation.

For months Quincy readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, and read about the good work they have done in this locality. What other remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit?

Richard W. Smith, painter, 14 Blake St., Wollaston, Mass., says: "I suffered from a painful back and kidney trouble for a long time. I was so stiff on damp and rainy mornings that it was some time before I got limbered up enough to dress myself. I had a dull, heavy pain through the small of my back. Two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills fixed me up all right. I have used this remedy off and on since whenever I have needed a kidney tonic. Doan's Kidney Pills have never failed to put me in good shape. In my present work, painting, I find Doan's Kidney Pills to be just the medicine I need for keeping my kidneys in good working order. I have recommended Doan's Kidney Pills before and am glad to do so again."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Smith had. Foster- Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

The Thomas Crane Public Library has been loaned seventy-one pictures of the lower city of the great metropolis of New York, which combine views of the business section with those of the harbor. They are pictures of which the average traveller to New York has many enjoyable reminiscences.

Among the views of the business buildings are the stock exchange, cotton exchange, and the markets; yet more interesting to all travellers are the "skyscraper" office buildings, including the Trinity, Park Row and Singer buildings— and most important of all, the Fuller building, commonly called the "Flatiron" because the plot on which it stands is of flatiron shape.

Among the harbor views are those of the Statue of Liberty, New York's gift from the French government, and those of Brooklyn bridge, one of the modern wonders of the world, because of its massive steel masonry and because of its tremendous height and size, for it is the third largest suspension bridge in existence. The subtreasury, standing on solid rock and made of welded stone and iron from foundation to roof; the City Hall of carefully detailed and perfectly executed architecture; the Washington Arch the Hall of Records, the Hotels Astor and Waldorf Astoria are all examples of complete construction which give the great city distinction.

PLAYGROUND BASE BALL

Tigers Win From Red Sox at Quincy Point

The Tigers defeated the Red Sox, 6 to 5, Wednesday morning in the Ward Two playground league. The Sox could not do anything with Ryan's delivery until the sixth inning, when they got to him for three hits, one a screeching three bagger by Levinson with the bases filled. Joe, however, tightened in time and saved the game.

Gamble of the Sox pitched good ball but was given loose support at crucial times. Anderson, the winner's first sacker, made several neat pickups which saved his team mates from having errors chalked up against them.

Today the game is between the Athletics and White Sox.

QUESTION AS TO WOMAN'S DRESS

Tramp's Story In Accord With That of Carman Maid

ACCUSED "DOUBLE-CROSSED"

Statement of Husband When District Attorney Reverses Earlier Decision to Have Mrs. Carman Tell Her Story to Grand Jury—Prosecutor Said to Fear Immunity

Freeport, N. Y., July 16.—Adding another strong link to the chain of circumstantial evidence that is being wrapped about Mrs. Florence Carman, Frank Farrell, a tramp, gave important testimony before the Nassau grand jury at Mineola investigating the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey.

Farrell told the grand jury, it was learned, that he applied to the Carman home for food on June 30—the night of the murder. He said the negro maid refused his request. He was just leaving the back door, he asserted, when he heard a pistol shot. Turning around, he said he saw a woman running from the window in Dr. Carman's office—through which the fatal shot was fired—to the kitchen door.

Asked how she was dressed, Farrell told the grand jurors that as near as he could make out she wore a long white coat. He said, however, that it was dark and that he couldn't make out just what she did wear.

Mrs. Carman has maintained that she was upstairs, wearing a kimono, when the shot was fired. Celia Coleman, the negro maid who gave such damaging evidence against her, asserts Mrs. Carman rushed into the kitchen from the yard immediately after the shot was fired, fully dressed, but she did not mention her having a long cloak on. The tramp's testimony further confused the matter about the dress of the woman seen in the yard.

District Attorney Smith made it known that he had definitely decided not to call Mrs. Carman before the grand jury. Smith believes that to allow her to testify would be to grant immunity.

Mrs. Carman's attorney prepared a petition asking that body that they demand Mrs. Carman's presence on the stand. It was presented to the jury forthwith. The district attorney's decision was the occasion of a long statement by Carman.

"The district attorney has double-crossed me and my wife," he said. "The day after the dictagraph was discovered in my office he appeared and told my wife that he was there as a friend, not as an official, and that he would do everything he could for her. He assured her that if she had told him about the telephonic device on the night of the murder he would have been able to smooth the whole thing over."

There was a written sitpulation between his wife and the district attorney, according to Carman, to the effect that she would be allowed to appear before the grand jury and waive immunity. Carman said his wife's persistent faith in the district attorney, in spite of his warnings, was the cause of her present dilemma.

RASPUTIN IS RECOVERING

Says Noose Will Be Put About Necks of Heliodorus' Followers

St. Petersburg, July 16.—The Emperor of Russia's court physician, Professor Federof, and the empress' lady-in-waiting, Mlle. Virubova, started for Tyumen, Siberia, to attend the mystic lay monk and imperial confidant, Gregory Rasputin, who is suffering from a wound inflicted on him by a woman who tried to kill him.

Mme. Guseva, the would-be assassin, who is in jail, said she had long meditated killing Rasputin and thus "putting an end to the awful evil wrought by him in Russia by his impostures under the guise of a prophet."

Rasputin, in an interview, said: "It is all that cursed Heliodorus, abbot of Tsaritsyn. But to the confusion of himself and all my enemies, I will live and they will have nooses put around their necks."

Heliodorus was a great rival of Rasputin in the Rusisan capital, whence he was recently banished owing to Rasputin's influence with the emperor. Rasputin is recovering from his wound.

FOUND IN BEAR'S DEN

Wisconsin Baby Who Strayed Away Suffers Only From Hunger

Fifield, Wis., July 16.—An old black bear and her two cubs played the part of mother and playmates for Baby Hall, the 2-year-old son of a farmer living near Fifield. The little boy was found nestling up close to the cubs in their brush bed, hidden in a patch of briars.

A country-wide search had been carried on to find the child, who had been missig two days. "The big doggies play, but baby's hungry," was the greeting the little fellow gave the men who found him.

The child was starving apparently, but was not suffering from exposure. It was evident to the men who found him that he had been kept alive by the warmth of the bears' bodies.

A patch of cloth from the blue rompers he wore was found on a bush near the roadside. Investigation and a search further into the woods disclosed the bears' den and the child sleeping with two cubs.

The protracted dry weather had broken all records for forty years. The downpour, according to the reports of the chamber of commerce, saved crops in the immediate neighborhood valued at more than $1,000,000.

The Lincoln Park Baptists had devoted their Sunday services to prayer for rain, and the answer had come within twenty-four hours.

CHAMPIONS WIN BY MANY TRICKS

Boxers Resort to Various Stunts to Down Rivals.

CHOYNSKI WORKED "GAME."

Gave Tom Sharkey Double Wallop When Sailor Got Near Post—Bob Fitzsimmons Outguessed Gardner and Won With Useless Hand—Corbett Had It on Jeff.

When Cleopatra had a slave hook a smoked salmon on to Mark Antony's line, which hung over the edge of the barge, she tricked a great kidder who was making a rep as a fisherman.

We have seen and heard of champs in the ring who have been tricked the same way and shown up.

There are tricks in all trades—no lie—and the ring is simply full of tricks and tricksters.

Probably one of the cleverest stunts ever pulled off in the ring was the one

BOB FITZSIMMONS.

Joe Choynski worked on Sharkey in Frisco, and only the tar's wonderful stamina saved him.

It was at the time when Tom was a new man. He had beaten a few of the regulars, and then the big birds jumped in to try to knock him out. Alec Greggains tried it first and failed, and then Choynski agreed to stop him (Sharkey) in eight rounds.

Joe fought like a wildcat for three rounds, used everything he had and pelted him from post to post and didn't even bother him.

The posts of the ring at this time were thinly padded, and Choynski figured that if he could feint Tom over near a post, then chip him on the chin, he might be able to stop him before the eight rounds were up.

He worked it in a slick manner. He danced along until Tom was near a post, then—bang—walloped him on the chin, and Tom's head got another bang from the post. The tar was groggy and tired, but managed to come back and give Joe a terrific fight until the bell ended the eighth round.

Spider Kelly tricked Gans into allowing him to stay twenty-five rounds, when Joe should have turned the trick in six or so. He told Joe that if his friends hadn't bet that Gans would stay the limit he'd have torn in and knocked Joe cold.

Gans didn't really know whether it was on the square or not and thought more of the talk than he did of the fight. Consequently Kelly eased along until the end without being harmed a bit. The next time they met Joe plugged his ears with cotton and cleaned Kelly in no time at all.

Bob Fitzsimmons broke his hand in the fifth round of his fight with George Gardner when he knocked George down. After that his right mitt was useless, but as the gong started each round he rushed at George and swung a foot over his head. Gardner, thinking the hand was still good, ducked and clinched, while Fitz, with a big lead, eased along until the twentieth round and copped the decision.

When Jim Corbett fought Jim Jeffries at Coney Island Jeff was a young, strong and dangerous lad, while Corbett was a bit on the toboggan. He wanted to stay the twenty-five rounds and outpoint Jeff, and the only way he could do it was to keep away from mixups. At the start of each round he'd tear into Jeff, fight like a wildcat for half a minute and then stand away and feint.

Just as Jeff would get ready to lunge forward Corbett would set, make a face, and Jeff, thinking he was going to start another rally, would swing both hands with all his might and duck.

Australian Billy Murphy had the "Derby" trick of the ring. His old gag was to get into a mixup and come out of it reeling all over the ring, as though he were through. Then when the other fellow would rush in Billy would nail him with that deadly right, and it would be all over but the counting.

Darkness That Lifted

Happiness Came at Last to Middle Aged Lovers

By RALPH COBINO

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

A faint odor of lavender hung about Miss Joan Denny as she moved along the garden path.

In a subtle manner Miss Joan's appearance suggested rebellion. Even the gray coils of her hair did this. Their luxuriance resented the years which had torn gold from them.

All about her eyes and mouth ran little lines. When she laughed these lines became accentuated.

Watching herself in the glass once she had the fanciful thought that these wrinkles jeered at her, laughing when she laughed, but at her and not with her, telling her that she was just a drab little spinster.

Her arms were filled with the blooms she had gathered, and she lowered her head, resting her cheek against this mass of color.

She carried the flowers into the house, laid them on the sitting room table and fetched vases to hold them.

She heard the click of the gate. A man in clerical dress came briskly up the path, tapped at the front door. For a moment or two Miss Joan stood still, staring at the floor.

SHE WANTED TO WRITE MORE, BUT COULD NOT.

Presently, when the knocking had been repeated, she went to the front door and opened it.

"I am so glad to see you, Mr. Crayson," she said. "I hoped you would come today."

She led the way to the sitting room and drew forward a chair.

"I want so very much to talk to you," Miss Denny said. Her voice sounded young. It matched the luxuriance of her hair, not its grayness.

"I want to confess to you. You must be used to the confidences of—sinners."

Sinners! Mr. Crayson glanced about him at the room.

Intuition came to her, and she said instantly:

"You must remember that this is not my house, not my room."

"Ah, true!" He shifted his feet, obviously ill at ease.

"I am only Mr. Hadstone's housekeeper. This is his house, and it matches him."

Mr. Crayson hunted for a suitable remark.

"Mr. Hadstone is coming home again shortly, I understand. It is some weeks now, isn't it, since the operation on his eyes in Barston?"

"He returns tonight." It was astonishment that tragedy should be in her voice. She repeated "Tonight" in awed tones. Her hands gripped the arm of her chair. "Think of him with blind eyes opened."

"Good news; splendid news."

The enthusiasm in Mr. Crayson's voice seemed to come into the room as an alien thing. He realized this and stared at Miss Denny in astonishment.

She read his thoughts, answering them instantly.

"And I am sorry," she said deliberately. "That is my confession."

She leaned forward in her chair, speaking rapidly.

"One ought always to confess one's faults"—she brushed this last word aside, feeling it inadequate—"one's sin. I have deceived Mr. Hadstone. When he comes home tonight he will know. The moment he looks at me he will know."

Mr. Crayson's whole attitude voiced incredulity. She saw it, and passing humor came to her.

"I am quite sane," she assured him. Laughter left her in her next sentence. "He thinks I am young and beautiful. I—told him so once."

Mr. Crayson's eyes drooped, studying the carpet. He could not at the moment meet the gaze of this young old woman with the wrinkled face.

"I have deceived him for twelve years. You see, my voice is young and beautiful." She moved her hands as though she dismissed any hint of conceit that might lie in this sentence.

"To his ears it was something exquisite. He thought my face matched my voice. Now that his eyes are opened"—

"You want my advice?" Mr. Crayson asked when she paused.

Something hinting at hardness in his voice prompted her to say:

"If you have ever felt that your life was empty, was desolate, you will sympathize with the woman while you blame the sinner."

"There is only one course open to you," he said—"full, frank confession."

"I shall make it—in writing. And before he comes tonight I shall have—run away."

Mr. Crayson gave a slight gesture of dissent, and she said quickly:

"Oh, I can't stay to meet the fire of his eye. I can't."

"I think you owe it to Mr. Hadstone to stay. Think of his return to a desolate house! An occasion that should have been triumphant made bleak and cheerless because of your pride. That would not show contrition."

He emphasized his sentences with deliberation, and she quivered as at the cut of a whip. Mr. Crayson was not a good reader of moods, and he blundered now.

Even his sympathy was of a blundering kind. She was glad when at last he rose to go.

She felt that she led the way to the front door with barely concealed relief. She looked at the clock.

In four hours Hadstone would be back!

On the desk lay the telegram which spoke of the time of his arrival. She moved over to this desk, seated herself, took pen and paper and began to write. She wrote:

Drawn all across my face are wrinkles—dozens of them. The years have stolen all the gold from my hair. Only my heart is young. The rest of me is drab, faded. I am only a few months younger than you are. All that there is of youth in me sounds in my voice. Your ears approved me. I am going away before your eyes give the lie to your ears.

She wanted to say more, but could not. She felt her fingers weighted and the pen fell from them. She had meant to tell him that her desire to fit in with his scheme of beauty was the root from which her deceit had sprung. This little house suggested beauty.

She sealed and directed her letter and left it lying on the desk. She looked at the clock again, and at sight of the pointing hands she went hurrying to her bedroom. Her boxes were already packed. She would send for them later.

A woman from a cottage near was coming in that evening and would stay till another housekeeper could be engaged.

She moved toward the bed, her hands reaching for the hat and cloak that lay there. And with outstretched hands she suddenly stood rigid!

The front door had opened, and Hadstone's voice was in the hall!

In this moment she realized her desire for flight as she realized her breath, her sense of sight or hearing. It was part of her.

She heard Scott, the manservant, saying something about the earlier train and Miss Denny not having expected them till 7. Then the bang of a door as Scott left Hadstone and went into the kitchen.

And then presently Hadstone's voice calling her.

She felt as one caught in a trap, desiring escape and realizing that it was impossible. Hadstone, with alert eyes, was in the house.

He called again.

She answered with all the music that could travel in her voice. For this last time his ears should acknowledge beauty. He became silent when she answered, and she felt that this moment of silence was sacred. She dwelt in it, saying goodby to dreams.

Something in the tone of Hadstone's voice when he called her told her that he had not yet read her letter.

He broke the silence with a quick sentence.

"Miss Denny, are you coming?"

She must go. Not to go would be to thwart her desire for confession, to sully the reparation that was due to Hadstone. Since he had come she must face him. Her feet dragged as she went into the sitting room.

She did not look at him, felt her lids weighted. She stood still, feeling herself a penitent doing heavy penance. She was the first to speak.

"Only your ears were satisfied."

She was staring at the carpet, could not find the courage which would lift her weighted eyelids.

He repeated, "Only my ears"—

She tingled from head to foot, felt pricks of shame. Her voice stumbled.

"There is nothing to say, except forgive me."

"Nothing else?"

"All that I would say is in the letter I wrote—there behind you on the desk. I am going away."

"Read me your letter."

"Read it!" She lifted startled eyes. Hadstone had turned from her.

She thought his head averted to save her the pain of discerning eyes upon her face.

"I was going away before you came. I left the letter for you to read. It is—a confession."

"Read me your letter," he said again.

"You are cruel," she cried.

Her hands, fluttering, besought him. Her eyes dwelt entreatingly upon his averted face. She thought he devised a cruel punishment in this humiliation.

"When I am gone," she pleaded, "you will read it yourself."

"I want to hear your confession—from your own lips."

"So that your ears may keep your eyes from judging me too hardly?"

He let this pass, urging her with a gesture to obey him.

She moved slowly toward the desk and her letter. She had the thought that the fire of Hadstone's eyes when she had stood motionless before him must have burned up the youth that had been within her.

"You still insist on this"—she hesitated—"this punishment?"

"Yes," he said.

Age was not present in her voice when she began to read her letter. Her voice still held an exquisite echo of music; was vocal with suggestions of the beauty she had wanted to dwell in Hadstone's thought of her. She was doing penance for a long deceit.

Her head bowed as she read. The sentences hung faint about the room. "All that there is of youth in me sounds in my voice. Your ears approved me. I am going away before your eyes give the lie to your ears."

She heard him move. She felt, but did not see, that his eyes were on her face. She thought of her wrinkles, the crow's feet about her eyes, the hair which was gray, although luxuriant!

"Look at me," he said.

She shivered a little. He would spare her nothing. She must look, shamed, into his eyes.

"Come nearer," he said. "And now look."

She moved slowly. She counted to herself, fighting her fear. Reaching twenty, she lifted heavy eyelids. She moved still closer. Suddenly she realized that his eyes went past her, vague, sightless things.

"The operation was not successful," he told her. "And—I did not tell you. I kept silence."

"Why?" she asked. "Why?"

"Because I wanted you to make confession."

"A blind man has intuitions. You remember the night when I asked you to describe your face to me? Something in the tone of your voice told me that you"—

"Spoke lies," she interrupted. "You desired beautiful things, and I wanted even your housekeeper to seem beautiful to you."

"She did," Hadstone said. "I loved her."

She drew a long breath.

"You see, after all, she never existed." She said this in a hushed voice. "There was only a plain woman, nearly your own age, with wrinkles and gray hair."

"That was all," Hadstone said. "And yet I loved her. It was because I loved her that I wanted the darkness to be lifted." He touched his eyes. "I don't mean this darkness. I mean the darkness of"—

"Deceit." Again she filled his pause. "Oh, I must tell you everything. Listen." She spoke with a passionate desire for self abasement. "I was not even glad to think of you with seeing eyes. When you told me you intended to have an operation I thought of it as the end of happiness."

In the silence that followed she glanced with dimmed eyes about the room. She felt that this place held her secret, knew that she loved Hadstone. She was stabbed with the thought that she had forfeited even his respect. To be despised by Hadstone! She said in a low voice:

"Forgive me if you can. And—goodby."

She turned and went stumbling toward the door. Her hands fumbled with the doorknob. She was stunned with the realization that the thing she had craved—Hadstone's love—might have been hers, but for her deceit. Could love live when it knew itself deceived?

"YOU STILL INSIST ON THIS"— SHE HESITATED, "THIS PUNISHMENT?"

She heard Hadstone's steps upon the floor, was conscious of his outstretched hands seeking her. She stood very still against the door. At touch of his fingers on her arm she quivered.

"John," he said. His groping fingers found her hands, held them. "Never mind the wrinkles and gray hair. They never mattered. It was the fact that you could not trust me. That was the darkness between us—a worse one than blindness." He lifted her hands to his lips. "Now that the darkness has lifted I can tell you that I love you, Joan."

"Even though I am your own age and not beautiful?"

"Even so," he told her.

He bent his head and kissed her. His lips touched tenderly her wrinkled face. Little white strands of her hair brushed his cheek.

They stood there silent in this breathless moment. Age tried to cheat them of ecstasy, but the eternal youth in them laughed at the years!

NEWSY BRIEFS

Mr. Charles H. Field of 43 Pleasant street, left Wednesday for a few days visit with his nephew in Brockeon.

Miss Jean Cramond of Intervale street, South Quincy, is enjoying a visit with relatives in Norwood.

Miss Matilda Bushman of Toledo, Ohio, is visiting Mrs. Fred L. Breslyn of Merrymount road. Before returning she will be the guest of Mrs. Carl H. Homer at Prouts Neck.

At the session of the Plymouth county probate court at Plymouth on Tuesday Edward B. White of Quincy was appointed with David A. Irwin of Rockland, administrator of the estate of Albert H. White of Whitman.

Rev. E. C. Pollard, the pastor of the Atlantic Methodist church, has been granted a four weeks' vacation, and will leave July 21 for West Port Junction on the coast of Maine. His pulpit will be supplied by University students.

Another hot day with temperature at noon at the 81 degree point. What makes the heat a little more oppressive is the high humidity. For a time this morning the wind got around to the easterly quarter but it only remained there a short time.

A real estate office is being built at Washington Park, the land owned by Messrs. Hatchard & Spaulding at the Quincy-Braintree line on Independence avenue, and streets will be made at once. Two or three house lots have been sold and houses will be built directly.

UNDER DUBUQUE LAW.

The Dubuque law, so called, came near being enforced by imprisonment in the District court this morning. Judgment had been obtained last year by a nurse against a man whose wife she had cared for and later she cited him under this law. This morning the debtor had not paid and his honor gave him until twelve o'clock in which to pay the money or be committed for seven days. The money was paid. The case was then continued to Oct. 6.

NEW INDUSTRY FOR THE CITY

Leatherette Company as Welcome As Some Others

A party who is in a position to know, says that during the past week there have been two large manufacturing concerns in Quincy seeking a water front location. Each of these firms desires about ten acres facing the water front. They have been offered some sites which they now have under consideration. At the present time however the name of the concerns and their business is not to be made public.

In relation to the establishment of the Leatherette Co., from Weymouth, about which there has been considerable talk it has been learned from reliable sources that there is not the opposition from the District Police that, has been stated. While it is true that the material used in the manufacture of the company's product is very inflammable, it would be no more dangerous than other business enterprise in Quincy, as it would be located in an iron building, and situated some distance from surroundings, which would eliminate the fire danger to a minimum. Those in position to know say that the fire danger would not be as hazardous as was the Angier Mills which were located at Wollaston for a number of years.

ARTIST AGAIN TO PROVE GREAT

Will Kill the Meat He Eats, Fashion the Clothes He Wears.

ENTER WILDS TO STRENGTH OF MAN

To Make Paper on Which He'll Write Experiences and Draw Illustrations.

JOSEPH KNOWLES, he of atavic understanding, was a Denver visitor recently. The name is fresh in the world's mind. It was Joseph Knowles who did what modern man, fettered by modern conveniences, conventions and ease of living, declared could not be done. He returned to the primitive, lived two months in the deep wilderness of the Maine woods as our primitive ancestors lived and emerged none the worse for wear, upsetting theories and beliefs the modern world had, in the blindness of modern life, maintained. His experiences are vividly told in "Alone In the Wilderness."

That was last October, and now Knowles is on his way to California to plunge into the wilderness again for two months. In Shasta county, approximately 116 miles from San Francisco, he is going to leave civilization and, without clothes, without a pack or a bag or human utilities of any kind other than those nature blessed him with, is going to live as our forefathers away back there in dim obscurity, lived, says Richard Milton in the Rocky Mountain News of Denver.

[From "Alone In the Wilderness."]
JOSEPH KNOWLES.

He is going to kill the meat he eats. He is going to fashion the clothes he wears. He is going to depend absolutely again on his own resourcefulness, his own knowledge of the wilds and his own ingenuity.

And he hopes to prove even more than he proved by his last adventure, he says. This time he means to find the ways and means for manufacturing things he requires.

Will Show Man Can Advance.

Knowles means to prove to the world that man not only can sustain life alone, unserved by modern conveniences, but can advance to a higher plane, solve the intricacies of nature and take from her all that he needs to maintain an even higher existence than mere eating and breathing and having being.

Knowles is a scientist, an artist and a writer. He lives in Boston. One night nearly a year ago he was sitting with a group of friends in his Boston club. They were talking of the ease of modern living, with its modes of transportation, its means of communication, the wireless, the telegraph. The wonders of the modern age were talked of from every angle, and interlarding the conversation often were comparisons of the life today to that of other generations.

Knowles ventured the belief, rather asserted the knowledge, that man today, robbed of all those aids to comfortable living, could rise above his deprivation and sustain life after some fashion or other. They laughed at him. He repeated his assertion and followed it up with the threat that if they persisted in their nonbelief he would go on and prove it to them just to show them they didn't know what they were talking about.

It ended in their escorting him to the edge of the great Maine woods in the Dead river region, near Somerset. Divested of all clothing, holding nothing in his hands, he bade them goodby and plunged into the darkness of the woods. They did not see him again for sixty-one days.

Then he emerged clad in bearskin, and from bare skin to bearskin he had lived as no modern man has lived. Alone in the great, silent woods he fought for his food.

Lays Trap For a Bear.

He killed a bear by digging a trench, letting the bear fall into it and then clubbing it to death. He lived on berries and on meat of wild animals he killed.

He built his fire in the primitive way, rubbing sticks together until sparks flew. He fashioned a home of twigs. He braved the wild animals, made them his friends, clothed himself, found comfort in smoking the leaves of trees in place of his much loved cigarette and amused himself by writing his experiences and illustrating them with charcoal on bark he took from trees.

His story was printed all over the world. Before he emerged there were many conjectures. Scientists said he had undertaken the impossible; that man too long had been accustomed to conditions of the present. Others declared he either had been or would be killed by wild animals. The Maine woods are full of them. Few believed he would remain the full two months and come out alive.

Knowles had been a hunter and trapper and guide in the Maine woods in his younger days. He knew them well. He loved animals and could make them his friends. And he came forth in triumph.

"My greatest suffering came from loneliness," he says. "After the first two or three weeks, after I had accustomed myself to my surroundings and the novelty had worn off, I felt a great longing for the sight of a human face.

"It haunted me, that desire, and I dreamed every night of being back among my fellow men, back in communion with those of my kind. It was like an awful thirst. I never wanted to see anything so badly in my life as I did a human. The lowliest newsboy on a city's street, the vilest outcast of society, I would have greeted as a long lost brother."

Any one talking with Joseph Knowles can realize his need of human companionship. He is a companionable sort of man. Big and muscular, with pleasing blue eyes and iron gray, thick hair, he clasps your hand with a real man's clasp and says "Howdy" with a real man's smile. He is not the kind for keeping to himself, away from the haunts of men.

Calls Salt Unnecessary.

While he was about it Knowles shattered another institution of modern men, or, for that matter, of ages agone—that ingrained belief that man must have salt or die. Knowles says man does not need salt, and in that he treads heavily on the toes of most physicians.

Knowles had no salt when he went into the Maine woods. He found none there. But he lived and says he could have kept on living without it.

"I found that food did not taste so good without salt seasoning," he said, "but I found that I did not need it. There is sufficient salt in the food we eat and sufficient created in our bodies to supply our needs. I found out after I came out of the woods that there is a tribe in Siberia that has no word for salt. It is entirely unknown to them."

Knowles had only one object in view when he went into the Maine woods. That was to prove that man could exist away from mankind, without the aid of man's variety of helps to living, without the things man believes he cannot possibly do without. When he goes into the California wilderness, where he has never been and therefore is not familiar with, he means to go a step farther.

Wants to Prove Independence.

"This time I want not only to live, but I want to do something worth while, to accomplish something besides existence," he said. "I want to prove that man is not the dependable creature he believes himself to be; that if he has to begin all over again, if he has to start as primitive man started, he can rise above his circumstances and grow.

"I mean to manufacture for myself clothing of a finer grade than uncured bearskin. I mean to manufacture from pulp I make myself paper on which I will write my experiences and draw my illustrations. I mean to draw those illustrations in colors, painting them in with colors and brushes I manufacture myself.

"I mean to build myself a house and furniture. On the last day I mean to invite all who so desire to come into the woods. I will have a banquet set there on a big table I have made myself, and the banquet menu will have all the things I have been eating. And I mean that it will be a real, well cooked, enjoyable meal."

Knowles impresses one as being able to do as he says he will. He says that if there is the slightest chance of failure he will be out of the woods in a week. He won't stay in there to die.

As he did in the Maine woods, he will communicate with no living creature while at his self imposed task.

He will bring to some spot at the edge of the woods each week his story of his experience. But, as it was in the Maine woods, no man or woman will see him, and he will not see them or have conversation with them. He will live alone, with only his wild creatures to talk with.

Extracts from Knowles' diary on the occasion of his last reversion to nature are interesting at this time.

Writes Messages on Bark.

"The lining bark of trees is the most useful thing I have," he says in his diary. "There seems to be no limit to the variety of uses it can be adapted to. When twisted it is firm and pliable and can be woven into almost any form.

"I am making a pair of moccasins of this material. I also have a pair of leggings, or chaps, that fasten to a belt around my waist.

"The leggings and belt are both made of lining bark of the cedar. They are much lighter than rawhide and quite pliable.

"When my shirt of bark is completed I shall have no fear of meeting strangers on the trails."

Written on birch bark with the charcoal which he gathered up from his evening fire were the other messages from a wilderness which seemed almost primeval to hear him describe it:

"The beginning of my second week in the woods finds me located in my permanent camp. For three days I have been stripping bark from trees, exploring and working on my new camp.

"Each morning I cut a notch with my stone ax in a sapling, which is my calendar. I added the seventh notch today.

"My new camp is larger than the two temporary shacks I built last week and is more cheerfully situated.

"For the frame of the camp I used sticks withed together. The roof is covered with birch bark, and the walls are chinked with moss. Inside I have a bed of fir boughs covered with moss and dry leaves.

"As yet I have no skins for covering at night, but my fire is so arranged that it burns all night, throwing out an even heat and keeping the mosquitoes on the outside. In this way I pass a comfortable night and get all the sleep I require."

Trap to Catch Animals.

Having promised to come back in clothes which would be fit for winter wear Mr. Knowles thought he had best set about making some sort of a trap to catch the fur animals.

"A yearling bear fell a victim to my pitfall last night," he says. "I looked at the pit yesterday and nothing had passed on the trail leading to the trap. This pitfall is about a mile from my camp in a berry country, where the bears are feeding at this time of the year.

[From "Alone In the Wilderness."]
JOSEPH KNOWLES AS HE EMERGED FROM MAINE WOODS CLAD IN SKIN OF BEAR HE KILLED.

"I was returning to camp near night fall when I heard a crash in the direction of the trap. I listened for another sound, but heard none, so I decided I had started a bear.

"When a bear is suddenly started he usually makes one bound and then creeps away quietly, while a deer when started will continue to run regardless of the noise it is making until out of danger.

"The one bound led me to believe this animal was a bear, but as it was growing dark and I had about a mile to go before reaching camp I did not bother to look at the trap the second time.

"As I thought it over last night I decided to visit the trap in the morning. I was up early and off to the pitfall.

Kills Bear With a Club.

"There was my bear, tearing around and pacing back and forth at the bottom of the pit. The more he would dig at the bottom the more secure the pit became and the less his chances to scale the sides.

"When I attempted to stir him with a pole he did not show a friendly disposition. He stood up on his hind legs and with one blow of his paw knocked it out of my hand. I was glad it was the pole and not me that received that blow.

"Now that I had the bear, the next thing was to kill him. If he had been a young cub I would have tried to bring him to my camp and tame him. But this yearling was too husky for one man to handle, and he was beyond the tamage age. So I decided to settle with him in the pit and take no further chances.

"I secured a stout club and, leaning down over the pit, awaited my opportunity. Once in the mixup the rim of the pit crumbled under my feet, and I nearly fell into the pit with the bear. I finally landed a blow on the bear's head that put an end to him."

An effort is pleasing in proportion as it is attained by little effort and simple means.

Life is but a succession of opportunities. They are good or evil as we make them.—Jordan.

SOME FISH DISHES.

Fish is a food which is easily digested and is good for indoor workers on that account.

Halibut Steak.—Make a rich sauce of tomatoes thickened with flour and butter cooked together, a chopped green pepper and a slice of onion cooked to season, for 15 minutes. Lay the halibut in a little oil and vinegar, and let stand for an hour. Lay the fish on the rack in the roaster, pour the sauce over it, cover and bake 12 minutes. Sift Parmesan cheese over the fish and cook five minutes longer. Serve upon a hot dish, pouring the sauce over it.

Sour cucumber pickles cut in bits and added to a white sauce is a good sauce to serve with fish.

Curry of Salmon.—Open a can of salmon two hours before using and remove all the bits of bone and skin. Fry a minced onion in two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and then add a tablespoonful of flour mixed with a tablespoonful of curry, and when well blended a cupful of boiling water. Season and stir for a moment, then turn in the salmon. When hot serve with lemon.

Salmon Loaf.—Flake cold boiled salmon and moisten with a half cupful of cream, the same amount of milk and two beaten eggs. Stir in a quarter of a cupful of fine breadcrumbs, the juice of half a lemon, a tablespoonful of butter, salt and pepper to taste, and a spoonful of minced parsley. Mix well and turn into a well greased pudding dish and bake for three-quarters of an hour, then turn out on a platter. Serve with a fine sauce.

Fish Bisque.—Pick up and free from bones, any fish, baked, broiled or boiled, pour over it a pint of oyster liquor, and butter, pepper and salt, and put over the fire, stir in a cupful of bread crumbs soaked in milk, simmer for three minutes and serve. Bearnaise sauce to serve with fish is one well liked. Beat the yolks of two eggs, stir in a few drops at a time, three tablespoonfuls of oil, cook over water, add three tablespoonfuls of boiling water, a tablespoonful of lemon juice, a dash of salt and cayenne.

MID-SUMMER MAGAZINE.

In the August Woman's Home Companion appear photographs of 17 babies who, out of 100,000 examined at the Better Babies contests, were the only ones marked 100 by the physicians in charge. All of these children were examined and graded according to the Woman's Home Companion standard score-card adopted for use in all Better Babies contests.

Other interesting special contributions to the August number are "Good times That Cost Next to Nothing," being accounts of happy vacations spent by resourceful persons who are willing to pass their ideas on to others. The regular Fashion, Cooking, Housekeeping and Young People's departments are filled with splendid suggestions peculiarly valuable in summer.

An excellent index of the business growth of any city or town is the postal receipts. The above figures announced by Postmaster Mansfield of the Boston postal district show the rapid gain that is being made in this city.

The receipts of the Quincy post office for the year ending June 30, 1914, were $55,753.56, an increase of $2,725.96 in one year.

The receipts of the Wollaston branch were $10,635.03, an increase of $1,525.58.

The receipts of the Atlantic branch were 9,788.65, an increase of $2,174.25.

The total increase for the three Quincy post offices was $6,426.80 in one year.

In the Boston postal district there are 75 offices and only 19 of these had larger receipts than the Quincy office without Wolaston and Atlantic.

Ten of the officers report a decrease, viz: Cambridge, Station A of Boston, Brookline, Dorchester, East Milton, Medford, Somerville Readville, Winter Hill and Weymouth.

Some of the offices about the size of Quincy in receipts are:

CITY SQUARE ACCIDENT.

A bad acident was narrowly averted this morning in front of the Central building in City Square. A gang of workmen were engaged in removing one of the large poles on the edge of the sidewalk and while at work Mrs. Sydney Hardwick drove up to the sidewalk. The horse became somewhat frightened and rearing backed the buggy into a heavy team of E. V. Fitts which was just driving into the alleyway leading to the rear of the Welch building. The rear axle of the buggy of Mrs. Hardwick was smashed and bystanders grabbed the horse before he did any further damage.

MAY ACCEPT SECOND PLACE

Col. Kindaide Favors Joseph Walker for Governor

Joseph Walker seeks the governorship on the Progressive ticket, and will be elected according to Col. Henry L. Kincaide, a member of the committee which sought to have Charles Sumner Bird run a third time and who was mentioned as one of the possibilities in the event of Mr. Walker declining to head the ticket.

Colonel Kincaide, Quincy's "live wire," several days ago refused to consider the Progressive nomination for governor. The past few days his mail has been flooded, his telephone has been busy, callers have been numerous, all urging him to run for the second place on the ticket with Mr. Walker.

Colonel Kincaide has made no definite announcement as to his position and will not for at least a month. Many feel he will enter the congressional race, but because of the uncertainty that prevails more than seven known candidates have witheld making their announcement.

Men well known in public life, who live in the vicinity of Brockton, have been here the past few days trying to learn what the attitude of Colonel Kincaide will be, intending to guide their future course on this information, but they fouud no one in authority to make a definite statement, and Col. Kincaide is non-committal.

WORTHY OF COMMENDATION

All Up for the Women of the Quincy Clubs

Editor Daily Ledger:

The hearty co-operation of Quincy's Women's Clubs in swelling the Quincy Salem Relief Fund by the most successful Tag Day inaugurated and entirely carried out by them on Saturday last is worthy the commendation of all who have our city's welfare at heart.

The manner in which they responded to the call for assistance; their ready willingness and their excellent carrying through of their plans, entitles those in charge as also those who so ably and enthusiastically gave of their time and effort, to the thanks of every resident of Quincy.

And those who contributed should not be forgotten either. The result was splendid. Who dares say Quincy is not alive to the issue?

All up for the women of Quincy's clubs.

Very sincerely and appreciatively,
John L. Hamilton.

BIG BLAZE FOR SMALL BUILDING

Shed on Del'orf Street a Total Loss at 2.15 A. M.

The alarm from Box 21 at 2.15 this morning was for a lively blaze in a large shed on Deldorf street, owned by Nels Loddengard. The building was used for storage although at the time there was but little in it. The fire had made a good start before it was discovered and when the department arrived it was all ablaze from top to bottom. A stream of water, however, soon had the fire under control, although there is but little left of the building.

The owner told Chief Billings that the building was insured for $200 and it will be a total loss. Just how the fire started is a mystery although the owner is inclined to believe it to have been the work of an incendiary. It was told the Chief that Mr. Loddengard's daughter heard someone about the yard earlier in the night.

Fortunately there was but little wind so that the flames and sparks went up straight into the air. Had there been a high wind, some of the adjoining buildings would have taken fire.

MOTOR CYCLE AND AUTO IN COLLISION

Later Runs Wild and Dashes Over Fence and Alongside a Wall

Cyclist Thrown in Air But Escaped Injury

Two men in an automobile were given a wild ride over a fence, alongside a wall and landed 60 feet away in a hollow in East Milton at 6 o'clock Thursday evening, when their machine skidded after colliding with a motor cycle at Granite avenue and Squantum street.

Reginald Smith of 322 Hancock street, Atlantic, who was operating the motorcycle was tossed ten feet in the air, and landed on his shoulder. He escaped injury but sustained minor bruises about the body. His vehicle was wrecked.

The auto skidded a distance of ten feet and left the street. In its course it struck a fence bounced off a stone wall and landed in a hollow fully 60 feet away from the scene of the collision. It came to a dead stop when the forward wheel collappsed and the front axle parted. The men in the machine were thrown out and were badly cut and bruised.

The noise caused by the machines aroused the neighborhood, and a call was sent out for doctors. Patrolman James Travers of East Milton arrived in a machine, less than a minute after the accident occurred. He secured his detail for a police report.

A. B. Church of Atlantic who accompanied Smith on another motorcycle got together the remains of the wrecked motorcycle, and it was taken to Atlantic on a passing auto truck. The auto was pulled to the street with the assistance of horses and men and taken to a garage.

The operators of both machines have lodged complaints against each other, and the Massachusetts Highway Commission are making an investigation.

HAD NO BATHHOUSE.

Thomas Cooper of Walnut street, Atlantic, was brought into court this morning by one of the park officers for going in bathing on the reservation without the necessary garments. It seems that Cooper had on a bathing suit when in the water but took it off when he came out, with only what shelter a small boat could afford. On account of his age the court, although finding him guilty, placed the case on file. Cooper is the man who testified in the Vaughn hearing that Mrs. Vaughn would not allow him to take a bath when he wanted to.

TO CO-OPERATE WITH THE CITY

In Extermination of Gypsy Moths and Pests

William L. Hamel of Philadelphia, Penn., has been appointed field secretary of the Massachusetts Forestry Association and has been assigned to the Quincy district and the South Shore. Mr. Hamel arrived here a few days ago to commence his work in connection with the forest conservation and the extermination of the various pests that menace the community.

The association, organized in 1898 for the purpose of aiding the state in forestry work has a membership of 3600 people. Through its efforts three bills were passed by the last legislature of interest to the people of this district.

The slash law, the first of its kind written on the records of the state, provides for the cutting of the brush along state highways so that they will have a 40 foot width.

The tax bill makes the equalization of taxes on watersheds and waste land more equitable.

The state forest bill directs the expenditure of an appropriation of $60,000 by a commission, the duty of which will be to purchase waste land throughout the commonwealth at not more than $5 per acre for the purpose of re-foresting.

Mr. Hamel will in a few days open a local office where landowners can consult with him on the general proposition of beautification of property and its protection from pests, etc.

He is to co-operate with the city in the extermination of gypsy moths and the mosquito pest. After a tour he said hundreds of breeding places existed and that the only real attempt at extermination that came to his attention was in Squantum.

Mr. Hamel is a college man and has had a long experience in connection with conservation work.

NEW DEACONESS.

Mrs. Lawrence Duncan (Jane D. Murdock) for several years a deaconess of Bethany Congregational church has resigned, and at a special meeting Thursday evening Mrs. Frank L. Carlton was elected. Others on the board are: Mrs. Fairvilla A. Branch, Mrs. Margaret Laing, Mrs. Elizabeth A. Williams, Mrs. Florence A. Swingle, and Mrs. Mary A. Melcher

WHY NOT IN QUINCY?

Is there in Quincy such a tract of land as the State Board of Education desires for a new site for the Massachusetts Normal Art school to be located in the Metropolitan district? An area of about 900,000 square feet is wanted, or about 1200 feet by 800 feet. Perhaps there is such an area on Adams street, or on Beale street near Third hill.

The invitation for proposals says no tracts will be considered unless located near enough to the centre of the metropolitan district of Boston as to assure comparatively easy access. Preferably they should be within the limits of five-cent fares. It is desirable that tracts offered shall be directly on through trolley lines; reasonably close to a railway station; and if possible so situated that a spur track may be run from the steam road to the coal pockets of the future heating and power plant of the School. Tracts offered should be in an area in which dignified buildings would find suitable environment and toward which day and night students would be equally attracted.

A NEW WEAPON.

In the Freport, N. Y., murder case, now prominently before the public, the most sensational element is the evidence that a wife installed a telephonic device in the walls of her husband's office, to catch conversations between him and women patients.

Devices of this kind have reached a point where their use seems likely to become more or less common. The world becomes a whispering gallery where intrusive ears will catch many damaging secrets. It may be said that if people had nothing to conceal, they would never suffer. Yet who is there whose secrets might be revealed without damage?

This new power may yet figure in business rivalries. The competitor of the future may employ spies to place listening devices in the walls of rival business offices. The records of such an instrument would be worth a great deal of money. This is a scientific discovery that will need very careful regulation as it becomes common.

RECOGNITION TO BE DEFERRED

If Rebels Insist Upon a Forcible Entry Into Mexico City

CARBAJAL A TRANSFER AGENT

Already Preparing For Transition of Government—Uncertainty as to Attitude of Villa Causes Speculation—American Troops Will Not Leave Vera Cruz Until Peace Is Restored

Washington, July 17.—The United States instructed John R. Stillman, American consul at Saltillo, to inform General Carranza that if he arrives at a peaceful agreement with the Carbajal government for the transfer of powers at Mexico City, recognition will be extended to the resultant administration.

Should Carranza refuse to complete the settlement of the internal conflict by diplomatic means and insist on a forcible entry into Mexico City, recognition will be deferred until there is a legal election.

American forces, according to present plans, will not be withdrawn from Vera Cruz until a government is recognized. The determination was reached by President Wilson and Secretary Bryan, after the viewpoint of the South American mediators was laid before them.

Under the terms of a protocol, signed at Niagara Falls, the United States, Argentina, Brazil and Chile, went on record promising recognition to the government set up by any agreement between the two Mexican factions. To vitalize that protocol the Washington government and the mediators now are bending their efforts.

The first move toward effecting a transfer of government to the constitutionalists already has been taken by Provisional President Carbajal. The three peace commissioners—on their way to confer with Carranza of his division commander, General Obregon—are thoroughly constitutionalist in their political beliefs and were conspicuous members of the Maderista party. They also are close personal friends of Carbajal.

He has sent them to confer with the constitutionalist chief because he believes they can obtain satisfactory terms for the transition of the government. Minister Saurez of Chile said it was his belief that Carbajal merely wanted guarantees that the lives and property of the people in federal territory would be conserved through a general amnesty proclamation. When that was arranged he believed a transition would be promtply effected.

Rafael Zuberean and Luis Cabrera, two of Carranza's representatives in Washington, said they were unaware what would be the next move in the situation, but thought the sending of the Carbajal commission to confer with Carranza probably would have tangible results.

The only cloud on the horizon of peace in Mexico is the uncertainty about the attitude of General Villa. Information from reliable sources is that he is concentrating his forces in Chihuahua and northern Mexico, so as to make vigorous demands on Carranza. It is reported that when the conference of generals is called at Mexico City after Carranza enters there Villa adherents may attempt to substitute another first chief for Carranza.

Constitutionalists with Carranza sympaties make no secret of the fact that they are apprehensive of Villa's attitude. For that reason they are working hard to obtain recognition for Carranza's government, so that the embargo on arms may be sharply enforced along the border and any counter-revolution nipped in the incipient stage.

The expectation of the administration is that arrangements will be made for the peaceful entry of the constitutionalists into Mexico City in case Carranza and his generals finally refuse to accept Carbajal pending the holding of an election.

President Wilson believes other nations will not recognize any new government until the United States has indicated its attitude. For that reason he thinks the constitutionalists will be very careful in their procedure. The president is understood to have no objection to Carbajal except on the score that he derived his power from Huerta and is willing to accept him, if the constitutionalists will agree, as provisional president, until elections.

White House officials are confident that the constitutionalists will be temperate in their acts when they enter Mexico City. They believe there is no danger of wholesale killing or looting.

Meanwhile, the American warships will stand by in the harbor of Vera Cruz and General Funston's troops will continue their administration of the port until peace is restored in the war-worn republic.

ON BRITISH WARSHIP

Huerta Family Party Will Soon Be Followed by Dictator

Puerto Mexico, July 17.—Senora Huerta, with her two sons, Jorge and Victor, and their wives, and her two daughters, and Senora Blanquet, wife of the former war minister, and other distinguished refugees, arrived here by special train from the Mexican capital.

The women of the party boarded the British cruiser Bristol and should there be the least indication of a disturbance—something which now appears remote—the men of the party also will be quartered either on the Bristol or on the German cruiser Dresden.

It is announced unofficially that another British warship is on the way to Puerta Mexico from Vera Cruz, and it is reported that both British and German vessels will play parts in the removal from Mexico of the Huerta and Blanquet families.

The arrival at Puerto Mexico of the ex-president and the ex-war minister is looked for today. It is expected they will ask the Dresden and Bristol to carry the refugees to some neutral port, where they can transfer to a regular steamer for Europe. The next steamer scheduled to sail from this port for a European port is the Buenos Aires, and she is not due here until July 22. It is thought Huerta will not care to wait that length of time.

NO MORE FIGHTING

Carranza Will Negotiate For Peaceful Entry Into Mexico City

Monterey, Mex., July 17.—Fighting by constitutionalists is over in Mexico, if plans announced here by General Carranza go into effect.

Carranza declared his main object now would be to conduct negotiations for the constitutionalists to enter Mexico City and establish their government without further bloodshed or danger to property.

BEVERLY MURDER FUGITIVES CAUGHT

Alleged Slayers of Barleto Are Trailed to New Jersey

Beverly, Mass., July 17.—Police Chief Woodberry received telegraphic announcement from Princeton, N. J., of the capture there of Mrs. Virginia Barleto and Galetano Givaio, both charged with murder of Mrs. Barleto's husband, Gaetano Barleto, of this city.

The two were trailed to New Jersey through a letter Givaio wrote his wife here. Patrolman Welch and a state officer have been in pursuit.

The Barletos boarded with the Givaios. On July 9 Barleto was found stabbed to death in Foster's Grove, Montserrat.

The assassin fired from ambush. He then stole a boat and rowed to the Ohio side. A posse is in pursuit.

Collision Kills Aviator

Schwerin, Ger., July 17.—Karl Geigant, a German aviator, died from injuries received in a collision between aeroplanes as he was starting on a flight.

"Why do you speak of him as a finished artist?"

"Because he told me he was utterly discouraged and was going to quit the profession. If that doesn't show that he's finished I don't know what does."—Chicago Post.

MRS. CARMAN IS INDICTED

Arraignment on Manslaughter Charge Is Delayed

SURE OF FREEDOM ON BAIL

Accused Woman and Husband Reject Proposal to Enter Plea of Guilty and Tell Story of Domestic Troubles With Hint That Case Might Be Filed by District Attorney

Freeport, N. Y., July 17.—Florence Carman was indicted for manslaughter in the first degree by the Nashua county grand jury, sitting at Mineola. The jury reached a decision after two hours' deliberation.

The original plan was to present the indictment at once, but after a telephone communication with Supreme Court Justice Van Sicklen at Jamaica it was learned that he could not reach Mineola to receive the jury's findings, so the formal presentment will not be made until this afternoon.

Mrs. Carman will be arraigned immediately afterward and will plead not guilty. Her trial will be fixed for the September sitting of the supreme court at Mineola. Her counsel will straightaway ask for her liberty under bail, and unless present indications miscarry the request will be granted.

An effort was made to get Mrs. Carman to agree to plead guilty to the charge of manslaughter, and tell the entire story of her family differences, with the hint that the district attorney might consent to put her case on file without sentence.

Both Dr. and Mrs. Carman refused to agree to the proposal, on the ground that Mrs. Carman could not plead guilty to a crime she did not commit.

Manslaughter in the first degree is punishable by imprisonment for a term of not exceeding twenty years. It will be possible, however, for the jury that tries her to bring in a verdict of manslaughter in the second degree. Such a crime is punishable by imprisonment for a term not exceeding fifteen years or a fine not exceeding $1000.

It is pretty certain that Mrs. Carman will be back in her home this evening and to all intents and purposes a free woman. The indictment has not ruffled her composure any more than did the ordeal of testifying at the coroner's inquest. But Carman is apparently on the verge of breaking down.

There is no doubt but that news of the indictment was a shock to Mrs. Carman. She had not expected it. Her husband had repeatedly told her she would be set free, and her lawyer had said the same thing.

MAY BE MURDER VICTIM

Body of Woman Found In Water In a Boston Suburb

Boston, July 17.—Mystery surrounding the identity of a smartly-dressed woman found dead in the water at Winthrop was cleared up when she was identified as one who had given her name as Viola P. Walton to a private at Fort Heath.

Whether she was murdered or met death by accident is still a question, but the bruises on her forehead and cheek were made before death, and death was by drowning, according to Medical Examiner Leary. "It looks like a murder," said Leary after the autopsy.

The fact that all the identification marks, maker's name, etc., on her clothing had been removed, apparently with a penknife, and that her undergarments were torn and discolored, adds to the murder theory.

JUDGE SNEERS AT NAVY

Officer Objected to Use of the Service "as a Penal Institution"

Portland, Ore., July 17.—Circuit Judge Kavanaugh recently paroled Chester Clark, convicted of larceny, to enlistment in the navy in lieu of a prison term.

Lieutenant Smith of the Portland recruiting office rejected Clark and rebuked Kavanaugh in a letter in which he pointed out the court's action was derogatory to the men and the service, adding that the navy "does not serve the country as a penal institution."

Kavanaugh replied in a caustic note, scoring the "youthful enthusiasm" of the officer. The correspondence will be sent to the navy department at Washington.

TWINS CUT APART

Difficult Operation Performed on French Freak of Nature

Paris, July 17.—The two sisters who were born May 22, joined together back to back, being united in the lumbar region, were cut apart by Dr. Mignot, assisted by Dr. Du Bouchet, chief surgeon of the American hospital.

The most delicate part of the operation was the dissection of the intestines which at one point were united for a space of an inch and a quarter.

New York, July 17.—William Rockefeller's seat on the New York stock exchange was posted for transfer to his son, Percy A. Rockefeller.

IT IS SAID ABOUT QUINCY

That the view obtained from the summit of Third hill, Wollaston is not surpassed anywhere in the state.

That no pay rolls will be hung up while City Clerk Crane is acting Mayor.

That Jim Murary has his hands full on Sundays and holidays keeping the hundreds of passing automobiles from running down people on the crossings in City Square.

That it would be a good idea to replace those old elm trees in the First church yard with trees that do not so readily succumb to the ravishes of the pests.

That City Square resembles a Sunday on Wednesday afternoons when all of the stores are closed.

That there will be no end of candidates seeking the election of Mayor the coming December election.

That the Quincy Yacht club in its ladies' day arrangements sets a good example for the other clubs of the city to follow.

That there are many places of historic interest in and about Quincy which some of our later residents have never seen, which people from other states travel many miles to see.

That the sight of the hundreds of bathers on Wollaston beach at high water emphasizes the fact that a State bath house is necessary at this point.

That the cool weather the early part of the month had the effect of keeping the many species of garden pests in check.

That Mayor Miller has well earned a good long vacation, after a strenuous six months work.

That the assessors will not be the most popular people in Quincy after the tax rate is announced.

That many a mother offers up a vote of thanks that the prospects of her son being sent to Mexi coto fight are growing slimmer every day.

That the benefit some people were arranging for Eddie Gisburne seems to have struck a snag somewhere.

That Charles H. Johnson did a wise thing in refusing to mix into an internal fight of the Democratic City committee.

That is is about time the Board of Trade announced that field day that was voted at the last meeting.

That in the end the city may have to pay Mr. Vaughn his salary from the time he was ousted from office last April ;thus giving him a long vacation at the expense of the city.

That there is no hurry at the present time to start on removal of snow plans.

That people who think this is hot weather should work in the fire room of a steamship for a little while. Perhaps they would change their minds.

That in the few brief months the City Council was in session this year it voted to expend considerable money.

OF COURSE QUINCY'S IN IT.

VISITORS ARE WELCOME

Have You Inspected Our City Hospital and Grounds?

There has just been issued from the Daily Ledger press a booklet under the title of "Circular of Information Concerning the Training School for Nurses of the City Hospital of Quincy" that should hold considerable interest for the young women of our midst who may be considering the problem of a livelihood. The three-year course of training offered by our own City Hospital is most thorough, offering instructions to pupils in the principles and practices of nursing, by recitations, demonstrations, lectures, and by practical work in all departments of the Hospital—medical, surgical, obstetrical and dietetary. The course also includes experience in visiting nursing, under the supervision of the Quincy Visiting Nurse Association; making the training as complete as offered by similar institutions of larger cities.

The accommodations provided in the nurses' home are particularly comfortable and home like, for few cities have better located hospital buildings or more pleasant surroundings than our own City Hospital. This may not be appreciated by all our readers for very few think of visiting a hospital unless necessity carries them there. It might not be a bad plan for more of our people to visit the institution on President's Hill, for such a trip is well worth while. The group of buildings there located are well constructed and well arranged, the grounds are attractive, and the view from the wide veranda on the front of the main building tempts one to a long stay. By automobile one can reach the Hospital by riding up Whitwell street, either from Adams street or Granite street; while to walk from Quincy Square up to the Hospital is but a comfortable jaunt. Although regular hours are prescribed for visitors to patients, anyone is privileged to inspect the Hospital and grounds at all reasonable hours.

THE GIRL WORTH WHILE.
(Bryantville News.)

It is the girl of good, sound, hard sense, the girl who loves home and helps her mother, who wins the model man and becomes an ornament to womanhood. The girl that does this and devotes a part of her time in reading and strives for the grace of mental culture, commands the respect and esteem of everybody, while gadding street ornaments only win the admiration of tohse whose attention is not worth having.

IT MIGHT COME HANDY.
(Rockland Standard.)

Some people are bound to have automobiles at any cost. A man advertised in one of the Boston papers last Sunday for an automobile in exchange for a burial lot in one of the cemeteries near Boston. Seems to me that it would be advisable for that man to keep that burial lot. He may need it after he gets to running his automobile. Such things have been known to happen, you know.

IMPROVING THE VACATION.
(Whitman Times.)

What are that boy and girl of yours doing during their vacation? Have they regular home duties which will make them better appreciate the hours given to recreation, and keep them from discontentment or roaming on the streets? Or has the boy found a place to work where not only the habit of industry may be encouraged, but where he may learn the valuable lesson that it takes 100 cents to make a dollar, and a good many more to buy a pair of shoes, or suit of clothes which he expects to have, as a matter of course, whenever he needs them. Let the boy and girl learn by experience what hours of your talking would never tell them.

NATIONAL TROUBLES.
(Manchester Leader.)

As a nation, we have our troubles, and one who chooses to brood over them can acquire a case of mental dyspepsia; but no nation that is worthy of the name is free from troubles, and the problems and perplexities incidental to social, industrial and governmental affairs are, as a very general proposition, signs of progress. Troubles are the traditional bequest to all who live. Only the dead are without them. As a nation, then, we accept our troubles as the inevitable concomitant of progress, dispose of them as best we may, and learn valuable lessons from them. At the same time we have the most liberty, the freest play of opportunity, and the best distribution of prosperity of the larger nations of the earth, and we are proceeding to the best of our ability, as a people, to make these blessings better and more abundant. Let no poor boy or poor girl be discouraged by the outlook. America is, as ever, the land of opportunity.

DANGEROUS PRACTICE.
(Brockton Enterprise.)

It is noted that a number of recent automobile accidents have been due to the fact that people in the cars were changing seats while the cars were running at high speed, with the result that the man at the helm has had his attention distracted, or has been struck and has lost control of the wheel when people passed him and hit him. This is something rather new, or at all events the evil results seem to have come to a head recently; there have not been many reports of this sort of trouble until within a short time. The practice ought to be cut out immediately by everybody. If anything is worse than changing seats in a canoe, for the canoe at all events is not flying at such speed that is anything happens to deflect it from its course it may smash itself and kill or injure every occupant in the wreck. If the canoe tips over anyone in it can swim is pretty sure to be saved practically unharmed.

JUSTICE LURTON AN OLD SOLDIER

Late Jurist Twice Was Made Prisoner of War.

ILLUSTRIOUS LEGAL CAREER

Was Fourth Ex-Confederate Soldier to Become Member of Country's Highest Court—Appointed by President Taft—Had Received Honors From Many Colleges.

Horace Harmon Lurton, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, who died at the Marlborough-Blenheim hotel, Atlantic City, was the fourth ex-Confederate soldier to become a member of the country's highest court. He was the appointee of former President Taft, who had become his intimate friend when they were both judges of the Sixth United States circuit court. In 1906, when there was a vacancy in the supreme court through the retirement of Justice Brown, President Roosevelt offered the vacancy to Mr. Taft. In declining he suggested Justice Lurton for the place. It was thought that the seat would be granted to him, but in the end William Henry Moody, then attorney general, was named.

In 1909 Mr. Taft, then president, had the opportunity of conferring the honor on his friend when Justice Peckham died, and Justice Lurton took his seat on the bench on Jan. 3, 1910.

Horace Harmon Lurton was born in Newport, Campbell county, Ky., Feb. 26, 1844. He was educated by private instruction and in the public schools, and at the outbreak of the civil war was studying in Douglas university, now the University of Chicago. He returned to Tennessee, where his parents had moved when he was a small child, and enlisted in the Thirty-fifth Tennessee, Confederate, commanded by Colonel B. J. Hill, being made sergeant major.

Escapes From War Prison.

At the battle of Fort Donelson he was taken prisoner and confined in Fort Chase. He escaped and promptly re-enlisted in the Third Kentucky cavalry, with which he served until July, 1863, when he was again captured in Ohio on General Morgan's famous raid. His mother made a personal appeal to President Lincoln, and he was released on parole. At the close of the war he was studying law in Cumberland university, graduating in 1867.

Justice Lurton's father, Lycurgus B. Lurton, had been a physician, but in 1870 he gave up medicine for the church, and was ordained a Protestant Episcopal minister.

When he was thirty years old Justice Lurton was appointed chancellor of the sixth chancery division of Tennessee by Governor James D. Porter, to fill a vacancy. He was the youngest man who had ever held the place. In 1876 he was elected to the same position without opposition. In 1878 he resigned and returned to the practice of law at Clarksville, in partnership with Charles G. Smith. At that period he was president of the Farmers and Mechanics' National bank.

In 1886 he was elected a judge of the supreme court of Tennessee and became chief justice in January, 1893. In March of that year he was appointed circuit court judge of the sixth judicial circuit of the United States by President Cleveland, to succeed Howell E. Jackson, who had been elevated to the United States supreme bench.

Trustee of College.

Justice Lurton was an Episcopalian and for many years a vestryman in Trinity church, Clarksville, Tenn. Since 1882 he was a trustee of the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn. That institution conferred on him the degree of doctor of civil laws in 1899. He was professor of constitutional law in Vanderbilt university from 1898 until 1910 and dean of the university from 1905 until 1910.

In 1867 he married Miss Mary Frances, daughter of Dr. Benjamin Franklin Owen of Wilson county, Tenn., and stepdaughter of Professor James M. Safford, geologist, of Tennessee. They had four children, two of whom survive him.

In politics Justice Lurton was always a stanch Democrat. He was never active in party affairs, but in his early years he affiliated with the Democratic party and never deserted it. His appointment, therefore, to the supreme bench by former President Taft was a particularly striking testimonial of the high regard in which his friend held him.

JOHN D. GETS NEW LAND.

Auto Ride, $3,000 and a Job Given Man of Sixty-Six Oil Magnate.

William Wall, sixty years old, of Pocantico Hills, wishes he had a piece of property to sell J. D. Rockefeller every day. Wall, who recently lost his position on the railroad, had a small bit of land at Pocantico which Mr. Rockefeller wanted. He offered it for $3,000, and Mr. Rockefeller accepted. The latter also agreed to give Mr. Wall employment on his estate.

Mr. Rockefeller sent his automobile around to Mr. Wall's house and Wall and his wife were driven to Tarrytown, where they signed the deed. Then, after the money was deposited in the bank, Wall and his wife were driven to their home.

SOUTHERLAND LAST OF CIVIL WAR NAVAL HEROES

Won His Way From Ranks—Served as Sailor When Only Fourteen.

Rear Admiral William H. H. Southerland, the last officer of the United States navy until recently on the active list who served in the civil war and who has been retired, was born in New York city on July 10, 1852, and by the time he was fourteen years old had served a brief term in the volunteer navy during the latter part of the civil war. In 1867 he again enlisted in the service, this time as a naval apprentice, and had served one year and seven months when in June, 1868, he received an appointment to Annapolis as the midshipman representative from one of the New York city congressional districts. He was graduated from Annapolis in 1872, his first service as an officer being on the old frigate Tuscarora of the Pacific fleet.

When the war with Spain began Southerland was in command of the little gunboat Eagle and as the commander of that vessel fought the first naval engagement of that war. It may be mentioned that the Eagle is now in Vera Cruz harbor, where she is one of the principal units in the mosquito division of Admiral Winslow's special service squadron.

In 1906 Southerland was promoted to the rank of captain and four years later was nominated by President Taft for flag rank and placed in command of the First division of the Pacific fleet. Subsequently he was made commander in chief of that organization. In March, 1911, he commanded the expedition that invaded Nicaragua and re-established order in that Central American state.

Admiral Southerland is now a member of the general board of the navy, of which Admiral Dewey is the president, and is also the president of the naval retiring board, which a few days ago was brought prominently before the public as the result of the annual "plucking" of naval officers.

The retirement of Admiral Southerland promoted Captain Charles A. Gove, commandant of the naval training station at San Francisco, to flag rank. Captain Gove, who is a native of New Hampshire, is a former commander of the Dreadnought Delaware and a son of the late Captain J. A. Gove, U. S. A., who was killed at the battle of Gaines' Mill, Va., in 1862.

LAVA CUTS AWAY SNOW.

Alaska Volcano Has Been Stripped of Its Mantle During Eruption.

Further details of the tremendous volcanic activity along the Alaskan peninsula, west of Seward and reaching to the Aleutian islands, were given by Captain McMullen of the steamer Dirigo, which brought first news of the outburst.

Observations made by the crew of the Dirigo on July 1 showed that a new crater had opened on the north side of Mount Shishaldin, the most westerly of the three peaks in eruption. Flowing lava had cut a wide path through the snow for miles down the side of the mountain. Mount Shishaldin, which is on Unimak island, is one of the most active volcanoes in the world and has been in almost continuous eruption for years.

Pavlof volcano, on the Alaska peninsula, was throwing out a black ash, the light fall of which was noticed on the Dirigo.

When the Dirigo was at Cold bay, thirty miles west of Mount Katmai, the smell of sulphur was strong, but the smoke coming from the mountain was so thick that the extent of the eruption could not be determined. For more than six weeks the sky has been overcast with heavy clouds high in the air, and there has been more than the usual amount of rain.

Quits Hubby She Shaved.

Because he made her shave him to save barber's bills Mrs. Joseph Komison of Dutchess Junction, near Cold Spring, N. Y., and her husband parted ways in a huff, which resulted in the latter being locked up on a charge of cruelty. Mrs. Komison claimed her husband had made a drudge of her. She had been in the habit of shaving him, but rebelled this time. So, she alleges, he, armed with a razor, pursued her. She also charged that he threatened her with an ax.

GARDEN PARTY.

Unusual Attraction Of Annual Event—Notable Guests And Beautiful Attire at Governor's Island Garden Party.

No prettier sight can be imagined than the annual fete given at the government military post, on the island that everyone sees just off the Battery at the tip of Manhattan. It is the least little bit of a trip in one of the small steamers that carry only guests to the post, yet in something less than ten minutes one is transported into quite another world, from the bustling busy city. I wonder why it is that spite of the display of uniforms and cannon and general warlike accoutrements, an army post always has such a peaceful almost drowsy atmosphere? Certainly one feels at Governor's Island at least a hundred miles from hustling Broadway.

This year the hours for this fete, which nets a goodly sum for widows and orphans of officers and enlisted men, were extended to 9 o'clock so that a second contingent of older society folk went across for the evening, as the buds and their mothers landed after the finish of the afternoon programme.

The perfect day brought out a Kaleidoscope review of fashion finery. Garden party hats and frocks ruled the afternoon while the evening crowds were in more impressive evening dress and everywhere gala uniforms added the touch that nothing else lends to make the scene attractive. Well known men and women prominent in society and military circles received with the commandant and helped by their presence to make the affair smart and successful. Secretary of War and Mrs. Garrison and General and Mrs. Leonard Wood and a long list of others as notable were in the receiving line. Mrs. Shepherd formerly Miss Helen Gould was absent for the first time in many years owing to a slight indisposition.

PRETTY ARMY WOMEN.

Pretty army girls, served tea and sweets at tables placed invitingly under the trees, and in the afternoon the usual military review drew the crowds to the field where a small army might manoeuvre and in the lovely setting of fresh green, blue sky and the dancing waters of the bay beyond, well set up men and charmingly gowned women, trained an added attraction.

ECLECTIC DRESSING.

Every sort of costume was worn from the smart suit, to elaborate dancing toilets, for dancing was more than ever a feature this year. Creations that bore the hall mark of famous French creators, went next to simple frocks of printed voile that cost very little, yet if smartly made, were not a whit less attractive than the costly frocks. In fact they seemed to match up better with the surroundings, and were apt to be worn by girls whose bloom would have set off the most severely simple attire. A girl chatting with a white moustached man in uniform was chic in a dress of cotton crepe, the underskirt of plain material, the tunic and waist on simple Russian blouse lines, built of white crepe brocaded in big wide scattered conventional flowers, of medium blue, with green stem and leaves. A smart hat of white straw with black leaves and cherries, a black patent leather belt and low shoes worn with vivid green hosiery, and a green parasol with a shiny black stick completed this get-up.

McCall Designs

IN A NEARBY GROUP.

A dress of finest organdie exquisitely embroidered was worn by a girl prominent in the Tuxedo set. This was made over a net foundation, the bodice showing a camisole of net trimmed with tiny chiffon rosebuds. Girdle of black velvet ribbon, and velvet cravat as finish for the high Medici collar. Hat of white horsehair wreathed with pink crush roses, pink taffeta parasol with carved ivory handle, white doeskin shoes with jet buckles. A coat of the new velvet corded Golfine in coral pink, lined with matching satin was carried by the man in attendance and would give just the needed touch of cosy protection after the dance, or in crossing the ferry.

A SPORTY GET-UP.

Looking as if she had just come off the links, was a girl in her teens, dressed in yellow linen crash made up with a pleated sport coat belted with patent leather. Yellow hose and white shoes, and a panama hat blocked in sailor shape with a tie and up-standing bow of patent leather, white chamois gloves. A white linen dress with the new long flaring tunic pleated into box form, front and back, topped a narrow underskirt of dark olive green linen. The belt, cuffs and short collar at the back of same colored linen. Vest of white net and up-standing collar of same. Small high crowned sailor hat of white straw, banded with varnished green leaves finished at centre front with gardenia and buds.

THE COLAR CRAZE.

All the world has gone collar mad, and there is an endless variety of shapes to choose from, but all the smartest types are wired to stand up in some becoming fashion, as a frame for the face. Organdie holds first place for these, and in many instances there is an organdie vest attachment that helps to fill out the open front that is so much a feature of this season's waists. By a little study everyone of normal build can find some sort of collar that is especially complimentary. Short people gain height if the collar goes only across the back ending at the shoulder line, and the tail long necked girl was never so favored by fashion for the sheer fabric of the collar has a way of concealing the too thin neck, and framing a moderately plain face into attractiveness.

YOUTHFUL "HOBO" PROVES TO BE GIRL

Admits Sex When About to Be Searched by Police Officer

South Bend, Ind., July 17.—Women in the fashionable Mishawaka suburb who remembered having given odd jobs and tasty lunches to a handsome youth in tattered blue serge were astonished when they learned that they had been kind to an adventurous Chicago girl, Miss Mary Meyers, 18.

The story came out at Denver, where the masquerader was arrested as a loiterer, according to word received here. When about to be searched by police officers, she admitted her sex. Her story was that she had beaten her way west on freight trains with a group of hoboes.

While in this city Miss Meyers appeared as the ordinary boy. She frequented pool rooms and bars and smoked cigars.

East Providence, R. I., July 17.—John Landry, aged 24, of Plymouth, Mass., was arrested in connection with his elopement with Gertrude Hinchcliffe, aged 14, also of Plymouth.—NO—

He waived extradition and was taken to that town, where he will face a serious charge. The girl was found here and her parents took her home.

London, July 17.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst was arrested under the "cat and mouse" act and lodged in Holloway jail.

BASEBALL VERSUS CRICKET.

A Canadian went up to the recreation ground for a game of tennis. There he was seized by a cricketer in authority and implored to save the honor of the town by playing cricket for its team.

His team batted first. At 11 a. m. he began to play a game. From 11 to 1 the Canadian smoked fifteen cigarettes, read the whole of the Daily Telegraph and umpired a men's four. (Don't forget that he was playing cricket all the time.) Then he ate a large quantity of food. Still playing cricket from 2 until 3, he finished his packet of cigarettes and read the Daily Mail. Then he went in to bat and for ten minutes was busy getting sixteen runs. Continuing the game from 3:15 to 4:15, he borrowed cigarettes and explained how he came to leave his pouch at home. For several aeons after 4:15 he stood rooted to one or two spots in the arena, both remote from the center of disturbance. Once in a decade a ball came his way. Lastly, the game was abandoned without any definite result having been arrived at.

WILLIAMS NAMES WEIGHT.

All Challengers Must Scale 116 Ringside, Says the Kid.

All challengers for the bantamweight title recently annexed by Johnny (Kid) Williams of Baltimore must do 116 pounds ringside, according to the conqueror of Johnny Coulon. Williams issued this ultimatum while perusing a stack of telegrams from fight seekers in all parts of the country.

"Bring them on," said the little Dane. "The faster they come the better I like it. Any one is welcome, provided he scales at the same notch always demanded by Coulon."

Williams will fill several weeks of theatrical engagements before meeting his first challenger.

Evans Disapproves of English Methods.

With no excuses to offer for their failure to carry off the British amateur championship, Charles W. Evans, Jr., and Frederick Herreshoff are back in America.

Herreshoff was reluctant to express an opinion. Evans thought the British system of running off eighteen hole matches in all but the final was not productive of the best golf.

Both said the English players and followers of the game extended to the Americans every courtesy.

WILL SEIZE FOSS LAND

Boston Street Commissioners Given Order by Mayor Curley

Boston, July 17.—Mayor Curley ordered the street commissioners to seize by right of eminent domain property owned by former Governor Foss directly before the Forsyth Dental infirmary in the Fenway.

This step on the part of the mayor is the result of a long controversy between him and the former governor. According to Curley, Foss is planning to sell the property to apartment house builders who will construct on the land huge brick buildings that will shut out light and air from the dental buildings.

The land is assessed at $140,000. Curley offered to buy it at its assessed value. According to the mayor Foss refused this price, but declared he would give the city thirty days' option on the land if he could sell it for $167,000. This the mayor declared exorbitant.

The Forsyth Dental infirmary cost about $3,000,000 and is for the benefit of the children of the city.

DIRECTORS STAND PAT

New Haven Road Will Hang Onto Boston and Maine Holdings

New York, July 17.—By unanimous vote the directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, at a meeting here, decided to stand by their decision not to sell their holdings of Boston and Maine railroad stock under the terms imposed by the state of Massachusetts.

In the language of the official statement, the directors have neither receded from their position nor closed the door to further negotiations.

Emphatic denial was made of the rumors recently current that application for a friendly receivership was contemplated. On this point the statement says:

"The directors will not apply for, nor will they consent to a receivership. The company is solvent, is earning its fixed charges, and is able to meet its current obligations promptly."

MRS. ANGLE MAY BE ADMITTED TO BAIL

Signs That Evidence Against Her Grows Weaker

Stamford, Conn., July 17.—That the state is not committed to any particular theory of the death of Waldo R. Ballou, and is not yet ready to form a conclusion of the manner in which he received the injuries which caused his death after a visit to the apartments of Mrs. Helen M. Angle here, was the substance of a statement issued by State Attorney Cummings.

The police have been informed, but upon what authority is not stated, that many of the stains from Mrs. Angle's rooms which have been examined by the coroner's analysist have failed to disclose blood crystals. The belief is held that Mrs. Angle, who is now held without bail in connection with the investigation, may be admitted to bail.

SMITH FOULS IN THE SIXTH

White Heavyweight Championship Goes to Carpentier

TWENTY THOUSAND SEE FIGHT

European Aristocracy and American Navy Well Represented at Bout Scheduled For Twenty Rounds, Which Suddenly Ends When American Hits Frenchman While Down

London, July 17.—George Carpentier, heavyweight champion of Europe, won a decision over "Gunboat" Smith, white heavyweight champion of America, on a foul at the Olympia here last night. The fight was scheduled for twenty rounds. The foul occurred in the sixth round.

The battle was fought before a crowd estimated at 20,000, which included probably 2000 women and a large number of the aristocracy of Europe. They paid more than $75,000 to see the battle—the third largest "gate" in the history of pugilism.

The fight was for the world's white heavyweight championship, the winner to have a claim on the world's championship if Jack Johnson should refuse to meet him. Thousands crowded about the arena unable to get seats in the building when the great battle was staged.

Carpentier was a slight favorite to the very last, wagers being laid at 6 to 5 with the Frenchman on the long end. There were wild cries for "Uncle Sam and the gunner" from a large party of American sailors from the United States battleships Missouri and Illinois, which are now lying off Gravesend.

Smith was formerly a sailor on board the Missouri, and his mates gave him a rousing greeting. The fight by rounds:

First round—Smith led and fell into a clinch. He showed fast foot work and the Frenchman clinched frequently. Carpentier tried for a nasty uppercut, but Smith evaded it. The American was warned for hitting low. Despite the warning, Smith sent in a low hook in the breakaway. He was unpunished for this and shot in a terrific left, which jolted Carpentier. It was Smith's round and he was loudly cheered.

Round two—Carpentier clinched and then began to fight, jabbing with both hands. Smith swung wildly three times with his left and missed three times. A number of clinches followed and Referee Corri was kept busy breaking the men. Smith jabbed Carpentier on every breakaway. He got one good left to the jaw. Carpentier was faster than Smith and it was Carpentier's round.

Round three—Corri cautioned Smith against hitting low. Smith began to jab with his right. Carpentier clinched to avoid the blows. The Frenchman tried for a terrific uppercut but missed. Carpentier took the offensive and Smith began to hold. Carpentier was jabbing with his left and showing faster work. Carpentier's round.

Round four—Smith took the aggressive. He puzzled Carpentier and made a terrific left swing to the jaw, but missed. Carpentier clinched. The Frenchman shot home a good uppercut, which had little effect on Smith. Carpentier sent a left to the head and then knocked Smith down. It was a terrific blow and the American was down nine seconds. He was saved by the gong. Carpentier's round.

Round five—Carpentier rushed. Smith put right to jaw. Carpentier got uppercut to Smith's jaw. Carpentier showed great speed. He jabbed left to jaw three times. Smith landed left to jaw. Carpentier put powerful right hook to chin.

Round six—Smith was very slow and Carpentier landed him in the eye with his left. Smith began to jab wildly with his right. Smith knocked Carpentier down and hit him while he was down. The referee disqualified Smith for hitting Carpentier while he was down and declared the Frenchman a winner.

His One Failing

An Odd Episode In a City Belle's Summer Campaign in the Woods.

By ELLIOT WALKER

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"I'll get Tinker to take you out. I guess," said old Sackett. "He's just come in."

"Is he a good, safe man?" asked Mrs. Cranby.

"Who—Tinker? S-fe? Well, he's supposed to be safe—safe as they make 'em round here," responded the hotel keeper. "He's been up in the woods with a party for two weeks—got back this mornin'. Best guide on the lakes for a young feller. Quiet, good lookin', and knows his business—you'll like him, marm. He'll work around the house till another party picks him up—maybe a day or two or a week. You're lucky to git him—I don't know as he'll go out. He's cranky sometimes."

The Cranbys had just come up to the String lakes, that well known chain where the lower one affords good hotel accommodations, fair general society and poor fishing and the upper ones dwindle into wilderness with its accompaniments, according to distance.

"It was too bad that papa had to get that disgusting telegram which called him back to nasty old Wall street just as he was comfortably settled. How mean and inconsiderate for those people to fail at such a time!"

So said Ethel, who, with her mother and sisters, lamented the trying circumstances in various degrees of impotent wrath.

"He will be back soon, in a week probably," explained Mrs. Cranby. "Meanwhile we must enjoy ourselves as best we may. It is too bad, though. What shall we do for amusement? It's a dull place."

"Let's have a picnic tomorrow!" cried Harriet, the second shining light in the galaxy of daughters. "That'll be fun."

Her eighteen years had not dulled her appreciation of the love of freedom, and the woods and waters appealed to her strongly.

Ruth and Maria, the junior hopefuls, whose respective ages of fifteen and thirteen were as yet undimmed by the tarnish of society, gave glad accord to the proposition. To them a picnic embraced many thoughts of mild adventure, as well as a variety of refreshments, which alone was worthy of their approving consideration.

Ethel, whose twenty summers had brought to her much beauty of face and form and a rather undue portion of masculine adoration, poohpoohed the picnic idea at first. Finally she graciously yielded, thereby receiving much thankful acclamation from Ruth and Maria.

"I won't row five women, Sackett—you can put that down," observed Mr. Tinker when he was approached. "I'm willing to take two. Let 'em have a couple of boats, and the Injun can row one. Five females in a boat isn't safe."

Tinker had considerable fault to find, and he did it loudly, addressing his remarks to the hotel man, who was on hand to see them off.

"Why don't you keep your old tubs in some kind of shape, Sackett? I'm ashamed to take a lady out in this one—it's all fish scales!" he cried.

"He's a mite sour this morning," whispered Sackett to Ethel. "I don't mind him. Usually he don't say but little. Fine lookin' feller when he's dressed up. Knows a lot too."

The girl was gazing at the active figure in the boat, swabbing away with an old rag of a sponge.

"I think I'll go in Mr. Tinker's boat," she said very audibly.

The man looked up, and their eyes met.

"She's a stunner!" thought Tinker.

"He looks like a nobleman in disguise," mused Ethel. "I'll take Maria with me," she called, "and then the children won't get fooling."

The "Injun," who was only a tall, tanned Yankee with strongly pronounced features, accepted all burdens meekly and grinned as he started with his load.

"Where are you goin,' Tinker?" he asked as that gentleman drew away from him.

"Over to Bogey point," answered Tinker. "Got any terbacker?"

"Yep!" replied the Injun. "Got a whole new ping."

"How long will it take to row to the point?" asked Ethel.

"Half an hour," was the short answer.

The pretty girl in the stern gazed reflectively across the lake. She wondered how much she could accomplish in half an hour.

She brought her eyes back to the face of Tinker. He was looking straight at her with an expression of respectful admiration, and his bright brown eyes sought hers for a moment and then dropped.

The girl had smiled into them, a quick "I like you!" smile, and the guide's cheeks burned through the tan.

His features wore an almost childish look of pleasure and embarrassment.

Ethel smiled softly at some interesting thought. Could she have read the mind of Tinker she would not have smiled.

"Trying to flirt with the guide, eh!" he was thinking. "Well, let her go it. I'll just lend her on. I'm nothing but a poor, unsophisticated countryman, but good looking enough for that beauty to try to upset. I'll have some fun out of it myself. I haven't rowed pretty girls around this old pond for six years for nothing. She evidently thinks I never saw a girl before. I guess she is younger than she looks."

Tinker stopped rowing long enough to pull off his gray slouch hat and drop it at his feet. Then he dipped his brown hand in the lake and rubbed his hair vigorously with the cold water.

"There," he remarked; "that feels good."

"Mr. Tinker," observed Maria, "you are quite a beautiful looking man. Isn't he, Ethel?"

The guide looked at Ethel and smiled—a very pleasant, indulgent smile.

"Hush, Maria," said her sister reprovingly, with a quick blush. "You mustn't be personal in your remarks."

"You look like a picture of young St. John," went on Maria in an absorbed tone. "We have it."

"I feel honored," laughed Tinker. "I know the picture of which you speak. In the old days"—he suddenly became very serious and bent to his work, sighing a little as if at some sad remembrance—"no matter," he added softly.

Ethel was now consumed with curiosity, and her eyes inquired of his as he looked up. He shook his head.

"Not now," he said.

The picnic was a great success. Ruth and the Injun appeared to have formed ties of the closest interest. It subsequently turned out that these two had possessed themselves of sundry delicacies from the basket, the Injun's pocket being a convenient repository.

"I'm sure they put in more cake," complained Harriet, "and I told them particularly about the apples. They must have forgotten."

It was all very beautiful in the fresh, sweet air, with the wild sounds of birds and little waves. What more conducive to a nap for Mrs. Cranby and small explorations for Harriet and the little girls?

Tinker rowed Ethel along the shore and up into the cool shade of Moose creek, where the fine old trees and the limpid water combined to form a picture which would have gladdened the heart of a painter in water color. The very air seemed to invite confidences and to induce low toned and very earnest conversation. The Injun smoked and lounged, and the fair afternoon was soon over.

* * * * * * *

"Have a nice time yesterday?" observed Mr. Sackett to the eldest Miss Cranby as she sat on the piazza the next morning trying to read.

"Lovely," responded the young lady dreamily. "Oh, Mr. Sackett!"

"Yes?" said her host interrogatively.

"Isn't that young man—that one you called Tinker—isn't he quite superior to most of the men about here? He talks very nicely—I mean uses such good language," went on the girl, hesitating a little. "He was not born here, was he?"

"Eh?" ejaculated the old man. "Oh, well! Let's see! Yes, he does talk first rate—he's a quick feller. He got some education when he was younger, and he's smart. Remembers everything! He can talk all right. Likes fun, but he's real solemn and steady most always."

"Yes, he was telling me," said Ethel absently.

"What was he tellin' you?" asked Sackett.

He gazed at the pretty, confident face and smiled quietly.

"Did he tell you about his uncle," he went on, without waiting for a reply, "and his college days—the unjust charge and how he bore it all to shield another—how he ran away and was now livin' in this desolate country, away from everybody, where he could feel free and independent?"

"Ah, you know about him, too!" cried the girl.

"Yes, I know about him," answered the hotel keeper. "Did he tell you about thoughts and ambitions and things—how he hoped to go to the city and begin over and succeed? Maybe he asked you to be his friend?"

Ethel nodded.

"I think he will succeed," she said; "he seems so determined and strong. I shall be glad to be his friend."

"Did he tell you," resumed Sackett with great solemnity, "that he had a wife and two kids over in Brushview, four miles east of here?"

"Mr. Sackett!" cried the girl, jumping up in consternation. "What do you mean?"

"Just what I say—that's right," answered her host, "and that's the only true thing in the whole story—the rest is all lies. He's told that tale before. Yes'm, he's got a nice little woman and two boys that he thinks the world of, and he's a good guide and a good feller. I've never known him to lie, except about this one thing. Wonder why he does it?"

His keen eyes twinkled. Ethel, almost as tall as he, peered into them as if trying to read his thoughts. Then she burst out laughing.

"That's right!" exclaimed Sackett. "You're a sensible young lady. Gracious, but your face was red, and your eyes blazed for a minute!"

"Where is he?" asked Ethel. "I want to see him."

"He's gone," said the landlord. "He went up the lakes with a party early this mornin'. I don't expect him back for a fortnight."

"We will be gone by then," said the girl. "I'm sorry. Well, you tell him I have a little sense, and I forgive him. It was a real mean trick—tell him that, too—but it wasn't a bad lesson. Will he tell about it?"

"He—Tinker? No! He'll never lisp it, and I won't!" exclaimed Sackett.

"I don't think I will, either," said Ethel.

SKIRTS OF NET.

They Make the Fashionable Tunic Endurable In Hot Weather.

SMART FRENCH COSTUME

The long draped tunics which fashionable women are wearing this season are undoubtedly warm, but Parisian modistes, with their customary ingenuity, have found a way to remedy this. Skirts are sometimes made with a net yoke, over which the tunic falls. Some costumes even have entire skirts of lace or net. The gown illustrated here was snapped at one of the French races, where fashions are exploited. Tunic and corsage are of flowered silk, with a satin stripe which runs up and down. The surplice is finished with a plaited frill of net, and the waist is encircled with a girdle of satin ribbon. The skirt is of white net, adorned with rows of narrow frills.

FALL FASHIONS.

Height to Be a Requirement In Smart Hats For Fall.

"Extreme height is a note of the new fall models," says the Millinery Trade Review. "And this does not mean that there will not be any flat trimmings, as silk and velvet fruits and flowers give good promise for fall. Coque in its many clever new designs is being shown. Pompons of this material in bronzed effect, the shape of an artichoke, are immensely clever, being placed on the top of a rather high crowned hat in clusters of two or three.

"Other models show bronzed coque forming military pompons, accompanied by a high, fancy effect. Curled coque in black, white and all the smart new shades for fall are well thought of. Manufacturers of ostrich feathers are showing numbers of new effects for fall, which include burnt effects in high fancies. The fall season always makes the demand for ostrich stronger, and good results are expected."

Chairs With Pockets.

No porch is completely equipped without at least one chair that is furnished with a pocket for books and magazines and needlework. These chairs are no longer a novelty. And, like everything that has passed the stage of novelty, they can be had for a reasonable price. One of substantial make, with a back that measures twenty inches above the seat—and that is high enough to support anybody's shoulder blades—costs $7, with a tasteful cretonne cushion and a coat of brown or green stain included.

Flower Supports.

To go in the veranda jardinieres there are long wooden sticks, painted green and topped with little wooden birds of brilliant hues or with brownies or gnomes.

These are thrust into the vase or jardiniere when long stemmed flowers are used, and the heads of some of the flowers are tied to posts to keep them from falling.

These posts can also be used as stakes in the garden. They are very picturesque wherever they are used.

Floral Laces.

Among the decidedly effective ideas in colors are the net top laces with floral patterns painted in realistic shades, says the Dry Goods Economist. In some instances the beauty of the designs is greatly enhanced by an outlining thread of silver or gold.

Only the daintiest flowers are represented in these painted effects, and so delicate are the tints that their appearance is lovely indeed. The painted floral idea also appears in fine chantilly.

THE SEA OF LOT.

Its Ridge of Sodom and Its Fetid but Clear Blue Waters.

It is in the southeastern part of Palestine where the famous Dead sea lies. In the Old Testament it was known as the Sea of the Plain or Salt sea, but it is known today by the Arabs as the Sea of Lot. Its surface, which is lower than any other body of water, is 1,292 feet below the level of the Mediterranean.

The Dead sea is fed by the river Jordan from the north, but has no outlet, depending entirely upon evaporation. A portion of the sea is surrounded by cliffs which are destitute of vegetation. On the south shore is the ridge of rock salt, seven miles long and 300 feet high, known as the ridge of Sodom. Lava beds, sulphur and volcanic slag prove the existence of volcanic agencies at some period. The lake still casts up pieces of asphalt when the environs of the Dead sea are visited by earthquake.

Its proportion of saline matter is so great that it contains more than eight times as much as the ocean, and, while it is exceedingly fetid, yet its water is as blue as that of the Mediterranean, and to the bather it is very refreshing, and owing to its specific gravity it is difficult to sink. Nothing living exists within the waters of the Dead sea.—Buffalo Express.

JOHN STOWE'S REWARD.

The Beggar Historian Got Royal Permission to Solicit Alms.

James I. on March 8, 1603, granted letters patent under the great seal to John Stowe, London's great historian, authorizing him to beg. The letters patent of James I. authorized Stowe to collect the voluntary contributions of the people. The letter recites that:

"Whereas, Our loving subject, John Stowe, a very aged and worthy member of our city of London, this five and forty years hath to his great charge and with neglect of his ordinary means of maintenance, for the general good as well of posterity as of the present age, compiled and published diverse necessary books and chronicles, and therefore we, in recompense of his labors and for the encouragement to the like, have in our royal inclination been pleased to grant letters patent under our great seal of England, dated March 8, 1603, thereby authorizing him to collect among our loving subjects their voluntary contributions and kind gratuities."

John Stowe died on April 5, 1605, and was buried in the parish Church of St. Andrew Undershaft, where his monument, erected by his widow, is still to be seen.—London Stray Stories.

A Journalist Bought Suez.

The journalist is often the man behind the statesman, but he seldom gets the credit. Who was it that induced Mr. Disraeli to buy the Suez canal shares which have proved so abundantly good an investment, with dividends that are represented not only by money, though even from that point of view it is the best investment that a state has ever made? Fleet street knows and honors the name of Mr. Frederick Greenwood both for that reason and for many another. But how many outside the world of journalism realize that but for Mr. Greenwood the Suez canal shares would probably have been purchased by a rival continental power? The question was one among those put in a "general intelligence" examination paper a little time back at a certain school. Only one boy was able to answer it correctly, and he was the son of the prime minister.—London Chronicle.

Discordant Thoughts.

In wandering through your mental pleasure grounds, whenever you come upon an ugly intruder of a thought which might bloom into some poisonous emotion, such as fear, envy, hate, worry, remorse, anger and the like, there is only one right way to treat it, writes Robert H. Schauffler in the Atlantic. Pull it up like a weed, drop it upon the rubbish heap as promptly as if it were a stinging nettle and let some harmonious thought grow in its place. There is no more reckless consumer of all kinds of exuberance than the discordant thought, and weeding it out saves such an astonishing amount of eau de vie wherewith to water the garden of joy that with it in hand every man may be his own Burbank.

His Alibi.

"If you are innocent," said a lawyer to his client, an old darky, who was charged with stealing a ham, "we ought to be able to prove an alibi."

"I don' specs we kin," the darky replied doubtfully.

"At what time was the ham stolen?"

"'Bout 'lebben erclock, day say."

"Well, where were you between 11 o'clock and midnight—in bed?"

"No, sah. I was hidin' de ham."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Eagerly Communicative.

"A man ought not to have any secrets from his wife."

"Secrets!" exclaimed Mr. Meekton. "I spend hours trying to make an impression on Henrietta by thinking up something to tell her that she doesn't know."—Washington Star.

GOV. WALSH AT CAMP TODAY

Maj. Fred E. Jones, Capt. W. H. Blanchard and Lieut. Sidney Hardwick, three well known Quincy physicians attached to the Second brigade, are in camp with the brigade at Lakeville this week.

One of the features of the camp were the maneuvers which took place Thursday and in which the whole brigade took part. At noon the 5th, 8th and 9th regiments took the field each carrying two uncooked rations and his half shelter tent. Previous to the departure of the main body Co's. C of the 8th, L of the 9th, and A of the 5th, were ordered to take sheltered positions and retard by all possible means the progress of the main body. The main body had hardly left camp before they ran into this body and several sharp skirmishes took place.

Today's problem at camp will be concentration, the whole brigade being ordered to concentrate on the camp ground at a certain hour.

Gov. Walsh is also expected to arrive at camp today and something interesting has been prepared for his reception. This afternoon there will be the inter-regimental athletic games and Gov. Walsh will review the brigade at 5.30 this afternon.

SPORTS.

Walter Lonergan, who has been covering the short field for the Portland New England team and former short stop with Quincy teams, has been recalled to duty at the Boston post office. An attempt will be made by Manager Duffy to secure another leave of absence so the star player will be in the lineup the balance of the season. Lonergan last season opened with the Red Sox but had to return to his position. During his vacation he signed up with Lowell and sustained a slight injury to his spine. This accident put him out of the game, but this spring he had recovered so far as to permit him to play with a fast team. Lonergan frequently visits his Quincy friends and it is only a few weks ago that he was seen here.

CURIOUS CLIFF HOUSES.

Queer Prehistoric Dwellings In Mesa Verde National Park.

The Mesa Verde National park is situated in southwestern Colorado and may best be reached from Mancos. Within the park are many notable prehistoric ruins, the cliff dwellings comprising a group of great importance to the study of American archaeology. The principal and most accessible ruins are the Spruce Tree House, Cliff palace, Balcony House and Tunnel House.

Spruce Tree House is located in the head of Spruce Tree canyon, a branch of Navajo canyon. It originally contained about 130 rooms, built of dressed stone laid in adobe mortar, with the outside tiers chinked with chips of rock and broken pottery.

Cliff palace is located about two miles east of Spruce Tree House, in a left branch of Cliff canyon, and consists of a group of houses with ruins of 146 rooms, including twenty round kivas or ceremonial rooms and a tapering loopholed tower forming a crescent of about 100 yards from horn to horn, which is reputed to be one of the most famous works of prehistoric man in existence.

Balcony House, a mile east of Cliff palace, in Ruin canyon, contains about twenty-five rooms, some of which are in almost perfect condition.

Tunnel House, about two miles south of Spruce Tree House, contains about twenty rooms and two kivas, connected by an elaborate system of underground passages, and a burial ground of 5,000 square feet. In each of these villages is an elaborate system of fortification, with in some cases walls 2.3 feet thick and twenty feet high, watchtowers thirty feet high and blockhouses pierced with small loopholes for arrows.

THE DRY BATTERY.

Its Many Uses and the Numerous Processes In Its Making.

That common little object, the dry cell, has played an important part in the advancement of scientific research. There are few articles manufactured that are used in so many ways as the dry battery, yet it is by no means a recent discovery.

The automobile, motorboat, wireless telegraphic apparatus, Christmas tree festoons, electric toys and trains, electric engines, local bell, telephone and annunciator systems, miniature lighting equipments, medical batteries and vibrators, electric alarm clocks, burglar alarms, automatic door openers, safe cracking devices and infernal machines in their many forms, devices for setting off dynamite explosions in excavations, the various testing outfits and electric clock service, to say nothing of the divers ways that it is used in scientific experiments, are a few of the most obvious of its applications.

In its manufacture there are about as many processes as are necessary in the making of a tungsten lamp, and the machinery process that makes it and compounds the ingredients that go into it is wonderfully interesting. So exact is the formula placed into each shell that when completed a battery will register up to a uniform amperage. The highest known amperage in the manufacture of a dry cell is twenty-six.

The exact origin of the dry battery is uncertain, many inventors having claimed the honor.—New York World

Cheap Power.

Natural steam coming up through the ground is a cheap power for running an engine in the northern Tuscany mountains. Lakes of hot water in the vicinity of the steam holes contain much boracic acid, and a manufacturing company uses the natural steam to run machinery for extracting the valuable boracic acid from the lake water. The only difficulty in this pleasant state of affairs is that the steam itself is so highly charged with boracic acid that it would injure the blades of a turbine engine, so the steam is used to heat up an ordinary boiler, and the steam from the boiler is then used in the turbine. The steam is caused by volcanic action and comes up through blowholes at a considerable pressure.—Saturday Evening Post.

Just Run Into It.

Elements mix in a railroad station, but that of humor predominates. The other day a man entered the Grand Central hurriedly. He afterward explained he had to meet a country cousin coming in. He rushed over to a friend who knew of his errand.

"Am I late?" he asked.

"No; the train just ran into the station," he was told.

"Ran into it!" he blurted. "Was anybody hurt?"—New York Tribune.

Conflicting.

"What's the matter?" a colleague asked of the advertising manager.

"Matter enough. The fools have placed Mme. Soprano's testimonial for a cold cure on the same page with the announcement that she had a sore throat and couldn't sing."—Topeka Journal.

A Modern Pierrot.

"Fraulein Rose, if you only knew how I loved you! When I meet you on Monday morning my heart wags with joy till Saturday evening like a lamb's tail."—Fliegende Blatter.

SCORE WAS SIX TO FIVE

The best ball game yet was played in the Ward Two playground league Thursday morning. The White Sox managed to defeat the Athletics 6 to 5 in a very warmly contested battle. It looked as if the Sox were to have a runaway when they scored four times in first, but after that inning "Ike" Tower held them to two hits, both of which however resulted in a run. The Athletics fought a great up hill battle but could not nose out a victory.

Gallagher of the Sox caught a fine game and batted well, getting two hits out of three trips to the bat. Johnson of the Athletics made a fine catch after a long run, cutting off a run.

Score by innings:

White Sox	4 0 1 0 0 1—6
Athletics	0 1 2 1 1 0—5

Batteries—Weinhouse, Gallagher; Tower, Parker.

NO PERMIT IN QUINCY

George H. Lowe, interested in the establishment of a Leatherette factory in this city, was informed Thursday by Deputy Neil of the State police that because of the strong opposition that has developed no permit to do business in Quincy would be granted.

The announcement closes a controversy that developed between owners of land in the rear of the public playground at Quincy Point, city officials, men in public office and real estate agents.

Mr. Lowe's factory was destroyed in the Weymouth conflagration and because material used in manufacturing was highly explosive the officials of that town prevented him from rebuilding. He chose a site in this city and citizens opposed his locating here.

The wall is about 300 feet long.

WILL LOCATE IN STOUGHTON

The Brockton, Enterprise announces that H. H. Hanson Shoe Co. of Quincy is to locate in a new factory that is to be immediately erected in Stoughton. The Hanson Co. has been trying for a long time to get stock subscribed in Quincy but for some reason has been unable to make but little hadway. Evidntly tiring of making any further effort in Quincy a new field was sought.

According to the Enterprise a meeting was held in Brockton this week at which final pledges were received for the $800 remaining to make up the $5,000 worth of stock subscribed for by Stoughton citizens. This amount with the $5,000 to be furnished by the company will provide the necessary $10,000 for the construction of the building.

Efforts were also made to locate in Brockton which did not meet with success there. Stoughton however seems to have come to the rescue. The company recently increased its capitalization from $50,000 to $250,000 for the purpose of financing the new factory and equipment.

Y. M. C. A. CAMP.

On July 6th, eighteen jolly campers left Braintree as the first party to open the Manomet camp for the summer season. The boys found everything ready for them to enter at once into the real activities and fun of camp life. On the first night in camp the campers gathered around the camp fire for their first camp sing. On Tuesday the boys played baseball and enjoyed their first swim in the salt water. That night a bon fire on the shore furnished a fine opportunity for story telling by the leaders of the camp.

Wednesday night the boys experienced a rainy night, but indoor games in the fine living room made the evening one of the most enjoyable.

The next day an athletic meet and a ball game were held. Both of these events furnished opportunity for the boys to get points for their honor emblem, for which all the boys are working hard.

In order to wear an honor emblem a boy must be able to swim fifty yards row a boat a certain distance in a stated time, participate in some camp entertainment, be able to tell ten different trees, see and name five different birds, go on an organized hike of not less than five miles, win at least five points in athletic meets, make something for camp, help make something for camp and finally get the approval of the leaders.

The camp base ball team has played two games with Manomet teams and the camp team won both times.

Saturday night a good old fashioned camp jolly was held around the fire place. On Sunday there were many visitors at the camp, and the cook fornished a dinner for forty. Two religious services were held, both being conducted by Mr. Gumb, the camp superintendent.

On Monday more boys arrived in camp and now the membership at camp including the leaders is twenty-nine.

Monday night a new event, known as "The Orange Hunt" was conducted and furnished great amusement for all. Tuesday night was college night when, around a big bon fire on the shore Mr. Phelps the cook, told of his experiences at Wesleyan and Mr. Gumb told of his college life at Brown

Wednesday noon the boys left on an over night hike to Cape Cod Canal.

With a good camp equipment and a fine group of campmates every boy is learning what real camp life and friendship is. All are looking forward to the coming days of camp and all are striving to make the Manomet camp this year the best yet.

Those who joined the campers last Monday were: Stanley Sylvester, Elwyn Sylvester, Stanley Ellis, Alexander Robb, Harry Allison, William Allison, Alfred Mack, John Marr, Clifton Harlow, Dwight Chandler and Thomas Barrie.

NEW LAWYER.

Edward A. Avery, who recently opened an office in the Durgin & Merrill block and joined the ranks of practicing attorneys in this city, is the son of Judge Albert E. Avery of the District Court. He was graduated from the Boston University law school in 1913, and was admitted to the bar last fall. He is well known in this city and is prominent in social affairs in Braintree where he makes his home.

Granite Cutting Branches Adopt Resolutions Relative to Educating the Immigrants

Respect for Law Taught by Placing All on Equal Footing

At the meetings of Granite Cutters, Polishers and Tool Sharpeners, held this week, much local and international business was transacted.

Frank McCarthy, organizer for the American Federation of Labor, addressed each meeting asking the members to help in reorganizing a Central Labor Union in this city. The matter has been taken under advisement, but it is very likely that if no guarantee can be given that the C. L. U. will not be conducted along cleaner lines than what has obtained heretofore, the Granite Cutters' Organization will have nothing to do with same.

Nominations for delegates of the A. F. of L. convention to be held in Philadelphia in November was as follows,—The Granite Cutters nominated Alfred Henry of Mt. Airy, N. C., and James Sweeney of New York. The Polishers nominated Malcolm McLeod of Quincy, and the Tool Sharpeners nominated James Garvey of Midvale, Utah. Every branch of the G. C. I. A. will nominate this month if it sees fit. The nominations are then acted on by referendum vote, and the ten nominees receiving the highest number of votes will then be voted on by referendum, and the two of these ten receiving the highest number of votes will be the delegates to accompany International President James Duncan to the A. F. of L. convention.

Much discussion has been going on among the workingmen in this city relative to the committees and meetings which have been appointed and held in connection with the idea of helping immigrants to become educated to meet the conditions which they find on arriving in this country.

It is the consensus of opinion among the working people in this city that it is impossible for a working man to live according to the American standard if he is receiving pay which precludes the possibility of getting the actual necessities of life for himself and family.

The cost of living has increased to such an extent that the granite cutting trades particularly which are paid at not less than $3.25 per day find it very hard to make ends meet.

What can be expected of a poor fellow who has to keep a wife and family on pay ranging from 9 cents to 20 cents an hour. Meetings and adoptions of resolutions will not help matters of this kind, what should be done is to give the immigrant a living wage.

One other phase of this question is the idea of training the immigrant to respect American laws and institutions. The granite cutting trades respect laws and also the rights of personal and private property. This has been proven many times, because in all the labor troubles that have occurred in Quincy in connection with the granite industry, there has been absolutely no destruction of property.

Having all these matters in mind, the granite cutting branches referred the matter to their legislative committees composed of James Reid, Alex Ross and Ed. McGinty, and the following set of resolutions were drawn up and adopted:

Whereas, a number of meetings have been recently held, and various committees have been appointed by different organizations to consider and devise ways and means of educating the immigrants who come to Quincy, so that they may be better fitted to meet conditions which to them are new and to inculcate respect for American institutions and laws, Be it

Resolved: That in the opinion of the Quincy branches of the G. C. I. A. in meeting assembled one of the best methods to use in so fitting an immigrant be he English speaking or otherwise, is to pay him a decent day's pay which will enable him and his family to live as we expect American citizens should live, to be properly fed and clothed, and be it further

Resolved, That we strenuously protest against the exploitation of immigrants by large corporations particularly, said exploitation causing these people to be herded together like so many cattle, because of the miserable pittances paid to them for their labor, and be it further,

Resolved, That in our opinion, respect for American laws and instiutions can only be learned when these laws and institutions place all on an equal footing, not by haling into court, simple immigrants, charging and fining them for a violation of the law for playing a game in their homes on Sunday, when it is a well known fact that another set of our citizens flagrantly and openly violate the law nearly every Sunday. Be it still further

Resolved,—That a copy of these resolutions be sent to His Honor Mayor John L. Miller.

Garfield Holbrook of 163 Independence avenue is visiting his aunt in Loraine, Wyoming.

ASSAULTED IN BOSTON

Unknown Man Comes to Quincy For Relief

A man who declined to give his name reached Quincy at 6 o'clock Friday evening and complained of severe pains in the jaw. He called at the office of Dr. J. P. Murphy, a dentist in the Durgin and Merrill blockk, who found that his jaw had been broken and that a crown was missing from a back tooth.

The man said that while interring with the work of a pickpocket in Boston, who attempted to take the watch of his companion, he was assaulted by another "dip."

He remembers vagtely that he lost consciousness following a punch on the jaw, and when he revived he was in a doorway. He immediately started for his home in Weymouth but because of the extreme pain he was obliged to leave the train at the Quincy station.

When he reached the office of Dr. Murphy his jaw was badly swollen. The punch fractured the jaw between the roots of the tooth. After some treatment the man agreed to call today to have the jaw set.

He said he was employed on a Weymouth farm and with a chum had gone to Boston to see the sights. He complained about the pain but seemed to be more concerned when he thought of six cows he said he would have to milk in the morning.

WHITWELL ST. HOUSE STRUCK

It was a right smart shower that passed over Quincy shortly before 8 o'clock this morning, and while it served to cool the air for a few minutes it was not many minutes before the sun came out hot again and the humidity seemed to be trying to rise to its highest point.

There was a slight shower during the early morning about daylight and shortly after 7 o'clock there was a sound of distant thunder. This increased as the shower came nearer, and at 7.45 the air was full of vivid flashes of lighting and the roll of thunder became heavier. Then it began to rain and for a few minutes the rain came down almost by the bucketfull.

It was during the heaviest of the shower that there was an unusually sharp flash, giving evidence that something had been struck near at home. A few minutes later the sounding of the fire alarm was convincing evidence that a building had been struck.

The fire alarm was from Box 21 located at the corner of Granite and Whitwell streets, although the building struck was on top of Whitwell street and nearer some other box.

The house was that of James Dean at 210 Whitwell street, and it was the chimney on the south side which had been the mark for the bolt of lightning. The bolt knocked over the chimney and then ran along the ridgepole setting it on fire. No fire however got into the attic although a hole was burnt in the ridge pole. Chief Billings says that $10 will cover the damage.

The removing of the trees on the First church grounds makes quite a difference in the appearance of the church yard.

INJURY TO SUPT. GAVIN

William A. Gavin of the Fire department fire alarm service received a painful injury Friday afternoon when he was thrown from the fire alarm wagon while it was going down the hill on Revere road. As the wagon was going down the hill part of the harness broke and the horse started to run away. In trying to check the animal the team was thrown one side and Mr. Gavin was thrown out. He landed heavily on his side and elbow, a large piece of flesh being gouged from the elbow causing a very painful injury. He was taken to the office of Dr. Sheahan by Edward D. Barret.

After having his injury dressed he returned to the Central station and reported for duty, but the injury was so painful that Chief Billings sent him home. Mr. Gavin returned to duty this morning although his elbow is still very painful.

HELP APPRECIATED.

Mrs. Herbert W. Pinkham of Wollaston treasurer of the Quincy Women's Club, has received the following letter from Salem which is self explanatory:

"Your plan of keeping the heavier clothing till the Fall, is quite wise and we should be glad to have you act accordingly, remembering that we can call for it later.

We are very greatly obliged to the Quincy Woman's Club for their practical interest in and gifts for our sufferers, who still, in long lines, are daily waiting at the General Relief Station for clothing. While many have left the city, returning to Canada, or to other manufacturing places, most of those burned out have to stay here, as they are from foreign countries and have no place else to which they may go. The net result of "Tag Day" in Quincy, in relief of the Salem sufferers—was most satisfactory, both to your givers and to those who are benefitted by it.

JOHNSON AND WALL SPEAK AT ATLANTIC

Mosquitoes and Politics at Meeting of the Atlantic Improvement Association

Board of Trade Will Help Fight Mosquito

It was not the intention of the Atlantic Improvement Association to have a political meeting last evening but it so happened that two of the speakers were Mayoralty candidates and with them were some of their supporters.

President Mosses called the meeting to order, but at his request F. E. Brooks presided.

The extermination of the mosquito was the main topic for discussion. Hon. John O. Hall, the secretary of the Board of Trade, and Charles H. Johnson, chairman of the civic committee of the board were guests, also James E. Wall of Houghs Neck.

The entertainment included an illustrated talk by Mr. Cabell, songs by W. J. McDevitt and addresses by the above gentlemen.

The first speaker was William Kenyon of Squantum who gave an interesting account of the work that had been carried on in Squantum exterminating the mosquito pest. Mr. Kenyon told how by an occasional spraying of the breeding places Squantum had now become a place where one could enjoy life without constantly fighting mosquitoes.

Mr. Wall was introduced as a Mayoralty candidate, but confined his talk mainly to Houghs Neck, telling of the struggles to obtain improvements.

Mr. Johnson, although introduced as a Mayoralty candidate said he did not appear in that capacity at this time, but would be in field this fall. He said it was the desire of President Hamilton of the Board of Trade to cooperate with local improvement associations and that they would be pleased to help fight the mosquito. The Board of Trade works for the whole city and desires to build up each community.

Secretary Hall spoke along the same lines relative to co-operation.

It was voted that a committee be appointed to solicit funds to exterminate the mosquito at Atlantic.

Mrs. William Hartley of Atlantic street returned Wednesday after attending the funeral of her father at Peaks Island, Maine.

Most vacationists lose their trunk key before getting to their destination, but the lock can always be opened with an axe.

The country horses are getting used to automoibles, but goodness knows what they will do when they see a haycart.

After spending the permanent work appropriation in raking muck from the gutters into the center of the highways, many roadmakers go home with confidence that it will last until the next rain.

What city will be first in announcing a reduction in tax rate this year? Somehow the towns seem to have a monopoly of the art, no town thus far reporting an increase.

As soon as the Commerce Commission tells the railroads what increases they can have, the employes can file their demand for a raise double the amount the roads are to get.

Quincy is up and coming when in one issue of the Daily Ledger Quincy men are mentioned for Congress for the State ticket and for county offices. It was a Quincy man who as Governor signed the act incorporating the town of Quincy, but since he retired, no Governor has hailed from the City of Presidents.

Unless somebody gets a move on, the work of grading the Adams school lot will not be completed before the schools reopens in September. Now that bids have been opened the contract should be let, with a requirement that the work shall be done before August 20.

Now that the club women of the city have shown what they can do in raising funds for Salem, they should have the hearty co-operation of Quincy people in supporting the Visiting Nurses, the Day Nursery, the Associated Charities, summer schools and other philanthropic work in which they are interested. Hereafter men may hesitate to criticise the work of club women.

BRAINS IN BASEBALL.

Peole who never see a ball game always imagine the bleacher crowd as an assemblage of sports. They would expect to find there incessant cigarette smokers and fellows with "highwater pants," older men who came to bet, with a sprinkling of flashily dressed women.

The crowds at the ball parks of the bigger leagues include many of these types. Also there are great numbers of clean cut, modestly dressed business and professional men, whose presence is a credit to any gathering.

There is something in it that appeals to all interested by human achievement. It has its own spectacular power. A hard batted ball, a speeding runner, an agile stop, a swift, accurate throw, a sure catch, these are beautiful forms of human skill.

Equally also, it is a battle of organization and mastery of personal force. It is not enough to assemble a group of men who can bat, throw and catch a ball with great speed, strength and accuracy.

It is also prearranging the movements of these men so that they fit into each other like the levers of a machine. It is a question of so winning their loyalty that they will not play simply for a salary and their own averages.

A man who is quick witted enough to play baseball is apt also to be quick to take offence, imaginative, sensitive, morbid. The balance between competing players needs to be held with absolute fairness, based on a competent judgment of their play.

The manager of a professional ball team has the problem of maintaining a balance of justice between the personal interest of his players, so that if any man gets a grouch, it shall be of his own creation. Then there is that indefinable power of creating enthusiasm, which radiates from some men, while others leave their associates wholly cold. When one sees a group of players having all these qualities of skill, led with all this enthusiasm and systematic work and quick wit he sees a porduct into which there has entered a plentiful supply of brains.

WILL LOSE NO TIME ON SHORE

Huerta and Blanquet Will Hustle Aboard a Cruiser

ON WAY TO PUERTO MEXICO

Destination Said to Be Either Jamaican or Cuban Port—Passage Through Country Where There Are Many Revolutionists Causes Friends of Former Leaders to Worry

Puerto Mexico, July 18.—The first of the troop trains accompanying the Huerta special arrived here shortly after 7 o'clock last night. Another followed a few minutes later.

All arrangements were made early in the day for the reception of Huerta and Blanquet, and the stage was so set that they could enter the city and board the Dresden or Bristol and put out to sea so quickly and quietly as to rob their flight of all dramatic elements.

The tracks were laid so that the special train could be pulled along the wharf close to the water, and the ex-president and ex-minister of war thus would be enabled to reach a launch in less than a dozen steps.

None of the messages sent to Huerta's wife or to General Camerena, commanding the special guard here, indicated Huerta's plans. Not even the captains of the German and British vessels had definite instructions. They were to leave the decision to Huerta himself.

It is generally believed, however, that Huerta and Blanquet will go aboard the Dresden, and the other refugees, including Senora Huerta and Senora Blanquet, aboard the Bristol, and that both cruisers will proceed for Jamaica or Havana.

It was a day of sharp anxiety for the older members of the party, especially the wives of the two men who were passing through a country where a considerable number of revolutionists are known to be operating. They could not rid themselves of the fear that the revolutionists would in some way seek revenge on their husbands.

Both are downcast an unresponsive to efforts to arouse their spirits. They spent most of the day on deck chairs aboard the Bristol, but the younger people wandered, somewhat listlessly, about the railroad yards and visited the neighboring stores, which resemble the stores in the small towns of the United States.

The hot weather has forced the young women and girls to resurrect from their trunks their summer dresses and clothing, seldom used in the capital.

Fall of San Luis Potosi

Brownsville, Tex., July 18.—San Luis Potosi has been surrendered to the constitutionalists, according to unofficial dispatches received in Matamoras, opposite Brownsville. The messages, which were sent from Monterey, gave no details.

TO SAVE WAGES OF GUARD

Convicts Working on New Jersey Turnpike Will Wear Bells

Newton, N. J., July 18.—The Sussex county board of freeholders having decided that it is too expensive to hire a guard to watch six prisoners working on the road along the Tuttle Corner-Layton turnpike, have struck upon an odd plan to do away with the guard and yet prevent the prisoners' escape.

A chain, with bell attached, will be fastened on the neck or wrists of each convict. If the men run the bells will be heard, or farmers seeing men holding their hands about their necks or wrists will know they are prisoners trying to escape.

They will not be permitted to go far from the labor camp, and should they do so any citizen will be paid 25 cents to return them or notify the authorities.

SAVED BY SHERIFF

Slayer of Two Men Barely Escapes Vengeance of Lynchers

Moundsville, W. Va., July 18.—A determined attempt was made to lynch Albert Moore, held in the county jail here for the murder of Harry Purdy and William Aron, who were shot to death while rowing in the Ohio river.

The sheriff hurried Moore through the back door of the jail to the state penitentiary nearby, while the crowd was thundering at the front door. Moore was captured on the Ohio side by a striking miner.

Kemp Released by President

Washington, July 18.—Dr. Thomas J. Kemp, son-in-law of Senator Fletcher of Florida, convicted of abetting an illegal operation and sentenced to two years, has been ordered released by President Wilson.

Ban on New Haven Bonds

Hartford, July 18.—The state bank commissioners issued a list of bonds which can no longer be purchased by savings banks. The list includes fifty-two bonds of the New Haven road.

Rear Admiral Robeson Dead

Walpole, N. H., July 18.—Rear Admiral Henry B. Robeson, retired, 72, a Civil war veteran and one time commandant of the navy yard at Portsmouth, N. H., died at his home here.

FIVE ARE DROWNED

Two Women and Three Children Lost When Boat Is Swamped

Manchester, N. H., July 18.—The attempt of Miss Annie Burrans, a student at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston, to climb into a rowboat in which were her sister, Mrs. Minnie Mill, the latter's two children, and her niece, Dorothy Burrans of Utica, N. Y., aged 4 years, caused the drowning of all five.

The accident occurred in Naticook lake in South Merrimac. The summer home of Mrs. Mill adjoins the lake. Miss Burrans had been swimming, while her sister and the three children rowed slowly about in the boat.

Miss Burrans grasped the stern of the flat-bottomed boat to get in. She had difficulty in getting over the side, and forced the stern down. The children became excited and ran toward her, the added weight causing the boat to settle fast. Soon it had sunk and all were drowned.

Mrs. Mill was the widow of William R. Mill, who dropped dead suddenly at his summer home two weeks ago. Her two daughters were Marjorie, 3, and Evelyn, 6.

NO LIGHT ON MYSTERY

Identity of Woman Found Dead In Water Not Yet Known

Boston, July 18.—An entire day's hard work by the state police who are investigating the death of the young woman who was found drowned off the Winthrop beach was productive of nothing more than the realization of the fact that they have a first-class mystery on their hands.

Since the elimination of Viola P. Walton, whose description as given by a soldier at Fort Heath tallied almost exactly with that of the dead woman, but whose whereabouts were learned yesterday, the mystery has deepened.

The general conclusion has been reached that the girl's body was carried to the spot where it was found and either thrown into the ocean, or the unconscious girl was allowed to lie on the beach till the incoming tide reached her and drowned her.

DECIDE TO ACCEPT MEDIATION OFFER

Engine Crews of Western Railroads Will Not Srtike Now

Chicago, July 18.—Danger of a strike of the engine crews of western railroads was deferred last night when the representatives of the men accepted an offer of mediation by Chairman Chambers of the federal board of mediation and conciliation. The meeting with the full board will begin here July 20.

The offer of mediation by Chambers came as a result of a request by Chairman Trenholm of the committee of general managers, which was made in spite of a formal announcement that the employes would decline to accept mediation.

The latter had charged that in the past the railroads had refused to abide by the findings of arbitration boards.

NO APOLOGY TO MAKE

Blease Will Empty Penitentiary and Turn It Into Hospital

Columbia, S. C., July 18.—Governor Blease, who has pardoned 1200 convicts in the last three years, intends to clean out the state penitentiary by Aug. 1 and turn it into a hospital. There are less than sixty convicts left. His average has been something over one pardon a day; to empty the penitentiary by Aug. 1, he must average about two a day.

"I have no apology to make for a single parole, commutation or pardon that I have granted," he says. "I work by the Golden Rule, and whoever objects to that isn't a Christian, but a plain hypocrite."

MASQUERADED AS GIRL

Negro Spent Eight Months In Women's Department In Jail

New Haven, July 18.—Arrested on a charge of theft, Ida Johnson, a negro "girl," turned out to be a man.

Orme Wilson is his name, and he has been masquerading in girl's clothes for years. He told Chief of Detectives Donnelly that he had just served eight months in the county jail in Bridgeport, putting in the entire time in the women's department.

"Didn't you feel embarrassed?" asked Donnelly.

"No, not after the first week or two," Wilson replied.

Votes For Women Rejected

Atlanta, July 18.—An adverse report was recommended in the senate on the measure to give Georgia women the right to vote in state and county elections. Similar action was taken recently by a house committee.

Two Killed by "Twister"

Henderson, Ky., July 18.—Two persons were killed, several others were injured and $150,000 damage was caused when a cyclone struck here.

Baby carriage was given to a Thompson (Conn.) man, sixty years old, as a premium for getting married a short time ago. He has just sued for divorce.

$20,000 BAIL IS FURNISHED

Mrs. Carman Is Liberated After Her Arraignment

"NOT GUILTY" PLEA ENTERED

Superseding Indictment May Be Returned Against Woman Charged With First Degree Manslaughter For Having Caused Death of Mrs. Bailey—Going on Month's Trip

Mineola, N. Y., July 18.—Mrs. Florence Carman was arraigned in the supreme court here before Justice Van Siclen, on an indictment charging her with manslaughter in the first degree for having caused the death of Mrs. Louise Bailey, a patient of the defendant's husband. She pleaded not guilty, and was given two weeks in which to change her plea or demur to the indictment.

Counsel for Mrs. Carman suggested that she be liberated under $20,000 bail, and to this District Attorney Smith agreed.

The prisoner was wan and pale when brought from the jail to the courtroom. Her husband, Dr. Edward Carman, stood beside her.

Smith Cox and Ernest C. Randall of Freeport, Mrs. Carman's home, furnished the bond and she was released.

New evidence is reported discovered against Mrs. Carman. Celia Coleman, the negro maid in the Carman home, is said to have told the district attorney that Mrs. Carman, on the night she entered the kitchen from the outside right after the fatal shot was fired, acted as though she were hiding something under her left arm. The maid in her previous "amplified" statement had said Mrs. Carman did not have a gun in her hand.

It is reported that the prosecuting authorities hope that a stronger superseding indictment may be returned later on the basis of new evidence. This evidence, it is said, was discovered about the time the manslaughter charge was decided upon.

Dr. Carman announced that he would take his wife away on an automobile trip of a month's duration, to make her forget the horror of the past two weeks.

Mrs. Carman's second plea to the grand jury to hear her story was refused after a long wrangle. Many of the jurors, it was said, had tears in their eyes after reading the petition.

THE BARLATO MURDER

Police Chief Says Woman Confessed to Killing Her Husband

Trenton, July 18.—Chief Kilfoyle of the Princeton police department, who captured Mrs. Virginia Barlato, the Italian woman alleged to have been an accomplice in the death of her husband at Beverly, Mass., claims to have secured an admission from the woman that she committed the crime.

When seen at the Mercer county jail here the woman stated that she did not know who killed her husband. She admitted there had been an argument between him and Gaetanc Divaio, who fled here with the woman, and is under arrest as an accomplice, and that possibly there might have been serious trouble.

The woman is said to be unconcerned. Her 17-months-old baby is under the care of the jail matron.

JUROR IS TAKEN SICK

Court Puts Wakefield Trial Over to Next Tuesday

New Haven, July 18.—The sudden illness of a juror caused an abrupt adjournment until next Tuesday of the trial of Mrs. Bessie J. Wakefield for the murder of her husband, William O. Wakefield.

While testimony was being taken, Juror John L. Hubbell, who is 71 years old, asked to be and was excused. Later Judge Reed, who is presiding, was informed that Hubbell was quite ill of stomach trouble. He then adjourned court.

FOR STEEL FURNITURE

Treasury Department Favors $75,000 For Boston Custom House

Washington, July 18.—Seventy-five thousand dollars for steel furniture for the new custom house at Boston will be recommended by the senate appropriations committee. The money will be asked for in an amendment to the general deficiency bill, about to be reported.

The treasury department is in favor of the appropriation. In fact the amendment authorizing the appropriation was drawn in the department.

Hot Day at Boston

Boston, July 18.—Three deaths and sixteen prostrations was the toll taken by the heat and humidity in Boston yesterday, with the thermometer registering well toward 90 degrees, and with the humidity 21 percent above normal.

Sex Hygiene For Schools

Chicago, July 18.—Healthy marriages and instruction in sex hygiene in high schools were advocated in resolutions adopted at the closing session of the conference of alienists and neurologists from thirty-seven states.

SCISSORS PASTE

HARDLY THE RIGHT WORD.

(Haverhill Gazette.)

President Wilson predicts that there will soon be more jobs than men to fill them. Soon is hardly the right word. It will be nearly three years before a Republican president can be inaugurated.

POOR CONTRIVANCE.

(Salem News).

A three decker that occupies the entire lot and therefore forces occupants into the street, if they want to quit the house, is a poor contrivance. The News said this thing years before the late conflagration swept so many structures answering to this description from the local map. There are too many of them in all cities in this state.

DOGMATIC PRESSURE.

(Christian Register.)

We think our beliefs are our own, but if we were to examine their sources carefully we might be surprised at the result. Says a recent writer, "If we believe what we are told to believe, because we are told to believe it, we are not really believing." The educationally dogmatic pressure from the outside influences us more than w eare aware.

DUTY TO THE PUBLIC.

(New Bedford Standard.)

Mr. Crim's defense of the N. Y. N. H. & H. R. R. is not very convincing. If the New Haven has been "muckraked" it invited such treatment by its attitude toward the public. Hard times are one of the risks of business. The New Haven directors, since they were managing other people's interests, owed them the duty to be prudent and conservative, whereas, as a matter of fact, there was waste and imprudence. Nor does Mr. Crim touch on the most questionable of the transactions—the purchase of the Westchester, the millions paid to Billard and the million expended in bribes to politicians. It will take more than we have had disclosed thus far to explain away these things. Criminal convictions do not seem probable, but not every wrong is a crime, and the wrongs committed by the New Haven directors against the stockholders may be of this character. Yet they are none the less wrongs and leserving of obloquy.

ABOLITIONIST ECHOES.

Lysander S. Richards of Marshfield Hills, wrote an interesting letter with regard to old days at Island Grove park in Abington to Dr. Loring W. Puffer of Brockton, one of the speakers this year at the big, old-fashioned all-day picnic for country people arranged at the park for the Fourth of July.

Mr. Richards, as one of the elderly and well-known residents of the county, received an invitation to attend, but could not accept

"There were some anti-slavery meetings held there in the early days," he writes, "and as I was one of those then despised and persecuted Garrisonian abolitionists I should like to be there this year.

"I was associated with Garrison in those troublesome times, having employed Garrison to speak for us in Quincy, also Abby Kelly Foster, Anna Dickinson, Parker Pillsbury, Stephen C. Foster, Henry C. Wright and William Wells Brown, (fugitive slave.) I was present in Boston to witness the shameful return of Burns to slavery 60 years ago, and was also in Tremont Temple when the abolitionists were expelled and at Music Hall when Phillips was threatened by the mob during his speaking there in 1861. So you can see I was an old, dyed-in-the-wool Garrisonian Abolitionist."

THE HUGGER HAS VANISHED

Thursday and Friday evenings were quiet ones in the Bigelow Park district, and the Jack the Hugger who has been operating in this vicinity appears to have vanished. Police have been unusually vigilant, and fathers and brothers have patroled the streets but without results. No complaints were registered Friday evening.

The residents of the neighborhood, particularly the women and girls, are more or less excited over the experiences of several of their friends, and those who have occasion to use these streets in the evening view with alarm every stranger.

One young lady, who was a telephone operator in the Dorchester exchange, has resigned her position because she could not get a transfer to a day trick from the evening switch which ended so she could catch a car that arrived in City Square about 11 o'clock. She was obliged to go home without an escort and the scare she received Tuesday night has resulted in her resignation.

The police have several under suspicion and will make arrests when the opportunity presents itself. The male residents of the neighborhood will call for no police assistance and intend to take the law into their own hands.

NEW TREASURER.

A Boston paper, under date of Lewiston, Maine, says: Clarence Hanson, who has been employed for 40 years at the Lewiston Bleachery and Dye Works, nearly 36 years of that time as paymaster, has resigned to acept the position of treasurer of the East Braintree, Mass., Bleachery and Dye Works. His resignation takes effect August 31 and he will begin his dutles at East Braintree on October 1.

Mr. Hanson entered the Lewiston Bleachery as shipping clerk when a boy and after four years in that position was made paymaster.

He was treasurer for five years, clerk seventeen years and for many years a deacon of the Pates Street Baptist church and a director of the Y. M. C. A. as long as there was one there.

ARRESTED IN WOODS.

After escaping a cordon of police for four days Francisco Beccastrio surrendered to Placido Calabro, the interpreter at the Quincy District court, on Thursday and was placed under arrest on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Beccastrio admitted he shot Salvatore Apela in Hingham last Sunday and said he left the house by a rear door and entered the Weymouth woods He said he had considerable difficulty in avoiding the Weymouth and Hingham officers and when Mr. Calabro sent word through friends that if he did not surrender he would be taken by force, he accepted his terms.

He was arraigned before Judge Pratt in Abington on Thursday and was fined $100. He paid $75 on account and was given until August 24 to pay the balance. Apela at whom the shots were fired was not fatally wounded, one bullet only taking effect.

AMUSEMENTS

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

The first dramatic offering of the summer season will take place at the Majestic Theatre next week beginning Monday matinee, when the Majestic Players will offer a splendid production of Booth Tarkington's typical American Comedy "The Man From Home." The leading role of Daniel Voorhees Pike will be taken by Carl Stowe who understudied William Hodge during the record run of the play at the Park Theatre. Mr. Stowe afterward played the role himself with the greatest possible success. Other members of the remarkable cast will be Donald Meek, the well known Castle Square favorite, and now a Broadway star. Rose Morrison who needs no introduction to Boston theatre goers, and Florence Shirley and Charles Ormund, two other big local favorites. "The Man From Home" will be presented as nearly like the original as possible. No expense will be spared in the scenic and property equipment. The staging will be under the direction of Raymond Capp who brings to Boston a brilliant reputation as a director won in the largest cities of the West. This summer engagement of the Majestic Players promises to to eclipse anything of its kind ever before attempted. As proof of this one needs only to be told a few of the stars and plays which will be presented from week to week.

SHUBERT THEATRE.

People who have never hunted wild animals in Africa, and who have never seen the Paul J. Rainey hunt motion pictures, have an exciting new experience awaiting them at the Shubert Theatre where Mr. Rainey's 1914 series are being presented for a limited engagement. The pictures begin with most fascinating views of many animals gathered about the water holes which are the refreshment and promenade places of the desert. Ungainly giraffes stalk about and straddle the holes to bend their long necks for a drink. Herds of zebras gallop about. Wildebeest, hartebeest, herds of aurochs, bulls and cows, squat, ugly warthogs, African deer and gazelles, all sorts of animals swarm about the holes, baboons, carrying their babies on their backs, fight with each other, according to the laws of the jungle. Elephants come to wallow and spray the cooling water over each other from their trunks. All these animals are seen at a close range, which gives a perfect acquaintance with their appearance and habits. Later the spectator finds himself in the midst of herds of wild buffaloes, pictures taken at tremendous risk. Views are also given of the various species of deer and gazelles, in which interest in the animals cannot entirely blot out appreciation of the extreme skill with which these pictures have been taken under most difficult conditions of light and heat and of the artistic effect of their composition. A cheetah hunt, in which the great cat is finally brought down from the highest branches of a tree by the poisoned arrows of the natives, comes in the most thrilling parts of the series, which concludes with a real lion hunt. From the gathering of vultures and eagles about the carcass of a buck that a lion has slain, the putting of the hounds on the scent, the long chase over the veldt, to the final facing of the lion at bay, the whole hunt is seen. The last moment is tragically dramatic. The huge beast, infuriated, charges from the bush straight at the camera, and is brought down by a shot at close range. Something of pathos is mingled with the fascination of watching the final death struggle. Then the charge is repeated for your benefit, in case you have missed any of the details the first time. The lights snap on while you are still staring in excitement, and your hunt in the African veldt is over.

LOVE AND A COTTAGE.

The Boston Herald comments editorially on the provision in the will of Col. William B. White, late of this city:

"What is a house and $500 compared with love? asked a Quincy woman who under the will of her uncle, was to lose the legacy he had intended for her if she contracted an 'unwise marriage,' which he believed that she contemplated. The testator doubtless had the best intentions in the world, although his niece informed an interviewer that he 'interpreted' her wrongly.

"Relatives are prone to interest themselves in the love affairs of the younger generation, although their efforts are not uniformly successful. If one has no money to leave it is pretty hard to extend this friendly interest beyond the grave. But the Quincy testator was able to impose a substantial fine if his views on the subject of matrimony were not carried out. But love laughs at lawyers as at locksmiths. Were Dan Cupid retained as attorney for the restricted beneficiary, there is little doubt but that he could pick some flaw in the will sufficient to overturn its harsh provision.

"But what woman about whom has been woven the spell of love would care for a moment whether it was a $500 or a $5,000 gift that she must relinquish? A house and $500 might appeal to a prudent man contemplating matrimony, but to a romantic lady, never."

WOMAN SUFFRAGE FIGURES.

The Woman's Home Companion, one of the largest and best known women's magazines published in this country, recently took a vote on the question of suffrage among severa lthousand of its readers. One of the questions asked was the following: "Shall the Companion take a strong editorial stand for or against Woman Suffrage?" Those who were opposed to the magazine taking a stand numbered 1,676; 751 believed that it should declare itself for suffrage; 340 wished a stand against suffrage; while 1,273 were not interested in the subject.

Another question asked was as follows: "Or shall the Companion merely publish articles from time to time from people who can write intelligently on one side or the other?"

Those favoring articles on both sides numbered 3,055; those for suffrage only, 186; those against, 51; thos favoring no articles whatever on the subject, 65; not interested, 683.

While those who definitely favored suffrage greatly outnumbered those who declared themselves against it, the overwhelming vote was for articles on both sides of the question.

DREADNOUGHT IS SUPREME ON SEA

Submarines and Aeroplanes Limited, Says Admiral.

NEVER HAVE HAD REAL TEST

Denies That Navies of the World Will Soon Discard Sea Fighting Monsters For Simpler Craft of the Air and Beneath the Water—Dreadnoughts to Remain Great Fighting Power.

That submarines and aeroplanes are not likely soon to supplant Dreadnoughts in naval warfare was the opinion expressed by Admiral Yates Stirling, U. S. N., retired, at his home in Chicago.

He was discussing a recent letter of Sir Percy Scott to one of the New York papers, in which he prophesied the doom of the Dreadnoughts and the substitution of the submarines and aeroplanes.

"Whenever anything new is invented in the line of warfare there is a general belief that the new discovery will take the place of the old methods used and that the latter will become obsolete," explained Admiral Stirling. "An example of this is the gun that was invented to fight against the infantry. While it did do away with the old way of fighting, such as the Roman phalanx formation, the infantry is still in the field fighting, but the method of formation has changed. Now, instead of forming the phalanx, the infantry scatters and does not fight in masses. It is therefore, to me, plain that, while the submarines and aeroplanes may at some time play an important part in warfare, they will only change the mode of fighting of the Dreadnoughts and will not make them obsolete.

"There is another theory that can be advanced—that the submarines as well as the aeroplanes have never been put to a real test. They were not used to any extent in the Russo-Japanese war, and when they were they met with little or no success. There is also great danger in both of the new inventions for war. The submarine is handicapped, inasmuch as it has a vision at the most of only about 500 yards, and this only through the periscope, and it must come to the surface of the water. Numerous accidents have happened to the submarines in which they have gone to the bottom of the sea and their crews have been lost. The United States has been fortunate in this respect, as it has not lost a single one, but the English and French governments have lost a number.

Can't Go Far From Base.

"Another thing that must be observed in both the submarine and the aeroplane is that they cannot go any distance from home, but must continually be in touch with their base. In the case of the submarines their base is called the parent ship, and they must always be in close touch with this ship in case of trouble. The aeroplane must also have this base, for it can stay in the air only a certain length of time. Of course both are useful, but they will never, in my humble opinion, take the place of the Dreadnoughts.

"There is now under consideration in this country the building of what will be known as a submarine cruiser, and this may be one of the greatest advancements of the modern age. It must also be taken into consideration that with the present success that has been achieved with the torpedo the submarine would have rather rough sailing, for these are becoming more and more efficient and can be fired with twice as much accuracy as they have been before. The Dreadnoughts will always be the main fighting power on the seas, and it would be unwise to think that a country having nothing but submarines and aeroplanes would be a match for another having battleships and cruisers, as well as the large fighting monsters. It must also be remembered that every country will have a certain number of submarines, and these will take care, in a way, of those of the enemy."

PAINTS HIS WOE ON HIS BARN

Town Meeting and Court Failing Pigot, He Appeals in Big Letters.

A sign on the barn of John J. Pigot of Riverhead, N. Y., contains the following in large white letters on a black background:

"A thief is in possession of farms and lands hereabouts. Law, court and perjurers are friends of the thief."

Pigot, who is apparently an educated man, past middle age and reputed to be wealthy, went to Riverhead from Brooklyn two years ago. He bought a farm on Mill pond, the water rights of which are controlled by the Riverhead Electric Light company.

Soon afterward he complained to the company that his land was being flooded because the water was held back for power. This was denied.

Then Pigot hired a hall, invited the public and made an address. He said Riverhead was controlled by a "ring" and assailed several leading citizens.

Subsequently he sued the electric company for $2,000, alleging that his farm had been damaged. The action was decided by Justice Blackmar in favor of the company.

RECORD BASEBALL GAME

Adams and Marquard Pitch Twenty-One Innings at Pittsburg

Bescher's single and a home run by Doyle gave the Giants a 3 to 1 victory over the Pirates in a 21-inning pitchers' duel between Marquard and Adams in the game at Pittsburg. It was the longest game ever played in the National league.

From the close of the third inning until the opening of the twenty-first inning neither team was able to score, so effective was the pitching. Sharp fielding characterized the work of both sides.

MILITANT SLASHES MILLAIS PAINTING

Portrait of Carlyle Damaged With Butcher's Cleaver

London, July 18.—A militant suffragette slashed with a butcher's cleaver the portrait of Sir Thomas Carlyle, painted by Sir John Millais and hanging in the national portrait gallery.

The woman succeeded in striking the picture several blows before the nearest attendant could reach her. The glass covering the painting was smashed and a slit made in the picture from the top of Carlyle's head right through the face to the chin.

The attendants had the greatest difficulty in preventing Miss Hunt from doing further damage. She struggled desperately, but eventually was secured and handed over to the police. She gave her name as Anna Hunt.

MRS. ANGLE TEARS ARMS WITH TEETH

Will Be Continuously Watched by Strong Trained Nurse

Stamford, Conn., July 18.—Mrs. Helen M. Angle is under guard of a strong nurse in her cell at police headquarters following her attack on herself, when she tore pieces of flesh from her arms with her teeth. Worry over her arrest in connection with the mysterious death of Waldo R. Ballou is believed to have driven the woman delirious.

Her personal physician advised that she be taken to a sanatorium and the chief of police consented, but sanatorium officials refused her admittance, claiming the ensuing notoriety would injure their institution.

A strong trained nurse was then employed to guard Mrs. Angle in her cell and she will be watched day and night.

ASKED TO GIVE UP $306,000,000

Court Action Against the New Haven Directors.

ORDER OF NOTICE IS ISSUED

Defendants Must Show Cause Why Receiver Should Not Be Named—To Be So Limited as Not to Interfere With Railroad's Operation—Long Bill of Complaint

Boston, July 18.—The New Haven restitution suit, so-called, which has been in preparation for some time by Attorney Whipple, was filed in the supreme court here.

Judge Braley issued an order of notice returnable next Friday to show cause why a receiver, as prayed for, should not be appointed and why injunction against disposition of defendants' stock should not be issued.

Appointment of a receiver for the New Haven, to prosecute claims for an aggregate of $306,000,000 alleged to be due its treasury under the Sherman law, is sought—the authority asked for such appointee to be, however, so limited as not to interfere with administration of current affairs of the corporation and operation of its transportation system.

The litigation is in the form of an equity action entered in court through the office of Whipple, Sears & Ogden as attorneys for trustees under the will of Olea Bull Vaughn. They own fifty shares of New Haven stock and bring the action "in behalf of themselves and all other stockholders of said corporation who may become parties." The defendants include various New Haven directors since 1903 and estates of deceased directors.

The bill of complaint declares that the defendants, on account of breach of directors' duty, chiefly through causing the New Haven to acquire illegally its Boston and Maine, trolley and steamship properties, are bound to pay to the New Haven $162,000,000 withdrawn therefrom wrongfully and for illegal uses.

It is alleged that the losses resulting from these acquisitions approximate $102,000,000, and that under the federal anti-trust act the New Haven is entitled to recover from the defendants threefold that sum—or an amount which figures up to the sum of $306,000,000 above mentioned.

The bill of complaint is a long one and recites the important incidents in the transactions whereby the New Haven company acquired the various properties that constitute the present New England transportation system. It names the items of cost, valuations and expenditures reported in judicial proceedings, official investigations, decisions and reports.

AWAITS WILSON'S APPROVAL

McReynolds Preparing to File Suit Against the New Haven

Washington, July 18.—Negotiations between the New Haven railroad and the department of justice to effect a peaceful dissolution of that system apparently come to an end and unless there are unforseeen developments, the government will file its Sherman lawsuit to force a dissolution next week.

The bill against the New Haven virtually is complete, and finishing touches will be put upon it immediately. Before it is filed Attorney General McReynolds will confer with President Wilson, lay the whole New Haven case before him, and ask for presidential approval.

McReynolds is said to be loath to take the case into court, but to feel that there is no other solution of the problem of untangling the New Haven.

FOR NEGLECTING STOCK

Fines Aggregating $30,000 Imposed Upon Eight Railroads

Chicago, July 18.—Eight railroads were fined an aggregate of $30,000 by Federal Judge Landis, for violation of the law providing that live stock in transit must be fed and watered at least every 28 hours.

The roads penalized were the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific, the Chicago and Northwestern, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, Illinois Central, Baltimore and Ohio, Chicago and Great Western, Grand Trunk and the Chicago and Alton.

Protest Against Chinese Taxes

Pekin, July 18.—The American and British ministers here have lodged a strong formal protest with the Chinese government against breaches of the treaty by the governor of Chekian province through the imposition of exorbitant taxes on American and British merchandise.

Spanish Prince Weds London Girl

London, July 18.—The marriage of Prince Louis of Bourbon, cousin to the King of Spain, and Miss Beatrice Harrington, a London girl, was celebrated quietly in a London church without the knowledge of the royal family of Spain.

Girl's Assailant Lynched

Baker, Ore., July 18.—An unidentified man who had attacked an 8-year-old girl, was taken from his captors, a party of ranchers, who were taking his to jail, by twelve masked men, and lynched.

Noble and the Canal Locks.

Alfred Noble rendered a unique engineering service to the United States at a critical moment. He prevented it from making the blunder of building a sea level canal at the isthmus.

All the foreign engineers and three of the American engineers united in a majority report advising the construction of a sea level canal. Five American engineers, with Mr. Noble at the head, stood out in favor of a lock canal. We say "Mr. Noble at the head" because from his long experience in connection with the lock at Sault Ste Marie he was better able than any engineer upon the commission to speak authoritatively with respect to the construction and operation of great ship canal locks. To Alfred Noble's discerning wisdom and independent judgment and to his willingness to stand in a minority in defense of what he believed to be right the country owes it today that it did not undertake what we now know would have been the folly of a sea level canal at Panama.—Engineering News.

Checking Up.

A Providence merchant believed thoroughly in advertising.

"I get queer answers sometimes," said he, "when I ask my customers, as I frequently do, what publication they saw my ad. in.

"As a rule they reply courteously enough, but sometimes a man takes the question as an affront. One pompous old fellow told me it was none of my business. Another advised me to hire a checking clerk. One languid and nonchalant young man referred me to his valet. But I was worst taken back by a roughly dressed customer to whom I put the usual question:

"'What magazine, may I ask, did you see my ad. in?'

"'In all of them, sir,' he replied indignantly. 'Did you think, sir, from my appearance, that I read only one?'"—Buffalo Express.

An Expensive Dish.

Caruso, the great Italian singer, dined at a private house in London, and he was so pleased with a dish of macaroni that the cook had sent up to the table that he insisted on going down to the kitchen to offer his thanks in person. Not only did he thank the lady, but he offered her the choice of a ticket to hear him sing at Covent Garden or a song on the spot.

The cook, not trusting very much to the remembering capacity of famous tenors, said she would have the song on the spot. So Caruso, leaning against the kitchen dresser, immediately favored her with "La Donna e Mobile" in his most brilliant manner.

As somebody pointed out afterward:

"Caruso expects at least $2,500 for a private concert, which makes the cook's macaroni the most expensive dish ever eaten."

Astronomical.

Some curious and interesting astronomical phenomena are recorded in the old Chinese annals which go back to a great antiquity. In 687 B. C. a night is mentioned without clouds and without stars. This may perhaps refer to a total eclipse of the sun, but if so the eclipse is not mentioned in the Chinese list of eclipses. In the year 141 B. C. it is stated that the sun and moon appeared of a deep red color during five days, a phenomenon which caused great terror among the people. In 74 B. C. it is related that a star as large as the moon appeared and was followed in its motion by several stars of ordinary size. This probably refers to an unusually large bolide, or fire ball. In 38 B. C. a fall of meteoric stones is recorded.

The First Gold Certificate.

Piracy on the Mediterranean caused the creation of the first gold certificate, according to most authentic records. Rome bought wheat in Egypt, while Egypt had to pay tribute money for the maintenance of the Roman army. To ship gold for these payments was to tempt the ingenious pirates who infested the eastern Mediterranean. It was probably some able money lender who thought of the scheme of having the wheat importer take his gold to the Roman bank, which had a branch in Alexandria, and getting certificates, which the pirates would not dare go into Alexandria to attempt to cash. The Egyptian tax collector got his certificate from the Alexandria bank and sent it to Rome, where it was honored.—Wall Street Journal.

Unravel This.

A young woman asked the magistrate for a separation from her husband, to whom she was married only three months ago. She added:

"He is my second husband. My first is doing time."

"Then this man is not your husband?" asked the magistrate.

"Oh, yes, he is," was the reply. "I was my first husband's second wife. His first one is still alive. That is what he is doing time for."—Exchange.

Porcelain Flowers.

Artificial flowers were made in ancient times by the Egyptians. In Europe, during the eighteenth century, when there existed such a craze for porcelain, flowers were made of this substance, while the odor of the real flowers was imitated by the use of perfumes.

To Open Fruit Jars.

Place a hot stove lid on top of the cover for two minutes. The top can be easily unscrewed without injury and may be used again without fear of the fruit spoiling.—National Magazine.

STATE BIRD DAY NEXT WEEK

All Invited to Meetings at Worcester and Pittsfield

The Massachusetts State Grange has started an innovation in field days and will co-operate with the State Board of Agriculture and the State Audubon Society in calling together an assemblage of people interested in birds July 22 at Worcester and July 23 at Pittsfield.

The meeting at Worcester will be held at the beautiful and historic Green Hill Park, the former home of the well-known Green family and will centre about the old Green mansion and the lake. The various organizations will be guests of the City and the Worcester Natural History Society and make the mansion house their headquarters for the day. There will be an extensive exhibiton of appliances for attracting birds, bird books, bird laws, charts, etc. The splendid Read Collection of Worcester County birds which has been installed at the manorhouse by the Worcester Natural History Society will be on exhibition.

Experts on the feeding and care of birds will be present to explain everything and the place will be made a clearing house for the exchange of ideas and information about birds. Anyone who has any question to ask about these matters will find the answer here if it can be found anywhere. The exhibition will be open from 10 to 4. The meeting will begin at 10.30 with some contests and games under the management of Mrs. E. O. Marshall, Secretary of the State Grange Bird Committee. Those who can identify birds at sight should be on hand to compete for the prizes. People of all sizes and both sexes are admitted. Knowledge of birds is the chief requisite.

At noon there will be a basket lunch At 1.30, Raymond J. Gregory, Chairman of the State Grange Bird Committee wil conduct the opening exercises. Dr. Lemuel F. Wodward, President of the Worcester Natural History Society will welcome the visitors. State Master Chapman of Ludlow will speak for the Grange. Wilfred Wheeler of Concord, Secretary of the State Board of Agriculture, will speak for the Board. Edward Howe Forbush, State Ornithologist, author, lecturer and former president of the Worcester Natural History Society will give an illustrated talk on the movement for bird protection with some practical points in attracting birds. Winthrop Packard, author, editor, lecturer and Secretary of the Massachusetts Audubon Society will speak on Bird Music and Bird Welfare.

This meeting will be held at the Natural Amphitheatre at the lake side if the weather is favorable. If not it will be called indoors. There will be no postponement. After the exercises bird walks will be organized under the leadership of members of the Bird Committee and others.

The Man of The Merchant

He Proved His Courage and Daring.

By PETER VAUX

I.

No sooner did the senior engineer hear the peremptory summons than he scurried from the crowded wardroom.

"Poor devil! Did you notice his face, Bellamy?" said the second engineer, addressing the florid paymaster. "He went as pale as death. When the deuce does Torshell eat and sleep, Naylen? He never seems to be off duty."

The surgeon twitched his spruce eyebrows.

"Oh, Mebbe, our senior engineer—our man of the merchant marine!" said he in his usual flippant, exasperating tone. "He'll go the same as Chislehurst if worries don't cease. No human being, much less Torshell, can stand for any length of time the state of affairs in this boat's engine room and stokeholds. It's enough to drive any man mad!"

"Chisle is really not well, then? We all know the complaint of Pattenie of the Farin' Furnace, as the fo'castle terms her."

Naylen shrugged his shoulders. "Our staff engineer went into sick bay to let this R. N. R. fellow shine, did he?" was his tart rejoinder. "Too much strain and unrest have knocked him off his legs. And so Mebbe is the man we must depend on now."

Said the paymaster in his big, raucous voice: "That is what happens with these understaffed engine rooms and insufficient repairs. Here we are, the lamest of the lame ducks in the division and tailin' off the column, with a reserve chap out of an easy, oozy, ten knot merchantman handlin' our engines, and rickety old machines they are. God alone knows what'll happen with him and his untried nerve when we pick the enemy up again!"

"A jolly good thing for us the enemy are just as much worried with breakdowns," was the consoling remark from the other end of the table. "The Rurik, the Freya, the Jena and"—

"I wouldn't indict the dockyard on the insufficient repairs point, Bellamy," interrupted the second. "My lords were responsible. They wouldn't enlarge the yards, make new ones or lease out repairs, so as to have all the necessary work for mobilization coped with adequately. But it is odd how she was passed out with the starboard cylinder cover not remedied. Of course nobody 'll be held responsible, as usual!"

Bellamy nodded, turning from scolding the harassed steward. He replied slowly. "But yet when an R. N. R. fellow can pop up and take seniority over the regular service, as in this boat, you can't expect"—

"Oh, here we are again!" the second broke in with. "Jealousies as usual. Torshell is as fit as any engineer. By George," he cried, listening intently, "the engines are slowin' down!"

II.

Torshell had approached Captain Widdrington and the "first," who lingered in the chart house discussing recent instructions. The senior engineer had coughed slightly to intimate his presence. The captain looked up, a frown sweeping his hard face on marking him.

"Sir," cried the engineer, "the port"—

"One moment, sir!" was the short answer. "This isn't a steam bus." And Torshell, again saluting, had stepped back, his pallid face blood red and his teeth hard clinched and gritting. The wary, diplomatic first just then cheerfly nodded aside to him.

He let himself rock to the vessel's jiggling among the cumbrous masses of sea. Since he had joined, off the waylaid liner, his had been hard luck. He felt acutely the general sentiment against him; but, notwithstanding all, his mettle was yet strong. It was the snobbish crowd in the wardroom and the unpleasant bearing of his subordinates that caused his discomfort of mind.

Suddenly he had held in his breath and unwittingly stepped toward the bridge ladder. The first drew himself back from the chart, darting a look of surprise at Torshell. But the captain's steel blue eyes flamed with sudden anger.

"Good heavens, sir! Your engines aren't slowing down?"

Torshell saluted. "Port air pump, sir."

"This drives a man mad!" cried Widdrington, crashing his big fist upon the table. "Nothing but defects, defects! Can ye drive engines at all, you miserable merchantman? What d'ye want to slacken down to? What's wrong this time? You"—

That second came a tremendous jarring and crunching beneath their feet. The great ship was shaken like a thing of straw. An appalling hammering followed, chaotic and deafening. Gray steam surged through hatchways, ventilators and companions.

The senior engineer had rushed from the bridge. As he raced amidships he snatched the sacking off the backs of some of the "black squad" dumping ashes overboard, grabbed at a quartermaster's oilskins and shoved them all upon him.

"Garr'et an' Epburn an' Mr. Jerroll in port alleyway!" was the answer to his shout from the artificers now in safety. It reached his ear as he stepped down into the uproar of smashing, clashing metal.

With heightened anxiety and fear, Widdrington stared at the steam still outpouring. The thunderous clanking of ponderous machinery galloping loose beat frightfully into his ear. With much more of it bilge plates would be started.

It was then that a blear eyed, cinder burnt signalman came hurrying along. "Flagship fliugin' out 'Chase' signals, sir!" was his report.

III.

When Torshell again dragged himself on the bridge he was a mere unshapely mass, held together by swaths of lint. Widdrington stepped hastily to him and helped him up the last rungs of the ladder. The captain looked into the seamed and scalded face, nearly hidden beneath bandages. Said he heartily: "By heavens, ye've pluck! These men owe their lives to you. Ye've pluck." And with this certificate forthcoming at last for service done he dismissed the case for heroism.

"But about this breakdown—what can you do? Our east wing scouts are in touch with the enemy, and here am I not doing five knots. Never a shot to be fired, and ahead they've got all the work. Can you do nothing with these starboard engines?"

"They are in a pretty bad fix, but I'll do my best to work them for a time at least."

The senior engineer staggered to a deep wallow of the stricken vessel as a tumultuous swell tilted her casemated broadside. He would have fallen headlong if the officers had not sprung forward and caught him under the arms. He moaned. "My knee! My knee! It's smashed."

Half an hour later he was superintending his officers and men, who, stripped to their trousers, were clearing away the wreck. Every order that issued peremptorily from his blanched lips went full and fair to the mark and afforded succinct knowledge and confidence to the grimy, sweating workers. Theirs were unbegrudged obedience and execution, for each now understood his man. Hunched shouldered, he was through physical agonies; yet, knowing that he held the lives of 700 men and that great, glorious ship in his hand, he maintained his will indomitable. Not a detail escaped his eye or slipped his brain.

IV.

Night had long since dropped. The immense boat lay lurching from side to side, plunging wildly under the tons of green seas that thudded like battering rams against her bows and forecastle what time the high walled swell broke roaring.

"Make for northwest trade patrol. Regain nearest port. Much regret breakdown," had been the sorely harassed vice admiral's latest message.

Captain Widdrington, a barrel swathed in shawls and many waterproofs, was with the first and third lieutenants on the afterbridge. Wearily he turned from straining his eyes over the indistinct summits of yeasty seas and cleared the brine off his face and bushy eyebrows with the flat of his left hand. He was cautiously making his way up the bridge when suddenly he stopped short. A quartermaster shouted, "D'ye hear that, sir?"

A faint boom had rung through the stormy wind, ominous, like to a dying world's last echo.

The first dodged a scattered spout of sea. "If the enemy drive down on us will you fight, sir?"

"Yes, by heavens! As well go down fightin' as not. If we can work ship it's the very weather for us. See Torshell. I must risk the port engines."

And as Wingate carefully made his way on deck "Firin' east sou'east!" was the lookout's hail.

He climbed down the thirty odd feet of slippery ladder into the maze of motionless machinery. As he touched the senior engineer on the elbow he noted his inbent and quivering lips.

"Can't say," was the answer. "Mebbe we will. But every man is workin' his best. If it is in my power the starboard mills 'll run."

"If we can't steam God help us!" ejaculated the first.

V.

As the luckless warship flung herself about the iron flooring beneath the wornout men seesawed hither and thither, throwing them off their feet. She evened herself in a broad valley of the mountainous sea wastes.

Torshell yelled: "Let her go! Let her go!"

A breaking hill of wild water was hurling itself on the weather quarter just as the chains rattled through the blocks. Torshell lurched forward and then, to the boat's violent heeling, toppled helplessly between the hinder column of the intermediate engine and the banging mass of cylinder gear.

"Lower! Lower! Never mind me!" came in an intense shriek. Their racked and knotted arms pulled desperately, and the disconnected workings were lowered clear down to the floor plates.

The maimed and bleeding mass of flesh that had been Torshell, R. N. R., was slipping into the crank pit, but Jerroll and some others held it fast. And it came that as the waning voice moaned "Give her steam! Give her steam! Mind the links!" the mad pealing of the telegraph made his assistant leap to the starting engine. The two cut off scouts of the enemy were opening a heavy cannonading.

The dull grunting of guns and the quickening thud of his engines the senior engineer did not hear. Cried Naylen, on his knees beside him, "The best man among us, and we never knew it!"

The fighting ship went bravely into action, but the man of the merchant marine would never again give ear.

"BIG TIM'S" HEIRS WILL GET LITTLE

Affairs of Former Congressman Are Badly Tangled.

WEEDING OUT MANY CLAIMS

Liens Against Estate Aggregate Almost Million Dollars—Idol of New York's Bowery Had Careless Way of Doing Business—Certain That Some of Claims Are Fraudulent.

Claims aggregating more than $700,000 have been filed against the estate of the late Timothy D. Sullivan, and because the appraisals of the estate made so far amount to only $1,001,277.33 there have been rumors that nothing would be left for the heirs. But this appraisal was exclusive of any of the realty in which the estate had an equity of about $570,000. It is certain that all of the claims will not be paid. Two of them aggregate $370,000. Who these claimants are will not be made known until a final settlement is reached or until the courts pick out the just from the unjust claims.

Mr. Sullivan was careless in business matters. He never knew what he owed or what he possessed. He was absolutely indifferent concerning money. While he stood on the deck of the steamship on his last trip abroad he saw on the pier a man who had rendered him some service. He sent a messenger to this man to learn what his bill was. The man replied that if he never got another cent from Mr. Sullivan he would consider himself well paid for anything he had done. Mr. Sullivan wrote a check for $1,000 and sent it to the man. Among other claims filed against the estate is a claim from this man amounting to many thousands of dollars.

A short time before Mr. Sullivan died he borrowed $50,000 from a Brooklyn bank, leaving securities worth about $200,000 as collateral. He reduced the loan by payments to $12,000. When the executors took charge of the estate they discovered this loan with a list of the securities deposited to secure it. They were fearful that the loan might be overlooked, and so a check was deposited to cover the note when it became due. The securities were taken away, and when they were examined it was found that among them were some worth $45,000 which did not appear on the list found among Mr. Sullivan's effects.

Gross Carelessness.

The executors found other glaring instances of carelessness that made the task of getting the estate into some sort of business shape difficult. It was this that set them back and led to threats by Surrogate Cohalan against the executors for their delay in filing an inventory.

It is said that some of the stocks and bonds were undervalued in the appraisal, and that the total estate, after all the debts are paid, will amount to more than $1,000,000. William B. Ellison, counsel for the executors, who was a warm friend of Mr. Sullivan, said that no doubtful claim would be paid until after it had borne the scrutiny of a court. He said that undoubtedly many of the claims were just or had some element of fairness in them, but that others were surely unworthy.

"Many of the claims that have been filed," said Mr. Ellison, "are entirely without legal foundation so far as I have been able to judge. There is no written evidence to support many of these claims, which rest, so far as I have been able to learn, on conversations between claimant and the deceased, and are therefore not admissible in court procedure. Many of the claims appear to me to be spurious, and display attempts to take advantage of a dead man's estate.

Will Fight Illegal Claims.

"No claim will be paid that cannot be legally proved, if for no other reason than that there are infants interested as beneficiaries whose share may not be made subject of charitable disposition. In order to expedite the liquidation of the estate I shall reject every claim concerning which there is the least question, and that applies to substantially all of the claims presented. This rejection brings all of the claims within the short statute of limitation, which is six months.

"When all of the claims are in I shall take up each one and investigate it, and if I am convinced that a claim can be legally proved, it will be satisfied without litigation. The others will be litigated providing the claimants have the hardihood to press them to a trial. The rejection of the claims made so far was for the purpose of winding up the estate and was not at all fractious. At the same time I was determined that every claimant should bring himself within the rules of legal proof.

"I believe that this course will result in greatly reducing the total of the estate's indebtedness. I will be disappointed if, when the matter is all thrashed out, the total of the debts exceeds one-half of the total amount of the claims."

MOTOR BOATS ARE POPULAR

Braintree and Weymouth Squadron to Sail Sunday

(Braintree Observer.)

The motor boat fleet of East Braintree and Weymouth was well represented at the launching of the U. S. S. Nevada Saturday there being sixteen of the twenty-one boats present. After the launching all went on short cruises except the Helen Mae owned by Mr. Stackhouse. Capt. Stackhouse with a party of four, Louis Moody, Herbert Stackhouse the skippers brother and Gordon Stackhouse the skipper's son left directly after the launching for Provincetown. Everything went smoothly until 10 P. M. when a thick fog set in and it was only with the use of the sounding line and a good knowledge of the harbor that Capt. Stackhouse was able to drop his anchor at Provincetown at 12 M.

Not much time was spent in this noted town and at an early hour Sunday morning the anchor was hauled aboard again and the Helen Mae was headed for the entrance to the Cape Cod canal at Sandwich. This run was made without difficulty and all hands viewed the canal. Sunday night was spent at Sandwich and early Monday morning the anchor was pulled aboard again and the Helen Mae was headed for Scituate where she arrived shortly before noon. After visiting a number of friends Capt. Stackhouse and his crew returned aboard again and headed out bound for her mooring where she arrived at 5.30 P. M.

The Varuna, Capt. Ludden left early Sunday morning for City Point where a party was taken aboard and the Varuna worked her way through the thick fog to Boston lightship where the day was spent fishing amid the sound of fog horns.

The Gaylad 2nd, Capt. Loring, with a large party aboard spent the day fishing off the Graves light.

The Jay Eye See, Capt. Wright, with a party of nine young people made a good strike through the fog picking up the bell on outer breakers off Marblehead. She arrived in Salem harbor safely and had a good run home.

The Remoh owned by Prince Tirrell of South Weymouth sailed to Bass Point making a good run both coming and going.

The Secret 2nd, Capt. Hunt, with a party of young ladies aboard started for Bass Point but put back on account of fog. Later in the day Capt. Hunt sailed to Nantasket returning to his float at an early hour.

The Pontiac owned by Harold Parker with a party of young people aboard sailed to Nantasket to view the aviation there.

The Mermaid owned by John Hart with a party of six also sailed to Nantasket.

The Helen, Capt. James R. Qualey with a large party aboard sailed to Boston light and returned inside again sailing to Nantasket.

The Annie B., Capt. Bowker, leaves Saturday at 4.30 P. M. for Portland with a crew of five: Capt. Edward Bowker, Charles Henry Bowker, Edward Stackhouse, Joseph Gibson and Leo Cote.

The Annie B. will sail to Gloucester Saturday afternoon and continue to Portland Sunday. The Rainbow owned by Carl Olson, the Rosemarie owned by Philip H. Sullivan, the Merlad owned by Harry McTaggart, the Pud owned by Stanley Sulis all enjoyed short cruises about the harbor.

All the motor boat men of East Braintree and Weymouth are invited to join the squadron that will leave Watson's wharf Sunday morning at 9.30. For details apply to Capt. Hunt of the Secret 2nd or Capt. Sullivan of the Rosemarie.

Turkey and Greece at Odds Over Aegean Islands and Sale of U. S. Warships

THOSE two ancient enemies, Greece and Turkey, are again regarding each other with jealous and angry eyes, and each country is accusing the other of a lack of good faith and a desire to resume hostilities. Indeed, the treaty of peace between the two countries concluded on Nov. 13 last would never have been signed had not both countries been suffering from financial exhaustion, and at the same time they were unable to obtain funds to continue the war. Issues vital in the eyes of both nations were thus left unsettled.

The plenipotentiaries at the time could come to no agreement about the Aegean islands and eliminated them from the scope of the discussion, leaving the matter to be determined by the concert of the great powers of Europe. The Turks on their side declare that they cannot leave these islands in the military possession of Greece, while on their side the Greeks declare that they cannot permit their compatriots on these islands to be abandoned once more to Ottoman rule. Greece has cut the Gordian knot by a formal announcement of the annexation of the islands of Chios and Mitylene, known to the ancients as Lesbos and full of archeological relics and magnificent ruins, the Hellenic government thus further emphasizing its determination to ignore Turkey's contention that the possession of these islands was necessary for the defense of the adjacent Ottoman territory in Asia Minor.

The Greek government has also sent a vigorous note to Turkey demanding the cessation of the persecution of the KING CONSTANTINE OF GREECE AND GREEK OFFICERS.

Greeks in Turkey and reparation of damages caused to them and their interests.

Greece accuses Turkey of the wholesale expulsion with great cruelties of Greek Christians from the province of Thrace, while Turkey accuses Greece of oppressing former Turkish subjects in the region of Saloniki, which was taken by the Greeks in the recent Balkan war. Only recently the Greek patriarch threatened to remove the headquarters of the church from Constantinople.

The proposed sale of the American battleships Mississippi and Idaho to Greece has also stirred up the suspicions and the ire of Turkey. Greece maintains that the acquisition of the two ships would increase the chances of peace and restore the naval balance between the two countries.

The Turkish ambassador to the United States expressed the other day his government's views regarding this controversy as follows:

"The contention that the sale of two battleships, the Idaho and the Mississippi, will restore the naval balance between Turkey and Greece and would prevent the explosion of hostilities between the two countries is faulty. If the two American battleships come into the possession of Greece before Turkey gets the two battleships now under construction for her it will add to the considerable superiority she already enjoys over Turkey.

"If she gets them after Turkey gets hers, which are super-Dreadnoughts, she will fall into a state of distinct inferiority notwithstanding the American addition to the fleet. Thus the contemplated American action would miss its very honorable object and in reality would amount to taking sides unwillingly with Greece against Turkey in the naval rivalry already existing between the powers."

ACTING MAYOR TO OPEN BIDS

Emery L. Crane the acting Mayor, will open bids Monday night for furnishing the city with a tractor for the steamer at the Central fire station, but will let Mayor Miller do the awarding of the contract. The item in the supplementary budget for this apparatus called for an "A and B tractor." These words are however said not to cut much weight as the Council had no right to dictate to the Mayor the kind of apparatus he should purchase.

DISTRICT COURT.

John F. Hannifen was sent to the state farm for drunkenness at Weymouth.

Joseph P. Normile was fined $15 for violation of the automobile law at Cohasset.

Albert F. Murphy was arraigned for the larceny of a suit case from Hannah Johnson at Quincy. Case continued until July 24.

The case of William P. Taylor, who was summoned into court to answer to a charge of larceny of $85 from Charles D. Wiggin at Houghs Neck, failed to appear and a warrant for his arrest was issued.

The continued case of Sam Quantor which was continued to allow him to pay a fine of $75 for violation of the liquor law at Quincy, was called and he was defaulted.

CITY COUNCIL GROUP.

The group picture of the City Council of 1913, which the members sat for late in the year, has been ready for delivery to the Council for some time, but the photographer has been waitin for ex-Councilman Cunningham to sit for a picture. Several attempts have been made to get the gentleman to come to Quincy and sit for his picture but he has not appeared as yet. His home is now in Dalton and it is not often that he is in Quincy. Unless he should appear in a few days it is announced that the group picture will be made up with the pictures of twenty-two of the City Council of 1913.

FURNACE FIRE NEEDED.

Owing to the dampness of the basement of City Hall during the summer months, the practice this summer has been for the night janitor to build a little fire in the furnace every night to dry the rooms out. It is especially necessary that the rooms be dry this year as the office of the City Engineer is now in the basement and the damp weather is not a very good thing for the many plans kept in his office.

BRIEFS

The alarm from Box 38 at 9.16 Friday night was a false alarm. The recall sounded a few minutes later.

William A. Gavin of the fire alarm department is out today in a newly painted wagon. The color is the standard fire apparatus red while on the back of the seat are the letters Q. F. D.

An enterprising auto truck man, seeking to gather in a little of the coin of the realm, has been making trips to and from Houghs Neck mornings and evenings at five cents a head. The line is being run in opposition to the street car line.

The Grand Army of Norfolk County and the Women's Relief Corps will hold their annual outing at Bass Point Nahant, next Wednesday. Col. Edward H. Dunbar of Dedham, in charge of the affair, has arranged for steamers to leave Otis wharf, Boston at 9.30 and 11 A. M.

If work continues to progress favorably, services will be held in the Squantum church Sunday. Mr. Currie the builder is doing his best to get a room ready for temporary use.

Friends of Charles Taylor of Arnold street who met with a bad accident three weeks ago will be sorry to learn that he will be removed Monday to the City hospital where he will undergo an operation.

Rev. Sampson Nicholls of Atlantic has been engaged to supply the Memorial church during Mr. Davison's vacation. Mr. Nicholls is a strong forceful preacher and has been very helpful in the last two years in Atlantic.

A large shipment of clothing has been sent to Salem by the Quincy Women's Club and they have discontinued their appeal and will not send any more for the presnt. There is a supply of heavier clothing to go in the fall.

At Memorial church last Sunday, a Baptist minister read the scriptures, an ex-Methodist minister offered the prayer and Rev. T. W. Davison, the pastor preached the sermon. The service was enjoyed by the large summer congregation as an ideal union service.

Mr. Billings, who is building a house on Billings street came near losing his gold watch last week by employing a tramp painter. The watch and painter disappeared but were found at Neponset, where the painter was given his choice between returning the watch or arrest. He chose the first.

Miss Christina Fowler of Phillips street is convalescing as well as can be expected, but owing to conditions it will naturally be tedious. Miss Fowler was taken violently ill on her return from Atlantic City some three weeks ago and was rushed to the City hospital by Dr. E. R. Johnson who performed the operation successfully.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Allen, widow of Rev. George Allen, formerly of Wollaston, was held Friday afternoon in Mt. Wollaston cemetery. Rev. Dr. Isaiah W. Sneath of the Wollaston Congregational church officiated at the cemetery. Mrs. Allen died in Taunton in her 84th year and was a sister of Annis and Thomas Lincoln, founders of the Wollaston foundry.

Hargraves Heap and his boating associates found it costly for the gasoline engine to balk on them while fishing last Saturday. When it was found that the engine would not start Mr. Heap implored the help of a fisherman on one of the islands. The Islander agreed to land them safely at Hingham, but it cost the party eight dollars for the hour's service. It is needless to say the party felt they were soaked in more ways than one.

The Men's Club of Atlantic which proved itself so helpful from the educational and social standpoint last winter was found equally good from a recreational standpoint last Saturday when over fifty of the members went to Marblehead in a spceial car. The men had dinner at the Adams House, then enjoyed a sail along the North Shore. A rousing vote of thanks was given Harry W. Read for his work in behalf of the club.

Another break was made Wednesday evening when the lock on the front door of the office of J. F. Sheppard & Sons on Shaw street was picked. The thieves were evidently a long way from being experts and the best they succeeded in doing was to tip over all the inkwells in sight and ransack all the drawers that were unlocked taking nothing of value with them.

Monday's game in the Sunset league resulted in a victory for the Monatiquots over the Heights, the score standing 7 to 1. Tuesday evening the Pond Streets dipped the Squares in the lime bucket 1 to 0. Wednesday night the Pond Streets were again victorious, this time defeating the Heights 3 to 2. In Thursday's game the Monatiquots walloped the Squares 13 to 6.

LAWN PARTY.

The annual lawn party of the Universalist church of Weymouth was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Thompson, Commercial street, East Braintree Wednesday evening. The lawn was illuminated with colored electric lights. The tables were very prettily decorated and some unique ideas were carried out successfully. One of these was the method of selling boxes from the box table. A large dummy dressed as Dina stood near the table holding a large carpet bag from which the boxes were sold. Dina made a hit and the boxes were sold quickly. The gipsy tent was a great attraction and although the gipsy queen was well known by everybody she was not recognized and acted the part splendidly. The barn was illuminated with numerous Japanese lanterns so arranged that the entrance to the barn resembled a stage and was used as such by the talented entertainers, Mr. and Mrs. Grose of Boston and Miss May Allen of Weymouth. Mrs. Grose accompanied by her husband at the hurdy gurdy gave a number of clever tambourine solos, that brought great applause. Solo dancing by Miss May Allen was equally as good. After the entertainment the guests were taken into the interior of the barn which was magnificently decorated with flags and bunting while the floor was strewn with pine needles Here dancing was enjoyed until a late hour, music being furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Grose. The tables were in charge of the following:

Cake, Mrs. Arthur Davis and Mrs. Wilbur.

Candy, Mrs. Charles Clapp and Mrs. John Aldridge.

Box, Mrs. Winnie Our and Mrs. Evans.

Punch, Franklin Whitton and Simon Williams.

Not Triplets.

My little grandson was told by his mother to run across the street and inquire of a lady who was going by with three little babes in a cart if they were triplets. He soon came back, looking much disappointed, and said: "No, they are not triplets. They were born the same day, but two of them are girls and the other one is a boy." —Exchange

Throngs at St. John's Church Grounds During Afternoon and Evening

Moving Pictures, Field Sports, Supper and Dancing

Several thousand men, women and children, all members of St. Johns parish, and friends from all parts of the city, attended the annual midsummer fete on the grounds of St. Johns parish school Saturday afternoon and evening.

Booths were arranged in all parts of the grounds. Colored crepe paper, bunting and flags made them a riot of colors and in the evening their beauty was enhanced by scores of Japanese lanterns. The decorations were in charge of Miss Nellie Desmond.

In the afternoon there was a free entertainment for the children which consisted of vocal selections, comedy artists, and other attractions, in addition to pony cart and auto rides.

A base ball game between the Holy Name team of St. Johns and a nine from St. Josephs parish, Medford, was a feature of the afternoon. The local team won 2 to 1. The game was filled with surprises and several sensational plays were made.

The younger people of the parish enjoyed dancing in the evening on an out-of-door dance board and there was also a moving picture show. Supper was served between the hours of seven and nine.

The affair this year was under the direction of Rev. Fr. Walter A. Quinlan and Rev. Fr. Florence W. McCarthy, curates of the parish. Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, pastor, was the guest of the day.

The athletic events of the afternoon were under the direction of Peter M. Sullivan and Timothy J. Ford who acted as judges. The winners were given vouchers which could be cashed at any of the tables.

One boy who secured a voucher for twenty-five cents for getting a place in a three legged race decided he would indulge his taste for light refreshments. He presented his voucher at a booth and called for three ice cream cones and two bottles of tonic. After disposing of the tribute collected he entered other events and took a few more vouchers but deciding he had lost his taste for refreshments he took fancy articles instead.

The results of the sports were as follows:

100-yard race for girls—free for all—Won by Edith Cardell.

50-yard dash for High School girls—Won by Elizabeth Cremins; Louise Sullivan, second.

MILTON'S LOW TAX RATE

Town Tax Less and Valuation Shows Gain

Again this year the Milton Assessors report a large increase in the personal estate of the town, from $16,026,859 in 1913 to $17,349,229 in 1914. More than half of the total valuation of $31,602,839 is in personal property, whereas in Quincy only one-sixth of the valuation is personal property.

The large increase in valuation makes possible a reduction in the tax rate from $13.00 to $11.80.

Another big factor is the large receipts available for reduction of the tax levy, a total of over $110,000.00.

The assessors' figures for Milton are as follows:

Personal property	$17,349,229
Resident bank stock	62,300
Real estate	14,191,310
Total valuation	$31,602,839

The town tax of Milton for 1914 is less than in 1913, and only $5,000.00 larger than in 1901. It does not increase by leaps and bounds each year as in Quincy. Here is the town tax every year since 1900:

1900	$199,000.10
1901	227,123.87
1902	196,549.81

FIRE ALARM FIEND AT WORK

Two False Alarms Evidently Pulled In by Same Party

If the young man who is amusing himself sounding false alarms of fire does not look out he will find himself looking out through the bars at the police station, for the young man who sounded the false alarm from Box 34 at 3.44 Saturday afternoon is doubtless the same person who sounded the alarm from Box 38 the night before. In the case of Saturday's alarm however he evidently became frightened so that the hook was only pulled down far enough to sound one blow of the box. The young man was seen running from the box as it begun to sound.

It was by far too hot Saturday to make the horses pull the heavy fire apparatus at top speed for a false alarm, and if the young man is captured he should be given a lesson he will not soon forget.

Charles Dunleavy of New York is spending his vacation with his aunt Mrs. Thomas Mitchell of 3 Nash ave.

FALL RESULTS IN FATALITY

Braintree Man Falls from Planking at Fore River Yards

R. S. Wood, 58 years old, of 86 River street, Braintree, fell from a planking at the Fore river shipyard Saturday afternoon and was fatally injured.

He was treated at the Red Cross hospital in the shipyard and removed to the Quincy City Hospital where he died Sunday morning.

A post mortem examination with an X-ray, held under the direction of Dr. S. E. Elsworth revealed a factured spine, four fractured ribs and a ruptured liver.

The examination was the first of its kind at the hospital since the installation of the new X-ray apparatus, and will take the place hereafter of autopsies when possible, to determine the cause of unnatural death.

The body was removed to the under taking rooms of John Hall Sunday.

SWALLOWED TOO MUCH OIL

The two year old daughter of Luigi Monti of 62 West street was found suffering extreme pain Sunday afternoon and an investigation showed the child had swallowed a liquid that had made her violently ill.

The parents summoned Dr. Daniel B. Reardon who applied the stomach pump. He found the child had swollowed almost an ounce of camphorated oil.

The oil is not poisonous but when taken in such large quantities a severe sickness follows. The child is doing well today.

CHILDRENS DAY WOLLASTON Y. C.

The broad piazzas of the Wollaston yacht club were alive with young people Saturday afternoon on the occasion of the annual children's party held by the club. The afternoon was in charge of an efficient committee annd the children were given a grand good time.

The afternoon program included a sail in the bay the owners of the yachts placing their motor boats at the disposal of the committee. On the return from the sail they were treated with ice cream and cake. In the evening the weekly dancing party was held which was largely attended.

JOHN TYTLER.

John Tytler a well known South Quincy resident passed away at his home 17 Trafford street early Sunday morning, after an illness of several months duration. Mr. Tytler when first stricken was taken to the City Hospital for an operation but owing to a weakened condition this was not performed. Since that time he has gradually failed. Mr. Tytler's family has been sadly afflicted for it was but a short time ago that one of his sons died suddenly during the night.

Previous to his last illness Mr. Tytler was employed as a granite polisher. He leaves a widow, two daughters and a son. He was a member of Clan MacGregor O. S. C.

CIRCUS RIDERS COME TO GRIEF

Aerial Railway Wire Parts and Boys Get a Bad Fall

Circus riding on an aerial railway along a cliff off South street came near resulting seriously when the wire parted Sunday afternoon and two boy navigators were hurled to the rocks, 12 feet below.

The boys had stretched a steel cable for 75 feet from a stone fort of their own making to a tree near Sumner and South streets. A wheel was attached in such a fashion that the boys could hang on and ride at incredible speed from one end to the other. The course passed over the top of several trees and a swamp.

Philip McCue and Albert Sullivan attempted to ride together Sunday but the double weight was too much for the railway and it gave way.

Sullivan was knocked unconscious and McCue, stunned for the time, made his way to a nearby house and summoned aid. Dr. D. B. Reardon and Dr. J. T. Reynolds responded and Sullivan's head was found to be badly cut. After Sullivan's wounds were dressed and the cut closed by five stitches he was taken to his home. McCue received several scalp wounds.

Sulivan is 13 years old and lived at 10 Sumner street. McCue is 15 and lives in Winthrop park.

KNIVES AND BOTTLES USED

Free Fight Among Quincy Italians at Braintree Grove

A group of South and West Quincy Italians who were having an outing at Fallon's grove Sunday afternoon brought their party to a close with a vicious fight in which knives and beer bottles took a prominent part. A telephone message was first sent to Quincy police but they declined jurisdiction and notified Chief Hunt of Braintree.

They arrived to find the party had left, using an auto truck in which they came and according to people they passed, three men were unconscious in the bottom of the truck.

The entire contents of four cases of bottled beer was spattered over the ground and the bottles smashed. The bark was chipped off the trees where thrown bottles hit them and in the centre of where the melee is thought to have occurred the police found a bloody shirt and battered hats.

The call to the Quincy police was sent from the pay station in West Quincy by berry pickers who claim they saw men stabbed right and left and that one must have been killed. But little credence is placed on that part of the story.

Two Italians boarded a Quincy bound car at West street, Braintree and both were badly cut about the face. The left cheek of one man was sliced and another's eye appeared to be gouged out.

The Quincy police were notified to apprehend the party when they reached here but the message was received too late. As far as is known no local doctors were asked to treat any of the injured.

A West Quincy Italian who witnessed the fracas said it was the worst he ever saw. Knives were flourished and several stabbed and he was kept busy dodging thrown bottles.

The trouble is said to have started when a cousin of a man defeated in a wrestling bout struck the victor, after which the latter's friend mixed it up and the fight became general. The police will make an investigation.

Up to noon no arrests have been made in connection with the fracas but it has been learned on good authority that one man holds himself in readiness to surrender in case of the death of one of the party who was struck over the head with a bottle.

No physician has been called to treat the man because the parties fear his visit would incriminate them but throughout the night it was expected hourly that the man would die.

The police of Quincy and Braintree have taken but little interest in the case so far.

Quincy's showing in postal receipts, in comparison with other suburbs of Boston, was very gratifying. That Quincy should show a big gain, while Brookline, Somerville and Medford fell behind was indeed a surprise.

Things have been rather dull in Mexico since Vera Cruz was taken, but the newspaper boys could always sell a column story on how Huerta was going to resign the next day.

HELPING COUNTRY LIBRARIES.

There will be regret that Andrew Carnegie has issued a denial of the report that he has agreed to give a fund of many millions to help found country libraries. The original statement of this matter brought out the fact that there are still 2200 counties lacking any public library. It is a field needing help quite as much as the many large towns which have already received Mr. Carnegie's generous assistance. It will be hoped however, that he may still be considering some plan of this kind.

Of course in many of these 2200 counties there are book and magazine clubs. But such informal organizations usually dispose of the volumes at second hand sale. Nothing is accumulated for future years.

Such organizations are also very hit or miss in their methods. Committees on choosing books are formed on the basis of social popularity. Their idea of literary excellence may be the book that advertises with the blackest gothic type.

The selection of books for a community reading calls for the best education and common sense. The reading club committee may look at a standard work like "Quo Vadis," and seeing the name of Nero, decide that it is history, and they don't want it. They studied all the history they needed in school. So they buy the froth of the moment, which will be valuable to the junk man a year later. Also it will do to press wild flowers in.

The country library is a part of the machinery necessary to make rural life attractive. With wide awake books, the long evening in the cross roads farm house looks much less lonesome.

The most important thing is a little permanent home, which the Carnegie scheme of giving has always provided. As long as the village book collection is kept in some one's clothes closet or on some fly blown counter in a grocery store, its volumes reflect the transient character of its surroundings. If means can be found to erect a little building, the nucleus of a library takes on the dignity of a permanent home. People become ready to work to make it grow.

RUSH ORDER FOR HUERTA STEAMER

Carbajal Wants Vessel to Carry Former President to Jamaica

ZAPATA A MENACE TO PEACE

Apprehension at Washington Over Possible Operations of His Forces —Rebel Forces In North Being Hurried Toward Mexico City to Help Maintain Order at the Capital

Vera Cruz, July 20.—The agent at this port of the Mexican Navigation company, which operates a line of coasting steamers, received orders from Mexico City to dispatch a steamer immediately to Puerto Mexico to transport ex-President Huerta and the members of his party to Jamaica.

The agent replied that no steamer was available at present, but that he would endeavor to communicate with a steamer believed to be in the vicinity of Progresso.

Some Concern Over Zapata

Washington, July 20.—While government officials here feel that the Mexica problem is rapidly shaping itself for solution and that the constitutionalists and the Carbajal government soon will reach an agreement for the establishment of a new administration, much apprehension is manifest over the possible operations of the Zapatista forces.

Dispatches from Mexico City and Vera Cruz, which declare the followers of Zapata are dangerously near the capital, are confirmed by advices to the state department.

Officials for some time have been cognizant of the strength of the Zapata troops, but the American government has been able to exert its influence with Zapata to prevent an attack on Mexico City.

Emissaries from General Carranza are now in communication with Zapata, and it is hoped through these parleys to bring the military operations of the revolution under one head.

Constitutionalist forces are being hurried southward to help maintain order at the capital. The efforts of the American government are directed toward influencing a quick settlement between Carranza and Carbajal, so that a stable government may be set up without loss of time.

Concession to Unarmed Rebels

Vera Cruz, July 20.—Lieutenant Colonel Izunza, commanding the federals at the Gap, announced that a proclamation had been issued at Mexico City by the minister of war, granting all persons belonging to the so-called revolutionary forces permission to pass through the federal lines and proceed to whatever point they wished, either individually or collectively. The only condition imposed is that they shall not carry arms.

Izunza said the new administration does not recognize the existance of a revolution, and considers all Mexicans on equal footing as citizens.

Newport, R. I., July 20.—With the defeat of the Vanitie and the Defiance by the Resolute in the first of the series of trial races for the honor of being chosen as the defender of the America's cup, the three trim yachts with their ponderous canvas sailed away to prepare for the next series of trial races.

This ends the first elimination series off this coast, the last race having been won by the Resolute by the small margin of 53 seconds, which was the third time that the Vanitie has found that the time allowance she must give to the other yachts, has militated against her.

CAUGHT ON A CROSSING

Three of Auto Party Killed When Struck by Freight Train

Taunton, Mass., July 20.—Lloyd C. Leonard of this city, his grandmother, Mrs. Catherine E. Leonard, 77 years old, and Miss May Hawkins, 40 years old, were fatally injured when Leonard's automobile was struck by af reight train at Horton's Crossing.

All three died soon after the accident and the young wife of Leonard is in a hospital seriously injured. Her life hangs in the balance.

Horton's Crossing, where the accident took place, is partly obscured by shrubbery, and Leonard did not see, or apparently hear, the approaching freight train, until he was almost upon the crossing. He swerved his car sharply and crashed into the big engine of the freight.

The engine caught the touring car and dragged it bumping along the ground for thirty-five or forty feet, hurling the occupants in all directions.

Passengers Feel Great Relief When Steamer Reaches Boston

Boston, July 20.—With 300 passengers on board, who had passed a night of anxiety in spite of repeated assurances that they were in no danger, the steamship Massachusetts arrived here after having been on fire in New York harbor on her way to this city.

Those on board made no secret of the alarm that filled them, notwithstanding their observance of discipline on board the vessel when dense smoke coming from an oil fire in her bilges poured out from the engine and fireroom hatches of the Massachusetts, an oil-burning craft.

The first efforts of Captain Colbert when he realized that the steamship was in danger was to marshal the passengers in two squads, one fore and one aft, as far as possible from the danger zone, amidships. There they huddled until the fire was extinguished by municipal fireboats.

MANY IN BUILDING; ONLY ONE IS HURT

Shoppers Rush For Doors as an Old Block Collapses

Northampton, Mass., July 20.—The Union block, a three-story business building on lower Main street, collapsed. Although more than 100 persons were within its walls at the time, only one man was severely hurt. Leo Goliff was taken to a hospital, but will recover.

Women and children, shopping in a 5 and 10-cent store on the first floor of the building, became excited and rushed for the doors. A few were hurt slightly, but all reached the street.

The rear walls of the block fell outward, while the middle of the building caved in. Most of its contents were destroyed. Recent changes in the structure are believed to have weakened it. The total damage is estimated at $50,000.

Washington, July 20.—Decision of the interstate commerce commission on the 5 percent advance rate asked by the eastern roads is ready to be handed down. A partial advance, 3¾ or 4 percent, has been granted by the commission on certain products. This advnce will give to the petitioning carriers an increased income of about $16,000,000.

The report, it is said, also insists upon the institution of economies and the abolition of certain free service now granted to shippers. These factors will, in the opinion of the commission, add $25,0000,000 more to the coffers of the railroads. This makes a total of $41,000,0000.

Had the full 5 percent advance and other demands prayed for by the carriers been granted, it was expected the annual revenue would be increased $50,000,000.

Railroad representatives at present in Washington in expectation of the announcement being made refused to make any comment, but the intimation was that any fair increase granted by the commission would be acceptable. The advance of 3¾ or 4 percent, it is said, will not include certain low grade freight, such as coal, pig iron and similar products.

The report also puts the blame for the present plight of the roads themselves; urges the abolition of free service; says there is no excuse to put up the price of a single commodity and rebukes the carriers for their attempts to influence public opinion.

It is due to the insistence of President Wilson that the decision of the commission has been expedited. That the railroads expected an advance in rates is indicated by the fact that many, within the last few days, have given big orders for new equipment and put back many men who had been discharged.

PANIC AMONG PASSENGERS

Fifty Persons Hurt as Trolley Car Crashes Into Cemetery Fence

Philadelphia, July 20.—Eight persons were seriously injured, two perhaps fatally, when a street car, crowded with pleasure seekers returning from Woodlyne park, left the rails and crashed into a fence surrounding Evergreen cemetery.

Plunged into darkness, the car partly turned over, pinning down several passengers. A panic followed. Every one of the fifty passengers were bruised and cut by the broken glass and flying splinters.

Several passengers hanging on the running board were hurled many feet by the force of the collision. Others jumped and escaped with minor injuries.

The car was going at a high rate of speed, and as it rounded a curve it left the rails, bounded over the cobblestones and crashed with great force into the cemetery fence. The cause of the accident is not known.

YACHT CLUB SUNDAY PICNIC

Town River Club Has Enjoyable Day at Hingham

The Town River Yacht club had an out-of-door picnic on Sunday at Gardner's beach on the Hingham shore. At ten o'clock, when the start was made, about twenty boats were collected about the club house float. Some of these had to make two trips to accommodate the large number of guests. On their arrival at their destination, a basket lunch was served. At five o'clock Commodore Mellen headed the returning line of boats up the river.

LARCENY ALLEGED.

Albert F. Murphy had some trouble with his servant girl Hannah Johnson this week, and as a result he was summoned into court this morning charged with the larceny of the girl's dress suit case valued at $40. It appears that Mr. Murphy claimed that when the girl started to leave his employ she still had some time to work for the salary that had been paid her. She refused to complete her work at which it is said Mr. Murphy retained possession of the dress suit case. The girl then swore out a warrant for his arrest.

This morning Mr. Murphy, it is said offered to give the girl her suit case and let the matter drop. The girl however had consulted counsel and the only way she would settle was by the payment of $15.

Mr. Murphy would not settle on those terms and the case was continued until July 24. In the meantime it is reported that Mr. Murphy will also retain counsel.

QUINCY BOY SOME SWIMMER

Finishes Third in Long Distance Endurance Swim

Walter G. Dunn of Atlantic, a member of the L-Street Swimming club won third position Sunday in the long-distance amateur natators of America, in the famous swim of the New York Tribune from the Battery to Sandy Hook. George R. Meeham of Charlestown finished first with Sam Richards of the L-street club second. Meehan's time was 7 hours and 18 minutes. Richards finished the course in 8 hours and 19 minutes and Dunn was but 20 seconds behind Richards.

Until Sunday Dunn was an unheard of long distance swimmer, for it was his first entrance in an endurance swim. At the start he was not considered to have the slightest chance in the field of 30 starters, some of the best swimmers in the country but he tacked onto Richards at the start and remained with him until the race was nearly over when he fell back, when called upon to combat the incoming tide. He rallied wonderfully however in the last ten minutes and by a burst of speed that won cheers he almost overtook Richards, and was beaten for second place by but a few feet. It was the most exciting long distance swim ever witnessed in those waters.

Walter G. Dunn, the "mysterious" sensation, is 23 years old, is married and lives in Atlantic. He learned to swim as a boy in Quincy and at Savin Hill Beach. About seven years ago he participated in a two-mile race at City Point, in which Richards was the only finisher, but Dunn was in second place when the race was called off.

Last Christmas Day he finished second in a 100-yard handicap at L-street, but he has never attempted any long swims heretofore. Last Sunday he took his longest swim, starting from Quincy and swimming to Long Island Head in Boston Harbor and return.

UTAH'S NATURAL BRIDGE.

The Secret of Its Origin Somewhat Puzzles the Scientists.

What is thought to be the largest natural bridge in the world is that of southwestern Utah, known as the George natural bridge. The total length of this great work of nature is about 200 feet; its width—i. e., the "roadway"—is about thirty-five feet; the span in the clear is about ninety feet. At the base there flows a small water course which, during the hot months, dwindles to a mere rivulet.

Scientists are somewhat perplexed to explain the means by which nature produced this bridge. It is thought hardly possible that it could have been created by water erosion, unless, as was most unlikely, there was a very large and swift stream flowing at the point where the brook now runs.

Some authorities are inclined to the view that this bridge was due to volcanic action, occurring at some remote geological period.

Although long known to the Indians, it was not until about fifteen years ago that white men became familiar with the sight of it. Mining prospectors were the first of the whites to see it, since it is located in the heart of a very rugged and inaccessible region.

The span is composed of a dark brown standstone of unusual hardness, and the thickness of the span is twenty feet or more.

Engineers who have examined this bridge assert that it is perfectly safe and secure and that it is fully capable of sustaining an immense weight, especially as the span is free from flaws or seams.—Washington Star.

JUSTICE AND LUNCHEON.

They Seemed to Clash a Trifle, So the Court Made a Change.

It was formerly the practice of the supreme court to sit from 12 noon until 4 o'clock continuously on each day that it was in session. From time to time, as the afternoon progressed, the justices, one or two at a time, would slip out of their seats, snatch a bite of luncheon and return. Sometimes as many as four or five of them would be off the bench at once. They usually had their luncheon brought to them by their messengers and ate it in the little curtained recess behind the bench, and as the argument progressed there could be plainly heard in the courtroom the clink of knife and fork on plate and what O. Henry has called "the crash of dishes on the American plan."

One day a lawyer pleading a case made bold to enter a protest. He most solemnly inquired if he could count upon the continuous and undivided attention of even one justice to the thread of his argument. "The personnel of the court has been twice entirely changed since I began," he said plaintively.

The court deigned no response, but on the following Monday it was announced from the bench that a recess for luncheon thereafter would be taken every day from 2 to 2:30 o'clock and that the court would sit until 4:30 o'clock every afternoon.—World's Work.

Birds That Fight Eagles.

In Foula, one of the Shetland islands, the natives make a business of rearing skau gulls in order to rid the islands of eagles that congregate there and commit many depredations. The magnificent red sandstone cliffs that skirt the northwestern coast became a favorite haunt of the eagles, and in this inaccessible spot they increased so rapidly that they became a terror to the farmers and fishermen who dwell on this isolated spot. The skau gulls are also strong and fierce and the inveterate foes of the eagle. In battle the gulls are nearly always victorious, and so the inhabitants of Foula bit upon the novel plan of feeding and caring for the skau gulls, which, though formidable to their feathered enemies, are very peaceful and docile when brought in contact with man.—Dallas News.

Making a Beach.

Weymouth owes the beginning of its popularity as a health and pleasure resort to an accident. In 1763 a west of England doctor whose name is now forgotten advised one of his patients—Ralph Allen, a prominent philanthropist of Bath—to "bathe his body in the open sea." By mere chance Allen selected Weymouth, and the first wooden bathing machine was built. Then crowds gathered to watch the "mad man" enter the water. But the patient got better, told the Duke of Gloucester all about it, and—Weymouth was made.—London Tatler.

Though Uncle Sam's soldier boys are not engaged in fighting at Vera Cruz, they must be fed in the piping times of peace, and stores are being continually sent from Galveston and other ports to Vera Cruz. How Yucatan Gets Its Water.

In Yucatan the people depend for their water supply chiefly on what are known as "cenotes," or subterranean reservoirs, fed by hidden underground lakes or a network of water courses. Some of these are so near the surface that the soil has given way and left a surface pond or reservoir; others again are reached only by powerful pumps or a system of ladders by which the women descend into enormous caverns or traverse narrow galleries to fill their jars from the hidden springs, and in some cases the entrance to these deep caverns is a considerable distance from the nearest village or farm. Sometimes a crust of rock if left over such a "cenote," with an aperture through which the daylight reaches the cavern, forming a real grotto, with stalactites and stalagmites of considerable beauty.

Nearly all of the ancient cities and modern towns and haciendas are located near some one of these subterranean water caverns.—Charles Winslow Hall in National Magazine.

Was It For Him?

Blithers and Smithers were neighbors. They were friends before they became neighbors. The enmity started by Blithers' boy pushing Smithers' kid off a high picket fence and nearly breaking his young neck. Then Smithers killed four of Blithers' chickens. After that they glared at each other like a couple of horse thieves.

Blithers hired a colored man to mow his lawn. Rastus threw the grass over the fence into Smithers' yard.

"Hey, you!" yelled Smithers. "What in thunder are you doing?"

Rastus blinked.

"Das foh yo' mool, mister," he smiled.

"Mule!" roared Smithers. "I ain't got no mule!"

Rastus stared.

"Ain'tcha?" he gasped. Then he scratched his head. "Das funny," he added. "De gemman what lib here say de grass foh de jackass next' doh!"—Judge.

Too Many Books In 1600.

In bewailing the fact that too many books are published Mr. Heinemann re-echoes a complaint made over three centuries ago. Barnaby Rich, in his preface to "A New Description of Ireland," published in 1600, writes: "One of the diseases of this age is the multitude of books that doth so overcharge the world that it is not able to digest the abundance of idle matter that is every day hatched and brought into the world, that are as divers in their forms as their authors be in their faces. It is but a thriftless and thankless occupation, this writing of books. A man were certainly better to sit singing in a cobbler's shop, for his pay is certainly a penny a patch! But a book writer, if he get sometimes a few commendations of the judicious, he shall be sure to reap a thousand reproaches of the malicious."—London Chronicle.

A Masterpiece In Fragments.

Dr. Ohnefaisch-Richter, the famous antiquarian, writing in the Pall Mall Magazine on the ancient civilization of Cyprus, describes the chance discovery of a vase of the fourth century B. C. which ranks as one of the finest examples of ancient art ever found. "It first escaped the eyes of my workmen altogether," he writes, "when I accidentally found a single fragment in the earth dug out of a tomb. After a good baksheesh had been promised for each delivered fragment I succeeded in finding the whole vase with the exception of one small bit and in gluing together with my own hands the sixty-eight pieces and thus obtained the masterpiece of art." Today it has a place of honor in the British museum among the collection of Attic vases of the best period.

Java's Teak Forests.

Teak forests in Java cover 1,480,000 acres, and, as the area reforested is two and a half times as large as the area felled in a given time, this magnificent stock of timber is continually increasing. A pest of the Java teak plantation is alang grass (imperata arundinacae). In order to prevent the incursion of this plant, as hoeing is too expensive, the foresters sow a leguminous plant, luecena glauca, between the rows of teak seedlings. This chokes the alang, keeps the soil clean and enriches the soil in humus and nitrogen, and ultimately disappears with the increase of the forest cover.

ALLEGED TO BE THE HUGGER

Man Has Been Terrorizing Women at Bigelow Park

With the arrest of Lorenzo Martino of 45 Brackett street on Sunday evening on a charge of drunkenness the police believe they have in custody the Jack the Hugger who has terrorized the Bigelow Park district the past month.

All those who have been approached will be given an opportunity to identify him at the police station where he is locked up awaiting an investigation. Additional charges may be preferred against him today.

Martino is said to have followed Mrs. J. M. Wilson of 26 Newcomb place to her home on Sunday evening and shortly after another woman is said to have had a similar experience with a man answering his description.

When the police were notified they took immediate action and placed Martino under arrest on Washington street after he was pointed out as the man in question. He vigorously denies he is the Jack the Hugger who has been sought high and low by irate fathers and brothers. Martino told the police he has been in Quincy six weeks and has a family in Italy. He claims to have come here from the west.

FINES IN TWO LIQUOR CASES

Edward J. Doherty, whom the police say dispensed intoxicants at Houghs Neck; was fined $75 in the District Court this morning for the unlawful sale of liquor. He entered an appeal.

Doherty is the proprietor of a store at Centre and Sea streets and is alleged to have had a stock of liquor under his soda fountain. Inspector Goodhue who made the arrest introduced strong evidence at the trial.

Sam Quantor, arrested on a default warrant Saturday was in court this morning and paid a fine of $50 for violation of the liquor laws. Quantor was convicted several weeks ago and his case was continued. He neglected to appear on the new date and a default was ordered. This morning he said he had but $10 but he was in the prisoner's dock only a few minutes when he signalled a court officer and paid the fine.

OLD DAYS RECALLED.

The one man band heard about City Square this morning, takes one back to the good old days when that prince of entertainers, G. Swain Buckley, delighted Quincy audiences. Mr. Buckley was undoubtedly the originator of the one man band, which was first given in public in Quincy. Later Mr. Buckley delighted audiences all over the country. Another of Mr. Buckleys famous instruments was one that when played resembled a band of music. Many of Quincys older residents will readily recall G. Swain Buckley.

CARNIVAL DAY AT BRAINTREE

Annual Affair of St. Francis Church Saturday

With weather conditions changing from showery in the morning to fair for the rest of the day and a large crowd in attendance the annual carnival day at the St. Francis church was held on French's common last Saturday under most auspicious circumstances.

The first was decorated with flags of all nations and these were supplemented in the evening with strings of colored electric lights to illuminate the scene. The famous Avellino band of Boston was in attendance day and evening and their high class offerings were superbly played including selections from "Il Trovatore," the sextet from "Lucia" and airs from "Cavalleria Rusticana."

There was a commodious restaurant where a menu of varied dishes at moderate prices tempted the appetite, or if one desired lighter refreshment there was an ice cream pavilion not far away.

As usual the "tonic" booth did a rushing business and the candy table presided over by several charming young ladies was a sweet attraction.

Two dance boards, a large one with music by Atkinson's orchestra where modern dips, tangoes etc., were enjoyed and a smaller one with its lone fiddler where jigs and old fashioned dances were in order, were both well patronized.

There were plenty of smaller attractions with teddy bears, woolly dogs and other rewards for lucky ones. The good old chinese laundry had its share of patronage and many yielded to the fascination of taking a few shots at the "dolls."

In the afternoon near the bleachers, a list of sports was run off. The events and the winners were as follows:

ST. MARYS HOLD LEAD

Give Best Exhibition of Ball Swatting of Season

St. Mary's held their lead in the West Quincy league Saturday afternoon by defeating the Copelands 7 to 4, on the Ward four playground. Two men shone as hit artists, giving the best demonstration of swatting seen in the city this season.

Sid Duggan of St. Mary's came to the bat five times and got a homer and three singles. Clem Patriarca of the Copelands drove out a homer and made three pretty hits.

John Bennett, the colt pitcher of St. Mary's stayed in the entire game. He fanned seven and allowed 11 hits, and passed three men. Egan, the elongated spit ball artist of the Copelands was given a warm welcome and was relieved by Ed. Desmond.

The schedule is drawing to a close but the race for first place and the cup offered promises red hot action in the remaining games. The summary:

SAMUEL W. M'CALL

Announces Candidacy For Nomination For Governor

© COPYRIGHT BY CLINEDINST, WASH. D.C.

M'CALL A CANDIDATE

Former Congressman Wants to Head Bay State Republicans

Boston, July 20.—Reduction in the amount of legislation put into effect yearly in this state is advocated by Samuel W. McCall as a plank for the Republican party platform in a statement in which he announces his candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination.

Prison reform, fewer prison sentences, retention of railroads under private ownership, improved living and housing conditions and greater political morality are also desired by McCall. He flays the Wilson regime for what he terms its meddling in Mexico and ignores the Progressives.

MEEHAN THE WINNER BY MORE THAN MILE

Two Other Boston Men Get Trophies In Long Swim

New York, July 20.—Three Boston men won the special silver trophies offered by the New York Tribune for the amateur Marathon swimming race from the lower end of Manhattan to Sandy Hook, an estimated distance of twenty-two miles.

The race was won by over a mile by George R. Meehan of Boston, the amateur three-mile champion of New England, who made the journey in 7 hours 18 minutes. The officials of the race declared this time to be a record.

Samuel Richards and Walter Dana, both of Boston, finished second and third, their respective times being 8:19 and 8:19:20. Clarence Durborow of Philadelphia was fourth in 8:46. These four were the only men to finish out of thirty who started.

A MOTIVE FOR MURDER

New Facts In Case of Woman Found Dead on Winthrop Beach

Boston, July 20.—That the woman whose body was found off the beach of Winthrop early Thursday morning was the victim of murder has been practically established by pathological and scientific facts.

These facts, with others discovered by the medical examiner, who performed the autopsy on the young woman's body, are in the possession of the district attorney's office, and an investigation has been begun to discover who was responsible.

It was also established that the crime was in all likelihood committed on th beach at Ocean Spray, where the body was found, probably only a few hours before the discovery of the dead woman floating on the water.

SEA SLED ABANDONED

Third Engine to Be Installed In the Airboat America

Hammondsport, N. Y., July 20.—After the sea sled bottom in the America had proved a great disappointment in its trial, Lieutenant Porte and Glenn Curtiss decided to instal a third engine in the airboat with a three-bladed propeller.

Curtiss has denied repeatedly that he contemplated adding a third engine to the America or making any change in the present engines, but the failure of the sea sled bottom, in which much faith had been placed, led him to decide on the change.

High Grafters Sentenced

Tokio, July 20.—Vice Admiral Matsua of the Japanese navy and Managing Director Iwahara of the Mitsui company were sentenced to two years' imprisonment for complicity in the naval graft plot.

Much Money In Salem Banks

Salem, Mass., July 20.—Salem bank deposits are the highest in the city's record owing to the $10,000,000 in fire insurance being paid to property owners since the recent fire.

WILL REST ON HUSBAND'S FARM

Mrs. Carman to Remain In Seclusion Until Trial Begins

STARTS ON AUTOMOBILE TRIP

Visit to Philadelphia and Atlantic City to Be Followed by Long Period of Relaxation—Hint at New Grand Jury Action and Libel Action by District Attorney

Freeport, L. I., July 20.—Accompanied by her husband and her daughter Elizabeth, Mrs. Florence C. Carman, out under bail of $20,000, following an indictment alleging manslaughter in the first degree, by the death of Mrs. Louise Bailey, left her home in her husband's touring car.

They will go first to Philadelphia, then to Atlantic City. After a week at the seashore the three will spend a few days at Delaware Water Gap, and then go to a stock farm at Lumberville, Pa., a few miles from the Gap. This stock farm is owned by Carman, and Mrs. Carman, it is said, will remain there in seclusion until the time set for her trial. That will be about the middle of September.

Before her departure from her home of tragedy Mrs. Carman was visited by numbers of her neighbors, who came to say good bye and to assure her of their sympathy and strong belief in her innocence.

Mrs. Carman was visibly moved by the demonstration. Coupled with the parting from her mother, who is seriously ill, the woman accused of shooting Mrs. Bailey was overcome with emotion as she left her home.

Mrs. Carman, chiefly because of her mother's illness and also because her absence for any length of time would, she believed, give to her enemies a certain aspect of guilty flight, was unwilling to leave. But her family and friends insisted that she should go away to obtain a rest after the excitement of the past two weeks.

Carman will return home after seeing that Mrs. Carman and Elizabeth, who is 7 years old, are comfortably settled at the farm.

It is reported that the accused woman is menaced by a new indictment. Before he left his home for a three days' automobile trip District Attorney Smith hinted at a new grand jury action and threatens libel action against Carman and his wife. He is said to be shaping up evidence which was not presented either at the inquest or before the grand jury.

ENGINES TOPPLE OVER

White Mountain Express In Collision With Freight Train

South Berwick, Me., July 20.—A White Mountain express was in collision with a freight train on a siding here. The two locomotives of the express were derailed and the forward engine rolled down a thirty-foot embankment, while the other fell on its side across the tracks.

The engineer of the forward engine was slightly injured, but none of the passengers was hurt beyond a slight shaking up from the sudden stop. Four freight cars went down the embankment.

Carter lost his previous wives by death. The bride is 50 years old. Carter is wealthy and is considered one of the most rugged men for his age in West Virginia.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES

The body of Mrs. Winnie Kaschinsky, 24, was found floating in the water at Framingham, Mass. Despondency is given as the cause of the supposed suicide. She had been married eight months.

Albert Trott and William Cashman, fishermen, reached Truro, Mass., after a fifty-six-mile row without food or water following the loss of their bearings in a fog.

Francis Doane, 71, head of the firm of Francis Doane & Co., stationers, Boston, fell dead on the veranda of his home while he was talking with neighbors.

Miss Ruth Adams, 15, was drowned in Eagle lake, Jefferson, Mass., while bathing.

Mrs. Minnie Moore, 40, attempted suicide, according to the Somerville, Mass., police by swallowing three bichloride of mercury tablets. She is expected to recover.

A statue of George W. Glick, the ninth governor of Kansas, was unveiled in Statuary hall at the national Capitol.

Charles Zanier, 49, died from injuries received when he was struck by an electric car at Arlington Mass.

The Wheeler foundry, a landmark at Worcester, Mass., closed down for good and the building will be razed.

WHIPS BEING KEPT BUSY IN CONGRESS

Adjournment Is Not Considered Likely Before Fall

Washington, July 20.—Members of congress who are standing valiantly by the administration in the effort to complete its legislative program despite the approaching campaign, while admitting they are weary of legislative duties and anxious to get home to their districts, have resigned themselves to the conclusion that there is little hope for adjournment before fall.

Both houses already are having trouble in rallying a quorum for the transaction of business, but the party whips are constantly at work bringing members who have left town back to Washington, and they hope to expedite what business remains. Some senators and representatives are permitted to go home from time to time to look after their political fences, but the Democratic leaders aim to keep a quorum present at all times from now on.

ROBINS MOST PLENTIFUL

There Are 2,026,000,000 Native Field Birds East of the Mississippi

Washington, July 20.—Approximately 2,026,000,000 native field birds, exclusive of sparrows, inhabit the United States east of the Great Plains states, according to partial returns announced of the first bird census in the history of the government, now being made by the department of agriculture.

Apparently the most numerous of these birds is the robin, of which, it is estimated, there are 100,000,000 east of the Mississippi river. They average fifty pairs to the square mile, while all field birds average 1000 pairs to the square mile after omitting land planted in crops.

NEW EVIDENCE FOUND?

Ballou's Body Exhumed and a Secret Autopsy Performed

Stamford, Conn., July 20.—That a sensation is to be sprung when Coroner Phelan conducts another hearing into the death of Waldo R. Ballou became known when it was learned that the body of Ballou had been exhumed and that physicians have been conducting a secret autopsy.

While Mrs. Angle professed not to be affected by this news, there is an air of suspense regarding the outcome of the hearing, and there are predictions that the testimony will cause a decided change in the aspects of the case.

Receivers For Western Rilroad

Ft. Smith, Ark., July 20.—The Kansas City and Memphis railroad, with headquarters at Rodgers, Ark., was placed in the hands of receivers.

Speaker of the House of Commons.

With all his authority the speaker of the house of commons respects the house and the house respects the speaker. That is the very essence of order in the institution which has won the title of the mother of parliaments.

In his book, "The Speaker of the House," Michael Macdonagh describes the origin and romantic history of the speakership. This office, which holds so many pitfalls, is treated as one of great honor and dignity. A salary of £5,000 ($25,000) a year, a palatial residence and a retiring pension of £4,000 ($20,000) a year, with a peerage, are the distinctions the nation bestows on the first commoner in England. During the parliamentary session the speaker gives two full dress levees and seven full dress dinners. Of the many ancient perquisites of the office only two, Mr. Macdonough tells us, now survive. A buck and doe killed in the royal preserves at Windsor are annually sent to him, and the Cloth Workers' company of London presents him at Christmas with a generous width of the best broadcloth.

Winter Sleepers.

The bat, tortoise and dormouse are counted among the best winter sleepers. So deep is the lethargy of a dormouse that if this little creature is awakened suddenly and put near a fire his pulse beats so slowly that he is lifeless in a few minutes. While asleep he is kept alive by the surplus food which he has eaten in the autumn and which is stored up in his body as fat. Frogs and toads are even sounder sleepers and approach nearer to a lifeless condition in sleep than any other animal life except certain fish. For in them the heart stops beating and breathing in the ordinary way is impossible. During this time the breathing is carried on through the pores of the skin. These strange cases of torpor are also caused by lack of food during bitter cold. For in countries where excessive heat and drought prevail, there are numerous instances of torpor that are quite as profound as that exhibited by the winter sleepers.

Plain to Observation.

On the Bosporus

A Turkish Love Story

By GERTRUDE E. MOREHOUSE

Selma and Rabieh, two little Turkish girls, the former sixteen, the latter seventeen, living in Constantinople, went one day for a walk together along the bank of the Bosporus. The location of Constantinople is beautiful, and since Leander swam what was then called the Hellespont to visit Hero on the opposite shore it has been associated with romance. History comes in for its share of interest from the time Constantine made the city on its European bank the capital of the Roman empire.

These two Turkish girls each wore the charshaf, the long gown of the women of that country, and veils over their faces. The custom of keeping the face covered is not as obligatory among Turkish women as formerly, and some of them dress in European costume. Yet these girls, being very young and unmarried, did not think of lifting their veils while walking where they would be liable to meet men. But coming to a grassy spot, where their faces would be to the water, they sat themselves down and, throwing their veils back, permitted the cool air to fan their faces.

The Bosporus was covered with all sorts of craft, from the skiff to the ocean steamer lying at anchor, while on the opposite shore towered a profusion of buildings, minarets and trees. The boats did not come very near the slope on which the girls were sitting, so there was no necessity for them to let down their veils. They sat looking at the various craft out on the water, now a little steamer plying between different points on the strait, now a motorboat and now a small sailer with leg-of-mutton sails. It was all so charming, so soothing, the breeze was so refreshing that the maidens reclined on the slope, Rabieh laying her head in Selma's lap.

It was not long before Rabieh was dozing and Selma was blinking. There was a sharp point on one side of them which cut off the shore in that direction. A rowboat came round the point and passed within a few yards of them. Selma, who was nodding, suddenly started at seeing a young man with a pair of oars in his hands looking straight at her.

At sixteen a girl may be captured by a look. The young man, who was but a few years Selma's senior, was wrapt in admiration and expressed it in every feature of his face. To Selma he seemed so beautiful that for a moment she forgot to drop her veil. Then, remembering to do so, she shut off what was to the young man a vision of loveliness.

"Rabieh," exclaimed Selma, shaking her friend, "wake up and let down your veil! That boat you see pulling away came very near us. The young man in it is, oh, so beautiful! He has a face that must have been copied from that of Allah."

Rabieh yawned, arose, and the girls walked on.

It was not long after this that Selma and her mother were crossing the Bosporus in one of the little steamers used for ferriage. They were seated in the harem, as all women's apartments in Turkey are called, and were unveiled. A flutter of wind blew aside a window curtain, and there on the deck without sat the young man who had looked upon Selma while she was sitting on the shore. For the second time the two pairs of eyes met, and for the second time through them two hearts leaped toward each other.

After that Selma saw the young man several times, though he did not see her, for she was always veiled. Once they passed each other on the Galata bridge, once in Stamboul and again in Scutari. Every time she met him she studied his face and either saw or fancied she saw the wrapt expression of a lover.

At the meeting in Stamboul, Selma was walking with her Aunt Leila.

"That is Orkhan, the son of a very dear friend of mine," said the aunt.

"Is he a fine young man?" asked Selma, with a tremor in her voice that she could scarcely conceal.

"A very fine young man indeed."

There was silence for some time between them, during which Leila had forgotten having met Orkhan. Presently Selma said:

"Aunt Leila, when will mamma arrange a marriage for me?"

"I don't know, child. Do you wish to be married?"

"Certainly. Doesn't every girl wish to be married?"

"Well, dear, I will speak to mamma about it."

Soon after this conversation Selma's mother, Gulistan, at her sister's suggestion determined to look about for a husband for Selma. She knew no men personally—Turkish women know no one but those of their own sex—so she made inquiries among her friends for a marriageable young man. Aunt Leila also took a hand in the matter and quite naturally called on Orkhan's mother, Mikri, to ask if a match could be arranged between Orkhan and Selma. Mikri said she would see about it.

One day Selma overheard her mother and her aunt talking about getting her a husband.

"Mikri says," said Leila, "that she proposed to Orkhan to get a wife for him, but he will not marry; that he is looking for a girl he has seen on the bank of the Bosporus and again on a steamer. If he can find her he will marry her, but no one else."

This was very harrowing to Selma. The man she desired wanted her, and she wanted him, but could not find her. He must not be informed who or where she was, because a Turk sees his bride's face for the first time when he lifts her veil immediately after the wedding ceremony. An American girl would have found a dozen ways to make herself known without appearing to have anything to do with the matter. But Turkish women, especially the girls, are very helpless.

But Aunt Leila was a woman, and even a Turkish woman likes to have her own way. She knew nothing of the meeting between her niece and Orkhan, but his mother was the only woman she knew who had a marriageable son, and she determined to get him for Selma. Leila was wealthy, and she offered Mikri a large dowry for Selma if her marriage with Orkhan could be brought about. Mikri told her son that he must stop dreaming about the girl he had seen and, like a dutiful son, marry the woman she had provided for him. He promised to think about it and at last gave in because he need not be restricted to one wife and if he ever found the girl with whom he had fallen in love he could marry her as well.

One day Gulistan told her daughter that she had found a husband for her and that they must begin to make preparations for the wedding. Of late years there is not always an objection to letting the bride know something of the appearance of the man she is to marry. Gulistan, not dreaming that Selma had ever seen Orkhan, showed her his picture, telling her that he was to be her husband. Selma, who had been almost crazed at the thought of marrying any one except the man she loved, on seeing the photograph was like one reprieved just before an expected execution. How she ever concealed her emotion she never knew herself.

Meanwhile Orkhan continued to look for the girl on whom he had set his heart, for the expense of living has risen in Turkey as well as elsewhere, and only wealthy men can afford more than one wife. The young man was very miserable, for he wished to find the girl he loved in time to break with the wife his mother had provided for him. But since he was permitted to look upon the face of no woman except his wife how could he find her? He had passed her three times without recognizing her, she being veiled.

The wedding day came, and he had not found her. The women were seated, most of them smoking cigarettes and eating sweetmeats. Then they were taken to inspect the apartments to be occupied by the bride and groom, in which were the wedding presents and the trousseau, the latter including articles of apparel belonging to the groom. Then the guests were seated in a large room to await the entrance of the wedding party. The bride, veiled, was brought to the door of the house, where she was met by the groom. He led her into the house and past the guests, who were elbowing one another to get a view of the bridal pair, into a chamber, the door of which was closed behind them.

This is the moment when at Turkish weddings the groom lifts his bride's veil and for the first time looks upon her face. Orkhan had proceeded thus far like one going to a funeral rather than a wedding. How the bride looked no one could tell, for her face was covered. The two stood alone. The groom, conforming to what was expected of him, raised the veil.

A pretty subject for an artist would be this incident—the man's face changing from indifference to surprise and delight at recognizing the girl he loved, she looking up at him lovingly, enjoying his surprise, mingling her happiness with his. Then they were locked in a long embrace.

Curiously enough, there is no other marriage ceremony in Turkey than this, though there is always a formal betrothal some time before. No religious ceremony corresponding to those of European peoples is required. The marriage with the Moslem is simply taking possession of his wife.

LOT OF INVENTOR NOT AN EASY ONE

Gaisman, Who Got $300,000 For Device, Exception.

CAPITAL HARD TO INTEREST

President of Inventors' League Declares That Patentees Need Resources to Fight Infringement—Inventor of Garbage Gathering Cart Buried In Potter's Field.

Some of the inventors who read the statement of H. J. Gaisman, who, having received $300,000 for showing a method for autographing a photographic film so that it might be reproduced on the finished photograph, was led to remark that he believed "a glorious new era for the whole profession of inventors had arrived," were skeptical about the approach of happier days for men and women of inventive genius. George Whigelt, president of the Inventors' League of the United States, made this comment:

"As I read the account Gaisman received over a quarter million of dollars for an invention which he himself admits he would have sold for $10,000. The purchaser voluntarily paid him many times more than he asked or hoped for. It is almost unbelievable to me. It makes the recipient stand out as the fortunate one of a century. If it were not so uncommon there might be some cause for congratulating ourselves and agreeing with his suggestion that the poor inventor is at last to come into his rightful inheritance.

"I am sorry to say that the conditions are just opposite. The experience of many with whom I have come in contact shows that the man with an idea of value backed up by patent rights has just as hard a struggle today to get a hearing, to sell his invention or to interest capital as at any time. Of course men like Thomas A. Edison are better off today than similar men in the past, because there is more demand for inventive genius, and such men have the means to make known and profit by their work.

"But the inventor generally is either compelled to sell out for a small sum or be prepared to do constant battle in the courts to protect his interests from infringement, which he cannot do unless he gets financial support. If he attempts to market his invention in a small way, paying as he goes from the profits of small sales, and should his invention be a popular one he more often finds that some one is reproducing it.

Fortune Reports Often Untrue.

"When you hear reports of some one getting a fortune for some simple little article that gives promise of great popular demand it is often far from the truth. Fortune may come from years of work and struggle if the inventor has the courage to push his article in a small way until he can develop his product in a larger and more profitable manner. Few can do this, so they sell, and the fortunes go to the capitalist who makes the investment.

"Even the useful articles that may be sold at popular prices do not always meet success immediately. Of course advertising has much to do with conditions in that respect, and few inventors have the money to make known the worth of their goods. Then, again, an inventor is seldom a good business man.

"A few days ago Carl Ilg, inventor of a garbage gathering cart and separator, was buried in potter's field. He had refused to accept $500 for his invention after experts and city officials had witnessed the work of his cart."

President Whigelt manufactures some of his own inventions and has interested capital in others. A year ago he found that a western concern was selling a machine similar to one he was making, he says, from which he received no returns. He wrote warning the maker that it was an infringement, as he had a patent for the design and had a patent pending for the entire device. He showed a reporter the copy of the patent for the design and then this copy of a letter received from the alleged infringers:

Ha, ha! Where did you get this wonderful invention? Why didn't you tell the trade that? And why didn't you tell the trade you have been violating the law, misleading them quite awhile by "patented?" You get that patent mark off your literature quickly, or there will be no question about litigation.

He Invited a Suit.

"That firm has more money than I have, and they know it will take me a long time and much money to protect myself," said Mr. Whigelt. "But I wrote as hot letters as I dared because of the mails daring them to make an issue of it in the courts. They have not made a move. But I received this from their attorney:

"There may be something that you are using somewhere, but we understand that you do not claim that our client is infringing it, and as this seems to be the only patent that you claim to own we shall advise our client accordingly. We were afraid that you had gained a patent on the earth and wanted our client to move off of it."

President Whigelt says he thinks the best era of prosperity for the poor inventor would come by protection from the government. When a patent is granted, he suggests, the government through the patent office should see to it that none of the inventor's rights is violated instead of leaving him to fight his own battles after complying with the law.

Standardizing the Babies

They have standardized the babies in this scientific day,
They would save the perfect specimens and throw the rest away.
But they can't convince the mothers of the undersized and weak,
That they're not the kind of babies that a perfect race must seek,
And the homely little babies get as tender, loving care
And are cuddled just as fondly as the beautiful and fair.

Curious creatures are these mothers, each enraptured by the charms
Of the palpitating bundle that she trundles in her arms,
Each contending that her baby is entitled to the prize
Irrespective of all standards as to strength or weight or size,
Not a single one admitting that her little failure's place
Should be taken by a stronger for the glory of the race.

Well, though science may be baffled, though its new hygienic charts
May be mocked by the affection that is born on mother's' hearts,
Possibly the little babies that have failed to pass the test
May become in adolescence just as lovely as the rest.
Science works exceeding wonders, but in nature's gentle plan
Mother love can do for babies more than science ever can.

INCREASE IS REPORTED IN FEMALE WORKERS.

Census Bureau Shows Gain of Nearly 9 Per Cent From 1880 to 1910.

The proportion of gainful workers in the female population of the United States ten years of age and over increased from 14.7 to 23.4 per cent from 1880 to 1910, according to a report on occupations which has just been published by Director William J. Harris of the bureau of the census, department of commerce. In the same time the proportion of the male population ten years of age and over gainfully occupied increased from 78.7 per cent to 81.3 per cent.

The proportion of the whole population ten years of age and over engaged in gainful occupations increased from 47.3 per cent in 1880 to 53.3 per cent in 1910, the increase being least rapid from 1880 to 1900 and most rapid from 1900 to 1910.

Whether or not the "feminist movement" of recent years has anything to do with the gain is not stated in the report, but the fact remains that the women of the country have increased their ranks or gainful earners nearly 9 per cent during the time taken in by the census, and that during the same period the men have made a gain of only a little more than 2 per cent.

Of course this is in some degree explained by the fact that the proportion of men engaged in gainful occupations is naturally a large one, and therefore prohibits any startling increase in the ranks. However that may be, the fact remains that the women of the country, according to the figures of this report, are making large inroads in the places where "gainful" occupations are to be had, and that the proportion of unoccupied females is decreasing each year.

There were 30,091,564 males engaged in gainful occupations in continental United States in 1910, as compared with 8,075,772 females—"that it," says the report, "of a total of 38,167,336 persons engaged in all occupations in 1910, 78.8 per cent were males and 21.2 per cent were females."

MAY FLY ON SILK WINGS.

Linen Has Call, However, For Aeroplane Equipment.

Although to the lay mind the suggestion that aeroplanes should be fitted with silk wings may seem an unnecessarily extravagant idea, there are certain advantages to be gained by such an innovation which would warrant the extra expense. Not that the latter would be very great. The cost of using silk on a modern biplane would not increase the expense by more than $100 per machine, while it is estimated that it would reduce the weight by about twenty pounds. Such a saving in weight, of course, is highly important.

In the opinion of experts there are certain objections to using silk for aeroplane wings. It is pointed out that while it is superior to linen, which is now used, in regard to strength, it does not stand exposure to sun and rain so well. Furthermore, silk does not lend itself so well to dressing with tautening liquids, which is essential in order that the wings may not suffer unduly from the vagaries of the climate.

Various experiments have been made not only with silk, but with every kind of material in making aeroplane wings—catgut, cotton, transparent celluloid films (in the hope of invisibility), fine aluminium foil (for fireproofness), wooden slats and feathers. None of them, however, according to Pegasus in the London Times, equals linen, which when dressed with the tautening liquids seems impervious to everything except accidents.

The dressings, which consist of solutions of casein, are applied after the linen has been stretched over the framework. Three or four thin coats are applied, and the effect of the dressing is to pull the whole fabric together in every direction. When the coats are dry the linen rings like a drum to the flick of the finger and affords a fairly smooth surface, which is sometimes further improved and rendered water resisting by a couch builders' flexible varnish.

ALLEGED THEFT OF MONEY ORDER

Atlantic Auxiliary Letter Carrier Under Arrest

William W. Williams, Jr., of South Boston an auxiliary letter carrier at the Atlantic station was arrested Saturday by a deputy U. S. Marshal and later arraigned before United States Commissioner Hayes and held in $500 until this morning for a hearing. Williams is charged with the theft of a $3 money order, contained in a letter addressed to Hilda Morton of Atlantic.

Williams was assigned as an auxiliary carrier at Atlantic July 8, and it is alleged that he had the letter addressed to Miss Morton to deliver, but instead of doing so he placed it in his pocket.

According to the charge against Williams the letter was discovered by his nephew William Fay aged 12 years, while he was searching his uncles pocket for change.

The boy turned the letter over to a South Boston carrier who in turn notified Supt. Treadwell of that office. The matter was duly reported to the Post Office inspectors and Williams arrest followed. Williams denied ever having seen or handled the letter.

RECOVERS LOST MONEY

A woman, thought to be Miss Mary Riley of Commercial street, Weymouth ,is $50 richer through the honesty of John Rooney, a conductor on the Bay State St. Ry. Co. who finding a purse crammed with greenbacks made a successful effort to find the owner.

The incident occured several days ago but it has just become known. Mr. Rooney was conductor of an East Weymouth car and noticed a woman leave her purse on the seat. Before he could call it to her attention she dropped out of sight.

He started an inquiry and finally learned her name. Shortly after she again possessed the money and Mr. Rooney had established himself as a young man with honest purposes.

ATLANTIC FAMILY AFFLICTED.

Affliction shadows the Dolan family, who make their home at 7 Oak street, for Saturday, with their father Patrick Dolan in precarious condition as a result of blood poison, their mother died after a short illness.

Two weeks ago she was stricken with a malady that could not be relieved by physicians. The father accidentally cut his knee a week ago and the wound became infected. Blood poisoning developed and he has since been under the care of two nurses.

The funeral of Mrs. Dolan was held this morning and a solemn high mass of requiem was sung at the Church of the Sacred Heart. Rev. Fr. John P. Cuffe, pastor, was celebrant, Rev. Fr. Egan of Pawtucket R. I. was deacon, and Rev. Fr. Brandley of Neponset, was subdeacon. The choir sang the Gregorian chant under the direction of Rev. F. J. A. McNiff.

The burial was in the family lot in St. Mary's cemetery. There was a profusion of floral tributes.

INJURED BY FALL.

Guiseppe Berluchi of Madison avenue was removed to the Quincy City Hospital in the police ambulance Saturday afternoon following a fall at the plant of the Eagle Polishing Co., in South Quincy. He sustained a slight concussion of the brain but is not on the dangerous list.

The Labeled Children of Old Canton.

The crowded water front of the old Canton of a century ago, with its thronging sampans alive from stem to stern with swarming children, is vividly pictured in the "Memoirs of William Hickey." In his account of the innumerable boats that covered the river for mile after mile Mr. Hickey describes a novel method of protecting the children of the floating city from the dangers of the water. Each child wore a large vegetable something like a gourd or pumpkin fastened to its back. The vegetable was buoyant, of course, and, if the infant fell overboard, floated it until the child was picked up by its parents or the occupants of any other sampan that happened to be near. This vegetable life preserver had the name and station of the sampan to which it belonged cut in Chinese characters upon it, and by that means the rescuers could at once identify the child; otherwise in such a multitude of boats great confusion would have arisen. It scarcely ever happened that any one was drowned.

Hinduism.

In "Myths of the Hindus and Buddhists" is given this account of the origin of Hinduism: "Hinduism is, in fact, an immense synthesis, deriving its elements from a hundred different directions and incorporating every conceivable motive of religion. The motives of religion are manifold. Earth worship, sun worship, nature worship, sky worship, honor paid to heroes and ancestors, mother worship, father worship, prayers for the dead, the mystic association of certain plants and animals—all these and more are included within Hinduism. And each marks some single age of the past, with its characteristic conjunction or invasion of races formerly alien to one another They are all welded together now to form a great whole. But still by visits to outlying shrines, by the study of the literature of certain periods and by carefully following up of threads it is possible to determine what were some of the influences that have entered into its making."

Guarded Himself Pretty Well.

Not many people guard their health so carefully as did Sir Tatton Sykes, who in winter wore five or six coats when out riding and shed some of them as he became warmer. Prince Potiakine, however, took even stronger precautions against illness. If there was a touch of cold in the air he had fires lighted in his grounds before venturing to stroll in them. His waistcoats were made in two separate pieces, joined at the sides by buttons, so that he could take them off or put additional ones on without removing his coat. If caught in a shower he sheltered himself with an umbrella nearly two feet wide, which came down below his waist and was pierced with little windows. In very hot weather the prince wore boots coated with tin as a protection against mad dogs and carried sponges soaked with vinegar in his shirt front to ward off unpleasant smells.

Too Quiet a Fire.

A fire at Cologne is described with true American spirit in "Europe After 8:15."

"It was in a feed store near my hotel, and I got there before the firemen. When they came at last, in their tin pot hats, they got out half a dozen big squirts and rushed into the building with them. Then, when it was out, they put the squirts back into their little express wagon and drove off. You never saw such child's play—not a line of hose run out, not an engine puffing, not a gong heard, not a soul letting out a whoop. It was more like a Sunday school picnic than a fire. I guess if these people ever did have a civilized blaze it would scare them to death. But they never have any. Well, what can you expect? A country where all the charwomen are men and all the garbage men are women."

Lincoln's Appearance.

Senator Dawes, describing Lincoln's appearance on the morning of his arrival in Washington, ten days before his first inauguration, wrote: "I never saw a man so unkempt. His hair was disheveled and his clothes were the ones he had worn on the sleeper from Springfield. He was long and angular. It seemed as though his body was made up of component parts of different bodies—as though his head were not in the right place. Rough and uncouth, he was a typical backwoodsman. But there was something incomprehensible in his face, something unfathomable."

FIVE DAY LAW SET ASIDE

New York Girl Becomes Bride of Daniel DiBona

Daniel DiBona of 61 Centre street, formerly a bookkeeper at W. A. Bradfords, City Square, overcame parental objection to his marry Clara DiBenedetto, a handsome New York girl, and on Sunday claimed her as his bride. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Fr. Thomas R. McCoy, pastor of St. Marys parish.

About a month ago the DiBenedettos came to Quincy to make their home and the young man renewed former friendship and ten days later proposed and was accepted. No objection was made to the marriage but because the girl was but 16 years old the mother counseled the couple to wait.

They however would brook no delay and after much persuasion secured the consent of Mrs. DiBenedetto to the marriage. An intention of marriage was filled Tuesday but because the marriage had been arranged for yesterday they were obliged to ask Judge Avery to set aside the five day law. He granted their wish.

Louis DiBona an uncle of the groom was best man, and a sister, Mrs. Marie DiBona was the matron.

A reception followed the ceremony after which Mr. and Mrs. DiBona left on a honeymoon trip. They will live in this city.

WALTHAMS RATE IS INCREASED

Deficits in the estimated receipts of 1913 is given by the Assessors of Waltham as one of the reasons for the increase of seventy cents in the tax rate this year. The deficit could have been spread over a period of three years but it was decided to cover it this year.

It was anticipated that the rate would show a much larger increase owing to increases in state and county taxes, but these increases were considerably lower than anticipated.

The deficit which had to be provided for however amounted to $15,688, but in view of the recent laws relative to municipal indebtedness Mayor Kearns felt it proper to provide it in this years levy. A deficit in estimated receipts is an unusual occurance.

The real estate valuation was increased $562,100 and the personal estate $520,800 making a total of $1,082,900. The total valuation is given as $31,300,100. The total number of polls assessed is 8,171.

TOOK BOAT WITHOUT LEAVE

Francis O'Rourke of East Braintree was fined $15 in the District Court this morning for taking the motor boat of H. Parker without permission and sentence was suspended until Aug. 1. Mathew Hennessey, arraigned for a similar offense was discharged.

O'Rourke, in his testimony said that until the complainant became friendly with an East Weymouth girl he was his bosom friend and that he had been given the freedom of the boat in payment for services rendered. He freed Hennessey from any complicity by saying he met him by accident and invited him to go.

Parker told the court such an arrangement was not in effect and charged O'Rourke taking with taking the boat last Saturday evening and returning it in damaged condition. O'Rourke frankly admitted he took the boat for a sail down the river but said he did it in good faith and because of the existing agreement.

FILES DIVORCE LIBEL.

Edna Mabelle Bird, the belle of Houghs Neck, whose elopement to Providence five years ago with T. Corey Holyoke of Beacon street, Brookline, startled the summer colony, has filed a divorce libel in which she charges her husband with desertion.

Mrs. Holyoke met her husband at a hop at the Quincy Yacht Club and they were married shortly after. She returned to her mothers home several summers ago and while many wondered where her husband was. His whereabouts has been kept secret. The filing of the petition was as much of a surprise as the elopement. It is not expected that her plea will be contested.

FELL FROM STREET CAR.

Mrs. M. E. Clifford of 59 Hudson street, South Boston, fell from an electric car in City Square at 11.50 Sunday morning and was badly shaken up. Mrs. Clifford was one of a party of ten on their way to Houghs Neck and in leaving the car her hand slipped from the bar. She landed in the street and struck on her side. She was able to continue her journey to the beach, and was apparently uninjured.

Collective.

At a regular mass meeting of the Scandinavians in South Minneapolis a few nights since, the pastor having heard that one John Johnson wanted to join the church, said, "Will John Johnson, if present, please stand up?" Nearly all the men present stood up. The bewildered preacher looked around awhile, and then said: "You may sit down, Mr. Johnson, I will call a meeting of you some time next week."

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER.

Like a Lake of Flame.

One of the most remarkable of the hot springs in the Yellowstone National park is Firehole lake, in which flames seem to appear in the water. These flames are seen from only two points, and should the wind be causing a disturbance of the water the tourist may not see them at all. At the eastern end of this small lake is a circular opening of a deep seated spring not unlike other vents of thermal waters. Through this vent, which usually stands full of clear, transparent water, numerous bubbles of mingled air and superheated steam rise gradually. Before reaching the surface they unite to form one large mass that in its upward passage strikingly resembles a flame of fire. This continues until the bubble bursts, only to be followed by a repetition of the phenomenon. The explanation is that the slightly agitated water is reflected in the thin film of the ascending volume of gas. The phenomena are far better seen at Firehole lake than elsewhere, but under favorable conditions they may be seen at other localities, but in a far less striking manner.

Sacred Bangles.

One of the oldest and most curious of existing industries is the making of narrow rings or bracelets, called bangles, from the chank, or sacred shell of the Hindus. This conch—Turkinella pyrum, Linn.—is found chiefly at a depth of about two fathoms in the gulf of Manaar, and about 2,000,000 of the shells are exported annually to Calcutta. So important is the bangle of the Hindu women that J. Hornell, representing the Madras government, has specially investigated the industry. Tracing the early history of chank ornaments, Mr. Hornell is unable to assign prehistoric specimens in the Madras museum to the later stone age, as had been previously done, but believes marks on some of them were made by metal implements. He has found, however, remains of ancient bangle factories scattered over the greater part of India. Bangle cutting is now confined almost entirely to Bengal, and it proves to be in flourishing condition in spite of the growing taste for gold ornaments.

Adversity's Only Sure Bet.

Don't place too much dependence in human nature—not because men in general are untrustworthy, which I do not mean to imply, but because they are human. Promises are often born of momentary enthusiasm and made with the best intentions of ultimate fulfillment. But things happen, conditions change, ardor cools; the sentiment of liberality is superseded by one of selfish interest, and pledges made in the best of faith are forgotten.

Everything human is frail and mutable. The nature of a man may change with each new environment, but the coin of the realm has a fixed and dependable value. You may fail to cash in on promises, but you can always collect 100 cents on a dollar bill.

That's the reason I say to you that it's all right to have faith in men, but put your implicit trust in cash. It's the only sure bet in the moment of adversity.—Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

Origin of the Argentine Flag.

Mr. Fraser, in telling of the origin of the Argentine flag, says: "The emphatic patriotism of the American is tepid alongside the hot blooded nationality of Argentina. It is daily inculcated in the schools; the blue and white striped flag is honored on every occasion. When the Argentines were in revolution against Spain in 1810 and needed a banner to flaunt against the red and orange of the enemy they got pieces of blue and white cloth intended for garments from an English warship lying at Montevideo and made a flag of it. So the Argentine flag, like much of Argentine prosperity, is due to Great Britain." Mr. Fraser holds that, in proportion to the population, there are as many millionaires in Argentina as in the United States.—Westminster Gazette.

Housemaid Courtesies.

A gayly gowned and garrulous housemaid sat down by an acquaintance on a trolley and at once said: "Hello, Sadie! Where you livin' now?"

"Nowheres," was the reply.

"How's that?"

"I'm married."

"You ain't!"

"Sure thing. Look at that!"

She held up her ungloved left hand in triumph, for there on the third finger was a shining new wedding ring.

Staring at it in wonder for a moment, the other girl asked, "Well, who got stung?"—Chicago Herald.

Green Diamonds.

While a real emerald colored diamond is rare, those with a green tinge are quite plentiful. The Museum of Natural history in Paris has several examples of green diamonds, but Dresden has the most famous, and it is one of the five marvels of gems known to the world.

Her Assistant.

The authoress of whom Fliegende Blatter tells had said that she was very happy in her married life.

"I find my husband such a help!" she added fervently.

"Indeed!" said her friend. "Does he cook or write?"

Doesn't Like Water.

Mrs. Grogan (chatting with neighbor)—I had this waist dry cleaned last week an' now it's as good as new. Little Johnny Grogan—Maw, kin they clean faces that way?—Puck.

Confide a secret to a dumb man and it will make him speak.—Livonian.

WILLIAMS ON ALBANIA.

American Minister Has Set Europe to Talking by a Startling Report.

George Fred Williams, United States minister to Greece, has created a sensation at Athens and wide comment by a report he issued concerning Albania, which country he visited recently. Mr. Williams says he saw the Epirote insurgent leader, Zographos, and placed himself at the disposal of the international commission of control, which, however, gave him no reply. Mr. Williams says he considers the conditions in Albania anarchical and declares the present regime impracticable, owing to antagonistic rivalries. He appeals to the powers to create a neutral state, with an essentially local government.

GEORGE FRED WILLIAMS.

The report attributed to Mr. Williams denounces as "a horrible crime" what the powers are doing in Albania. It does not even spare the Prince of Wied, saying of him, "I found a prince calling himself king, with no powers, no territory and no subjects except his wife and children."

Elsewhere in the report Mr. Williams says: "I uncovered at Durazzo an epochal scandal of anarchy, incompetence, hypocrisy and murder. My first effort was to find the Albanian government. I found none except six warships, and they were silent. I took opinions on the London agreement. Every one agreed that it created no government except one of armed force from abroad, for which all the authorities were clamoring."

The report accuses the Albanian government of having plunged Albania into the throes of civil and religious war and appeals to Europe to remove the Prince of Wied and the international commission and to substitute a system of cantonal government.

Since Mr. Williams was first mentioned for the mission to Greece and Montenegro he has been the subject of pointed comment. Just about the time of his nomination it became known that in 1911 he had bitterly assailed President Wilson's expressions of public policy. He rectified that denunciation, however, by praising the views the president had expressed more recently. It was explained at the time that the president had known all the time of Mr. Williams' former criticism of his views and was not offended.

Mr. Williams has had a varied career in politics and was a member of the house from 1891 to 1893. He became prominent in Democratic circles as a warm advocate of free silver.

AMERICAN CLUB IN MEXICO.

It Has Put In a Claim For Damages Sustained Last April.

A claim by the American club in Mexico City for damages sustained last April at the hands of the populace has been presented to the Mexican government through the Brazilian minister, but the government has refused to consider it on the ground that, while the club is composed of Americans, it is a Mexican corporation, operating according to the laws of the republic and enjoying the privileges of Mexican associations. Redress, the government says, must be sought through the Mexican courts.

STEEL BRIDGE NECESSARY

Present Bridge Over Neponset River in Bad Shape

A well directed effort is apparently being made to destroy the Neponset bridge by fire and within the past three days the fire department has extinguished seven fires in its supports which were of incendiary origin. It is thought that boys are at the bottom of the plot and that they are residents of Neponset.

The replacing of the old structure by a steel bridge has engaged the attention of that district for several years and annually the representative to the general court who receives a banner vote in Neponset introduces a bill for that purpose. This year the appropriation was in a fair way to pass but Mayor Curley of Boston pleaded excessive expenses and promised he would no oppose a bill of like nature at the next session.

In order to make sure that he will favor a new bridge, it is the belief of some people, that it is hoped to weaken the present structure by fire to such an extent that it will be necessary for him to add his influence to such a bill.

The piers which have been replaced several times are again in decayed condition and a stream from a hand chemical easily bores a hole through them. Fire spreads rapidly through them and the timbers in the bridge itself are in the last stages of decay. If fire gets a good start it will be necessary to improvise an arrangement to take its place until a new bridge is built.

HOUGHS NECK RESTS EASY

Government has Stopped Target Practice in Boston Harbor

The War Department has promised to issue orders to stop firing at the forts near Nantasket and the residents of Squantum and Houghs Neck who have been apprehensive lest their bailiwicks would have the experience of Hull, the landing place for several shells, now rest easy.

Since summer target practice has been in vogue in Boston Harbor Quincy's two beach resorts have been shaken until it seemed as though their hills would slide into the bay. Windows have occasionally been shattered by the concussion and people confined to their beds by illness have had an unpleasant experience during this period.

Hull residents, with the moral support of Houghs Neck and Squantum appealed several weeks ago to the War Department to issue orders to stop firing but their answer to the appeal was the lodging of two shells on a vacant lot in Hull. Friday the practice was so heavy, the ground trembled and a memorial window, in St. Mary's-by-the-Sea church, considered one of the works of art on the South Shore, was shaken from its frame and the fine glass shattered. The lives of several people were endangered.

Congressman Thatcher who voiced the protest of the town conferred with Asst. Sec. Breckinbridge and Gen. Wotherspoon of the War Department on Monday and he was assured that the practice would be immediately stopped. The news in Houghs Neck and Squantum was received with much pleasure yesterday evening.

MISS KATE MERRITT.

The funeral of Miss Kate Merritt was held Monday afternoon from her late home 43 Pleasant street, the services which were conducted by Rev. Edward Norton being largely attended. During the services Mrs. Emma S. Moore and Mrs. Russell B. Worcester, sang "When the mists have rolled away" "Abide with me" and "Still, still with Thee." There was a profusion of beautiful flowers. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING

Miss Hirt of Weymouth Endeavors to Save Companion

Miss Louise Hirt of South Weymouth, had a narrow escape from drowning at Dudley pond, Cochituate, Monday. Miss Hirt with Harold F. Bodenshatz of Cambridge had gone in bathing, but neither could swim. They waded into the water about waist deep and sat on a large rock. Suddenly Bodenshatz slipped off and fell into a deep hole. As Miss Hirt saw the young man sinking she cried out for help and dived into the hole and tried to save him.

An unknown man passing at the time waded into the water and catching Miss Hirt by the hair pulled her to safety. She was hysterical for a time but apparently suffered no permanent harm. The body of the young man was recovered later.

DRAPERY FIRE AT HOUGHS NECK

Combination 5 at Houghs Neck was called out on a still alarm at 8.30 Monday night for a slight fire in the cottage of Mrs. Curtis at the corner of Charles street and Centre road. It seems that Mrs. Curtis struck a match and lighted a lamp. Thinking that the match had gone out she placed it on the mantle shelf which was covered with a drapery. A few minutes later happening to look about she found that the drapery was on fire. A call was sent to the fire station but by the time the apparatus had arrived neighbors had extinguished the flames.

BON-VOYAGE TO MRS. MUSGRAVE

Mrs. Thomas A. L. Musgrave, who sailed today on the Cunard steamship Laconia for a three months visit to England, was pleasantly surprised at her home Sunday evening by a number of her friends who came to bid her a bon voyage. They did not come empty handed for during the evening Mrs. Musgrave was presented with a handsome Masonic charm. Mrs. Musgrave is travelling alone, and a Masonic charm will be of great assistance to her, among the many strangers whom she will meet, and will also afford her protection and assistance should she need it.

This morning a number of her friends also visited the steamship wharf in East Boston to see her start on her ocean voyage, many taking flowers with them with which her stateroom was decorated.

FIRE DEPT. KEPT BUSY

Dept. Called Four Times for Fire on Neponset Bridge

The alarm from Box 612 at 3.30 Monday afternoon was for a slight fire in a house in the process of construction at 12 Vane street by J. W. Pratt for M. L. Read of Whitman. The fire was caused by the overturning of a plumbers torch which set fire to some material near it. The blaze started was quickly extinguished.

The Atlantic Combination responded four times Monday afternoon for slight fires on the Neponset bridge. The first call came by telephone at 12.05, others coming at 12.55, 1.30 and 3 o'clock. In all cases the fire was on the surface of the bridge among some slivers that had been worn from the bridge.

It was wondered at first how it was that the bridge should take fire so often as the day was not particularly hot and there seemed nothing near at hand from which sparks could come. The mystery however was soon explained by a citizen who informed Chief Billings that the cause of the fires were some boys who deliberately set them, just for the fun of seeing the fire apparatus come out. The police were then notified and got busy after which the fires stopped.

BADLY BURNED BY GASOLINE

A gasoline torch exploded in the hands of Frank Ago, aged about 30, of East street, Hingham, while he was at work in the Fore River Shipyard Monday afternoon and he reecived terrible burns.

The flaming gasoline flew into his face and over his arms, shoulders and hands. He was taken to the Quincy City Hospital in the police ambulance. When he arrived his body, from the hips up was a mass of blisters. At the hospital it was said his burns were not of a dangerous character.

Although the noon temperature registered 89 degrees the cool westerly breeze and low humidity made the day a comfortable one to be out in.

TRACTOR TRUCK BIDS OPENED

Five Companies Submit Bids For New Apparatus

Bids were opened at 8 o'clock Monday night by acting Mayor Emery L. Crane for furnishing the city with a tractor truck for the steamer at the Central Fire station for which the sum of $4,000 was provided in the suplementary budget passed last month by the City Council.

There were quite a number present at the opening including the representatives of the several companies submitting bids, President Whiton of the City Council, City Treasurer Curtis, Chief Billings and others. Five bids in all were received, but one of which was for an A & B Tractor, which is the pattern which the Council deemed best to meet the wants of the city.

The several bids were as follows:—

Knox Co.,	$3,350
M. B. Davis, for Christie motor,	3,500
C. J. Cross for the Maxim motor,	3,750
Robinson Fire Apparatus Co.,	3,800
A & A Tractor Co.,	4,000

The Acting Mayor stated that the bids would be taken under advisement and awarded later.

A. J. LECROIX WITHDRAWS

Editor Quincy Ledger:—

Acting under the advice of many of his friends throughout the district, who felt that his entrance into the field meant victory for him, I took it upon myself to take out nomination papers in the interest of Alfred J. LaCroix, as a candidate for the State Senate from the First Norfolk District on the Democratic ticket and caused his candidacy to be launched before the public.

I subsequently conferred with Mr. La Croix in the matter and he consented to run provided there was to be no opposition in his own party at the primaries. Since his candidacy was announced it has come to light that there are other aspirants for the office on the same ticket. Feeling that these candidates are better qualified and have more time to devote to the strenuous campaign necessary Mr. La Croix has deemed it his duty to withdraw from the field.

Therefore, in pursuance with his request, I respectfully beg to announce that Mr. La Croix is no longer a candidate and I desire to thank all those who from the start displayed an interest in his candidacy.

MARGARET HENNESSEY.

The funeral of Margaret Hennessey, whose death at Lakeville on Saturday followed a long illness was held from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hennessey of 10 Marsh street Monday morning. A high mass of requiem was celebrated at St. John's church by Rev. Fr. Walter A. Quinlan. Music for the services was the Gregorian chant sung under the direction of John Mahon, organist. There was a good attendance of relatives and friends of the deceased. The body was taken to St. Mary's cemetery, West Quincy for burial.

John D. Mackay, chairman of the School committee, this morning authorized the announcement that he was not a candidate for the nomination of representative from the Fifth Norfolk district on the Republican ticket.

He gives as his reasons "the pressure of work in the law business" and also "the insistent requests on the part of his friends that he remain a member of the school board."

Mr. Mckay's withdrawal from the Republican field leaves it to date, in the possession of Col. Albert L. Whitman and Daniel Scouler of Quincy Point. There is no doubt but what the former will stand while friends of the latter intimate that he will not be a candidate.

Charles A. Ross, councilman from Ward Three has been mentioned as a prospective candidate but he has not made any definite announcement as yet. He strongly endorsed Mr. Mackays candidacy and the withdrawal

CHARLES A. ROSS.

Mr. Mckay may result in a positive declaration from Mr. Ross within a few days.

This morning a rumor was circulated that Rep. Michael T. Sullivan would not seek re-election. Mr. Sullivan, interviewed over a telephone said he had not heard the rumor and that the weather was too warm to talk politics.

HEARING IN EISMAN CASE

Many Disappointed That Hearing Was Not Public

A howl of protest went forth from the residents of Hull, Hingham and Cohasset Monday when the case of Louis Eisman, charged with abducting Fern Hallian of Hull, was heard in a private session at Hingham on Monday. Judge Kelly conducted the hearing in his office and each witness was examined separately. Eismans protests against the star chamber proceedings were ineffectual.

Counsel for the defense claims that the attempt by Miss Hallian and Eisman to secure a marriage license at Cohasset the day before their elopment disposes of the abduction charge and on the disposition of the case by Judge Kelly and the recommendations made at that time will depend future action.

It is now said that Fern Hallian, no longer loves her father's chauffeur, although when they were apprehended in Portland she said her affection for him was a strong one.

No warrants have been issued from the office of the clerk of the Quincy District Court although several complaints are receiving the consideration of Judge Avery. They have to do with what is thought to be offenses in Cohasset, which town is within the jurisdiction of this court.

FORE RIVERS REORGANIZE

New Team to Play at Merrymount Park on Saturday

The United Shoe Machinery Co. and Charles Bird & Son tied for first place in the Manufacturers league and if either team wins its remaining three games it will be awarded the championship, provided the Fore River team does not win its last four games and make a tie for first place.

This is the intention of the local team according to John S. Higgins, its manager, who expects to put the best team he has had this season on the Merrymount park field next Saturday afternoon when the Forbes Lithograph Co. will be their opponents.

This team is in last place in the league but a reorganization has been ordered and when it appears here the fans expect to see a semi- professional team of the first water.

If either of the leading teams lose and Fore River sticks it out the banner will fly from the steel mast over the shipyard office and on the day the flag raising takes place there will be "some circus."

Now that the 20 cent mileage rate is settled, there doesn't seem to be much excuse why Congress should linger in Washington.

In order to keep well informed on public affairs and prepare themselves for the duties of citizenship, many people spend about an hour a day reading all about the murder mysteries.

The people who haven't taken any lessons since last winter are still dancing their antiquated old steps at the summer hotels.

The summer hotels are entertaining their guests with a varied program of amusements consisting of breakfast, dinner, and supper.

STIFF COLLARS.

Most men pride themselves on their independence of fashion plates. They laugh at the women for subserviency to the Paris dressmaker. Then they proceed to demonstrate their independence, by wearing through hot weather the stiff starched collars that throttle their perspiring necks.

In the circles of simpler living, a more philosophic habit prevails. The farmer or the mechanic has nothing to lose by dressing for his work. But if the lawyer or business man walked down to his office collarless, and with sleeves rolled to his elbows, his stenographer would ask mamma if it was a proper place for her to work.

It can at least be said for the starched collar that it gives an appearance of trig neatness that has its value to the business man. But the younger fellows do not feel that anything short of a broad expanse of white linen is consistent with their style. With heads elongated by high collars, they march down street like snapping turtles in their shells, and pride keeps them cool.

THE VALUE OF FRANKNESS.

Dispatches from the London stock exchange reported a black week in all American railroad securities. The Englishmen had been reading the Interstate Commerce Commission's report on the New Haven road. They regarded it as a typical picture of American financial methods.

How shall the railroads and other corporations regain public confidence at home and abroad? Here is a question to which business men should apply themselves, regardless whether they feel that the government has or has not been fair and just in its treatment of the roads.

Certain men are born diplomatists. They are always playing a game. Their creed is, "What people don't know, won't hurt them." They rarely show up their hands.

If railroad managers of that type buy up a lot of competing trolley lines, they give the excuse that the trolleys will be valuable to their business as "feeders." But probably the real reason is that they want a monopoly.

Undue publicity often hurts business enterprise. But the diplomatists do not escape publicity by their indirections. They underestimate the sagacity of the people with whom they deal. Their real motive may be apparent. Their plans and purposes are well known, but a doubt is cast over their own sincerity.

For this season, it is often the finest diplomacy to show up your hand. If the public can guess your hand from your play, it is foolish to try to conceal it.

The railroads have been blamed for many acts that public sentiment did not condemn at the time they were committed. It is only fair to say that the great majority of railroad managers have abandoned dark lantern methods, and have succeeded in winning back much public confidence that was lost. London is wrong if it thinks the New Haven story fairly typifies American finance today.

FINANCIAL OUTLOOK.

(SPECIAL.)

This market has been contending for weeks against most discouraging conditions, and with better success than might have been expected. The drastic report of the Interstate Commerce Commission regarding New Haven affairs was a fresh blow to confidence in the financial district. Coupled with the rumors that the Commission will next undertake the examining of the Vanderbilt lines and the Rock Island, the impression was created that the Commission is becoming a highly inquisitorial body with pronounced anti-railroad proclivities. Originally the Commission was intended to be of a judicial rather than prosecuting character

Domestic business conditions are decidedly confused. It can not be said that there is any decrease of trade at large; probably not more than five or ten per cent below last year. The situation, however, is decidedly spotty, and some industries continue to show a very marked shrinkage; notably the iron trade. The latter has, however, shown a moderate tendency toward recovery, but orders are still far below the normal mainly because of the impaired purchasing ability of the railroads. The textile outlook is fairly satisfactory, and a considerably larger business transpired in the New York dry goods market as a result of the rush of buyers to attend the Claflin sale. One striking feature in the situation is the contrast between the optimism of the West and pessimism of the East. On this side of the Alleghenies depression is almost universal for reasons that are now well understood.

Advices from abroad are not entirely satisfactory. Evidences of overdoing in the chief capital market of the world, London, are decidedly suggestive. The capital applications at that point in the first half of the current year aggregated $750,000,000, against $600,000,000 in the first half of 1913. The largest increase was in Colonial loans and rails, a goodly portion of which was absorbed by Canada. It is worthy of note that a large share of the original issues had to be taken up by underwriters owing to the failure of public subscriptions. It turned out also that the big Paris loan recently floated was not so largely oversubscribed as at first reported, and some disappointment followed in consequence. At Vienna and Berlin there is renewed uneasiness because of the unsatisfactory Balkan outlook.

The above is a rather formidable array of unfavorable factors. Happily they have been largely discounted by the present lower range of values. Let us now turn to considerations of a more favorable nature, in order to counteract the abnormal pessimism which is often beyond justification. There is one important factor not yet sufficiently realized in this part of the country; and that is the crop outlook. It should not be forgotten that this country will probably produce about nine or ten billion dollars' worth of new wealth on the farms this year. We are practically sure of the biggest wheat crop on record. A large corn crop is in prospect; and the outlook is for a good cotton crop. Certainly there will be no shortage in these three great crops; even if the months of July and August show deterioration, which is usual and which should really be expected. The cattle yield may be short, but that is because the land is being turned to more profitable uses. Throughout the West, there is a spirit of well-founded hopefulness among merchants and manufacturers. This will be a powerful stimulus; for Eastern pessimists in this part of the country cannot fail to share in the prosperity which nature is bestowing upon the West.

Another fact of decided encouragement is the resignation of Huerta. This renders still more remote the possibility of our armed intervention in Mexican affairs. Those who succeed to the government of Mexico are likely to pay more respect to the wishes of the United States than Huerta in the rehabilitating of that unfortunate country; and the result will be healthful to Mexico and serve to promote more harmonious relations with the United States. Still another favorable symptom which has not yet been sufficiently recognized is the more friendly attitude of the Administration toward big business. The coming of a better understanding between our industrial and mercantile leaders and the Government at Washington is a factor of decided promise. The Administration policies are almost entirely completed; and the outlook is that the anti-trust measure, which Congress expects to pass before adjourning, will be framed upon more reasonable lines that at first anticipated.

One more element of encouragement is the money outlook. During the next few months there will be no lack of loanable funds to good borrowers, although a closer scrutiny of credit may be anticipated.

Taken as a whole, the outlook is that good crops, easy money, the elimination of Huerta and the more friendly attitude of the Administration at Washington will do much to offset the many unfavorable conditions, which have already been largely discounted. Better grade securities are selling at attractive prices, and there is a quiet absorption of these going on which will ultimately lead to a scarcity and better prices.

A VITAL NEED.

A vital and significant need is indicated by a criticism made by Dr. Anna Shaw regarding the American home and one of its weaknesses. She says:

"Sometimes I think that if our families had one-half of the material good things that it takes the strength and vitality of the husband to earn the family life would be much better. With the awful struggle to get a living and all the things that the modern family demands, the man has little left of his best self to give to his family. If the family had half of the things and twice as much of the father's association it would be better for the family. There is something splendid in the association of a good father and husband with a growing family. Most families have too little of it.

"This seems an undoubted truth. We are inclined to over-emphasize the importance of material comforts, of luxuries in the house, when these must be gained at the cost of family peace and companionship and mutual enjoyment. A father strains every nerve to make both ends meet. He is seldom at home except for meals, and not always then. He grows careworn and irritable. He is too busy with business to take any real part in the training of his children or the material comforts for which he is slaving. There are many such homes as these.

The same may be and, less often is, the case with the mothers, with older daughters who add to the family income. These drab little tragedies could be frequently avoided by a resolute denial of some of the really unessential things. Love and understanding and family joys in common should mean more than the latest style of furniture, the newest automobile or less pretentious luxuries.

Personal, human comradeship ought to be the first purpose of homes, or among the first. We can afford to commercialize almost anything else rather than the relations of the family, the sentiments that lie at the bottom of our social organization.—Salem Gazette.

SAFETY FIRST.

(Fall River Herald.)

In many cities automobiles are compelled to come to a dead stop behind street cars taking on or discharging passengers; such is not the practice in Fall River. Several accidents may be traced directly to lack of enforcement of this rule, and at least one death. It is not helpful to one's nerves to step from a street car and have a speeding auto whiz by one's nose, nor is it pleasant to be compelled to dodge for life with motor cars tooting their warnings to right and left. The rule referred to is reasonable. No driver of an automobile who has regard for "safety first" would take serious exception to its rigid enforcement in Fall River. Some such protection is necessary, especially in the center where passengers frequently board and leave the street cars. The question is one which should be considered by the aldermen and the police commissioners It is just as essential that vehicles should stop behind cars when passengers are going or coming as it is that they should be halted by a traffic officer to give pedestrians or other vehicles the right of way at street intersections.

A MATCH IN SIGHT.

When ex-City Treasurer Henry F. Tilden dropped into City Hall the other day to pay a water bill he was hardly recognized, he had become so browned by exposure to the sun. This summer the ex-City Treasurer is occupying a greater part of his time in mastering the mysteries of yacht navigation, having become possessed of a yacht which bears the euphonious name of Hell-to-pay, in which he sails about Quincy bay when the tide is right. There is some talk of arranging for a match race with the Imperator 23, owned and sailed by William E. Hingston, the well known handwriting expert.

"COMPACT" IS NOT EFFECTIVE

Differences Between Villa and Carranza Not Patched

SOME WORRY AT WASHINGTON

Influence Being Brought to Bear on Both Leaders to Force an Understanding—Belief That Military Head Will Be Hard to Keep In Check—Huerta Departs For Jamaica

Washington, July 21.—Knowledge of the exact situation concerning the relations of Villa and Carranza is being eagerly sought by this government. A complete report from George Carothers, Secretary Bryan's diplomatic agent, who has been with Villa for a year, is being forwarded.

Reports from the border are that Villa is defying the authority of Carranza and it is feared that the recent agreement between the two, heralded as a compact settling all differences, is not so effective as advertised.

If Villa breaks with Carranza there will be little hope of the establishment by the first chief of a stable government in Mexico City, and it is certain that all of the influence of the United States will be brought to bear on both leaders to force them to an understanding.

The administration will inform them that their differences should be settled at the polls and not by further fighting. Villa has the power to make infinite trouble for Carranza. He has a large force of men who are most loyal.

The state department has given much attention to a comparison of the military strength of Villa and Carranza and the generals who remain loyal to him, and the opinion has been expressed that Villa could overpower Carranza if it came to an open fight.

Meanwhile the belief grows here that Villa will be hard to keep in check, although officials do not expect any move from him that will hamper the establishment of a provisional government in Mexico City. So long as he is left supreme in the north, where he already controls the civil and military government through his personal appointees, he is not expected to make any hostile move.

Because of fear that a break must inevitably come, however, an official investigation is being made of a report that arms and ammunition are being smuggled across the border in large quantities. Naturally these are all consigned to Villa, who will thus be so well armed and equipped, if the traffic is not halted soon, that he can start a new counter revolution and prosecute it for weeks on his reserve resources.

According to the reports received at the state department, everything is quiet in Mexico City. A complete understanding is looked for between Carranza and the existing government.

TIMELY FASHION HINTS.

Small Details That Smarten The Appearance.

Theoretically, the fashionables are all out of town, most of them located in the nearby country places on Long Island, Westchester or New Jersey, but really any number of notables can be seen lunching or dining at the smart hotels and restaurants, while at fashionable weddings all the sets foregather, whether the celebration is in town or out.

Motor cars make short work of the distance to most of the resorts and the city holds allurements for flying visits even though the town house is given over to the caretaker.

NEW HAT TRIMMINGS.

One of the latest novelties is the reeds that adorn hats, or make them. A hat that looks exactly as if it were constructed of the straws used for sipping cooling Summer beverages, only that the straws are covered with shiny black lacquer. It suggests an inverted small waste basket and has for its sole trimming a couple of crushed roses, caught at intervals to the crown. It sounds a bit queer, but is really attractive and so becoming, that the soaring price marked makes little difference with its sale.

REED TRIMMINGS.

The reed hat garnitures come in all colors, with the black rather more favored especially for black hats, where the only other trimming used is black ribbon. Occasionally flowers are combined with the reeds as in a striking combination which showed reeds of red with heads of gladiola sprayed at intervals.

VELVET AND FLOWER BRIDLES.

Bridles of black velvet are quite a little used on some of the newer hats, and can be recommended for becomingness where the throat looks better for some adornment. Sometimes colored ribbon, silk of soft quality or tulle is substituted for velvet for these ties, and on some very dressy hats the bridles are of small silk roses several in a row.

NEW NECK RUCHINGS.

One of the smartest and most practical neck ruchings is of moire taffeta ribbon with a ruching of white pleated tulle next to the throat which can be easily and frequently renewed. Nothing is prettier, or more fragile, than the full tulle ruche, which makes such a charming addition to the dancing frock.

WAISTCOAT GIRDLES.

Few investments pay better in the effect produced than the very much worn waistcoat girdles. These lend variety to the dark blue suit so universally worn that it might be dubbed the 1914 uniform. In white pique with a touch of black in the pipings that finish the edges, and bind the little watch pockets, these add a cool touch to a dark suit or contrast prettily with a linen get-up. Golden yellow in silk or suede makes a stylish contrast and hunter's green in suede is an excellent color note, especially if matched with the stockings and parasol. Some of the pique waistcoats worn are heavily embroidered in self or contrasting tones.

McCall Designs

Waist, 5937 Skirt, 5

NEW BAGS.

The new white bag to carry with a lingerie frock is of Irish lace lined with silk or sateen, in wide flat envelope form, the overlapping flap fastened with two crochet buttons and with rope-like crochet handles.

One of the smart new bags is of suede with a pointed end of patent leather, this goes well with the low shoes so much worn with patent leather vamps and suede uppers in tan or gray, or green leather.

BRAID TRIMMINGS.

Braid trimmings are evidently gaining ground with the well-dressed for they are increasingly worn since their reappearance last spring. Black braid edges the coats and long tunics on fashionable suits of blue, or checked tweeds. Colored braids are being used for girdles and trimmings usually to match the color of the suit. Fancy mixed braids are used for girdles, and to give the patchy effect of brilliant color that is fetchingly employed to finish short coats, or hang fob-fashion at the side of a dark skirt.

LEATHER TRIMMINGS.

Leather belts, especially the patent leathers and suedes, are used with all sorts of costumes, and there are signs of popularity for further use of leather trimmings for collars, cuffs and various banded devices. Sailors of white duck or straw with patent leather trimmings in up-standing high bows are very much worn and are especially good at the shore where dampness has a depressing effect on most hat garnitures.

THE ALL WHITE FROCK.

The all white frock which is perennially with us, once the temperature suggests the attractiveness of cool attire, is varied and brightened with the brilliant wide girdles which help to produce the large waisted effect that fashion continues to endorse. Ribbons in printed patterns, stripes and plaids are very much used for these and there is a little new kink in fastening the lower front edges with a couple of fancy buttons to produce a sort of waistcoat effect.

CAPE SUITS.

With the vogue of capes of all lengths, and cuts from the all-covering long Connemara wrap to the shortest and most coquettish ruched taffeta mantle, it has been just a step to the popularity of the cape suit. That is a suit of skirt and cape instead of coat and skirt as heretofore. Almost all jackets are taking on such loose circular cuts that it becomes increasingly difficult to decide whether the outer top belongs in coat or cape class.

SCANDALOUS CONDUCT

Charged Against United States Agents on Pribilof Islands

Washington, July 21.—Five of the principal American government agents are under arrest at their stations on the Pribilof islands, better known as the fur seal islands, in the Behring sea, on charges of serious nature affecting their conduct and treatment of the natives, men and women.

A rigid investigation has been ordered by Secretary Redfield of the department of commerce, before whom the charges were laid.

Among the charges are debauching the wives of natives, terrorizing their husbands into silence, drunkenness and furnishing intoxicants to the natives, creating a condition in the community that has resulted in death and lawlessness, and permitting the unlawful killing of fur seal pups.

ADDRESSES THE JURORS

Mme. Caillaux Relies Upon "Unwritten Law" to Secure Freedom

Paris, July 21.—Mme. Henriette Caillaux pleaded the "unwritten law" in a remarkable address to the jurors when put on trial for shooting to death Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro. Her plea apparently made a deep impression on the jury.

The wife of the former minister of finance declared she had been actuated in shooting Calmette because she feared that he was about to publish some of her private correspondence with a view to compromising her honor.

She had prepared a long rambling statement, written in her own hand, explaining how she had been led to shoot Calmette. At times she seemed in danger of collapse, but grasped the railing before her and rallied her strength.

MONUMENT REVEALS IDENTITY OF EARL

Scottish Nobleman Long a Resident of Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Cal., July 21.—The erection over a new grave in Hollywood cemetery of a monument inscribed "John Sutherland Sinclair, Earl of Caithness," was the first authentic notice to Los Angeles people that the wealthy John S. Sinclair, who died here recently, was the seventeenth Earl of Caithness, the successor to the title of one of the oldest lines of Scotch nobility.

Gossip and speculation here had identified Sinclair as the earl, but it is said that to only two men in the city, of whom Corridan H. Putnam was one, had the earl confessed his identity.

Putnam admitted this and said he had been pledged to secrecy by the earl. Known as Sinclair, Lord Caithness came here three years ago and lived quietly at the Hotel Balboa. He gave freely to philanthropic objects.

LAUNCH OF THE O'BRIEN

Descendant of Revolutionary Hero Sponsor of Destroyer

Philadelphia, July 21.—The torpedo boat destroyer O'Brien was launched at Cramp's shipyard.

The sponsor of the craft was Miss Marcia B. Campbell of Cherryfield, Me., a great-great-grandniece of Captain Jeremiah O'Brien, after whom the vessel was named. She nearly missed the vessel when it started down the ways, and had to hurl the bottle after the receding boat.

O'Brien was the leader of the first naval engagement of the Revolution, which occurred in the harbor of Machias, Me., when the news of the battle of Lexington, in April, 1775, reached there.

ROBINSON JURY COMPLETE

Alleged Murderer of Norton Shows No Signs of Nervousness

Boston, July 21.—Lawrence Robinson, whose trial for the murder of Police Inspector Norton in the Boylston cafe began yesterday in the superior criminal court, took an active part in the drawing of the twelve jurors who are to decide his fate. Impanelling the jury occupied the entire day.

Robinson showed no signs of nervousness. He smiled frequently at the slips made by the jurors when they took the stand; joked with the three officers who surrounded his cage, and frequently swept the crowded courtroom with a glance that was more ironical than anything else.

THREATENS TO CLOSE PARKS

Johnson Defies Strike Order of Baseball Fraternity

FULTZ ISSUES AN ULTIMATUM

National Commission Notified That League Players Will Quit Tomorrow Unless Ruling In Case of Baseman Kraft, Which They Consider Unfair, Is Reversed at Once

New York, July 21.—A general strike of all baseball players under contract to clubs in the American and National leagues has been ordered by President Fultz of the Baseball Players' Fraternity, who served notice on the national commission. The strike will take effect tomorrow unless the national commission gives in before then.

This action results from the ruling of the commission in the case of Player Kraft, former New Orleans first baseman. Fultz claims Kraft should be drawing a salary from the Newark International league club, while the commission ruled he belongs to the Nashville Southern association club.

The decision to call a strike was arrived at at a secret meeting of the fraternity leaders here. Several prominent leaders signed the ultimatum which Fultz sent to the national commission.

Ban Johnson, president of the American league and one of the leaders of the national commission, declared that the strike will be fought to the finish.

"The American league is ready to meet the issue with a solid front," he declared. "Our club owners are a unit for war. It's about time that this fraternity nonsense should end. We have been very patient with Fultz and his associates, but they have gone a trifle too far. We intend to call their bluff in a way that will make them show their hand.

"If the American league players or a majority of them obey this strike order every American league club will close its gates. We will stop all salaries and inflict heavy fines on every player participating in the strike. This strike will be the last one conducted by Fultz and his associates, too, as we will keep our gates locked all season if necessary to break this up."

Johnson admitted that he had telegraphed all club owners to attend a special meeting here today. Fultz refused to have anything to say about the strike.

While the National league has not issued such a note of defiance, there is little doubt that it will follow Johnson's lead. Thus the lines are drawn sharply and it appears that a long and bitter fight is in prospect—unless one side or the other gives in. Players say they will obey the orders of the fraternity. Magnates say they will stand pat. If both sides keep their word all organized baseball parks will not open Wednesday, nor for a long time to come.

And meanwhile the Federal league, the menace of the old order, smiles at the predicament of its enemies and foresees the great stars of the game flocking to its banner.

Player Kraft, over whom the ruling was made that caused the strike order, was with the New Orleans club last year. He was drafted by Brooklyn and turned over to the Newark club later. The Nashville club put in a claim for him, saying it had prior claim to his services over New Orleans. The national commission upheld the Nashville club's claim.

The principle at stake is whether or not a player drafted from a minor league by any major league team shall be returned to the club from which drafted if he does not make good in the majors, or whether he may be sent to some other minor league team in a higher classification where he will presumably receive a higher salary. The fraternity holds out for the latter privilege.

Kraft was ordered by the commission to Nashville of the Southern association, but was advised by the fraternity to play with the Newark Internationals. Newark is in a circuit rather higher than Nashville and Kraft's salary will be larger if he plays there.

In its statement, the fraternity, commenting on its protest, says the fraternity "dislikes exceedingly to add to the discomforts of organized baseball at this time."

HUNDREDS WITNESS FIGHT

Two Fishermen Battle In Boat and Both Are Drowned

Fairfield, Conn., July 21.—Fighting over a dispute about a catch, Stephen Vargo, 32, and Paul Auslish, 27, fell out of a rowboat off Penfield light and were drowned. Louis Kauki, who also was in the boat, is under arrest here pending an investigation.

Kauki claims the men continued to battle after they had fallen into the water until they sank from sight. Hundreds of spectators lined the shore while the fight was going on.

Postoffice is Looted

Providence, July 21.—The postoffice at Rehoboth, Mass., was broken into, the safe blown open and stamps valued at nearly $400 taken.

FISH PRICES AWAY DOWN

Supply In Boston Market Greatly Exceeds the Demand

Boston, July 21.—Tons upon tons of fish were thrown upon the market in Boston, only awaiting a demand from purchasers. The prices of fish of all varieties have gradually sunk to the lowest known by marketmen, both wholesale and retail.

Although the demand has been extra large during the past few weeks the heavy fares that have been dumped upon the new fish pier have exceeded the demand by tons. Halibut, salmon, mackerel, butterfish and groundfish are among the kinds that can almost be bought for a "song."

Fish has piled so high in Boston that hundreds of barrels have been sold and shipped to European countries, a new industry for Boston fish dealers.

TWO POLICE FORCES ENTITLED TO PAY

New Hampshire Supreme Court Orders Nashua to Settle

Concord, N. H., July 21.—The supreme court handed down an opinion directing the city of Nashua to pay the salaries of both sets of police officers who have been claiming to be the rightful guardians of law and order in that municipality.

A new police commission, appointed under an act of the legislature of 1913, created a new police force in a manner which was claimed to be illegal, and this contention was upheld by the court.

At the same time it is ruled that the officers appointed by the commission and who have been actually discharging the duties of the force are entitled to compensation from the city.

FACTION LEADERS TO CONFER

King Takes Steps Toward Avoiding a Crisis Over Home Rule

London, July 21.—The news that King George had called a round table conference of the leaders of all the political parties in the United Kingdom to discuss the crisis in the province of Ulster caused a pleasant surprise in political circles here.

It is felt that a conference under the direct auspices of the king can only result in a settlement which even the extremists of both sides in Ireland will be almost compelled to accept.

The king also curtailed his visit to Spithead and returned quickly to London after reviewing the fleet. He went at once to Buckingham palace, where the conference is to be held.

ARREST BELIEVED NEAR

Body of Woman Found on Winthrop Beach Is Identified

Boston, July 21.—An arrest is momentarily expected in the case of Ada J. Taylor, whose body was found in the surf off Winthrop last Thursday and who was identified at the city morgue by her brother, Leonard Taylor.

Superintendent West of the metropolitan police, who, with a score of police investigators, is active in the case, believe that with the identification half of their work is done and that the man who was responsible for the death of the woman will be placed under arrest shortly.

Poincare Greeted by Czar

St. Petersburg, July 21.—President Poincare of France was welcomed on his arrival off Kronstadt with full naval honors by the emperor of Russia.

"Why do you speak of him as a finished artist?"

"Because he told me he was utterly discouraged and was going to quit the profession. If that doesn't show that he's finished I don't know what does."—Chicago Post.

THE INDIAN OF THE CRAGS.

Remarkable stone formation in the Blue Hills as seen by Charles L. H. Wagner of Wollaston.

Among the many picturesque spots in the wonderful Blue Hill region, the most beautiful to my mind, and perhaps least known to the general public, is "The Crags," a lofty eminence of precipitous rock, situated almost at the eastern end of this delightful chain of near-mountains.

Gigantic masses of granite, hewn and carved into fantastic shapes by the skilful hand of Nature, assume to the imaginative mind forms and figures which, when viewed from a distance, seem animate and startling by their proportions. Huge crevices, mysterious fissures leading to unknown depths, and shelving rocks (the possible covers to Alladin caverns and palaces) all tend to impress those who scale the barren rock sides with an ovewhelming sense of the greatness of Nature and the smallness and pettiness of man. One can discover among the broken or attached fragments, scattered and stretching down to the valley below, seeming couchant panthers, slouching bears, or giant squating bull frogs, all fashioned from cold, unyielding granite.

But perhaps the most interesting feature of this tremendous rock formation is the face of an Indian, gazing into the impenetrable depths of the sky, and with a calm, immutable expression of indifference to the happenings of the every day prosaic world. Every feature is clear cut, as if chiseled by some great Michael Angelo, and stands out with a prominence that is truly remarkable, when viewed in the right perspective. The ical Indian efatures, marked by Time with an almost speaking likeness of the Aboriginal, it lacks only the paint and feathers to make the picture complete.

Like the "Old Man of the Mountains," the similitude fades away upon too near approach, but when seen to the best advantage, it inspires the beholder with a feeling of romance and wonder. For in days gone by, this locality was the hunting ground of a savage race, and it almost seems as though the Great Spirit had set his very seal and impress on these rocks to guard them from desecration by an alien race.

Long before I had known of the presence of this interesting face formation, I was in the habit of climbing to the top of "The Crags" and viewing the surrounding country with a feeling of ecstasy experienced, I believe, by all who gaze on levels from the heights, and imagining all kinds of stories concerning their early history, and I sometimes think that the unconscious influence of that inscrutable face inspired the writing of the following legendary poem.

THE GHOST OF THE CRAGS.

Midst the wild and open country scarce without the city's bound,
Rising high above the level, are the hills of Milton found,
Rich in legend, rich in story, rich in scenic beauty grand,
Marvellous beyond description, overtopping all the land.

Capped with scrubby oak and hemlock
creviced by a hundred brooks,
Cleft with walls of solid granite hiding
many sylvan nooks,
Pleasant valleys 'twixt the hill-crests,
views unrivalled of the sea,
Nature's altars, where I worship, such are these Blue Hills to me.

Over towards the eastern portion are
The Crags of which I write,
Rising sheer from out the valley, fearful in their depth and height,
Railed with but a bar of iron, just a mockery it seems,
As if man, poor puny mortal, could defy old Nature's schemes.

Oft I wander to the crag-top where my thoughts can undisturbed
Come and go with rythmic motion,
where my mind is not perturbed,
And ensconced within a cradle made by shelving rocks and grass,
There I rest and view God's country,
there the hours pleasant pass.

One fine day in balmy June time, with my book and pencil, I Climbed the rough and rugged footpath to my favorite haunt on high,
And 'twixt reading, thinking, writing, hours passed and soon the sun
Sank behind the great hill's tower, for the day was almost done.

With a sigh I rose and gathered book and cap within my hand,
And prepared to journey homeward,
loth to follow Time's command,
When, from out the dark'ning shadows of a hugh, sharp balanced stone,
Rose a figure grim and savage, and I heard an eerie moan.

In my fright I stood and trembled,
daring not to move nor speak,
Wild-eyed, staring, whilst the shadows
longer grew of ev'ry peak,
And the vision viewed me calmly,
deigning not to notice fear
Which I own I showed a-plenty, with that awful presence near.

Still I noted, spite my tremor, that the form which brazen stood Close before me was a native of some wild, unbroken wood;
Painted cheeks, bedecked with feathers folded arms, impassioned mein,
Just like pictures which in childhood
I had loved and often seen.

Must'ring courage, in the twilight I at last took heart and spoke Words I ke these: "Who are you stran ger? Speak, your presence does provoke.
Wouldst thou slay a fellow mortal, harmless, weak and quite alone?
Let me pass, nor stay my going," thus
I spake with anxious tone.

With his piercing eye fixed on me,
hideous, uncanny, quite,
Stood he there as if unmindful of my seeming fearful plight,
Then I heard a voice which sounded like the swish of rushing wind,
Soft and musical and soothing, lulling fears I had in mind.

With the first calm uttered sentence I
at once again took heart,
For the spectre which stood near me
scarcely made a move or start,
But his voice I heard distinctly, sad it sounded to my ears,
Yet so calm and withal quiet that it soothed my doubting fears.

"Listen, Pale-Face, to my story," were the words that greeted me,
"Listen, fear thou not nor falter from the form of Ochmulgee;
I was once a chieftain mighty of the Narragansetts brave,
And I ruled these hills and valleys,
here my wigwam shelter gave.

Long before your tribe of white men entered into yonder bay,
Here I lived and hunted daily, here the gentle deer did slay,
Over where you sun is sinking, here
upon the highest hill,
Oft I worshipped the Great Spirit,
there I tried my hunter's skill.

Many were the moons which slowly
rose to view and die I away,
While I led the tribe of warriors to the chase and to the fray,
Ere these things which did befall me,
things which I will now relate,
Of Kenabeek, called the Serpent, coward, thief and reprobate.

I had maids and squaws in plenty, but my heart was set upon
Bounding Brook, a gentle maiden whom I wooed and whom I won;
Glad was she to join my wigwam,
dress the product of my chase,
Build my fire, fill my pipe-bowl, fairest was she of our race.

But one day the wicked, lying Kena-
beek came gliding round,
While I hunted through yon valley,
and alone the maiden found.
And he tried to steal her from me,
steal my gentle Bounding Brook,
Force her to forsake and leave me, but the maiden he mistook.

Up she flew and like a deer sped to the spot where I had gone,
And she told me all Kenabeek's lying tongue had spoke upon,
How the blood surged to my temples,
how my heart was filled with hate,
How I longed to crush the Serpent, scalp the lock upon his pate.

With my tomahawk I hastened, gave the lying coward chase,
And he climbed these hills and valleys, but I caught him in this place;
Here we fought upon this crag-top,
here we strove with might and main,
Blood gushed forth like spouting water, neither seemed to mind the pain.

Suddenly, with whoop of triumph I caught hold of Kenabeek,
And my waning strength I mustered,
threw him o'er this mighty peak.
And I watched him as he tumbled into the great deeps below
Till I saw him dead and lying where yon spring doth ever flow.

Fain would I have then arisen, but the poison on the dart
With which he had pierced my vitals had already reached my heart.
So I sang my death-song slowly here behind this balanced stone,
Like a brave and noble warrior, without murmur, without groan.

Ere my eyelids closed forever, Bounding Brook had searched and found
Where I lay, and where you rested, there my hurts she gently bound,
Seated on the ground beside me, knowing that I soon must go
To the land of all my fathers, yet her grief she did not show.

Soon my spirit left the body and beneath where we now stand,
In a cave-like hole she placed me, covering me with earth and sand,
And my spirit hovered near her loth
to leave my Bounding Brook,
But the Manitou had called me, called and so my leave I took.

When the Great and Noble Spirit heard my tale and how I slew Kenabeek the lying serpent, and his body down there threw,
Pleased He was and gave permission
that I might revisit here
This fair spot as when I left it, when the moons shall mark each year.

So to-day you see me, Pale-Face, I the great chief Ochmulgee,
And I would you'd tell your people
what's been told you about me,
Tell them not to move a single stone from off this lofty mound,
Tell them, Pale-Face, of my story, say that this is hallowed ground.

Tell them that this pile of granite is a monument to me,
That it marks the place where Death
came and laid hold of Ochmulgee,
Tell them this and tell them truly,—
Hark, I hear the Great Chief's cry,
I must go, farewell, O Pale-Face, tell my tale and do not lie."

In a twinkling of an eyelash he was gone, I was alone,
And the faint tints of the twilight proved that day was almost gone.
Wondering and deeply thoughtful I sought out my downward road,
And just as the stars came shining, I approached my own abode.

In my study I then hastened and I wrote this lengthy tale,
So the children of the future will respect that hill and vale,
Did just what the spectre bid me, not a word did I omit,
And I've told my story truly, every detail, every bit.

If you doubt this story, neighbor, go and see this mighty rock,
Climb its heights and view the country, listen to the breezes talk.
Go and drink the pure, sweet water of the spring within the glen,
And if once you go, O neighbor, I am sure you'll go again!

A trip to the Crags is delightful and well worth while at all seasons of the year, and all hours of the day have their recompense in the ever changing and fantastic shadows of the sun's rays. At even-tide, the rosy tints of the western sun flood its steep cliffs with a mellowness that is seemingly reflected in the heart of the beholder, while the severity and sternness of the serried rocks is lost in the gloom of the lengthening shadows, and as the sinking sun descends behind the top of Rattlesnake and Chicatawbut hills, one can almost fancy that the stolid face of of the Indian of the Crags relaxes, as he yields himself to the enfolding arms of night.

PLAYGROUNDS A NECESSITY.

Says the Haverhill Herald: "It is proving a long, slow process, that of imbuing the adult and official mind in Haverhill with the importance of play and playgrounds. It has proved a long, slow process in other American communities, though unfortunately for Haverhill's prestige and welfare, in the majority of other cities and towns throughout the State and the country at large, the matter of playgrounds and supervision has been longer emphasized with the result that more or less satisfactory results have been earlier obtained.

The young folks in the little towns where there are open fields and forests have chances to play and play right. The young folks in cities unless there are playgrounds for them do not enjoy the same privileges. They should have chances to play, to have fresh air, to have opportunity—this applying to older folks too— for rest and peace in restful and peaceful scenes. The city that doesn't give plenty of playground space to its people is making a mistake and is far behind the times. It has become known as a necessity of the hour.—Brockton Enterprise.

Flaming Finish.

"My grandfather," said the old-timer, "used to put all his money in his stocking." "Wa-all, things hain't changed much," said his old friend. "My grandson, who's takin' a course in modern deportment at one o' them eastern colleges, puts most all his money into socks."—Judge.

PLAYGROUND ATTENDANCE

Ward 3 Was High Line Last Week, Standing in Ball League

The three Playgrounds of the City turned in a total of 4594 for the week ending Saturday, July 18th. The girls were only 282 behind the boys for the weeks honors having 2155 which the boys had a mark of 2438. Ward 3 was of course "high-line" with the fine figures of 2475 while the Wollaston playground made a fine gain totaling 950 for the week the boys and girls being about evenly divided. Now that the swings are up and the group games are being played daily the attendance ought to take big jump in this section. Ward 2 had quite a slump in their total only 1169. The tide was just right for bathing last week so course the youngsters took advantage of the bath house at every opportunity.

Base-ball and slug-ball games are being arranged between the different playgrounds and this afternoon the Ward 2 and 5 boys are playing at Wollaston. This game ought to be a hummer as several of the boys who played in the grammar school league are on the teams. Games of slug-ball have also been arranged for the Ward 2 and Ward 3 girls which will be played next Monday afternoon.

The Tigers now have a clean lead of 1 game in the Ward 2 playground league, having a standing of 1000 per cent. The Red Sox are in second place, 667 per cent. White Sox are third with 500 per cent and the Athletics are in last place with a line of zeros, not having won a game.

The Red Sox defeated the Athletics in a red hot game this morning. The score was 5 to 2. The features of the game were the base-running of Tower of the losers and Gamble batting for the Red Sox. The batteries were as follows: Red Sox, Greer Gamble and Stitt. Athletics, Tower and Barr.

Her French Failed.

Mrs. Smith had been a hard student for months, and, proudly conscious that "she knew a little French," she sallied forth from the hotel in Paris to post a letter.

"A poste," she exclaimed triumphantly to the first policeman she met.

"Bien, madame. Par ici."

He politely conducted her into an office, but to her dismay it was a police station. Rendered speechless by fright and confusion, all she could do was to pull her letter out of her pocket and point to it.

"Ah! A la poste," cried the commissaire laughingly, and he instructed the officer to take her to the nearest post-office. Going along, poor, disconcerted Mrs. Smith muttered to herself:

"Oh, bother genders! Who'd have thought a police station was a gentleman and a postoffice a lady?"—London Standard.

A Doubtful Compliment.

Landon Ronald, the noted musician, tells the following story against himself: "I went into my club one day, looked into the reading room and saw a great friend of mine talking to one of the ugliest men I have ever seen in my life. My friend called me over and, much to my regret, as I dislike ugly things in life, introduced me to the man in question. He turned out to be quite a decent fellow and paid me the usual silly compliments which all professionals receive. I conversed with him about five minutes, and when I had had enough he reiterated the statement that he was delighted to have met me, being one of my greatest admirers, and added, 'In any case, Mr. Ronald, I was most anxious to know you because I am always being mistaken for you!' "—London Globe.

Couldn't Find It.

A trial took place recently before a colored jury. The twelve gentlemen of color were told by the judge to retire and "find a verdict."

They departed for the jury room. Then began the opening and shutting of drawers, the slamming of doors and other sounds of unusual commotion. Every one wondered what the trouble was.

At last the jury came back into the court, and the foreman arose and said:

"We hab looked eberywhar', in the drawers and behind the do', an' can't find no verdict. It warn't in de room."—National Monthly.

Lemon Baths.

In the West Indies a lemon bath is almost a daily luxury. Three or four limes or lemons are sliced into the water and allowed to lie for half an hour in order that the juice may be extracted. A remarkable sense of freshness is given to the skin.—Pearson's Weekly.

Her Usual Remark.

"What did Mame say when her father gave her that new gold watch?" asked one gladsome girl.

"Oh, the same thing that she always says. She remarked that she was having a perfectly lovely time."—Exchange.

NEW YORK CONVICTS WORK ON HIGHWAY

Will Have Much Freedom in Newly Established Camp

Albany, July 21.—A permanent camp of convict laborers, the first established in the state, began work on the highway in the Catskill mountains that is to form a connecting link between Albany and New York on the west side of the Hudson river.

The twenty men came from Sing Sing prison. A similar number will follow from the same institution soon. It is expected the camp will be maintained the greater part of the winter, if it is an open one. An appropriation of $190,000 was made by the legislature for constructing the road, but it is expected that the utilization of convict labor will make the cost less than $100,000.

The men work without restrictions. They leave and return to the camp at will except during working and sleeping hours. A guard is with them, but he carries no rifle.

Killed by Own Revolver

Narragansett Pier, R. I., July 21.—W. S. Chapin of New York was shot in the left breast when a revolver which he was packing in a suitcase was accidentally discharged and he died from the wound. Chapin had been visiting his mother.

Jail and Fine For Rich Man

Mobile, Ala., July 21.—Hardway Young, reputed to be one of the south's wealthiest hardware men, was sentenced to eighteen months in jail and fined $500 for using the mails to defraud.

Shamrock on Second Leg

Plymouth, Eng., July 21.—After being forced to put in here because of heavy weather, Shamrock IV. started on the second leg of her journey across the Atlantic, sailing for Falmouth.

Hung Onto His Pipe

New York, July 21.—Without removing his corncob pipe from his mouth, Theodore Keifer, 70, jumped into the East river and saved two children from drowning.

GOVERNMENT TO SUE NEW HAVEN

Parleys With Directors of Railroad Are Fruitless

LATTER WANT "STRIN"G CUT

Both Criminal and Civil Action Will Be Instituted Against Men of Great Prominence In Financial and Business World—Thorough Test of Efficiency of Sherman Law

Washington, July 21.—Civil suit to separate the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company from its subsidiary rail, trolley and steamship lines will be brought by Attorney General McReynolds in the United States district court at New York within the next few days.

A final effort to settle the problem without litigation ended in failure, although McReynolds, T. W. Gregory, special assistant in charge of the case, and a committee of New Haven directors were in conference many hours.

The committee had discussed the sale of the Boston and Maine stock owned by the New Haven. It desired this sale to be made free of conditions imposed by the state of Massachusetts and is said to have declared that an unconditional sale of the Boston and Maine stock would insure a price $10,000,000 above what the New Haven might otherwise hope to get.

The New Haven case will be laid before President Wilson and the cabinet and a detailed explanation of the course pursued by the department in its long negotiations with the railroad to untangle it out of court probably will follow. It is not doubted that the department's course will be approved.

There is but little doubt that on the heels of the suit will come an effort to have a federal grand jury in New York return indictments against many directors of the New Haven who served in the days when it was building up a system which, the attorney general holds, is a combination in restraint of trade. Both the civil and criminal actions will be taken under the Sherman law, and the whole case is regarded by the department as the most important undertaken in this administration.

Never before has any administration planned to prosecute criminally men of such prominence in the financial and business world and the outcome of these proceedings may determine the value of the Sherman law as a criminal statute.

To the civil suit the New Haven is not expected to make any strong resistance, except possibly to attempt to prevent the state of Massachusetts from intervening to preserve certain rights which it holds with respect to the Boston and Maine.

In the government's bill, the New Haven will be charged with being a monopoly in control of New England's transportation, with being a combination in restraint of trade and in violation of the Sherman law. The department is expected to ask for more than it hoped to get through its agreement for the peaceful dissolution of the system made with Chairman Elliott and the New Haven attorneys last March.

It is said there will be at least two features in the bill not included in the agreement. One will be a request that the court separate the New Haven from the old New England railway acquired many years ago, which runs from Boston through Willimantic, Hartford, Danbury, Conn., to a point on the New York Central, about fifty miles from New York.

The court will also be asked to divorce the New Haven from its so-called sound steamship lines, which ply Long Island sound and run from New York to most of the ports along the lower New England coast. In the agreement the question of the retention of these lines was left to the interstate commerce commission.

A NOVEL INNOVATION

Church Workers Decree Costumes to Be Worn by Congregation

Alton, Ills., July 21.—The congregation of the East Alton Baptist church will not have to take part of the time devoted to worship next Sunday to observe what everybody is wearing. There will be no new panamas or tub bonnets to exicte envy.

The church is not closing for the summer. It is merely a little innovation brought about by John Jones and J. T. Paddock, church workers.

They decreed that the men wear overalls and jumpers, with blue shirts. More than that, they dared to suggest what the women shall wear. The women learned that they are expected to appear in simple house gowns, whatever they are.

WAS NOT A MILLIONAIRE

Estate of Timothy Woodruff Found to Have Shrunk to $300,000

New York, July 21.—The public is much surprised that the estate of Timothy L. Woodruff, who was supposedly a millionaire, is estimated to be not over $300,000.

The night before Woodruff's death Alfred G. Vanderbilt bought the Kamp Kill Kare estate for $110,000. The price, much under the supposed figure, is only one of the unexpected shrinkages in the fortune.

WEYMOUTH FIRE DEPT. NEEDS

To Be Considered at Special Town Meeting Wednesday

Mrs. Andrew Culley was agreeably surprised at her home on Pratt avenue Friday evening. A piazza is a recent addition to her home and Mrs. Mary Mahoney felt that a piazza chair for Mrs. Culley's special benefit would be a pleasing gift, so about 75 friends under Mrs. Mahoney's leadership, went to her home and made the presentation. A musical program was furnished by Relief Corps friends and others and a collation of ice cream and cake was enjoyed.

The Kenmore cottage on Holbrook road is occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Kelley and family of West Somerville.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Davidson and family and Capt. J. W. Redmond and family of Boston occupy the Konohasset cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Keefe and family of Dorchester are at their cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. James Cogan are here for the summer.

The cottagers on Bluff road have arranged a large raft on Fore River, and aquatic sports are indulged in daily. A number of excellent swimmers are out each day.

A case of scarlet fever has been reported in the family of E. G. Hunter of Dorchester, who occupy the Crescent cottage at Bay View.

While transporting John Trainor's furniture to Gardner, Maine, in his new auto truck, Chester Rogers met with an accident. When crossing a bridge at Litchfield Maine, the rear wheels cut through the planking, spoiling the tires and breaking springs, and doing damage to the extent of $125. Temporary repairs enabled Mr. Rogers to deliver the load and return to Weymouth.

Percy Bicknell is erecting a modern garage, which when completed will be the most up-to-date on the South Shore.

Miss Edith Hollis is at Rumney, N. H., the guest of relatives, Rev. and Mrs. Newell Wood.

William E. Pray and family are at their North Scituate cottage.

Chester Stoddard attended the funeral of his aunt at Portsmouth, N. H., recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Drown, and Mr. Edward Drown are at Litchfield, Maine for a few weeks.

A. H. Monk, post office substitute, is on duty during the vacation season.

Mr. and Mrs. George Redway and family of New Jersey have returned to their home after a prolonged visit with Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Culley of Pratt avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Tilden of Front street who recently celebrated their 65th wedding anniversary, have been married longer than any living couple in Weymouth and with one exception, so far as known in the state. Mr. Tilden is over ninety years of age, and Mrs. Tilden will be 86 in November. They have always been residents of Weymouth and are in fairly good health, considering their advanced age.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Farrington entertained Mr. and Mrs. Wilston Chandler of Taunton and Mrs. Harold Swan of Brockton for the week end.

Pilgrim church held an open air meeting on the church grounds Sunday evening.

KING COVE NOTES.

Saturday evening the Ladies' Auxiliary served supper to 100 guests. An entertainment followed consisting of piano solos by Miss Bertha Estes; cornet numbers by Walter Philbrook and vocal solos by Mrs. Philbrook. Mrs. Harry Vogel played for the dancing which followed, wherein the Virginia reel was the supreme favorite, although the modern steps were also danced.

Friday evening at the meeting of the King Cove Boat Club, the president of the Ladies Auxiliary Mrs. John Heibeck, and the treasurer, Mrs. Lester Culley, presented to the club the sum of fifty dollars.

Miss Mae Lynch of Somerville was the week end guest of Miss Agnes Baldwin.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Theiling of Dorchester spent the week end with Mr. and Mrs. John Heibeck at their summer home.

SPECIAL TOWN MEETING.

The topic of the hour in Weymouth is "The Special Town Meeting" which is slated for Wednesday evening at Odd Fellows Opera house, to consider the purchase of suitable auto fire apparatus for the town.

George M. Hoyt, who has charge of letting the Opera house, is threatened with forfeiture of his license if the lawful limit of the hall, 525 is exceeded, and he has demannded that the selectmen agree that this number only be admitted, but the question has been raised, "where do the selectmen get authority to make an agreement which will exclude voters there being about 1000 in the town?"

Odd Fellows Opera house is not the largest building of its kind in town, and even if a checking system is used, complications may arise. Selectman George Newton says "If voters are barred from the hall, I will make a motion to adjourn the meeting." While he is commended for the spirit of his statement, it is a matter of conjecture whether he will make this motion to the 500 inside, or the approximate 600 outside looking in.

Judge Cook who has served as moderator for many years will not return from England until August, and up to date three names have been suggested for the position, George L. Barnes, John F. Dwyer and Town Counsel Worthen.

The committee appointed to investigate the needs of the fire department recommends new apparatus for Wards One and Two and leaves Three, Four and Five out in the cold. The last three named have by subscription among residents equipped their quarters with swinging harness and repaired the same, and public spirited Ward Three equipped an auto combination from its own pocket. It seems unlikely that these wards will without protest help buy good apparatus for the other wards and allow their own sections to be without proper protection.

Another article in the warrant which should not be allowed to pass in its present form is one which demands that all employees of the Town must and shall be citizens of Weymouth. (This would mean that all teachers, supervisors and superintendents must be selected from our own townspeople, whether a competent citizen is available or not. A competent citizen can get a job and hold it as long as the job lasts if he is dependable, but an incompetent one should not receive one dollar for fifty cents worth of result, and block the way of a man who could give value for value received.

It is rumored that a grand chorus of voters on Wednesday morning will sing "There'll be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight."

FAIR AND COOL.

A week of generally fair weather with moderate summer temperature, is forecast by the Weather Bureau. The bulletin says:

The indications are that the temperature during the week will average near or below the normal over all parts of the country, with little probability of extremely high readings in any section. The rainfall during the week will be generally light and local.

No important disturbance is charted to cross the country during the week, although an era of low pressure which will appear over the Far West Tuesday will move slowly eastward, attended by local showers and thunderstorms, and reach the Eastern States near the close of the week.

NEVER AGAIN!

A Narrow Escape

By FRANK CONDON

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

It's a very strange thing about women.

Education, training, youthful surroundings, companions, home influence and other conditions or circumstances of the past will generally present to the observer of a man at least an inkling of what that man will do under certain conditions.

In the case of a woman you may have the history of her entire life at your finger tips, and when you attempt to prophesy her actions or to explain them after she has acted—well, if you're over seven you know precisely how many thousand miles wrong you'll be.

Nowhere could one find a young woman more peaceful and contented than Mrs. Madeline Trimble Grant.

Young Mrs. Madeline had a fine home, a French bulldog, imported Persian rugs, an eighty-eight note piano player, a maidservant of ebony hue, money in the bank and a private check book.

Robert—that was Mr. Grant—caught the 8:46 each morning and made money until the 5:40 at night.

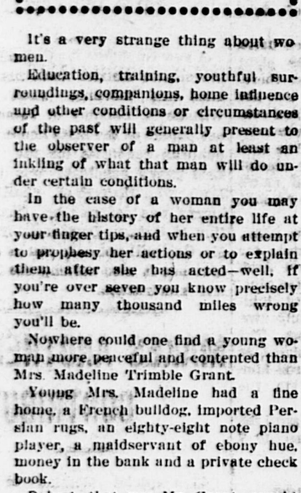

Then he went home to Madeline with a box of bonbons, a bundle of flowers or a book.

The Grant sky was blue and serene. Robert was so happy that he with difficulty restrained himself from cheering each time he reflected upon it, and so was Madeline for a long time.

On an unlucky afternoon a lady called to visit Madeline, and when she went away she presented her hostess with a new book called "Marriage as a Fine Art."

That was the beginning of considerable trouble in the erstwhile happy family of the Grants. Nothing happened upon which one could put one's finger, but it became apparent to Robert that Madeline was troubled.

On a sultry, unpleasant afternoon Robert returned from New York worn out, wilted of collar and ready to take a cool bath and forget the worries of the city.

"WHO IS THE WOMAN?"

He entered his home, walked into the dining room and stopped very suddenly. Madeline was sitting before the table with her head on her arms, and she was weeping in long sobs that shook her entire body.

"What's the matter?" Robert asked simply.

"You know very well what it is," Madeline said.

"I do not know what it is," he retorted. "I'm asking you because I want to know. Has somebody poisoned the goldfish?"

"Make a joke of it if you like," she said coldly, "but I assure you it has gone beyond the stage of jesting. Haven't I been a good wife to you?"

"You surely have, my dear. You're the best wife a man ever had. But what has that to do with it? Haven't I also been a good husband to you?"

"You have not!" she declared bitterly. "Who is the woman—the woman?"

Robert, who had been standing, sat down abruptly.

"The woman!" he gasped. "Madeline, would you be kind enough to sit down and tell me quietly what on earth you are talking about?"

"You carry it off very well," she answered, eying him coldly. "I have been everything that a good wife could be. I have tried to make your home happy, and I only thought of you and your happiness. Everything that I could do in an effort to make myself as perfect a wife as possible I have done, and you repay it all, how? By forgetting me—by casting me off for another woman."

"That isn't the truth, Madeline," he answered gently. "You are the only woman I care for. There is no other woman anywhere in the world except you. You have made a horrible mistake of some kind, and I can't understand it."

"Perhaps you can understand this better, then," she continued.

Madeline, tragedy in her step, walked to her husband and placed in his hand a folded sheet of paper.

"What is it?" he asked without looking at it.

"Read it," she said.

He slowly unfolded the paper and read.

"Dearest Rob," said the paper, "you are the only man in this world I shall ever love, and I shall always love you more than any other man, and I am the only woman—and of this I am certain—whom you will always love, no matter what other woman may come into your life."

It was signed "The One Woman."

Robert looked up from the missive, blank wonderment in his countenance. The handwriting he had never seen before.

"Is it a joke?" he asked uncertainly.

"That letter I found in the pocket of the suit you wore yesterday to New York, and I am not surprised at finding some evidence of your guilt. I am not very observing, but I have seen the change that has slowly come over you, and I suspected its cause. Do you think that a loving wife can be blind to such things, no matter how unsophisticated she may be? No; she feels things she cannot explain, and of late I have felt that your love for me has dwindled and that some other woman has taken it from me."

Madeline began to weep softly.

"It is all a mistake," Robert said. "It is either a joke or a trick, and I can't understand it. I know no woman who could send me such a letter. I do not know the handwriting, and I cannot explain how the letter was in my pocket. All I can say, Madeline, is that I love you, and you only. You must not distrust me, because there is not the slightest reason for doing so. Suppose we tackle this intelligently and try to find out whether some deluded friend is playing a practical joke on us or whether an evil minded mischief maker has sought to bring trouble to us both."

Madeline wept afresh.

Robert moved over and sat down beside her. He placed his arms around her, and she did not repulse him.

He spoke to her gently and soothingly, and after a time she dried her tears and smiled.

"You don't believe it?" he queried, stroking her hand.

"No, Robert, I do not believe it," she answered. Her smile increased. Her good humor returned almost miraculously.

Robert looked at her, wondering at the sudden change from grave to gay.

"Now," Madeline said, "I am positive that you care for no other woman but me. I am sure of it because you have proved it to me, although for some time I have been miserable with doubts and suspicions."

"How," Robert said wonderingly—"how have I proved it? You are convinced that I know nothing of 'The One Woman?'"

"Yes, dear," Madeline purred sweetly. "I am sure you do not know such a woman because I wrote the note and put it in your pocket. Rather, I had Helen, our girl, write it at my dictation."

Robert suddenly rose from his couch. He was very stern.

He gazed down at Madeline, and a threatening frown was on his face.

"Why," he demanded coldly—"why did you do such a thing as that?"

"Listen, dear," his wife pleaded. "In the book called 'Marriage as a Fine Art' there are chapters which tell a wife how to know the state of her husband's affection for her. Invariably, the book explains, a husband who is disloyal to his wife will when accused by her break into a violent storm of indignant denial. He will deny everything in the bitterest, harshest tones—if he is guilty. If he is innocent he will be kind and gentle. You are innocent, dear Robert. I ask your forgiveness for ever having suspected you, but I love you too dearly to bear the thought of losing your affection. Say that you forgive me."

"I will forgive you upon one condition," her husband answered in his sternest voice. "Where is the book called 'Marriage as a Fine Art?'"

"It is in my room, Robert," Madeline meekly replied.

"Bring it to me," he commanded. "Upon that condition I will forgive you for everything you have done."

"But it belongs to Mrs. Tewksbury, dear."

"Bring it to me!"

Madeline went upstairs and returned with the mischief producing volume. She handed it to Robert.

"This is a fine, worthy little book," he said, skimming rapidly through the tome. "It will serve a good purpose."

Then Robert walked into the kitchen, followed by his wife. Helen Murphy was preparing the potatoes, and at the moment Robert entered her domain a steaming pan was in her hands, and the lid of the stove was off.

For the next half hour "Marriage as a Fine Art" blazed merrily among the coals, accompanied by the fraudulent letter Madeline had written and placed in his coat.

At the end of that time Robert came warily into the kitchen, having heard Helen Murphy stirring in the coal cellar.

He removed the lid from the stove.

Then he reached into the pocket of his coat and took therefrom another letter in a small envelope, addressed to him in fine, feminine handwriting and odorous with the perfume of violets.

He looked at it as one looks at something from which one has had a narrow escape, and, raising his hand in an attitude of never again, he dropped the letter upon the still smoldering ashes of "Marriage as a Fine Art."

USEFUL SUIT.

This Boy's Outfit May Be Easily Transformed Into a Bathing Suit.

BOY'S SUIT.

The little boy's suit illustrated here is made of blue flannel, with turned over linen collar and cuffs. The garment is presentable anywhere with collars and cuffs. With these removed it makes a neat little bathing suit. Lightweight mohair and wool is a material which may be adopted for the making of the suit if flannel is not liked. It may also be carried out in any of the lightweight or washable fabrics suitable for boys' suits at this season.

COAT COLLARS.

Most of Them Are Attached to Little Chemisettes.

No coat is without its bit of white turning over at the collar. Most of these becoming white coat collars are attached to chemisettes, which are donned under the blouse of silk, lace or chiffon, or the collar may be part of a tub silk or handkerchief linen blouse worn under the coat.

Sheer white organdie is the popular collar material, and the smartest collars are cut double, seamed at the edge and without a hem.

If a single layer of organdie is used the hem is very narrow and is set in with hand stitches or a line of fine hemstitching.

Lace and embroidery collars are not as smart as these sheer organdie collars, though occasionally collars of very fine machine embroidery, mitered at the corners, are seen.

EMBROIDERED CRAPE.

The gown shown here is of light crape combined with a darker shade. The latter is adopted for the collar, cuffs and the deep empiecement for the draped tunic. The coat is of the basqued style. The very novel high crowned straw hat worn with the costume is trimmed with an embroidered band.

Colored Glove Tips.

The tips of many gloves are colored. Occasionally the inside sections of the fingers are of a different color. Gray or champagne colors are worn to the exclusion of the white gloves so long popular.

The Intelligent Newcomer.

We are credibly informed that Englishmen are the greatest colonizers in the world, the greatest sportsmen in the world and the greatest outdoor people in the world. Sometimes, out in the newer parts of Canada, people are willing to argue that. A western bishop hired a new come Englishman to cook, as he was the only one in the party who could not cook, and cautioned him to be sure to wash the meat before cooking it. He did—with soap.

It was an Englishman not yet across the water who wrote to find out about the proper outfit for Canada and who inquired whether moccasins or snowshoes were regarded as the warmer for footwear.

It was an Englishman on the Athabasca river who bored a hole in a floating scow to let the water out. And yet another Englishman, when asked to set a watermark at night to determine whether or not the river was rising, carefully made a mark at the water line on the side of a floating boat.

On the whole, there seems to be a great difference between colonizers and colonists.—Saturday Evening Post.

How Absinth Is Made.

An old Moor to whom a trader tried to explain the tyrannous nature of the order forbidding the sale of absinth in Morocco took a wholly unexpected attitude.

"Absinth," he said, "is an invention of the evil one. On its roots he pours the blood of a peacock; then when the leaves begin to grow he sprinkles them with the blood of a monkey; then he dips the stalks in the blood of a bear; lastly he mingles with the juice of the plant the blood of a pig.

"So that when the faithful drinks absinth at the first glass his appetite awakes, and he arises proud as a peacock; at the second glass he becomes excited and gesticulates like a monkey; at the third he becomes quarrelsome and spiteful, like a bear; at the fourth he becomes besotted and falls to the earth and rolls like a hog in the mire.

"May Allah protect us, the order is right."—New York Times.

Italy's Deep Blue Skies.

The sky of Italy is noted for its clearness. The blue is deeper not because the dust there is finer than in the northern countries, but because in the countries of the north, due to the greater coolness of the air, the vapor more readily condenses upon the dust particles. The dust particles thus become larger and consequently not so effective in turning back the blue rays alone, but others are also reflected, and a grayish effect is produced. In a single location the blue of the sky may appear bluer at one time than another. The sky is oftentimes said to be very blue when some white cumulus clouds are outlined against it. The sky is then a deep blue by contrast with the brilliant white. After a shower, when the lower stratum of air is washed of its coarse dust particles, a deeper and purer blue is the result.

The Polar Star.

As is well known to most readers, the north star marks the point in the skies toward which the axes (poles) of the earth point. But the poles have another motion called "precession" (much like the secondary motion of a spinning top), by which the ever changing poles describe a big circle in the sky, reaching from the present north star across to Vega. It requires over 25,000 years to complete that circle, and during that time numerous stars will in turn inherit the title of north star. Eleven thousand years hence the job will fall to Vega, and a most worthy holder of that most important position in the skies he will be. When that time comes Polaris will be almost forgotten.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Its Only Guise.

New diseases or new cures are always of interest to the reading public. Therefore an enthusiastic reporter believed a story lay in waiting because of a rumor that germs of a new disease had been discovered. He located the doctor responsible for the find and questioned him.

"In what guise," he asked, "do these germs appear?"

The doctor smiled. "You needn't be afraid," he said. "This is to be a fashionable disease and will appear only in the guys with money."—New York Tribune.

A HUGGER AND PEEPER

Hugger Makes His Appearance Again at Quincy Points

Quincy Point has its Jack the hugger, and West Quincy has got a Jack the peeper. The peeper made his appearance in a street off the boulevard a few nights ago at a house where the woman was all alone at the time and she was greatly disturbed to see a man's face pressed against her window. Her shouts for help attracted the attention of a Metropolitan Park police officer who ran to her assistance. Others who also heard the cries came up and the fellow quickly disappeared.

The latest case in the Quincy Point district took place Saturday evening when a strange man followed two ladies down Washington street. The fellow kept about fifteen feet behind them all the way down and finaly attracted their attention. To make sure that the fellow was following them they stopped and the man stopped also. They then hurried on to the home of one of the ladies, where they sat on the piazza and watched the fellow. He stood on the street for nearly half an hour watching them and then disappeared.

CLERKS WERE DISAPPOINTED

There were a lot of disappointed young lady clerks in City Hall Monday afternoon. They had seen in the Monday bargain bulletin sheet for that day, that one of the stores in City Square would sell for two hours during the afternoon ten soda checks for 25 cents. Visions of ten cooling drinks on a hot day for 25 cents filled their minds and almost every one came in the afternoon prepared to invest. But they were disappointed. They applied for the checks all right but the clerks in the store said that the proprietor was out and they had no orders to sell soda checks at bargain prices and refused to do so. Even when shown the advertisement they would not change their minds, and it was a sore disappointment.

UNDER BONDS TO KEEP PEACE

Judge Avery after hearing additional evidence this morning in the case of Carl Lavoie against William McMahon, both of Milton, ordered the men placed under bonds to keep the peace

The complainant alleged that McMahon assaulted him by striking him on the eye and causing an open wound. The defense admitted the assault but contended it was to prevent Lavoie's assault with a stone. Many witnesses were heard on both sides and Judge Avery decided that a neighborhood quarrel was the basis of the scrap that took place.

He intimated that affairs of this kind should be restricted and sprung a surprise by placing the complainant as well as the defendant under bonds.

McMahon was represented by Senator John H. Brennan of Charlestown.

ENERGY OF THE SUN.

Intensity of the Light and Heat It Sheds Upon Our Universe.

By a series of curious experiments scientific men have gained a fair idea of the intensity of light and heat from the sun as compared with earthly instruments.

When the sun is at the zenith, or directly overhead, its light is equal to seventy-five electric lights placed only three feet from the observer. Yet an electric light is too dazzling for any one to gaze steadily at it. And as compared with Sirius, which is the brightest in the heavens, the light of the sun is 20,000,000 times more brilliant.

The intensity of solar heat on our globe varies greatly, in a way that sunlight does not, the former being affected by locations, altitudes, changes of the atmosphere and many causes.

It has been estimated, however, that the total quantity of heat which the earth receives from the sun each year is enough to melt a layer of ice covering the entire globe and having a thickness of a hundred feet.

But this is only a very small portion of the whole amount of heat given out by the sun. The total solar heat is enough to melt every day a layer of ice ten and one-half miles thick, about the entire sun, or, to take Professor Tyndall's comparison, the sun's heat emitted in one hour is equal to that produced by burning a seam of coal sixteen and one-half miles thick.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

CONCEITED JAILBIRDS.

To Have Been In Prison Is a Mark of Culture In Nigeria.

In the land of the Niger, says Mr. P. Amaury Talbot in the London Times, little or no stigma attaches to jailbirds.

In fact, prison residence is often regarded as conferring the mark of culture and distinction. The last governor of Southern Nigeria once complimented a chief of the interior on his knowledge of English, to which the man replied with a proud air: "Of course I be fit to talk English mouth! I learn all that when I live long time for prison."

Such residence is indeed looked upon as giving a sort of official status. At Calabar some prisoners were out cleaning the road when a clerk, dressed in the height of fashion, high collar, patent leather boots and the smartest of suits, went by. In passing he flicked one of the bending laborers with a little swagger cane he was carrying. At once the aggrieved party sprang erect. "What!" he exclaimed, with splendid contempt. "You dare touch me! You factory man! Look-a me!" Here he pointed to the broad arrows prominently displayed over his simple vest and loin cloth. "I be government man! See here!"

And the dandy passed on thoroughly abashed.

The Fattest Race.

How is it that the Danes as a race are fat? Professor Lyde states that "from one end of Denmark to the other you will not find a really thin man." And he gives rather a quaint reason for it. "The growth of dairy farming in Denmark tends to make men lazy. The private houses adjoin the byres, which are kept at a uniformly warm temperature, and the people are employed in warm buildings, living chiefly on milk and cereals. The men get so lazy that they will not take the trouble to cut up their food." And then comes this delightful conclusion: "This state of things has produced a nation of housewives who excel all others in varieties of sandwiches, which can be munched all day long." And thus is produced the fattest race in Europe, and we get a hint for a real rest cure.—Manchester Guardian.

Treating a Corn.

Whether a corn is treated at home or by a chiropodist, the treatment is the same. It consists of applying to the surface an acid (the most commonly used being salicylic) mixed with collodion and ether. The ether evaporates, leaving a layer of collodion to hold the acid while this does its work. After applying this regularly for four or five days the foot is soaked in hot water, when the corn can be picked out in one piece, leaving a hole, which quickly fills up. Some chiropodists eat the corn out by repeated applications of nitric acid, picking away the parts of the corn destroyed at each treatment. Every time you cut a corn yourself you run the risk of blood poisoning.—New York World.

Nothing Doing.

A little four-year-old, a most attractive little fairy, suddenly lost interest in Sunday school. She had enjoyed so much learning about Moses that her mother could not understand the change of attitude.

"Why don't you want to go, daughter?" she asked.

"Oh," was the astonishing reply, "I don't like to go to Sunday school since Moses died."—Woman's Home Companion.

Her Telltale Lips.

"You have been kissing another man."

"You have no right to say that," declared the girl.

"Then I withdraw it. But I preferred to believe that than to think you had been chewing tobacco."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Better to Admonish.

It is better to admonish than to reproach, for the one is mild and friendly, the other harsh and offensive. The one corrects the faulty; the other only convicts them.—Epictetus.

IS IT A GAME OF CHANCE?

Courts asked to Rule on the New Candy Selling Scheme

Boston papers report that the Watch and Ward society, backed by certain candy manufacturers have asked the courts to rule as to whether the new scheme for selling candy is a game of chance. The scheme, one of which is in operation in City Square, consists of a square board on which are a lot of holes covered with paper, each hole bearing a number. One deposits the sum of ten cents, and then punches out one of the holes. He is then given a box of candy. He may get a ten cent box of chocolates or he may get a fifty cent box. In any event he gets his moneys worth. The Watch and Ward society claim that it is a game of chance but the concern who puts up the candy says it is not, for everyone gets his moneys worth. As stated above the matter has been taken to the courts for a ruling.

DRAWN ON THE ROBINSON JURY

One of the 112 men examined for the jury to sit at the trial of Lawrence Robinson, charged with the alleged murder of Inspector Thomas J. Norton of the Boston police force, and one of the 12 men accepted as a juror is Abram Jordan, a carpenter, of 154 Boylston street, Boston.

Mr. Jordan is a summer resident of Houghs Neck and occupies a cottage on Darrow street with his family. Mrs. Jordon did not know the cause of her husband's delay in reaching home Monday and when informed by a reporter for a Boston paper that her husband had been accepted a jurer her fears were allayed. Mr. Jordan was one of the few men unchallenged.

CONDITION IS SERIOUS

Charles Sullivan who was injured by a fall, from an aerial railway strung in the woods of South street, on Sunday, is not in an encouraging condition and may be removed to the Quincy City Hospital today for an X-ray examination.

Sullivan was hurled through the air and landed on a pile of rocks after his feet struck the stumps of trees in the clearing between the stations of the railway.

He was badly cut about the head and one gash required five stitches. He has been in a semi conscious condition since then and physicians fear that the examination may reveal a fracture of the skull.

Subscribers who are going out of town for a vacation can have the Daily Ledger sent to them by mail without extra charge. In notifying the office give both the old and the new address.

USED SEAT FOR FOOT REST

Comfort on street cars must be attained only through the occupancy of one seat according to a ruling made by Judge Avery this morning who imposed a fine of $10 on Albion Anderson.

Anderson was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct on a public conveyance. The offense was committed on a Quincy bound car from Neponset on Monday night when Anderson insisted on turning the seat ahead of him so it could be used as a foot rest. He was informed it was reserved for passengers and when the conductor turned it over he flopped it back. His arrest followed.

WILLIAMS IS OUT ON BAIL

William W. Williams, Jr., the Atlantic letter carrier who was arrested Saturday charged with the theft of a letter containing a money order for $3 was arraigned before Commissioner Hayes Monday. He pleaded not guilty and the case was continued for further investigation Williams being admitted to bail on his personal recognizance.

Williams denies all knowledge of how the letter came to be in his pocket. The letter was found by his nephew who was looking for pennies and turned over to the superintendent of the South Boston office. The letter in question was addressed to Hilda Morton of Atlantic.

GOING A 45 MILE GAIT

When the name of Arthur H. Lewis was called in the district court this morning a colored chauffeur stepped to the bar for arraignment on a charge of violation of the auto laws at Milton.

Officer William Fallon, complainant in the case, testified that the defendant drove a machine over the highways of Milton at a rate of speed that reached at least 45 miles an hour.

Lewis was fined $15 and Senator James Tumulty, president for the company which employes Lewis stepped forward and asked Judge Avery for a continuance so the man could pay the fine. The request was granted and sentence was suspended until July 22.

NOT THE HUGGER.

An intoxicated Fore River shipyard employee suddenly lurched out of the darkness near the Central Fire station Monday night and three girls who passed within a few feet became frightened. With thoughts of Jack the Hugger uppermost they screamed lustily for assistance.

Men in the station heard their cries and ran to the street and held the man. The police were summoned and he was placed under arrest. He gave his name as Martin Henry.

He was held on a charge of drunkenness and an investigation showed that the fears of the girls were groundless. In court this morning he was fined $10 and sentence was suspended to March 24, 1915.

NEW CORPORATIONS.

Among the companies recently incorporated are the following from Quincy.

American X-Ray Screen Co. Capital $5,000. Fifty shares at $100 each. Directors, A. Thacher Parsons of Quincy, E. E. Cox and A. J. Dooley.

Webb Realty Co. Capital $5,000. Five hundred shares at $100 each. Dennis F. Crowley R. H. Walsh and W. J. Corcoran directors.

ARGUMENT ENDS IN ASSAULT

Charles Stewart was arrested on a warrant Monday charging assault and battery on Joseph Berlucchi who is in the Quincy City Hospital suffering with a slight concussion of the brain.

It is alleged that in an argument Saturday in the Eagle Polishing Mills in South Quincy, Stewart struck Berlucchi with a stone and inflicted serious wounds about the head.

Stewart was arraigned in court this morning and the case was continued pending the developments of Berlucchi's injuries.

ARABIAN JUSTICE.

A Desert Problem the Cadi Had No Trouble In Solving.

Two Arabs stopped at an oasis to have luncheon. One had three dates, and the other had five, which they were to eat together. Presently a stranger came up and asked permission to share their meal, which they cheerfully granted. After all had eaten the stranger thanked them for the food they had given him, left eight ducats and rode away.

The Arab who had the three dates said, "Here is 8 ducats for eight dates—1 ducat for each date; therefore three ducats are mine." But the other Arab argued differently and contended that he should have seven ducats and the first man one. The case was referred to the cadi of the nearest town, who upheld the second man's contention. This is the way he reached his decision:

The three men divided eight dates. There were two and two-thirds for each, or eight-thirds. The first Arab had three dates, so he contributed nine-thirds to the whole, but he ate eight-thirds himself, so he gave only one-third of a date to the stranger. The second Arab contributed five dates, or fifteen-thirds; he ate eight-thirds himself and gave seven-thirds to the stranger.

So reasoned the cadi, and he gave the first Arab 1 ducat and the second 7 ducats.—Youth's Companion.

TWO CROPS AT ONCE.

Tree Agriculture an Old Story on the Island of Majorca.

Approximately nine-tenths of the arable area of Majorca, one of the Spanish islands in the Mediterranean, is planted out to crop yielding trees. That makes one story agriculture. Then beneath the trees grain is grown. That makes the second story, which may properly be likened to the cyclone cellar.

For miles and miles in every direction that beautiful island is covered with continuous orchards of almonds, olives, figs and carobs, with occasional grafted oak trees, the sweet acorns of which are prized as highly as the chestnut.

This tree agriculture is nothing new, for many of these orchards are of unknown age, and some of them give evidence of having seen generations of men rise, dig awhile and die before Columbus sailed past on his way from Genoa to Gibraltar, and throughout all the years that the white man has striven in America these same old olive and carob trees have been standing there, handing down their harvests of fruit and beans to the men who raised other crops at their feet—crops of wheat, oats, barley, beans and peas.—From "Two Story Farming," by J. Russell Smith, in Century.

Make Appearances Count.

A good appearance is always an entering wedge when a man seeks an interview, but all the clothes in a king's wardrobe won't sell a bill of goods. It takes human intelligence to do that. Vanity sometimes leads a fellow to bedeck his person like a five storied wedding cake, and some men do it, I suppose, because they believe in the foolish aphorism that "clothes make the man." It's the other way. Man makes the clothes, and just as often clothes unmake the man. Fine feathers may make fine birds, fine hats or fine dusters, but the best that fine clothes ever did was to make fine looking men. No doctor ever prescribes for himself, and by the same token you'll notice that the men who own the clothes foundries don't wear their own styles—not publicly, at any rate. —Maurice Switzer in Leslie's.

Sawing the Wood.

It was only on rare occasions that Mrs. Cutler, a kind faced old lady, accepted invitations to dine out. Upon repeated invitations of her friends, the Joslins, however, she consented to attend a little informal dinner they were giving, accompanied by her daughter.

Unfortunately Mrs. Cutler was quite deaf and consequently could not enter into the general conversation. She was engaged in cutting a piece of steak when her daughter turned to her and said:

"Mother, dear, why are you so quiet?"

"I'm all right," responded mother, with a sunny smile. "While you talk, Mabel, I say nothing and saw wood."—Buffalo Express.

Fully Explained.

The colored sexton of a wealthy church had a very stylish mulatto wife. Finding his domestic income not quite equal to his expenses, he decided to apply for an increase in salary. So he wrote a letter to the committee in charge with this explanation at the close: "It's mighty hard to keep a sealskin wife on a muskrat salary."—New York Sun.

Decided by Salt.

Legal disputes in Borneo are decided in a curious manner. The two litigants are each given a lump of salt of the same size to drop simultaneously into water. The one whose lump first dissolves is deemed to be in the wrong and loses his case.

That Made Him Tired.

Bobbie—Don't you feel tired, Mr. Bibble? Guest—No, Bobbie. Why do you ask? Bobbie—'Cause pa said he met you last night and you were carrying an awful load.—Boston Transcript.

God gave you that gifted tongue to make known your true meaning to men and not to rattle it like a muffin man's bell.—Carlyle.

CANDIDATE FOR COUNCILLOR

Senator Bellamy of Taunton Takes Out Papers

A new candidate for Councillor from the second district made his appearance this morning when Senator William A. Bellamy of Taunton took out papers at the state house as a Republican candidate for the position. Last year's candidate was Guy A. Ham, who through a similarity of names was defeated by Charles W. Guy of Quincy, Democrat. This year Mr. Guy will not only run as a Democrat but is also seeking the Progressive nomination.

MAKES ANOTHER CONTRIBUTION

At a special meeting of Quincy Council Knights of Columbus held in the club rooms Monday evening it was voted to make an additional contribution of $50 to the Salem relief fund. This makes a total of $100 contributed by Quincy council.

SOLDIER'S MEMORIAL.

The spirited group statue by Mrs. Theo Ruggles Kitson called "The Wounded Color Sergeant" done in bronze is to be unveiled Saturday afternoon at Topsfield, Mass. Samuel W. McCall will deliver the dedicatory address.

The monument is erected in memory of the citizens of Topsfield who fought in the civil war, and the cost is met by a bequest to the town made by Dr. Justin Allen, who practised medicine in Topsfield for nearly 50 years. The memorial is at the southerly end of one of the finest examples of the Village Common to be found in New England.

The group represents a color sergeant shot down in battle, the falling colors grasped by a comrade, who raises anew the shattered staff. The action is spirited and the modelling is considered the best yet achieved by Mrs. Kitson.

We All Feel That Way.

To the unthinking, senseless knocker who is nothing more than a monumental nuisance that planks his bag of bones upon everything for the common good that comes up. May the bubonic plague grasp him.—Petaluma Courier.

Make Him Content.

One of the principal duties entailed upon the housewife is insuring the comfort of the husband. Every man is contented so long as the solid comforts of life are his—so long as his meals are to his liking and his home always ready for his occupancy.

Not a Pleasant Surprise.

A man told his daughter that if she learned to cook he would give her a surprise. She learned the art, and he surprised her by discharging the servant girl.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

INCREASE IN MELROSE RATE

Melrose in common with other cities reported up to today gets an increase in its tax rate this year the increase being $1.30 over that of last year. This years rate as announced by the assessors Tuesday is $21.70. The reason assigned for the increase is the increases in state, county and metropolitan taxes.

The increased budget made it necessary for the assessors to find a larger valuation or a much larger increase in the tax rate would have been the result. The valuation as returned is $18,567,330 a gain of $563,805 over last year.

REPUBLICANS PLAN CAMPAIGN

Party Leaders Urge Committee to Get After New Voters

Senator Louis F. R. Langelier, Charles H. Johnson, Dr. A. H. Gilson, William H. Teasdale, Daniel Scouler and James Thomas of Quincy were among the 200 or more members of city and town Republican committee present at the meeting and organization rally of the Republican state committee at the American house, Boston, Tuesday evening, at which time the following slogan was offered and enthusiastically received

VICTORY
THIS FALL WITH McCALL

William F. Garcelon of Newton who presided called it an experience meeting as it was a meeting in which various ones advised as to the best method of getting out the vote to pile up the Republican victory.

Especial emphasis was laid on the necessity of registration work. Getting after new voters, working young men into the organizations and not neglecting the immigrant.

All of the speakers were optimistic They were sure the Democratic strength was waning and that the Progressives had got tired of electing Democrats. That the solid men of the state were getting tired of the sort of representatives they had been having and were going to see that better ones were elected this year.

It was declared that organization and support for it was essential if the party hoped to win. The necessity was also advanced of choosing the best men at the caucuses That was where the victory was won.

The meeting was an enthusiastic one from beginning to end which means that the Republican are planning to make a hot contest this fall to elect their candidate for Governor.

HOSPITAL TO BE ABANDONED

Mt. Pleasant Camp Not a Success Financially

It is currently reported that the Anti-tuberculosis Association will abandon its camp at Mt. Pleasant in the near future. There are but few patients at the camp at the present time and the association has been running behind financially for some time. Just when the camp will be abandoned is not definintely known although it is said that it will not be far from the first of August.

When the camp was first established some years ago on land of Mr. Faxon, near what is known as Faxon park there was considerable opposition on the part of the residents in that vicinity to the location of the camp, which provoked considerable discussion but which did not result in the giving up of the project.

The camp is located in an isolated section and was in fact built as a sort of experimental camp. Several shacks were erected and it has done a good work. Eventually however it would naturally have to be done away with as the state is forcing the erection of contagious hospitals by municipalities.

While Quincy has not as yet taken any definite steps toward the erection of a hospital the Board of Health under Mayor Stone went into the matter to a considerable extent and had elaborate plans prepared. There was objections to the plans from the first as the state Board of Health demands were deemed to be excessive. However the plans of the Board of Health were eventually sent to the City Council and an order appropriating the sum of $35,000 for the erection of the hospital was introduced in the City Council last year.

No action was taken by the City Council of 1913 and at the end of the year it was referred to the Council of 1914, and promptly referred to the Finance Committee before whom it is still pending. Whether the council of 1914 will eventually take favorable acton is uncertain, but in view of the many calls for money for various matters it is not likely action will be taken unless forced to do so by the state authorities.

An important meeting of the Anti-tuberculosis association was held recently and the secretary instructed to prepare a report for publication dealing with the situation and the causes for its discontinuance.

TROLLEYED TO QUINCY

Unity Loyal Ladies Orange Lodge of Hyde Park trolleyed to Quincy Tuesday evening and were the guests of John Adams lodge of this city in Wilson's hall. There were upwards of 125 in the party.

Several pipers were aboard the special cars and they furnished music during the entire trip. On arriving at Wilson's hall the party received a salvo of welcomes. An entertainment program was rendered for their benefit, refreshments were served and dancing enjoyed.

The visitors left Quincy about 11 o'clock for the return trip.

Mayor Miller who has been out of town on a vacation trip, came to City Hall for a short time this morning to look after some affairs that demanded his personal attention.

POLITICIANS GETTING BUSY

Straws Point to a Hot Campaign all Along the Line

If as has been often said that straws point to which way the wind is blowing, then politics will be lively the coming fall all along the line. This not only means state politics but city politics as well. Prospective candidates have begun to patch up their fences and sharpen their spurs in anticipation of a lively race, and with the approach of early fall things will move rapidly. In fact things have already begun to shape themselves and nomination papers for state officers are already in circulation.

Col. Benton who last year sought the Republican nomination for Governor has gone to Europe and says he is out of it th s year.

Joseph Walker it appears is not to have things all his own way in securing the Progressive nomination for Governor as Wendell P. Thore has announced himself as a candidate for the nomination and will put up a stiff fight. His chief plank will be pensions for the aged.

Col. Kincaide is not mentioned in the Progressive slate for state officers as made up Tuesday. Col. Kincaide however may be heard from late in connection with the nomination for congressman from the fourteenth district, where he made such a good run two years ago.

Gov. Walsh will have no opposition in securing the nomination of the Democrats for a second term, and at the present time is giving all of his attention to the duties of the office and letting politics alone.

Samuel McCall seems to have the call for the Republican nomination for Governor.

Now that John D. Mackay has declined to be a candidate for Representative from the Fifth district the live wire from the Quincy Point district, A. L. Whitman seems to have a clear field.

Representative Sandberg likes the work on Beacon Hill and will probably be a candidate to succeed himself at the caucuses.

As yet nothing has been heard from Councilman Charles A. Ross as to whether he is to be a candidate for the Republican nomination for representative in the Fifth district.

Representative Michael T. Sullivan has not as yet publicly announced what he intends to do. Some say that he will try for a third term in the legislature while others say that he will come out for the Democratic nomination for Mayor this fall.

That there will be candidates and to spare for Mayor this fall seems assured. It is quite well understood that Charles H. Johnson will be a candidate for the Republican nomination and that Dr. John H. Ash will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination. James E. Wall of Houghs Neck is being groomed by certain parties for the Mayoralty and Ed. Powers continues to assert that he is sure to get a nomination and election. Mayor Miller has not officially been heard from but he will probably be in the fight for re-election.

President Whiton of the City Council would like to be Mayor but it is a question of business with him. His business is such that during the first six months of the year it demands all of his time. One can not blame him much for not sacrificing his business interests for the simple opportunity of being Mayor for a year or two.

VAUDEVILLE IN WEATHER

Sunshine, Darkness. Wind, Lightning and Rain

A sudden drop in temperature, a darkening of the northern horizon, then a high wind followed by thunder and lightning, and a down pour of rain was what the weather man handed out Tuesday afternoon as a sample of New Englands quick change in weather conditions. It was about 3 o'clock that the northern sky began to darken and shortly after a high wind blew the dust in the streets about in great clouds. Then the wind appeared to shift more to the westerly. This was followed by the sound of distant thunder which grew nearer and nearer at each report, eventually being accompanied by vivid flashes of lightning.

Then it began to rain. Slowly at first but rapidly increasing in volume until it seemed to be falling by the bucketfull. It rained hard for a short time or until about 4 o'clock when the rain began to slacken up somewhat and the thunder and lightning had apparently passed over Quincy. It continued to rain however until after 5 o'clock when the weather gradually cleared again and the sun came out and set clear.

The drop in temperature however remained and the evening was delightfully cool.

Up to the storm it had been a very hot day the temperature at noon being between 80 and 90. But when the wind shifted however the temperature took a sudden drop of 19 degrees the cool wave being born of a 34 mile-an-hour breeze.

The streets were washed clean and the catch basins soon became clogged up with sticks and rubbish washed from the streets.

The storm while it lasted was one of the most severe of the season. Fortunately no houses were struck by lightning in Quincy as far as known but a large elm tree on Elm street was shattered by a bolt of lightning and a tree that is said to have stood for 150 years was ruined. Another tree on Adams street was also struck and rent from top to bottom.

Other places however were not as fortunate as Quincy for the storm did much damage. Two places in Brockton were struck by lightning, one place being a barn which was demolished, entailing a loss of $1500. The second place was a house but here the bolt while burning a hole through the roof did but slight damage.

In Canton a large barn was struck twice during the storm and the building which was set on fire was destroyed at a loss of from $10,000 to $20,000.

An Nantasket the roof of the cafe section of Hotel Nantasket was struck and while the bolt only caused a damage of about $100. it caused a panic among the hundreds on the pavilions which was only allayed by the coolness of the musicians in the auditorium who kept on playing despite the terror of all around.

At Point Allerton the life saving crew went out and rescued three men in a small power boat who were in a perilous position. It was with difficulty that the life savers succeeded in getting the small boat off the rocks and towing it into deep water and thence to Hull where the three occupants took a boat for Boston.

For two hours street cars along the beach were stalled by the burning out of the motors.

ROBINSON A SUICIDE

Murderer of Inspector Norton Takes Own Life

"Chippy" Robinson, the murderer of Inspector Norton of the Boston police committed suicide this morning in his cell at the Charles street jail. While definite information is lacking it is believed that he committed suicide sometime during the night. Later it was reported that the deed was done sometime between 6 and 7 o'clock this morning. He was found lying on his cot in the cell having bled to death from a slash in his throat and a cut on the wrist.

It is believed that the implement used was the shank of his shoe. According to information which has leaked out, Robinson secured the steel shank from one of his shoes, which he sharpened by scraping it against a hard substance. He then cut his throat and severed an artery in his left wrist. He made no outcry of any kind and was discovered to be dead on one of the regular rounds between 7 and 7.30.

The body was lying in a natural position on the cot in the cell. The official information of the suicide was given out by District Attorney Pelletier.

This morning shortly after 10 o'clock the jury which has been hearing the case was discharged following a statement of fact to the presiding justice by the District Attorney.

Sheriff Quinn testified that the body was found at 6.35 and Medical Examiner McGrath testified that there were two wounds. One on the left wrist half an inch long piercing the wrist artery and another on the left side of the neck an inch and a half long piercing certain blood vessels. These wounds caused death.

It is believed that Robinson passed a sleepless night. That the strain of the past few days had been most severe and that he realized that the end would mean conviction and electrocution or solitary confinement for life. That these things so preyed upon his mind that he determined to end it all.

Considerable local interest was centered in the trial from the fact that a summer resident was serving on the jury and that the father and brother of Dr. W. H. Blanchard of the Red Cross hospital at the Fore River were acting as counsel for Robinson.

Inspector Norton was shot in a restaurant on Boylston street during a scuffle which ensued when an attempt was made to arrest Robinson on a murder charge for Michigan officers.

LIQUOR CASES BEING HEARD

The Quincy police today commenced its prosecution of 11 Italians, alleged to have been keeping and exposing liquor for sale in violation of the law. The cases grew out of a wholesale raidfest that the department indulged in several days ago.

Strong evidence has been secured in most of the cases according to the police and it would not be surprising if additional complaints were preferred against some of the defendants.

The men charged are: Cologero Alfano, 71 Water street, Salvatore Rennaa, 71 Water street, Joseph Passarelli, 51 Water street, Rosario Di-Bella, 139 Sumner street, Stephen Murachino, 34 Union street, Cologero Maligrio, 23 Sumner street, Alfonso Farnado, 23 Summer street, Joseph Mula, 26 Elm place, Tony Olivera, 34 Elm place, Mike Dundrea, 59 Penn street, and Salvatore Nigrela, 56 Phipp street.

Joseph Passarelli, the first man arraigned, pleaded not guilty. It was stated in testimony that beer was bottled on the premises and kept in the bed room of the defendants wife. Frank Zattolli, counsel for the defense said he took exceptions to such an intimation and Inspector Goodhue stated that the Italian women, in so far as their morals were concerned, needed no defenders.

Two witnesses testified regarding the sales of liquor at the place. They were Frank Sayer and William M. Carboni, two detectives, that have been assisting the police work up the cases.

Judge Pratt after hearing the testimony imposed a fine of $75. An appeal will be taken.

Cologero Maligrio pleaded not guilty and when the afternoon session was resumed his hearing was taken up.

President Whiton of the City Council says that the published statements that he is to be a candidate for senator is all hot air. At the present time he has no intention of becoming a candidate.

There are some people so constituted that they would rather associate with the wealthy summer hotel guests than with the bright and clever college students who are waiting on their tables.

It is surprising how much more comfortable a plain pine plank on the bleachers is than a softly cushioned seat at church.

Judging by the way the government usually works, it will take the proposed Federal Trade Commission about five years to tell the trusts what they can do for one year.

It will be absolutely useless for any political party to get votes this fall, unless their platforms and candidates promise that every one shall earn $5.00 a day.

THE SEASON FOR PICNICS.

Picnics are a simple and primitive form of enjoyment. But these are elaborate and costly times. It might be thought therefore that picnics would go out of style, in an age that likes a lot of show and display.

Such, however, does not seem to be the case. The use of the automobile seems to give a certain social sanction to informal out of doors eating. Motorists may be able to borrow money for the car, but hotel bills call for cash, and a lot of it. Automobile owners have to economize somewhere, and very frequently the saving takes the form of the picnic lunch.

To the men it sometimes seems as if the greater the inconveniences of a spot, the farther the luncheon baskets have to to toted, the more it appeals to the women of the party. To the latter, no tramp is too arduous to get at spots of scenic romance. To them the plainest fare is eaten with sharp relish under the stimulus of out door beauty.

CITY BUILDING.

The Daily Ledger is requested to say something on the above subject. It is a matter often referred to in these columns, yet one so important that there is always something worth while saying.

The most obvious way is to locate new industries. The editor will express some thoughts on that question later.

The question of daily bread is not the only one that determines a person's residence. If a man and his family enjoy living in a place, if they feel it has good schools and good public services, they will frequently keep on living there, even if they see more possibilities in the way of money somewhere else.

If a city is clean, comfortable, attractive, well equipped with modern facilities, it will acquire a reputation extending even beyond the limits of its own state. People will be ready to come there to live if opportunity offers. They will be slow to move away. Owners of land and retail business will see their holdings rise in value. There will be more chances for young people to make comfortable livings.

The spirit of co-operation in every public enterprise is more valuable than ambitious schemes of town booming, successful and helpful as these frequently are.

Here is where cities in their corporate capacities have a wholly different temperament. In one place there is little spirit of pulling together. If one man starts a new idea, the rest all criticise. "It is none of their funeral."

In other places there exists the feeling of team work. It makes people rally around each other in any public undertaking. They also rejoice in the prosperity of their own townspeople. There is no feeling of envy and jealousy. If a city has that spirit, no power on earth can prevent its growth. If every one were but willing to give a few hours a week to some cause for community betterment, how the city would shine, and what an enormous advance could be made!

DAYS OF FAMILY REUNIONS.

The days of family reunions are here once more. They are annual joys with which everybody can sympathize, and which everybody understands. In a big kindred there are bound to be some able and worthy people that do credit to the family, and whom the others wish to see and every considerable kindred has a big majority of worth-while and useful people who have done well by their community and State and nation. It is pleasant for such families to get together, to chat over the historic past and to plan for the bright future. To the elders these reunions are of especial interest, for the older folks are most interested in family history, and the older we grow the more inclined most of us become to feel deeply the events of the days that are gone; the young people are likely to be more interested in what may be coming in the days that are yet unborn.

New England has a lot of families whose history is rich in worthy deeds and in leadership in town and State and even national affairs, and so New England is strong for the family reunion. Such affairs are useful, too, in keeping up that pride in family affairs and family achievements that go far to keep clean and helpful the strain of good citizenship.—Brockton Enterprise.

PENSIONS GO DOWN.

The cost of military pensions to the government of the United States, which reached its summit in the fiscal year, now ending, is expected to begin to go down, and will undoubtedly go down rapidly unless the amounts paid to individual pensioners are again increased by Congress.

During the first ten months of the present fiscal year the number of Civil war veterans on the pension list decreased from 462,000 to 435,000 and 5,000 additional names will be dropped by the time the year ends. The pension estimates for the next fiscal year are, therefore, fixed at $169,000,000 as against $180,000,000 for the present fiscal year. Eleven millions of dollars does not seem very much when compared with $169,000,000, but it is a considerable sum, and adding it to the reduction anticipated in the next twelve months, the decrease in the branch of government expense should equal the sums raised by the income corporation tax.

It is interesting to note in connection with the expense of $180,000,000 for military pensions in the present fiscal year the sums paid out by other warlike nations for the same purposes. Germany paid out only $110,000 in the past year: Great Britian, $117,843; Russia and Japan, the two nations that engaged in the bloodiest war since our Civil war, plainly have no money to spare for pensions. Japan's pension expense last year was $7000; that of Russia, $2397.—Pittsburg Post.

"FIBRE AND FABRIC."

Ezra S. Grover of Tremont street, South Braintree who for sixteen years has been connected with the "Shoe and Leather Reporter" as editor, has recently sold his interest in that publication, and become associated with "Fibre and Fabric" of Boston as treasurer and general manager. "Fibre and Fabric" is the oldest and most widely known textile weekly in the United States. The publication is considered an authority in the textile field.

Mr. Grover has been engaged in newspaper work since leaving Dartmouth College, and was formerly connected with the "Worcester Spy," and the "Worcester Telegram." Aside from his work with the publications with which he has been connected, he has written many special articles for the leading dailies and magazines.

Mr. and Mrs. Grover have been at Lake Quacumquasit, Brookfield, since the middle of June, and expect to return home about August 1.

Very Probable.

"I don't know what it is," gushed the animal lover, "but there is something about cats that sort of takes hold of me.' "Oh!" said his matter-of-fact friend, "I'll bet it's fleas."

No Pie Crust Promises

Wise advertisers never make "pie-crust" promises.

They know that to break faith with the public would be fatal—worse than throwing their money away.

That is one reason why advertised goods are more in demand.

People know that there is quality behind them.

They look on them as standards. Any dealer knows that there are more calls for advertised goods than for goods not advertised.

This is especially true if they happen to have been advertised in the newspapers which directly reach the people.

The standard of advertising is more exacting today than ever before. Advertisers are more careful of their promises and more interesting in their text and illustrations.

The world grows better.

"STREAM" HAS DRIED UP

Yet Texas Wants Another Big Appropriation For Trinity River

Washington, July 22.—When the river and harbor bill was up in the senate and Senator Burton was continuing his six-day argument against it, Senator Kenyon interrupted to read this interview with M. J. Wirth of Fort Worth, Tex.:

"I believe more than $1,000,000 has been appropriated for the Trinity river. If any senator in Washington can find this particular river at this time he can do more than we can. The Trinity neither runs, creeps nor crawls through Dallas; in fact, it does not even hesitate. Recently an electric railway tried to lease the bed of the river for an interurban line. The Trinity river is the joke of Texas, and today it is as dry as a bone. But we never fail to get an appropriation."

"Would it not be well," remarked Senator Pomerene, "to send the discoverer of the River of Doubt down to Texas to find the Trinity?"

The senate laughed and Senator Shepard promised at a later day to defend the provision for $255,000 for Trinity river in the "pork barrel" bill.

NEW SHAH OF PERSIA

Boy of 16 Takes Oath Upon Attaining His Official Majority

Teheran, July 22.—Sultan Ahmed Mirza, the 16-year-old Shah of Persia, on attaining his official majority, took the constitutional oath of office in the palace of the national council.

The litle shah drove to the palace in a glass coach drawn by eight white horses. The procession passed through the gayly decorated streets of the capital, which were carefully guarded.

Large bodies of police and troops were stationed in strategic positions and the entire route was lined by police and native gendarmerie as well as the famous "Cossack brigade," while mounted men surrounded the shah's carriage and also those of the cabinet ministers and other officials following him.

On entering the palace the shah bowed to the assemblage and then pronounced the constitutional oath.

KING'S CONFERENCE IS LIKELY TO FAIL

Rejection Awaits Any Agreement Upon Home Rule

London, July 22.—The home rule conference called by King George has not only stirred up criticism and resentment on all sides, but it seems to be doomed to end in a complete failure.

The eight party leaders who were "commanded" by the king to meet and discuss the Ulster situation had a conference lasting over an hour and then adjourned to meet again today.

No statement was given out as to how far the conference progressed, but it is pointed out that even if the leaders should reach some kind of agreement, the temper of the different parties is such just now that it would be rejected.

THE WINTHROP MYSTERY

Police Seeking Clew to Supposed Assailant of Ada Taylor

Boston, July 22.—Having reached the belief that Ada Taylor was murdered, the police, now investigating the death of the nursemaid whose body was found on the beach at Winthrop with bruises on her face, are as completely baffled as ever, so far as the probable identity of her assailant and the manner of her death are concerned.

That she met her death by violence is the one theory on which the police are working today. All the theories of accidental death or suicide have been practically abandoned.

The case is becoming one of the most puzzling mysteries the police of this section have had to handle for years.

FISHING FATALITIES

Unusually Small Number Recorded During he Year 1913

Boston, July 22.—The Year Book of the Boston Fish Men's association, just issued, shows that thirteen New England fishing vessels were lost in 1913, the largest number since 1894, but that only twenty-six lives were lost, the smallest number in the history of modern fisheries.

Practically all of the wrecks were off the Nova Scotia coast. Eleven of the thirteen lost vessels went ashore. One was cut down by a liner. The other was burned.

SHOULD HAVE ACTED HIMSELF

Caillaux Did Not Realize How Wife's Soul Was Ravaged

UPROAR AT TRIAL OF WOMAN

Hoots and Cheers as Political Phase of Tragedy Which Resulted In Calmette's Death Is Entered Upon In Testimony of Former Premier In Behalf of Wife Accused of Murder

Paris, July 22.—Joseph Caillaux held the court for two tense hours testifying in defense of his wife, who sat in the prisoner's inclosure, charged with the killing of Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro.

The former premier, still one of the most powerful men in France, dominated the proceedings, imposing upon them his personality and uncommon gifts of leadership.

"I accuse myself," he cried in one climax. "I committed a fault. I should myself have acted, but, absorbed by public affairs, I failed to realize the ravages Calmette's calumnies had made on the soul of my wife."

The trial has entered upon the political phase, and those who sat in the courtroom had occasion to bring to mind that Caillaux is the strong man of the Radical groups now ruling France.

He would, he said, tell the jury the history of his private life from his first marriage down to the sad event which caused his presence on the stand. He explained the incident of the two letters he supposed had been destroyed at the time of his divorce from his first wife. He only knew of their existence when a friend warned him they were about to be published.

When he married Mme. Raynouard he knew for the first time what true happiness was. "She was a most tender, affectionate wife," said Caillaux. "We lived, and live, in the closest communion of heart and mind. My wife, however, took alarm at the dangers my political campaign exposed me to. She tried to dissuade me from entering Doumergue's cabinet. The income tax, she said, had formidable adversaries, and I should be the object of fierce press campaigns.

"As she foretold, the attacks recommenced with redoubled fury, but I refused to adopt the means employed by other politicians to stop them. I pursued my way undeterred. I could not believe that anyone would publish the 'Thy Joe' letters, although I had been warned by Pierre Morder, by the Princess of Monaco and by the Princess of Mesagne-Estradere."

After the publication of the "Thy Joe" letter Caillaux's first wife telephoned to him to clear herself of any suspicion he might have had that she was responsible for its divulgence.

"At that time," said Caillaux, "I firmly believed that other letters would be published. My wife shared my belief, which was confirmed by information from a number of persons."

Up to this time Caillaux had been moderately calm, but now he worked himself up to a violent fit of indignation as he denounced the calumnies levelled against his honesty.

Returning to the "Thy Joe" letter, he described the effect of its publication on his wife. Finally he became so impregnated with her fears that other letters would be published that he consulted President Poincare, who did his best to reassure him and advised him to consult a lawyer.

"My lawyer told me," continued Caillaux, "that nothing could be done. I then said to my wife: 'Be reassured. I will go and smash Calmette's snout myself.' After that I felt relieved in mind, but my wife, on the other hand, was depressed.

"At the police station, on my way home from the senate, I learned of the tragedy. My wife's constant prayer was: 'I hope he is not seriously hurt; I meant only to give him a lesson.'"

Caillaux next entered upon the purely political phase of his deposition. The excitement of the listeners reached fever heat. Some of his statements were mingled with hoots and cheers, despite the stern threats of the presiding judge to arrest any disturber.

The campaign carried on by The Figaro, Caillaux said, was meant to strike him down at any cost because he stood for the income tax and the interests behind The Figaro hated that measure of fiscal reform. He strongly denied the accusation of criminal prevarication in the Rochette affair and of treason in connection with the Franco-German treaty.

Miss Harris Withdraws Lost Love Suit Against Baker Estate

Concord, N. H., July 22.—The executors of the estate of Congressman Baker of Bow announced that Magnolia V. H. Harris of Washington has filed with them a release of all her claims upon the estate, amounting to $200,000.

Miss Harris claimed this sum on the ground of an alleged promise of marriage by Baker, which was not fulfilled because of his sudden death in May, 1913.

McDermott, Against Whom Charges Were Lodged, Quits Congress

Washington, July 22.—Representative James T. McDermott of Illinois telegraphed Governor Dunne, resigning as a member of congress.

McDermott was charged by Colonel Mulhall of the National Association of Manufacturers with being a paid lobbyist for the association. His resignation from the house came just two days before probable action on the report of the investigating committee, which found him guilty of "gross improprieties."

By resigning McDermott disposes of any action by the house on the lobby charges against him. He came from the stockyards district of Chicago and is a candidate for re-election.

Cunningham, reputed to be wealthy, was arrested on a warrant sworn to by Mayhew, charging first degree murder. Mayhew charges that Cunningham starved his wife to death.

It is alleged in the warrant that Cunningham not only failed to provide his wife with food for twelve days prior to her death last Friday, but that he purchased a coffin three weeks ago and began digging a grave a week ago.

FORGOT TO ENTER POOL

It cost John J. Deasey of 41 Jackson street $40 to take a trip down the harbor aboard the steamer Satellite on a fishing trip Tuesday, and all because he forgot to enter the pool that goes to the man making the biggest catch.

Mr. Deasey escorted a squad of police officers Henry Thorne, George Cahill and John Halloran, to the wharf and recommended that they get into the pool. The day was balmy and the anglers were many and while John was in the crush around the line booth the pool was made up.

He never thought of it again until just before the storm clouds gathered when the trip was called off for the day. His line was tugged and in true Isaac Walton style he fought it out with a monster of the deep. When he got his catch aboard he had a handsome seven and one half pound cod.

And the man that won the pool had a fish weighing a little better than five pounds.

John Halloran got five silver hake and Officers Thorne and Cahill one apiece.

ROLL CALL OF QUINCY MOOSE

Quincy lodge, Loyal Order of Moose held its first roll call and identification meeting since its institution four years ago, in Protection hall on Tuesday evening, and 152 out of a membership of over 600 responded to their names as they were read by Robert T. Dictator William Norrie presided, during the program that followed the business end of the meeting. As the evening waned the affair grew into a reunion, many being present for the first time since their initiation several years ago.

An entertainment program was rendered and there was singing. The affair continued until midnight.

SOME FACTS ABOUT CITY OF QUINCY

A Leader in Industries, Value of Products and Persons Employed

Per Capita Valuation Is Increasing Rapidly

The facts relative to the City of Quincy presented below are from the census of 1910 and other official figures, and there is much of which people of the "City of Presidents" may be proud:

AS AN INDUSTRIAL CITY

The last census showed Quincy to have more industries per capita than Boston. Quincy has 161—one for every 202 people, while Boston has 2,747, one for every 244 people. The industries of Quincy are large industries and employ 5,371—one out of every six of population—while the industries of Boston employ one out of eleven. The value of Quincy products is unusually high,—$8,082,446 annually, or $273.92 per capita; while the Boston value is $274.89 per capita.

SHIPYARD OF WORLD-WIDE FAME

Builders of battleships New Jersey, Rhode Island, Vermont, North Dakota and Nevada for the United States government; battleship Rivadavia for the Argentine Republic; submarines for the United States and Japanese navies; also other warships, passenger steamers and freight steamers. Employs about 4000. Has entertained many notables of the United States and foreign countries.

QUARRIES OF QUINCY GRANITE

The standard for excellence among Granites—Increased demand—Quality improving—Inexhaustible rock ribbed mountains—Takes the best polish. Extensively used for memorials both large and small, to be found in all the large cemeteries of the country, the battlefield at Gettysburg, and other battlefields of the Civil War. Bunker Hill Monument is built of Quincy granite; also the First Parish church, Quincy City Hall, and other public buildings.

A POPULAR SEASIDE RESORT

Quincy with its 23 miles of sea-coast has several attractive summer resorts, many now occupied by all-the-year residents. Houghs Neck and Squantum are both parts of Quincy, and all along the shore of Quincy bay between these two peninsulars are resorts of different names—Atlantic beach, Wollaston beach, Quincy Shore reservation, Merrymount, Adams Shore, Post Island, Manet Beach and Great Hill,—also Rock Island, Bethel Beach, Germantown and Quincy Point, all popular for yachting, bathing and cool breezes. The fact that Quincy has four large yacht clubs shows the interest taken in yachting; all these clubs have clubhouses and many yachts enrolled.

AS A RESIDENTIAL CITY

Rev. A. L. Hudson says—"Of all the cities of the country, Boston stands easily the FIRST in the beauty and variety of its many suburbs; and among them all NONE has so many attractions to offer to the home seeker as OUR OWN QUINCY. Its diversified area, sloping from wooded hill tops with their ocean view over rolling parks and level downs to sweeping shore line of the bay, gives ample scope for each man, according to his taste, to possess the one most desirable building site in ALL THE WORLD."

A WEALTHY CITY

In 1870 Quincy had an assessed valuation of $4,449,500, representing a per capita valuation of $597.89. In 1880 the per capita had increased to $712.21; in 1890 to $817.73; in 1900 to $844.54; in 1910 to $994.33. In 1913 the assessed valuation was $36,716,260, a per capita valuation of OVER $1,000.00. Note the BIG increase in valuation, and the fact that the per capita valuation is nearly TWICE as large. Quincy is 20th in valuation in Massachusetts as well as 20th in population.

RESERVATIONS AND PLAYGROUNDS

Quincy has within its borders MORE in Reservations, Parks and Playgrounds than any other city of Massachusetts. Over 2,600 acres in Metropolitan reservations are in this city, also Merrymount park of 91 acres with a shore front, Faxon park of 27 acres and several ward playgrounds. Dr. Eliot says, "Cities with the most exempt property are the best to live in."

AN EDUCATIONAL CITY

Quincy one of the first to employ a Superintendent of Schools. Under Col. Francis W. Parker our schools obtained a National renown. In 1900 celebrated the 25th anniversary of Col. Parker's election. In 1914 all public school buildings are of brick. Quincy is 8th among the 33 cities in number of grammar school graduates, and 14th in High school graduates when Woodward Institute is included. May honestly be compared with other cities in the Metropolitan district.

QUINCY AN HONORED NAME

It was Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson, a former pastor of the First Parish church, who said:—"Quincy seems the one name congenial to the spirit and history of this locality. Deeprooted in chivalrous Norman life, transplanted here with the first settlers, associated with so much that is fine and high in many who here bore it, and in utterance full and dignified, it tastes of the soil, it seems almost the natural product of environment, and not a title fixed by formal vote. Honored at home, abroad revered, it is a distinction to be called OF QUINCY."

NAMED FOR COL. JOHN QUINCY

"The more the name of Col. John Quincy is scrutinized the more he is exalted. For 21 successive years, that is from 1719 to 1740, he was returned to the House of Representatives with unfailing regularity. His personality, his character and judgment, and his sturdy provincial patriotism so impressed his fellow representatives that they elected him Speaker of the House from 1727 to 1741, a period of 14 years. A tribute from town and Province that stamps him as no common man."

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

Many neighborhoods where each one takes a personal pride in the ppearance of his own home, and co-operates with others.

MODERN CONVENIENCES

Reference might also be made to our public conveniences:—abundance of Metropolitan water, Metropolitan sewer system, auto fire department, permanent police department, electric lights and gas in all parts of the city, nine electric car routes, good train service, excellent banking facilities, daily and weekly newspapers, city hospital, public library, etc. etc.

A PATRIOTIC CITY

With Adams and Hancock as Revolutionary statesmen Quincy early became distinguished. She sent to the Civil war one of the FIRST companies of MINUTE MEN. The first call of Lincoln was issued unexpectedly April 15, and the next day Co. H, Fourth Massachusetts Volunteers, reported in Boston and left for Fortress Munroe, and was mustered into service April 22. FIRST soldier killed in engagement was from Quincy. Sent 954 men to Civil war although population of town was then only 6,800. Erected a Soldiers Monument as early as 1868. In the war with Spain, a majority of the members of Co. K, Fifth regiment M. V. M., were from Quincy. Flag today honored and revered.

BECAUSE OF ITS REMARKABLE GROWTH

In 1875 Quincy was a small town with a population of less than 10,000. We have not only made rapid gains but we have PASSED SEVERAL OTHER TOWNS AND CITIES in the race. A good index of progress. In 1880 Quincy was 29th in population in Massachusetts; in 1885 we had moved up to 27th place; in 1890 we had jumped to 23d; in 1895 to 22d; in 1905 to 21st; and the last census in 1910 showed us No. 20, with a population of 32,642, which has since been increased to nearly 40,000. A rapidly growing city is always a good place for business.

WOMEN'S CLUBS FLOURISH

Prominent in the civic work and social life of Quincy are its Women's Clubs of earnest, able, self sacrificing women, who esteem it a pleasure to work for the uplift of the city and its people. These include the Quincy Women's Club, Wollaston Women's Club, Squantum Women's Club, Riverside Women's Club, Lady Associates of Houghs Neck, Young Women's Club, King's Daughters, Women's Relief Corp, Quincy Catholic Club, Hospital Aid Association, Day Nursery Association, and many others.

A CITY OF CHURCHES

The number of churches in the city is a surprise to everyone, but with two or three exceptions all are flourishing and doing the work of the Master. There are seven Congregational, including one Swedish and one Finnish; four Catholic; four Methodist, including one Swedish; three Baptists including one Swedish; three Episcopal, including a Swedish Lutheran; two Unitarian, two Presbyterian, two Hebrew, one Universalist, one Christian Science, and other mission churches. Many of these churches are free from debt and constantly making improvements.

MANY GENEROUS BENEFACTORS

Few cities have been so favored as Quincy in endowments which are almost without limit, and meet many requirements: an institute for the education of girls, a City Hospital, including the Rice pavilion and a Nurses' home, two large public parks, a beautiful Public Library building, and funds for schools, charity, etc.

JUST A FEW WORDS HISTORICALLY

While Quincy has so much to talk up without delving in history, she has much in history to make her proud, being the birthplace, home and burial place of two Presidents of the United States; the birthplace of the FIRST Vice President; the birthplace of John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, who was the FIRST Governor of Massachusetts under the Constitution; the site of the FIRST incorporated Railroad in the United States. The birthplaces of the Presidents are preserved today as show houses, also the Quincy mansion owned by the Colonial Dames, and the Church of the Presidents now known as the First Parish church.

ITS MEN AND WOMEN

High average in personal character of those who make up the population—industrious, ambitious, generous, loyal, patriotic and God fearing.

IS WAITING FOR THE CALL

Mr. Bates Will Run for Mayor if Citizens so Desire

The Daily Ledger is informed that Gustave B. Bates is a candidate for mayor. That is tentatively a candidate. The certainty of his candidacy rests entirely with the citizens of Quincy. If they desire him in this role he believes that they will make their feelings known in such a way that there can be no mistake as to the call.

He promises to make a campaign for the office that will be unique in many ways, but perhaps most unique in that he will take the people into his entire confidence and tell them just what he intends to do and how he intends to do it.

Mr. Bates thinks, and says that from some things that have been said to him a good many people have just his view-point, that there are many matters which can and should be remedied, but he believes that if matters are to be changed a start should be made with a few of the many glaring short-comings and not attempt at the outset and at once to do all the necessary things that must eventually be done, but which must come in orderly progression.

Mr. Bates further says that he has absolutely no desire to hold office; that he does not care for the emoluments or the ceremonials of any office, but, he does care for the opportunity to be a help in making municipal matters more conformable to right standards and that is the sole motive for his candidacy.

He states he will not stand in the way of any other man if subsequent events should show that someone other than himself would be more adaptable and in such case he would do all in his power to further the interest of such a candidate.

Mr. Bates further said to the Daily Ledger that he did not wish to make the fight alone, but that a strong councilmanic ticket should be nominated and together they would canvass the city and try and awaken an interest and an understanding of city problems He says that he knows there is considerable uneasiness in the city, but that unless the reasons for this uneasiness can be collated and from this a working basis developed no more can be accomplished this year than in other years.

But just now Mr. Bates is waiting for an expression of opinion as to the merits of his candidacy and until this opinion is strongly evident he will not go ahead. If however the written and spoken encouragements which he has already received is supplemented by a generally favorable response he promises a construction platform of municipal reform that will certainly interest the people of Quincy.

ARTHUR SIBLEY.

Seated within sight of the sanitarium where Mrs. Sibley ended her earthly journey, in my vacation leisure I am paying my deferred debt to the memory of her husband, a good man and true. If we live in deeds, not years, he measured up to the full requirements in his lifetime. I am interested in what others might say in their eulogy, but in the retrospect I enjoy what I knew of him in our intimate relations.

The story of his Civil War service has been well written. An error crept into the narrative of events leading up to this. It was Robert Lincoln whose college friendship secured for Mr. Sibley the memorable interview with the President and the naval appointment which resulted. How these two college students Lincoln the freshman and Sibley the junior, became intimate would make a most interesting story. The younger fellow envied the upper classman his skill as an oarsman and instructed by him he became an adept in the use of an oar.

Omitting Mr. Sibley's valuable service to his country it goes without saying that with the Lincoln "pull" at the close of the Civil War, he might have become a member of the large army of minor officials at Washington whose job was a life tenure. Of his business experience though it did not spell success, it can and should be said that he came through without the smell of fire upon his garments, retaining the high respects of his associates.

It fell to my lot to make use of his remarkable ability along other lines, and my lament is that he could not have devoted his life to charitable and philanthropic work, for which he was pre-eminently fitted. The cold facts which gave Mr. Sibley the chance to display his genius along these lines are these. A certain woman whose zeal outran her discretion, the widow first of a Confederate soldier and later of a Union soilder, conceived the idea of founding a Home for aged persons, chiefly old soldiers and their wives and widows. If well know gentlemen who lent their names to the enterprise had taken sober second thought the plan might have been nipped in the bud. But the Home was started with something of eclat and at one time had about seventy inmates. Though each of these had personally, or through friends, paid in an average of $300. the scheme was financially unsound and increased suffering was the result. The founder dominated her Trustees, but one day awoke to the fact that she had more than three score aged persons on her hands and no money. She made a desperate effort to escape the last ditch with failure staring her enterprise in the face.

Meanwhile influential friends of some of the inmates had formed a corporation to do similar work on a business basis. They builded better than they knew in that their Home could become an asylum for such as might have been left in the lurch when Batterman Home went to pieces. And yet someone was needed to place the victims of the wreck where they would not suffer. A council was called to devise ways and means for accomplishing this. Boston faced a scandal of great magnitude. Expert advisers could devise no solution of the problem. I had persuaded Mr. Subley to become Managing Director of the Mount Pleasant Home meanwhile, and he proved to be the man of the hour. His patience, tact, and genius bridged over what seemed to be an impassable gulf and sixty-five persons were rescued from a most deplorable condition and this without overtaxing the Mount Pleasant Home. If I were writing an extended biography of Arthur Sibley a proper sense of proportion would impel me to devote a major part of it to this remarkable affair.

His end came suddenly but found him prepared. It should be said "Lives of good men all remind us We can make our lives sublime."

I commend the life of Arthur Sibley as a profitable study for the younger generation of today.

ARE TIED FOR FIRST PLACE

Tuesdays Game in the Ward Two Playground League

The Red Sox, Tigers and White Sox teams of the Ward two playground are in a triple tie for first place in the league.

On Tuesday the White Sox beat the Tigers 8 to 4. Weinhouse pitched a good game, getting 11 strikeouts. The feature play was by Wester who made a pretty stabb of a drive in back of second base and pulled it down. The score by innings:

Sox	0	0	3	2	3	—8
Tigers	0	0	2	0	2	—4

Batteries—Weinhouse and Gallagher; Ryan and Stitt.

Gamble of the Washington school team, pitching for the Ward two team in the playground league, got 14 strikeouts in five innings Tuesday at Wollaston but when the game was called on account of the rain in the fifth the Ward 5 team was leading 5 to 2. Men safe on errors in the third, followed by a safety and a two bagger caused the damage.

PLAYED IN HARD LUCK

The base ball team of the Quincy police has finished its schedule and the postponed games will not be played because they would make no difference in the league standing.

Quincy lost six and took one game, their victims being the Newton team which plays off this week with the Lowell aggregation for the championship of the state. The team this season was a decided improvement over the one of last year but played in hard luck. A similar improvement next year should place them among the top liners.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

If you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

AN APPEAL FROM BRYAN

Carranza and Villa Are Requested to Unite For Peace

Washington, July 22.—The United States, through its consular representatives, appealed to General Carranza and General Villa, in the interest of patriotism and permanent peace in Mexico, to bury their personal differences and work in harmony for the establishment of a new government.

It was a personal appeal from Mr. Bryan, but reflected the apprehension of the Washington government, lest a division in the ranks of the constitutionalists upset expectations of peace at the very moment when Provisional President Carbarjal was ready to transfer the government at Mexico city to a new administration of constitutionalists.

WHALE MEAT AS FOOD

Consul at Vancouver Says It Would Reduce High Cost of Living

Washington, July 22.—As a means of reducing the high cost of living, R. E. Mansfield, American consul general at Vancouver, B. C., suggested in an official report to the state department the use of whale meat.

The use of whale meat, he said, would build up an important industry, as the supply is obtainable in unlimited quantities and the whale meat, he said, is palatable and healthful.

Mansfield suggested that the salmon canneries of the Pacific coast might add the business of canning whale meat when the salmon catch has been canned.

KRAFT BOUGHT FOR NEWARKS

Threatened Strike of Baseball Players Is Averted

NASHVILLE TO RECEIVE $2500

Baseman Around Whom Trouble Centres Will Receive $150 More a Month—Ebbets Assumes Responsibility For Settlement Which Appears Satisfactory to All Concerned

New York, July 22.—There will be no strike of baseball players in the two major leagues. The Kraft case, basis for a strike order issued by the Baseball Players' Fraternity, was settled by the Newark Internationals agreeing to buy Nashville's interest in Kraft.

Announcement to this effect was made by Charles H. Ebbets, owner of the Brooklyn Nationals and a large stockholder in the Newark International league club.

At the time of Ebbets' announcement the American league magnates were in session, having been called together by President Johnson to determine upon a course of action in case the players in the two major leagues should obey the strike order.

Ebbets announced that Nashville had signified its acceptance of Newark's proposal and that Kraft would report to the Newark team at once. Kraft has been under suspension for more than five weeks, ever since his refusal to report to the Nashville club.

In settlement of all claims on Kraft, the Nashville club is to receive $2500, Ebbets announced.

"I made this arrangement without either request or instructions from either the American or the National league," Ebbets said. "I acted entirely upon my own responsibility. I have not been in communication with Dave Fultz, either. Doubtless, however, he as well as everybody else, will be pleased with this settlement of the situation."

Ebbets was asked if the National league had "backed down."

"No," he replied. "If anybody has backed down, I have. I accept the responsibility for the whole thing."

Kraft will not suffer in any way financially, Ebbets continued. He will be paid his Newark club's salary of $450 a month ($150 more than the Nashville club was permitted to pay him) for the entire time that he was under suspension and for the rest of the life of his contract.

"I settled this case myself because I did not want to see trouble between organized baseball and its players," Ebbets said. "Of course, I realize that this settlement will be construed practically as a victory for the fraternity, inasmuch as they got everything they asked for."

David L. Fultz, president of Baseball Players' Fraternity, expressed gratification at the outcome of the case.

"If the purchase is a bonafide one and the Newark club intends to use Kraft, we are satisfied," he said. "So far as we are concerned, under these conditions, the incident is ended."

The league heads remained in conference some time after announcing the disposition of Kraft. It was reported that the prolonged session of the magnates after the Kraft case had been settled had to do with disciplinary measures which it was said were being considered against John Henry of the Washingtons and Ray Collins of the Boston Americans, who, with Fultz, comprise the advisory committee of the Players' Fraternity, because of their defiance of the league in the strike threat.

VICTORY FOR FEDERALS

Injunction Restraining Chase From Playing With Buffalo Is Dissolved

Buffalo, July 22.—Another legal defeat was sustained by organized baseball when Judge Bissell granted the motion of the Federal league to vacate the injunction of the Chicago American league baseball club which restrained Hal Chase, who jumped the White Sox, from playing with the Buffalo Feds.

A month has elapsed since Chase jumped the Sox. Shortly after this Chase was enjoined from playing and he has been out of the game since.

DUE TO "LACK OF HOSE"

Summer Girls Blind Firemen While Property Is Destroyed

Hammond, Ind., July 22.—Ten summer girls from Chicago, who wore daring one-piece bathing suits, swarmed out of Lake Michigan at Miller's Station and looked on while flames attacked Conner's general store.

The volunteer fire department looked on, too. Conner addressed a letter to the town mayor, blaming the presence of the stunning, stockingless bathing girls for a $5000 fire loss.

In his official report the chief of the department declared his inability to get the fire under control was due to "lack of hose."

WILL MINE THE AIR TO WRECK AEROPLANES.

Device of American Inventor Will Be Tried Out by European Powers.

A bomb hooking device, in many respects similar to a fishhook, by means of which a military aviator can angle for and destroy the most powerful leviathan of the air, and a system of pendent bomb units similar to submarine mines are soon to be tested out by the United States, England, Austria and Russia.

The inventor of the devices is Joseph A. Steinmetz of Philadelphia, an automobile and motorboat manufacturer and vice president of the Aero Club of Pennsylvania. Within a few weeks Mr. Steinmetz will sail for Europe to demonstrate his inventions. The United States government also has made overtures for tests at Sandy Hook and Governors island upon his return in the fall.

The invention provides easily movable contact bombs in the vicinity of the area to be protected. These bombs are connected with a wire to a box kite or a captive balloon of about six feet in diameter at a relatively great height so that an aeroplane striking laterally against the wire deflects it, thereby drawing the bomb to itself and exploding it.

The fishhook bomb scheme is intended as an offensive device. The bomb is suspended from an attacking airship by a long wire like a fish line. Before passing over a hostile dirigible or airship the bomb is reeled out by gravity. Using the enemy as a resistance body over which the wire is pulled permits of a run out of a thousand feet or more before the fatal charge is exploded into the gas bag or the aluminium framework.

FINDS WILDEST SAVAGES.

British Captain So Characterizes the Daflas Tribe of Northern India.

There is a "River of Doubt" outside of Brazil. Before the Royal Geographical Society of England Captain F. H. Bailey, whose earlier stories of the Can-po or Upper Brahmapootra—the "mystery river" of Tibet and far northeastern India—are known to geographers, gave an account of the more recent exploration of 380 miles of that great stream. One hitherto "unconsidered trifle" discovered by the travelers was a peak 24,460 feet high. It will be called Gyala Peri on the new map of the unknown land. Captain Bailey says of the Daflas, a savage people of that region:

"They are the wildest wild men I ever saw. They had never heard of white people. They knew nothing about India. They would not accept money for their honey. They appeared to be rather afraid of it. They wanted nothing but white beads and salt. They dress their hair by tying it in a knot over the forehead, through which a brass or bamboo pin about a foot long is passed horizontally. In this is often a tuft of palm leaves."

TALKING MACHINE IN SUBWAY.

Paris Clothes and Chocolates Advertised In Big Bore In French Capital.

The latest advertising scheme in Paris, recently launched in the depths of the subway, adds a new terror to underground travel. An elegantly dressed person, appearing at one of the main subway stations during rush hours, carried a large leather case, apparently containing phonographic apparatus.

He touched something at the end of the case and a strident metallic voice of the talking machine began to recite a poem celebrating the artistic cut and perfect finish of somebody's clothes. When that was over the waiting passengers were adjured in the same tones of metallic thunder to buy a certain brand of chocolate.

Lynching Record Lower.

Records kept by the statistical division of Tuskegee institute show that twenty lynchings occurred in this country in the first six months of this year. This is four fewer than in the same period last year, and sixteen under the figures for the first half of 1912. Only one of the victims of lynchers this year was white. Two of the negroes were women.

WILSON ORDERS PROSECUTION

Will Be No Further Dallying With New Haven Railroad

CIVIL AND CRIMINAL ACTIONS

Attorney General Instructed to Begin Proceedings at Once—Correspondence Indicates That Mellen's Indictment Will Be Asked For—McReynolds Backed by Cabinet

Washington, July 22.—Attorney General McReynolds was upheld in his handling of the New Haven situation at a meeting of the cabinet. He explained in detail just what he has done and the steps he had been forced to take.

It is understood he frankly stated that certain directors of the New Haven had tried to secure immunity by making promises to carry out to the most minute degree the demand for dissolution of the holdings of the corporation which made it a monopoly throughout New England, but that he had refused to bargain.

He also said he believed it would be necessary to push a dissolution suit under the Sherman law, inasmuch as the directors have gone back on their promise voluntarily to dissolve the trust.

The long continued effort to untangle the New Haven railroad without litigation came to an end last night when President Wilson, in a letter to McReynolds, directed the institution of a Sherman law suit to dissolve the system and ordered that the "criminal aspects of the case" be laid before a federal grand jury.

The president's approval of the course mapped out by the department of justice means that the civil suit will be filed against the New Haven in the United States court at New York at once.

The attorney general also immediately will direct United States District Attorney Marshall at New York to summon a grand jury, and the task of laying evidence before that body on which to ask for criminal idictments against officers and directors of the New Haven under the Mellen management will be begun as soon as possible.

T. W. Gregory, the special assistant in charge of the New Haven case, will have full charge of the civil suit, and before the grand jury will be aided by E. M. Swaker, an expert from the interstate commerce commisssion, who has helped him in the preparation of the evidence. How many indictments will be sought was not divulged, but it was plainly indicated in correspondence made public that McReynolds expects to ask for a bill against Charles S. Mellen, former president of the New Haven.

The most significant fact in connection with the proceedings was said to be a statement which McReynolds gave out when the interstate commerce commission began its New Haven inquiry. In that statement he warned the commission to consider whether immunity might be given certain men if made to testify as to their actions as directors of the road. The names he mentioned were:

Charles S. Mellen, William Rockefeller, George M. Miller, Charles F. Brooker, Edwin Milner, Lewis C. Ledyard, George F. Baker and Edward D. Robbins.

In addition to directing suit, the president in his letter to McReynolds declared that the decision of the New Haven directors not to keep their agreement to dissolve peacefully had caused him "the deepest surprise and regret," and that their failure "upon so slight a pretext" was "inexplicable and entirely without justification." The department's course, he said, was just, reasonable and efficient, and should have resulted in avoiding suit.

Accompanying the president's letter, the department made public correspondence between the attorney general and President Wilson and between the attorney general and President Hustis of the New Haven.

ROBINSON'S RECORD

Question as to Its Admission In Norton Murder Trial

Boston, July 22.—A feature which looms large in the affairs of Lawrence Robinson, on trial charged with the murder of Police Inspector Norton, will be settled when Judge Keating decides whether or not Robinson's alleged crimes in Michigan can be introduced into the present case.

This was the main point in yesterday's developments of the trial. The lawyers strenuously fought the measure and last evening Keating announced that he would take the question under consideration for the night and return his decision today.

THE LOST ART

The Stupendous Task That Was Set a Lover

By CHAUNCEY THOMAS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

"No, sir!"

"But why not?"

"Young man, I have not the slightest objection to you personally. Your family, your character, are above reproach, but financially, my dear sir, financially. Ethel has been raised accustomed to everything that money can buy, and to be candid, my dear sir, what have you?"

Old Herrington, millionaire president of the First National bank, tilted back in his chair and gazed, half in compassion, half in amusement, yet with a show of regard, at the doleful young man before him.

A fine, strapping speciman of manhood Philip Stone was, but just now he appeared all dejection.

"Then I cannot marry Ethel?" he asked ruefully.

"I am very sorry, but I must say no."

"But could I had I the money?"

"Well, my boy, that is another question, but I am not certain. Yes, I will say positively that if you were able to support her you would have my full consent."

"How much?" asked the young man laconically.

"Good! That sounds like business," responded the banker, bringing his feet flat on the floor. "Well, I think I would risk you with a hundred thousand dollars."

"A hundred thousand suns!" muttered the young fellow. "To tell you the flat truth, Mr. Herrington, I have nothing but an income of less than a hundred dollars a month from my salary."

"My dear Stone," said the elder man earnestly, "I admire you immensely, and of all young men I know I would choose you, if you had the money, for Ethel's husband. Now, Ethel is barely eighteen and can well afford to wait. You may have her on this condition:

"WHAT HAVE YOU?"

I will advance you $1,000 in cash today upon your promise not to see Ethel for a year, and if at the end of that time you have not $100,000 in cash or the prospects of it, which I alone must decide, then you will never see Ethel again. On the other hand, if you have the money you may marry her a year from today if she is willing."

The young man looked up eagerly.

"Yes, Philip, that is what I mean."

The young man gazed thoughtfully at the carpet for many moments.

"Agreed!" he said, putting out his hand.

With one hand the banker took the proffered grasp, while with the other he reached for his private check book.

Three minutes later Philip Stone was bidding his all but to be father-in-law goodby. In his pocket was a check for $1,000.

"Tell me, Mr. Herrington, what shall I do to get this fortune and Ethel within a year, for get both of them I will?"

"Go to the ant, thou sluggard," smiled the old man, with a kindly grasp of Philip's hand that took all the sting out of the epithet.

Philip Stone left the bank and sought the seclusion of a quiet, sunny nook in the park. For awhile he sat and planned and schemed, but to no purpose.

Then the old man's advice came to his mind. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard," and as a forlorn hope he began idly to watch a city of insects at his feet.

Red ants they were, busily engaged in repairing the havoc wrought by a passing hoof.

Then an inspiration thrilled him. With his penknife he carefully tore the ant hill to pieces, stepping here and there and brushing vigorously to avoid the stings of the brave little home defenders. In his handkerchief he placed a double handful of the white larvae—embryonic ants.

Gently knotting the handkerchief together and putting it carefully in his coat pocket, he caught the nearest cab and gave the order, "Keen & Bishop, Broadway, bullion dealers."

An hour later, when he returned home, in one pocket was a pint of red ants' eggs, in the other a thousand dollars in the shape of six pounds of unrefined gold dust.

Then he sent Jones, the man of all work about the house, to the florists for some very fine earth free from all sandy particles.

On Jones' return he took a peck of this earth and sifted it through a fine sieve; then with it he mixed the gold dust and put all but a handful in a glass jar.

He carefully deposited the ants' eggs in the jar on top of the earth and over them lightly sprinkled the remaining handful. This done, he put the whole in the sun.

In a week they came, several hundred vigorous young ants with unheard of energy for ant hill building, but with no material with which to work except the grains of gold dust scattered throughout almost microscopic dust. But, heavily handicapped as they were, they went vigorously to work.

In two weeks a tiny hill, a genuine ant hill of pure gold, was erected within the jar. Philip watched this process with huge delight. Soon that golden hill was alive with white larvae, eggs of a new generation. When they, too, had become ants he destroyed the hill and once more mixed the gold with the dust. Again the little workers sorted it all out and built a hill of gold.

Before long the house was full of white larvae, which in time turned into a third generation of ants accustomed to handling nothing but gold.

But this was not his plan. Six months had passed, and still he was no nearer the hundred thousand dollars or Ethel than before. But he had gained this much—he had a plan that, to his mind, at least, promised certainty, so that day he applied for a two weeks' vacation from the fruit house where he was bookkeeper.

Incidentally he asked for and received a pass to Arizona and return. Then away to Arizona went Philip Stone and his trained ants.

He returned to New York, went quietly to work recording peaches and prunes and said nothing.

Five months passed, still no $100,000. But two weeks more were left when Philip appeared one morning before Mr. Herrington, the millionaire banker.

"Well, Philip, my boy, have you got it?" asked the old gentleman eagerly.

"Don't know, sir. That is what I want you to go and see," responded the young man.

"Where?" asked the elder.

"Arizona," said Philip.

"Mining?" said the old gentleman.

"I don't know, sir," said Philip. "I want you to go and see with me. Will you?"

The old man rubbed his bald pate reflectively.

"Philip, you're a genius. My physician told me I needed a change of scene and a higher altitude. We'll go to Arizona. Be ready to start in the morning."

A week later Philip Stone and Banker Herrington stood on the high arid plateau thirty miles west of Phoenix, Ariz.

"Philip, my boy, I don't see any mine here," said the old gentleman. Then he looked at Philip suspiciously.

"Perhaps the poor boy is unbalanced," mused the old gentleman, "brooding over all this. I was cruel to him, for he is not the kind and he is not the breed to plan anything irregular."

"No mine?" said Philip, with the sunshine in his face.

"No mine," repeated the old gentleman.

"Look at your feet, sir," suggested Philip joyously. "You're standing in an ant hill, sir."

Banker Herrington looked instantly at his feet, at the ant hill. It was a mound two feet high of pure gold.

"There's Ethel, sir," said Philip.

The old gentleman gazed with open mouth. He reached down, took a handful of sand—gold it surely was, half a bushel, and easily $100,000 worth.

He reached over and took Philip by the hand.

"Allow me to congratulate you, Philip, my boy; you have done it. Tell me, how did you find it?"

"I find it, sir? I didn't. I did it by forcing three generations of hill building red ants to collect gold dust when they'd nothing else with which to build. I bred into them the instinct to collect nothing but gold. Six months ago I brought them out here and planted them. You see the result."

The old gentleman saw and then and there gave Philip his full consent. On their pack horses they took that ant pile to civilization.

Philip had won Ethel. The old man was delighted. Philip was still more delighted, but the most delighted of all was Ethel.

Banker Herrington enthusiastically proclaimed that he had the most intelligent son-in-law in existence, for the supply of ants is unlimited, and in the sands of Arizona are undoubtedly billions of gold dust that, for lack of water, can never be washed.

But in destroying that golden ant hill for the sake of his gold they had unwittingly killed all the trained inhabitants.

Philip could never again breed another hill like them. It is now one of the lost arts.

But the motto engraved on the Herrington-Stone escutcheon reads, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard."

For the Children

Misses West and Carhart at Tuxedo Horse Show.

At the horse show recently held at fashionable Tuxedo the members of the pony class attracted considerable attention. This class was made up of young folks who exhibited their favorite ponies and horses. Arrayed in the latest riding and driving habits, they presented a very smart, not to say sporty, appearance. Society's little folk are familiar with ponies from their infancy and as soon as they are able to sit in the saddle are taught to ride. They are also schooled in handling the reins and are altogether thoroughly versed in horse lore. The two little girls whose portraits are shown above are Misses J. Warner West and V. Carhart. They were exhibitors at the show.

An After Dinner Trick.

Tommy Brown, a little boy, tried this trick on some of his friends and was thought very clever. Just when dinner was nearly over Bridget quietly announced that the grocer must have forgotten to bring the nuts and raisins. The company were all more or less disappointed, but Tom, the host, seemed very angry at this omission. Impatiently he said to Bridget, "Fetch me the dish in which the nuts and raisins should have been served." Pretending to be very much annoyed, he flourished his own napkin vigorously over the empty dish; then, carefully lifting the napkin, much to the surprise of all, the dish was revealed full of nuts and raisins.

This is how Tom managed the trick. He had got Bridget to sew two napkins together all around the edges and to slit one across the middle. The space between the napkins made a bag, into which Tom had supplied the nuts and raisins. He held the bag between his knees, with another napkin over his lap. While he was gesticulating in apparent disappointment, he had quickly changed napkins. The trick was a clever bit of homemade slight of hand and all shouted at Tom's cleverness.

"Elephant Tag."

In playing the game called "elephant tag" each child takes the name of an animal—dog, cat, kangaroo, panther or anything he wishes, but one must be the elephant, and one must be the mouse. The elephant tries to catch all the animals except the mouse, and the mouse tries to catch the elephant. If the elephant touches one of the animals that animal must go into the menagerie (probably the front yard). He tries to get all the animals into the menagerie without getting caught by the mouse. If there are many children there can be two elephants and two mice. If one of the elephants is caught he is put into the menagerie, too, but he can be rescued if the other elephant touches him.

A "C" Game.

Each question can be answered by a word ending in "cy."

A stately C? Aristocracy.
A royal C? His excellency.
A deceptive C? Fallacy.
A criminal C? Piracy.
A much desired C? Currency.
A clever C? Policy.
An exclusive C? Privacy.
An aromatic C? Spicy.
A tempting C? Delicacy.
A merciful C? Clemency.

An Intelligent Horse.

A story is being told of the intelligence of a horse belonging to a rustic Scotchman of Ardow, Mull. It lost a shoe and, managing to get out of the field where it was grazing, traveled a considerable distance to a blacksmith, who was astonished to find the horse standing in front of the door holding up a foreleg. The horse was shod and galloped back home quite contented.

Teddy and Miss Rainy Day.

When Teddy meets Miss Rainy Day
He wears a rubber coat of gray.
A drooping hat protects his head,
A big umbrella's o'er him spread,
And on the street he seems to be
A blot of black and gray to me.

But if I peep beneath the rim
Of his umbrella, black and grim,
I find the loveliest surprise
Of laughing lips and merry eyes.
And I laugh back and quite forget
The grayness and the rain and wet.

And 'tis the very selfsame way
With what we call Miss Rainy Day.
Behind her cloak of dismal clouds
Gay little sunbeams lurk in crowds,
And if you look for them you'll see How nice Miss Rainy Day can be.
—St. Nicholas.

SAVED HIS WILD GOATS.

Emperor Maximilian Was Lucky In Having a Wise Adviser.

Of the great Emperor Maximilian it is told that once when traveling far from home he wore so sad an expression that a courtier asked him what affairs of state could cause so much concern. The emperor replied it was not the state but ibex he was thinking of. In his absence he feared a certain poacher, whom he mentioned by name, would make havoc with the herds. Could the courtier propose any preventive?

The astute person thus addressed immediately suggested a letter to the poacher's wife, signed and sealed by the imperial hand and offering her the best silk dress that could be obtained if the emperor's wild goats were not touched during his absence. And such, alas, is the influence of the sex that history hints the bribe was more effectual than "all the king's horses and all the king's men" in the way of forest rangers and wood reeves.

Maximilian had a preserve of these animals in the Tyrol near the Aachen sea and has left on record some interesting notes and illustrations of the sport he enjoyed among them. One picture represents him in a boat on a lake assisting to catch an ibex in a large net, which may have been good fun, even if it were scarcely sportsmanlike. It was Maximilian, too, who boasted that on one occasion he killed an ibex at 200 yards with a crossbow when his companion had missed it with a gun. Seeing that the "fire tubes" of the period were about the slowest and most awkward weapons any one could imagine, the feat was scarcely to be wondered at.—London Globe.

END OF THE EARTH.

That Great Tragedy May Be 2,000,000 or 95,000,000 Years Away.

Scientists tell us that life on the earth began about 2,000,000 years ago. It has generally been accepted that life will last for 95,000,000 years.

Ninety-five million years is a fairly long time. None of us who are alive today need worry about what will take place 95,000,000 years hence. Even the most altruistic can scarcely be inspired by love for an inconceivably remote posterity.

But the French savants are altogether disturbing. Here comes one, M. Verronet, who says that the earth will permanently freeze within the next 2,000,000 years and that life will vanish. This is bringing the tragedy nearer home. We would gladly accept the older reckoning.

Verronet places mankind of today about midway between the beginning and the end. He computes that in the future life will exist as long as it has already existed. He specifies only one forty-eighth as long a life as those who have studied in the past.

There is only one consolation to be derived from the Verronet reckoning. As far as the influence of today is concerned 2,000,000 years is as good as 95,000,000. In either event those who are comfortably laboring today cannot expect to be lovingly remembered when the cataclysm of ice makes the earth a barren wilderness.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

An Eye to the Future.

The late Wilson Barrett possessed a valuable old dresser who had the good fortune to be built on the same classic lines as Barrett himself, and accordingly inherited his master's cast-off clothes. One day something had upset Barrett at rehearsal, and he lost his temper. Every one stampeded out of his way. He strode into his dressing room with flashing eyes, and so indignant did he feel that he incontinently dashed his hat with great violence into the corner of the apartment. The faithful dresser, who knew every mood of his master, was quite unperturbed. He merely exclaimed, in bland tones, but with a touch of reproach:

"Here, steady, gov'nor; I've got to wear that some day!"

Francis Bacon.

The death of Francis Bacon was caused by his devotion to the cause of research and scientific investigation. During one of his excursions to the country he conceived the idea that animal substances may be preserved by means of snow. He procured a fowl and conducted the experiment himself. A severe cold was the result, and in his already enfeebled condition he was not able to withstand it and died of what we now know as bronchitis April 9, 1626, aged sixty-five, at the home of Lord Arundel. He was buried in St. Michael's church, St. Albans.

Innuendo.

"Is dem you all's chickens?"

"Cohse dey's my all's chickens. Whose chickens did you s'pose dey was?"

"I wasn' s'posin' nuffin about 'em. But I will say dat it's mighty lucky dat a chicken won't come a-runnin' an' a-waggin' its tail when its regular owner whistles, same as a dog."—Washington Star.

Settlement Work.

"Did you hear about Muggins taking up settlement work?"

"Yes. He usually works his creditors for 50 cents on the dollar."—Town Topics.

One Redeeming Feature.

The fool men have a lot of faults. But, bless their hearts, they don't kiss each other when they meet on the street.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Criticism often takes from the tree caterpillars and blossoms together—Richter.

HOOKED A LARGE COD

A monstrous cod, weighing 17 pounds, was caught off Fort Warren Tuesday by Mrs. Charles P. Gould of Adams street, one of a party of seven that had chartered Harvey's motor boat for the day.

The fish was hauled aboard after much difficulty and on being opened three baby lobsters were found. One was partially digested.

The fact that the cod makes war on lobsters has not been generally known along the New England coast and probably explains why there is a scarcity of live ones in Boston harbor.

SALEM TAX RATE LOWERED 50 Cts

Announcement Comes as a Surprise to Citizens

Although devastated by fire the tax rate of Salem has been reduced. The assessors this morning announced that the tax rate this year would be $20 a decrease of 50 cents over last year. This is the first city thus far to announce a reduction in its tax rate. Owing to the many additional expenses that the city has had to bear on account of the fire the announcement was a great surprise. The board also announced that it had a plan for the abatement for burned out property. There would be no abatement however to property owners who were fully covered by insurance.

CITY SQUARE BURGLARY

Burglars cleaned out the tobacco ease and all the stock at the Coliseum alleys some time during the night. They departed the way they came, through a window in the rear of the building which was forced.

The safe in which the proceeds of the day's business was locked, was not touched although there are some signs that point to an attempt to change its position.

The proprietors of the alleys, Clayborn and Forbes, also conduct a place on Summer street, Boston, where a safe was blown and several hundred dollars taken two months ago.

HUGGER CASE DISMISSED

The Jack the Hugger case went skyrocketing in the District Court this morning when Lorenzo Martino, charged with assault and battery on Miss Mary Feely of Irving place and Mrs. J. M. Wilson of Coddington street, was dismissed and the man who has been in the custody of the police for 60 hours was given his liberty.

Martino was arrested Sunday evening on Washington street after he was pointed out as the man alleged to have followed Mrs. Wilson to the door of her home. The Feeley complaint was lodged against him after his arrest.

Several witnesses appeared against the man alleged to be the Hugger but their evidence was not strong enough to warrant a conviction in the opinion of Judge Pratt who is presiding today in the absence of Judge Avery.

Doubt.

Barker—"Congratulate me, old man! My best girl has just accepted me over the telephone!" Candidus—"Are you sure she understood what you were saying?"—Judge.

SILENT CITY IN AGE OF RUBBER

Sir Henry Blake Sees Visions of Noiseless London.

SURE RELIEF FOR BRAIN FAG

Furniture and Wall Paper of Rubber Shown — English Writer Facetious Over Tremendous Possibilities—All That Is Required For Utopian Age Is Elasticity of Mind.

Sir Henry Blake, president of the fourth international rubber and allied industries exhibition, looks forward to a day when the streets of London will be paved with rubber and the brain fag consequent upon the incessant noise of main thoroughfares will be minimized to the advantage of hundreds of thousands of people.

When the exhibition was last held in London, three years ago, the idea might have been dismissed as utopian, but since then such striking progress has been made, both in the manufacture and the use of plantation rubber, that Sir Henry Blake's vision may well be within the range of practical politics.

The exhibition itself, which has the official support of more than forty governments, affords abundant evidence of the progress which has been made. One room—a writing room—is completely furnished in rubber. The walls are covered in rubber skillfully disguised as wall paper, the pictures are mounted in rubber frames, and the carpet is of the same all conquering material. The tables and chairs, the blotters, paper weights and letter racks, the inkstands and the penholders are of rubber, while the electric table lamps are of vulcanite.

Curtains of Rubber.

The housewife will probably examine the window curtains carefully, for here at last she will imagine the utility of rubber breaks down. But as a matter of fact the daintily designed curtains, like everything else, are of rubber, attached to rubber rings and hung on a rubber pole.

The debt of the sportsman in almost every kind of field game to the grower of rubber is a heavy one, and it will become even more pronounced if the effort to utilize rubber for lawn tennis courts proves successful. A specimen court has been built in the annex at Agricultural hall in order that the experts may test the rubber surface for themselves. The court is made in square blocks of rubber grown on a British plantation, and they have been laid down so carefully that the surface is almost as level as a billiard table.

Wonderful Rubber Age.

So, as Philip Gibbs, writing in the London Daily Chronicle, says, it is easy for the man who will stretch his imagination and give elasticity to his mind to conjure up visions of a rubber age. Working out Sir Henry Blake's leading idea to its ultimate conclusions, one may grasp the full meaning of the future. Disasters at sea would no longer take their fearful toll of life, for rubber built ships might collide with no worse result than a cannon off the cushion.

A thousand accidents of grievous consequence in modern life would be quite trivial. The waiter who spills the soup over one's new suit would merely have to bring a rubber sponge and wipe one's rubber coat. If the fashions of women's frocks changed from short skirts to long skirts they could be stretched as easily as elastic bands, or vice versa. Old clothes, old furniture, any old thing about the house, could be sent to the manufacturers and produced again in the form of motor tires golf balls, hair combs or babies' feeding bottles, according to one's immediate requirements, because rubber never loses its essential qualities and is capable of numerous transmutations.

LOST BABY IN BEAR'S DEN.

Child Saved From Exposure by Warmth of Bodies of Animals.

An old black bear and her two cubs played the part of mother and playmates for Baby Ball, the two-year-old son of a farmer living near Fifield, Wis. The little boy was found nestling close to the cubs in their brush bed, hidden in a patch of briars.

He disappeared from his home, and a countrywide search had been carried on to find him.

"The big doggies play, but Baby's hungry," was the greeting the little fellow gave the men who found him.

The child was starving, apparently, but was not suffering from exposure. It was evident to the men who found him that he had been kept alive by the warmth of the bears' bodies.

The child wandered from the home of his parents. A patch of cloth from the blue rompers he wore was found on a bush near the roadside. Investigation and a search further into the woods disclosed the bears' den and the child sleeping with two cubs.

Air Man Rises 26,246 Feet.

A new world's record for altitude for aeroplane was established at Leipzig by Heinrich Oelerich, a German aviator, who rose in his biplane 8,000 meters, or approximately 26,246 feet—only 154 feet less than five miles. The world's record for altitude, 6,000 meters, or approximately 21,654 feet, had been established only on July 9 at Johannisthal by Otto Linnekogel, a German airman.

CONTRACT AWARDED

This morning after a conference with Mayor Miller, Commissioner Brown awarded the contract for building the four room addition to the Houghs Neck school to E. H. Sears. Mr. sears was the lowest bidder his bid being $17, 344 or $552 lower than the second lowest bid.

Mr. Sears was the lowest bidder his ton builder and will commence operations immediately. Bids for the heating and ventilation system will be opened later this month.

SAFETY FIRST CAMPAIGN TO BE INAUGURATED

President Powell Plans to Safeguard Hazzards at Fore River Shipyard

Yellow New Danger Color; New System Goes into Effect Aug. I.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation, commencing Aug 1. will inaugurate a "Safety First" campaign and it is expected that within a year the hundreds of men employed at the shipyard will go about their work with thoughts of the safety of themselves and fellow workmen.

One of the slogans on which the campaign will be waged will be "the carelessness of an employee may bankrupt a family, or leave cripples in its wake."

It is hoped to cultivate the army spirit so that men will play safe themselves and not hesitate reporting a careless workmen and in so doing, feel they are protecting themselves and others.

The company is a member of the National Council of Safety, organized to progress along such lines..

In most plants where a campaign for safety is being conducted rules are in effect that men must act "safety" and those who indulge in unsafe practices are warned while some violations mean immediate discharge.

An investigation of most of the accidents in the shipyard has shown that 80 per cent of them have been due to carelessness. Some attempt has been made to minimize them but it has only been a drop in the bucket to what is contemplated.

One of the most serious problems that the company will have to contend with will be the safe guarding of stagings. They have in mind the equipping of all stagings with lifelines, the issuance of orders to keep it free and clear from pieces of junk, bolts, hammers or other weighty materials used in construction that may be kicked off by careless workmen. No company has mastered staging protection as yet but the Fore River company hopes to be able to produce results through this system.

Until three years ago, it is a matter of record, men in the joiner shops lost on an average of one joint a week. To help prevent it a circular planer head was adopted and since that time there have been very few joints lost.

The company intends to safeguard all of the hazards in the yard and a new color scheme will be introduced. Red, which has been in service for years, has been outdistanced by progress because in certain angles of the sun it cannot be plainly distinguished.

Another reason is that there is a quantity of red lead and red paint used at the shipyard and it has become customary for some men to pay no attention to that color.

Furthermore, medical science has demonstrated that people who are color blind cannot see "red" and it is an accepted fact that 12 per cent of the people are color blind.

Yellow and blue, the last colors lost to vision, will be substituted in its place and all safeties and all hazards will be painted in the new danger color so attention will be drawn toward them.

It was only a short time after President Joseph W. Powell assumed office that he gave the safety of workmen his earnest consideration, but because his new duties were pressing it was impossible for him to plan a method. With the launching of the Nevada he felt free to devote his attention to it and he delegated Dr. W. E. Blanchard of the Red Cross hospital at the shipyard and Joseph M. Larkin, supervisor of the apprentices, to make a tour of the large manufacturing establishments in the east to make a study of the problem.

In their travels they met Dr. M. Patterson who has charge of safety in 12 different plants and who gave them valuable assistance in compiling data.

They reported that the United States Steel Co. in 14 years reduced the number of accidents to a minimum and that other plants that were not as well off as the shipyard in safety contrivances have attained remarkable results and cut accidents 70 per cent.

The campaign will be directed by the safety committee of the yard, which will include President Powell, Treasurer James A. Sedgwick, Manager H. Gerrish Smith, Joseph M. Larkin and Dr. W. E. Blanchard.

They will act on hints put in the many suggestion boxes to be placed in the yard and workmen will be encouraged to point out hazards.

Money will be paid for suggestions that will aid in making the campaign a vigorous one and three men from each department will serve as a yard sub-committee to watch over the safety of the department. These men will each wear a gold button. The foreman of the committee will hold a permanent appointment and two others will serve from three to six months, and at the expiration of their term they will still be considered members of the committee and can then, as well as the active members, receive suggestions from workmen.

Acts of bravery in saving loss of life or any quick thinking that will prevent loss of life or injury will be rewarded by the payment of money.

It is the practice in some plants in the middle west to examine men before they are given employment and this is contemplated for the near future by the company officials so charts will show the actual condition of men and infirmities then cannot be made a basis for claims for compensation.

It has practically been decided that all men at work in the yard will also be given a physical examination. It is known that some men have tuberculosis in its first stages. They will be assisted in every possible way and also through the accident association benefits and everything to aid a man in regaining strength will be done.

On Sunday, Aug. 9, an illustrated lecture on "Safety" will be given in the Kincaide theatre, at which time will be shown three films demonstrating the value of and the way to prevent some accidents. This will be repeated as frequently as the public demand it.

And, in the opinion of the School committee, it would be advisable to talk safety to children, to point out the danger of jumping on moving cars and wagons, or of crossing the road without first looking to see if the road is clear, arrangements will be made for Dr. Blanchard or Mr. Larkin to place the proposition before them.

The officials at the shipyard do not pose as philanthropists but they do believe in humanitarian methods. This is the basis of their purpose in operating in this new field of endeavor which in itself will return dividends by excusing liability in accidents when due entirely to criminal negligence or to the man himself, and it will also offer workmen a better chance of obtaining damages for injuries because the many safeguards that will be installed will mean that if accidents do occur most of them will result from defects within the province of the company.

MORGAN WINS $5 GOLD PIECE

Mr. Morgan of 23 Saville street is the lucky winner of the Merchants' five dollar gold piece, offered by the enterprising merchants of this city. July 20 Secretary John O. Hall, of the Board of Trade drew the name, and paid the gold. On account of misunderstanding as to time of meeting not enough merchants convened last Wednesday to authorize further publication of the "Bargain Day" circular for this week. General sentiment however has vested itself upon Charles E. Decker, with T. L. Williams as acting treasurer to further promote the circular, but for lack of time it is impossible to print and distribute the vast circulation in time for next Monday's bargains.

The advertisers are still interested and will continue, the new management taking immedate effect. The circular will be issued for Aug. 3. It will comprise four pages, have commercial reading matter, and be most attractive to the housewife. Prizes will continue but will be divided among five lucky winners instead of one as heretofore.

CONDITION IS SERIOUS

Reports of the condition of the man injured at the Italian picnic in Fallon's grove, Braintree, on Sunday afternoon when nearly 50 indulged in a riot, are to the effect that his condition is not promising.

According to stories told by men who took part in the affray the man was struck over the head with a beer bottle and has a fractured skull.

The man is confined in a West Quincy house said to be on West street, near the corner of Hayden street. As far as is known no physician from Quincy is treating the man although he is said to be receiving professional attention.

LIQUOR CASES ON TRIAL TODAY

Evidence of Detectives being used to Convict

The liquor cases on trial in the District Court are being gradually disposed of and this morning Judge Avery and Associate Justice Pratt are conducting the hearings.

New evidence has been introduced by a third detective, who worked in conjunction with the two others who appeared in the cases heard Wednesday afternoon.

Frank Zattolli, counsel for the defendants, is strongly contesting their evidence.

The case of Cologero Maligria was continued until next Wednesday when a fine of $75 will be imposed. During his hearing an attempt was made to involve one of the detectives in a love affair.

Salvatore Nigrella withdrew a plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty and accepted a fine of $50. He paid $15 on account and was given time to pay the balance.

Salvatore Renna was fined $50 and the sentence was vacated and a continuance granted so sureties could be secured for an appeal.

During the hearing Justice Pratt smiled as he ruled on the objections of defendants counsel and Mr. Zattalli addressed the court by saying "Of course you can laugh at it, you are not defending these poor fellows."

Shortly after Bartolli, one of the men operating for the police took the stand and while testifying looked in the direction of an associate operator.

Zatolli stepped to the witness stand and in warning him to use care said "never mind looking over there, I understand telegraphic eyes."

Cologero Alfano's case was continued at which time a fine of $50 will be imposed. When the case was closed counsel for the defense asked the justice not to be prejudiced in the case because the defendant retained an attorney to protect his interests. He intimated that the police department objected to it and Inspector Goodhue, prosecuting for the government, retorted no such feeling existed. He asked for a heavy fine and said that while it was in his opinion not the first offence committed by the defendant it was his first time he had been caught.

Fines of $50 were today imposed on Stephen Murachino, Alfonso Farnardo, Joseph Mula and Salvadore Nigrela and were paid in part by the defendants.

The Farnardo case which was tried before Justice Pratt proved to be an easy conviction when the defendant and his chief witnesses contradicted each other on the method of payment, both denying that the defendant had taken money, he claiming it was his daughter and the witness that it was his son.

The case of Joseph Mula was handled by Frank Tirrell who argued the testimony presented by the police was unreliable. Judge Avery stated the operators were from an established detective agency and then Mr. Tirrell commented on their appearance, but Judge Avery said they had the appearance of the ordinary Italian.

The case of Rosario DiBelli, where the police met with some resistance is now on trial and continuances to Sept. 1 were granted to Tony Olivera and Mike Dundria.

The flying horses and roller coasters were going and were kept busy all the afternoon.

In the ball game, single men vs. married men, the single men won with the score 9 to 5.

Through the courtesy of the management free rides were enjoyed on the merry-go-round and the roller coasters.

It was 7.30 before the cars left the park for the return trip and notwithstanding the activities of the day and the fatigue of the crowd in general, they managed to keep up a lively racket all the way home, when they arrived shortly after 9 o'clock.

With an ideal day a good sized crowd, plenty of activities, and no accidents, the picnic was voted a great success.

JOHN TYTLER.

The funeral of John Tytler was held Tuesday from his late residence at 87 Trafford street and was largely attended, among those present being a large delegation from Clan MacGregor O. S. C. of which he was a member. The services were conducted by Rev. Benjamin A. Willmott of the Bethany church. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. There were many beautiful floral tributes.

NO STONE THROWN.

Friends of Charles Stewart deny the report that Stewart struck Joseph Berlucchi with a stone in the mix-up Saturday. No stones were used, but Berlucchi may have struck on a stone when he fell. Berlucchi has left the hospital. The case will come up again in court on Friday.

NEW INDUSTRY TO LOCATE IN QUINCY

Application Made This Morning for Permit to Erect 3 Story Mfg. Building

Company Will Give Employment to a Large Number of Hands

It will doubtless be news to many that a new industry is about to locate in Quincy which will eventually give employment to a large number of hands. That the industry is to locate here is an assured fact for the company made application this morning to Inspector of Buildings Merrill for a permit to erect the first of a series of manufacturing buildings for the conduct of their business.

The new concern is known as Means and Thatcher Inc. and their purpose is to manufacture paints. The location of the new manufacturing building is near the corner of Newport avenue and West Squantum street, near a group of manufacturing buildings already at that point.

It is understood that the company has secured a large tract of land for its business and the building to be immediately erected is the first of several others of a similar size.

As stated above, application for a permit was made with the Inspector of Buildings this morning and the permit will doubtless be issued as soon as he has time to go over the plans filed.

The plans call for a building of second class construction, that is of cement, brick and wood. The outer walls to be of cement and brick, and the floors of heavy plank.

The building is to have a frontage of 73 feet and a depth of 30 feeet and will be three stories high with basement.

In the basement will be located the boiler room, store room, etc. The first floor is to be practically one large room. On either front side are stairways leading up and down, while in the centre front will be a large elevator connecting all floors.

The second floor in addition to containing a large room has several smaller rooms, or offices. That is there will be the general office, a directors room, two private offices, the necessary toilet rooms, etc.

On the third floor is one large room and one or two smaller rooms. The estimated cost of the present building is about $12,000.

The situation is an ideal one for a manufacturing industry. In the first place it is close to the main line of the railroad, so that it can readily be connected with a spur track. It is also within a few minutes walk of the Norfolk Downs station. Furthermore it could without much difficulty be connected with the street railway line on Squantum street, in case the company desired to ship its product by trolley freight.

There are several large business industries in this immediate vicinity, among which might be mentioned the Boston Gear Works, The Pneumatic Scale plant, The Norfolk Iron Co., Wollaston Foundry, etc.

There is also plenty of available land within easy walking distance, which is a most desirable residential section and doubtless the advent of a new manufacturing industry giving employment to a large number of hands, means an additional demand for houses, and consequently the erection of more dwelling houses.

White clothes for men in summer are growing popular. It only takes two or three freshly laundered suits to keep looking clean for a day.

Considering the frequency of steamship accidents, prudent travellers keep their life preservers on and sit in the life-boats.

The government has ordered thirty tons of candy for the bluejackets, in spite of the fact that the typewriter girls in the departments at Washington probably want it much more.

Secretary McAdoo reports a surplus of $30,000,000, although Congress has done its best to keep the money from lying idle in the treasury.

If more pains are not taken to teach the boys arithmetic, few of them will be able to compute baseball percentages accurately.

Nothing makes a boy enjoy a good deep swimming hole better than the consciousness that mother is worrying about him at home.

WORKING IN THE GARDEN.

The word "backyard" today conveys suggestions of disorder, old tin cans, ashes heaps. Yet probably three-quarters of the house-holders who have premises of this character today, worked as boys in their father's gardens. The maintenance of these plots created some degree of order in the backyard, and a successful little crop cut out an important bill of expense.

The difference is not always that the modern man is less industrious than his father was. The former generation had less to occupy its mind. There were no moving picture shows to attend, no trolley or automobile rides to take. There were fewer newspapers and magazines. There was often nothing to read in the house but heavy old books that had been perused a dozen times.

Under these conditions life was simpler. More primitive pleasures satisfied people. The boy who once found genuine pleasure in seeing the beans and peas reach maturity, now spends his half holidays watching the ball team polish off its adversaries. It takes a philosophic habit of mind to get close to the garden soil in these days.

READING THE ADVERTISEMENTS.

It used to be an old time joke that some people were so fond of newspapers that they even read the advertisements.

That might have been a humorous remark years ago. At that period some merchants would run an advertisement for a whole year unchanged. Clothing dealers would start in advertising January first with a notice of overcoats for sale, and would still keep it running in July.

Today people read the advertising as a matter of business. The women read it just as a farmer reads his price current, or a banker reads the financial news. They thereby get ideas as to how they can save on household or personal expenses. Probably a majority of the women turn first to the advertising of their favorite merchants, and then read the news later.

The men also read the advertising carefully. Even if they have no business enterprises of their own, they are interested in the advertising as a reflection of the business life of the town.

Hence it is perhaps unnecessary to suggest to the readers of this newspaper that its advertising columns are worthy of the most careful attention. They are giving that attention to these notices now.

Still it is worth while to say that there is no time when advertising is worth more careful attention than in midsummer. All kinds of merchants have the proposition before them of cleaning out their stocks before cool weather comes on. That takes a good deal of publicity. The goods won't move of themselves. The public must be told about them and in some detail.

The story of what is happening in the stores will be found in the advertising columns of this newspaper. Most of the newspaper readers are seeing it, and it will repay their closest scrutiny.

BANDIT'S DREAD OF PUNISHMENT

Leads Him to Take His Own Life in Jail Cell

SLASHES THROAT AND WRIST

Steel Shank of Shoe Used by Robinson, Who Was on Trial For Alleged Murder of Police Inspector Norton —Dramatic End of Case Which Has Stirred New England

Boston, July 23.—Lawrence Robinson, on trial for the murder of Inspector Thomas J. Norton, committed suicide in his cell at the Charles street jail, slashing his throat and cutting his left wrist with a steel shoe shank which had been sharpened at one end. He was discovered by Turnkeys Greer, McIntosh and Phillips, on what is known as the "clean-up round" of the cells.

Twice within the hour the round of the cells had been made. On the first, when the prisoners get their coffee, no attention was paid to Robinson, as he had said he preferred not to be waked for the coffee.

The second round is the "count-up." If a prisoner is asleep when the turnkey passes his door, the officer does not wake him, but merely sees that he is apparently all right.

Turnkey Phillips made this round and passed Robinson's cell, No. 31, in the east wing—on what is known as Murderers' row. At that time Robinson was lying on his cot in a natural position, his legs slightly drawn up, and his right hand under his head.

Later the turnkeys came again, this time for the buckets which stand in each cell. Robinson was still in his cot, and covered with a blanket. As Phillips opened the cell door, all three officers saw there was a great stain of blood on the floor.

One of them ran to notify Sheriff Quinn, and the others hastily uncovered Robinson. They found him literally soaking in blood which had covered him, and saturated the whole breadth of his mattress. It was at once apparent that the man was dead, though he had been dead only a few minutes.

Beside Robinson in the cot lay a slender strip of steel, three-quarters of an inch wide and three inches long, and as thin as a safety razor blade.

It was the steel shank of a shoe, and one end was polished by friction on some hard substance, probably the floor or wall of the cell. The shank had been sharpened carefully and was razor-sharp.

The bandit was game to the end. He calmly lay back on his cot after cutting his throat and wrist and bled to death without making an outcry. He died within twenty to forty minutes after inflicting the wounds.

Robinson planned to kill himself several days ago. This was indicated by two letters dated Saturday which were found after his body had been discovered. One of the letters was to John Quinn and the other was addressed to his mother and wife, both of whom are in the west. His wife is said to be dying of tuberculosis.

In his letter to the sheriff the gunman said he didn't want to go to the electric chair "for the satisfaction it would give some people," or be confined in jail for a long term. He said the latter would be worse than death.

His last thoughts were of his wife and mother. Monday night he broke down and cried when Quinn told him he had some letters from his mother for him.

Robinson's letter to his wife and mother was full of pathos. He referred to his wife as "the loving sweetheart of my boyhood days—the only woman I have ever loved." He said that if there is another world he would meet them there.

The case against Robinson closed officially when Judge Keating discharged the jurors who had been trying Robinson following the presentation of evidence by District Attorney Pelletier to prove the defendant was dead.

Robinson, pickpocket and gunman, was born thirty-two years ago in Washington Courthouse, O. While quite young he ran away and joined the Buffalo Bill show as an usher. From usher he became a "peanut butcher," and the life of the "open road" was a short step.

Before he had attained his majority he established a reputation as a pickpocket. Robinson looked for large game and acquired a reputation of being a gunman.

Standing 5 feet 11⅝ inches and weighting 172 pounds, composed entirely of bone and brawn, he was strong physically, and in the underworld was considered a "bad man" and one capable of taking care of himself in the roughest company.

The crime for which his arrest was made in Boston, and which resulted in the death of Inspector Norton, occurred Sept. 18, last year, at Grand Rapids, Mich. Robinson was accused of entering the jewelry store of John J. Thompson in broad daylight.

He had a companion with him, and by the time the police reached the shop, after Robinson and his pal left, there were three dead men on the floor and the showcases had been looted, thousands of dollars' worth of diamonds having been taken.

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

How to Buy Cheap and Nourishing Meat.

A ROAST of beef costing $1 or $1.50 at the present time is not much. A hungry and healthy family will probably finish it in one meal. You can still enjoy good roast beef and surely for less money, only buy the right cut.

Nine out of ten customers ask for the first cuts of the rib roast. Of course, they are the most expensive cuts. The fifth, sixth and shoulder ribs are hardly in demand, and the butcher has a hard job selling them. But these end ribs or shoulder ribs of roast beef are not only considerably cheaper to buy, they are richer in nourishment and food value. When buying one of the three or four ribs of beef—say, for instance, weighing five pounds—you will find that you hardly have sufficient meat left after it is carefully trimmed and the bone taken out. The difference in price between the first cut on the rib and the last two cuts is at least 6 cents a pound, and when you ask for a shoulder rib roast ask the butcher to insert a piece of suet in the center of the roast or, if he has time, to lard it with thin pieces of fat.

Another good piece of meat for roast beef is the top sirloin, which is not so cheap, but it is recommended because it has no waste.

The next important item on the meat bill is chops—either lamb, pork or veal chops. Lamb chops, however, are the kind mostly demanded, and, of course, the demand is for loin and rib chops, the most expensive.

There is the same solution as with steaks—buy shoulder chops; they cost less and are sweeter. This same principle applied again to pork chops. The shoulder chops are very sweet and tender, and the butcher will sell them for legs, but very few people know about them.

FOR THE ILL.

How to Prepare Mutton Broth For a Sick Child.

Very often a doctor calls for mutton broth for a sick child, and this must be made separately and very carefully by the mother or nurse unless the cook happens to be familiar with the process, as not only is the meat to be perfectly fresh, but it needs special cooking. The easiest way to make it is to procure a pound of the neck of the young mutton. Tell the butcher what it is for, and he will know what to give you if he is reliable. It should be fresh cut and include the bones, but must not look stale or dark or have a heavy odor.

Put this in a quart glass preserving jar filled nearly to the top with cold water with a good sized pinch of salt. Put on the lid of the jar and stand it in an ordinary iron pot about half full of cold water and place the whole back on the stove, where it can come to a slow boil. Let the water in the pot simmer gently for three hours, replenishing it as it cooks away. This will steep the contents of the glass jar. Do not allow it to cook hard, and do not handle it roughly or stand it on a stone or other cold surface when at length it is ready to come off the fire, for any one of these things will crack the jar and spoil the contents.

Remove the lid from the jar and strain the contents into a bowl to cool. When cool, cover and place in the refrigerator for several hours until all the fat has risen. Skim the fat off carefully and heat the broth as needed. This amount will make two cupfuls, which will probably be sufficient for one day.

It is better to prepare fresh daily for every day's use.

How to Clean Hardwood Furniture.

Hardwood furniture, contrary to popular belief, may be cleaned very nicely at home if the housewife cares to take the pains. A solution of two heaping tablespoonfuls of salsoda to a quart of warm water must be made first. Then work may be begun on the furniture. The principal thing to remember in cleaning hard wood is that success is to be found only in cleaning a small piece at a time and doing the work rapidly.

The mixture must be put on with a well soaped toothbrush. The place must then be washed immediately with cold water and dried with a soft cloth. When one whole chair has been completed it should be rubbed with a mixture of two-thirds raw oil and one-third turpentine, with a little salt.

How to Save the Dining Table.

Folding asbestos sheets for use under the tablecloth are now selling for $2.75 and upward, according to size. In washable covers the prices begin at $3.75.

These are large enough for half a round table, but if you want square sheets they must be made to order. They are worth the cost because they save the necessity for mats and save also many an ugly stain from hot dishes on a polished table. Small asbestos mats for use on the bare table cost 8, 10 and 15 cents apiece. These may be placed inside double cases of home manufacture escaloped round the edge.

CRASH OF TROLLEY CARS

Four Passengers Are Killed and Twenty-One Injured

Westport, Conn., July 23.—Three persons were killed outright, another died later, and twenty-one were injured as the result of a head-on collision here last night between a train of three trolley cars, carrying many Sunday school picnickers, and a trolley freight.

The accident occurred at a sharp curve on a down grade, and it is said both were traveling at a high rate of speed.

The three trolley cars, coupled together, carried 279 persons, who were returning from the annual picnic of the Point Union Mission Sunday school of East Bridgeport.

The dead are Andrew Fisher, aged 16; Raymond Fuller, aged 12; Frank Nagry, aged 11, and Mabel Cleveland, aged 21, all of Bridgeport.

According to Medical Examiner Powers the accident was caused when the motorman of the picnic train, Harold Nathan, put on all speed while going down hill, in an endeavor to reach a siding before the arrival of the trolley freight, which he knew was coming.

The trolley freight ploughed through the first picnic car, which was virtually smashed to pieces.

SALEM RELIEF FUND

Former Mayor of City Urges Publicity In Its Expenditure

Boston, July 23.—That there should be greater publicity in the matter of the expenditure of the Salem relief fund was strongly urged by David Little, former mayor of Salem, who came to the state house to interview the governor.

That the general public is entitled to know just what ratio the cost of administration bears to the relief given, and just what is being done with the money raised for the benefit of the Salem sufferers is the contention made by Little.

Little suggested that facts relative to the relief work be made public at least once each week. At present, he said, it is impossible to get any satisfactory information with respect to the expenditure of the Salem relief fund.

Roosevelt Asks Hearing on Plan to Pay $25,000,000

Washington, July 23.—Assuming full personal responsibility for all acts in connection with the acquisition of the Panama canal zone, former President Roosevelt asked that he be given a hearing before the senate foreign relations committee on the Colombian treaty proposing reparation.

Roosevelt wrote Chairman Stone he wanted to tell why he opposes paying $25,000,000 to Colombia for the partition of Panama.

Stone said he had not set a date for another meeting of the committee, but that he would try to get the members together soon. The text of Roosevelt's letter he would not make public, because it was addressed to the committee.

HUSTIS' STATEMENT

Denies New Haven Road Violated Agreement With Government

New York, July 23.—Despite the decision of the federal government to proceed with suits against the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, the directors yet hope that a way will be found to accomplish the dissolution of the system by agreement with the government, President Hustis declared in a statement last night.

e Hustis asserted that the New Haven had not refused to carry out the agreement reached with the federal authorities some time ago. The demand of the government in connection with the Boston and Maine stock, he declares, was a change in the original agreement.

PHOTOGRAPHER DESCRIBES GRAPHICALLY VILLA'S MARCH

James Ware of American Press Association Sees Him at Close Range.

Constitutionalist Soldiers Worship Their Leader to the Point of Veneration.

EVERY day for seven weeks in the historic march from Saltillo to Torreon and then on to Zacatecas James Ware, staff photographer for the American Press Association, personally met General Villa, head of the victorious rebel forces in Mexico, and had a splendid chance to make a close study of the general and his manner of conducting the war that meant the elimination of General Huerta. Although General Villa likes all Americans, he took a particular fancy to Ware, and the war photographer, who recently returned from the scene of hostilities, admits that he obtained confidences which he could not be expected to violate. He declares that the people of the United States cannot imagine the idolatrous worship bestowed on Villa by the men under him, and this worship is earned by the rebel general.

"There is no denying the fact that Villa personally is almost wholly responsible for the remarkable succession of victories by the rebel forces," said Ware. "His very presence among the men is an inspiration. All that one has to do is to mention his name to any of the thousands of men in his command. They simply go into ecstasies over him. His word is absolute law. There isn't a man in his army who at the word would not lay down his life for his commander. I never saw or expect to see again such complete admiration. It is not admiration; it is veneration. Villa is regarded as the savior of the peon. He is the George Washington of Mexico.

"I joined General Villa at Saltillo. When I got there the first day I was escorted before the rebel general. He greeted me pleasantly and wanted to know just what my business was. I told him that I represented the American Press Association, that furnished many of the leading newspapers of the United States with illustrations of the big news events of the world.

"'Ah, America—it is such a fine country!' said Villa. 'I will do anything to help you out. But,' he added, with a fine sense of humor, 'I'm afraid you will never get any pictures of a rebel defeat. There won't be any.'

Bitterly Opposed to Drink.

"Villa then took me among his officers and introduced me and asked that I be shown every courtesy. I had been with him only a few days when I learned that he would not stand for any drinking among his men. It appears that he had read of the edict against drinking in the United States navy, and he told me that it impressed him deeply. At any rate, drink was positively forbidden. From what I was told by officers under Villa, many previous revolutions in Mexico had lost out because of the fondness of the revolutionists for mescal, a strong brandy.

"When we entered the town of Gomez Palacio, Villa gave orders that every saloon in town should close at once. The second day we were there I was with Villa when he left me abruptly, pointing to five of his men who were coming along one of the side streets much the worse for liquor. Villa came upon them suddenly and demanded to know where they got their drink. At first in a maudlin way they sought to deceive Villa. When he sternly commanded them to tell the truth there was no more evasion. They said that they had bought mescal at two saloons on a street about half a mile from Villa's headquarters. Villa sent two of his trusted officers there. When they came back they had in custody the two guilty saloon keepers who had been reaping a harvest while all the other saloons in town were closed.

"They were brought before Villa and admitted that they had received the order to close their saloons under penalty of death. Villa said a few words to his officers, and the two guilty saloon men were taken out and shot. There were mighty few liquor violations after that. Villa seemed to dread mescal more than he did the bullets of the federals.

Villa Thorough Politician.

"While on the field Villa is a fiery soldier, who cares little for his life, as evidenced half a dozen times while I was with him. When the army is inactive he shows in a hundred and one ways that he is a diplomat and thorough politician. He has a wonderful memory. When I have been out walking with him it is no exaggeration to say that he addressed at least 200 soldiers by their first names. He would make a wonderful politician in the United States. And you ought to see some of these privates swell up after Villa had shaken them by the hand and said a few words of cheer. That man was worth two men in a battle just then.

"I'll not soon forget the night that we arrived at Zacatecas. Villa's men had fought that night until nearly midnight. In the center of Zacatecas was a great elevation held by the federals. It gave them a peculiarly invulnerable position. On this elevation the federal gunners had a powerful searchlight. As soon as Villa's men would show themselves on the plain below they would be blinded by the rays of the searchlight and raked by federal guns. Villa took in the situation right away and gave orders that there should be no more night fighting.

Conference at Midnight.

"At midnight there was a momentous conference in General Villa's car. Villa outlined his line of battle. He divided his forces so that they surrounded the city. Practically half the night was occupied by the silent marching of the different divisions of the army as they took up their respective positions. They all had been distributed by 4 o'clock in the morning and were given a chance to get a few hours' sleep. The federal forces did not know what to think of the silence. We learned later that they had heard of the arrival of Villa and were fearful of what might happen. But they thought their position on the elevation in the center of the city was impossible of capture.

"Villa's orders were to begin a general attack from all points at 10:30 o'clock in the morning. At that hour there were bugle calls, it seemed, from everywhere, and Villa's entire army sprang to the attack. It was splendidly timed. There wasn't a hitch. From their eminence in the center of the town the federals poured forth a killing fire. But when their fire was directed at one point of the compass on came a great horde of Villa's men from another. Wherever a line seemed to be wavering Villa was there. He was galloping all over the battlefield, shouting encouragement to his men. But they did not need the word of encouragement. His presence was enough. And he never once lost his head. Once when there was a slight lull in the fighting he galloped to the spot where I had my camera trained.

"'You ought to get some good pictures today, Mr. Ware,' he said. 'But remember what I told you—you will never get a picture of a rebel defeat.'

"Shortly after 2 o'clock, when the fighting had continued for four hours, there were signs of weakening on the part of the federals. Their fire wasn't as steady as it was in the early part of the engagement. Villa's men were getting closer and closer. About 3 o'clock there was almost a complete cessation of firing by the federals.

"'We have them beaten,' said one of Villa's staff generals. 'Let us take the hill now.'

Deception Is Detected.

"'They are trying to fool us,' said General Villa after training a powerful fieldglass on the hill. 'There is a big force there yet.'

"Villa then adopted a ruse to draw the full fire of the forces on the hill. He sent a body of men as if to make a sortie for the hill. He had guessed right, although it cost him the lives of many of his bravest men. They drew a galling fire which proved that there still was plenty of fight left in the enemy.

"Shortly before 4 o'clock Villa decided on a combined attack. He was convinced that the federals did not have much left. He went about his men whispering words of cheer and told them to get ready for a final rally. I never saw such fighting. In less than half an hour Villa's men were on top of that hill and in complete possession of the town."

Ware speaks highly of the treatment by Villa of all Americans. He also declared that the rebel general has a heart as big as an ox; that he is as charitable as he is brave.

"Naturally Saltillo, Torreon and Zacatecas were in awful condition after their capture," said Ware. "In Saltillo Villa distributed 250,000 pesos to poor women. In Torreon he daily distributed 4,000 pesos to those in need. All those made prisoners were pressed into service. They were given the option of taking employment at rebuilding the wrecked cities or joining the army. A great many chose the latter, and they made splendid soldiers. There were certain prisoners of war who were put to death, however. They were the bandits known as the red flaggers and the Colorados. They had taken part in previous revolutions and proved traitors, having joined Huerta's army. They were shot without any ceremony."

Ware Escapes Death.

Ware related some of the hardships he had to endure to get his pictures. He was in the saddle for five days and rode 200 miles on a hand car at night in the rain. On his first trip to Zacatecas he slept in a box car.

"On the way to Zacatecas," said Ware, "we learned that the first train of Villa's army had been wrecked. We made 250 miles to the front in a gasoline car. On our way back on a hand car at night we had to duck outgoing military trains. We didn't know what minute we would meet with a head-on collision. It was a ticklish ride. In the yards at Torreon we ran into an open switch, which threw us twenty feet. The general manager of the telegraph service, who was on the hand car with me, was badly hurt. I got away with slight injuries. Between Torreon and Gomez Palacio we found the bodies of four soldiers on the tracks. Evidently they had fallen from one of the military trains and been ground to death. We also found several open switches, which we reported in time to prevent wrecks of military trains. Villa's men are a wild lot, and while on the train they had practiced lariat throwing at the switch bars. They would whirl the end of the lariat around the switch and put it out of commission. It is marvelous that there weren't more trains wrecked."

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

MUSIC.

The name of Ethelbert Nevin is so well known and so loved, especially in Quincy, where he lived many years, that it is with pleasure that we call attention to the following of his musical compositions just added to the library:—In Arcady, Day in Venice, May in Tuscany, Melodies, Sketch Book, Album of Songs, and Water Scenes. These are all in portfolio editions as are also there by Edward Mac Dowell, of which we have the following:—New England Idyls, Sea Pieces, and Woodland Sketches.

The poetical suggestions seen in the titles of the above are also found in the twelve titles of Tschiakowsky's Seasons, while national sentiment is shown in the works of Christian Sinding the Norwegian composer of whose compositions we have Thirty-one Pieces for Pianofort.

"Expressive melody, accentuated by sparkling rhythms, is a distinguishing characteristic" of the works of Mademoiselle Cecile Chaminade, and her Album of Seventeen Pieces for Pianoforte will be appreciated. The Selected Piano Compositions of Johannes Brahms in the Musicians library completes the list of additions to piano music.

The vocal music purchased includes the oratorio Stabat Mater by Rossini; a collection of "celebrated arias selected from oratorios old and modern;" a volume of secular songs by classical composers, for which the name H. E. Krehbiel as editor is a recommendation; while many well loved songs will be found in Modern Song Favorites.

BOARD OF TRADE OUTING.

The annual outing of the Cambridge Board of Trade was held Wednesday at Squantum, the party numbering 100 or more. In the party were Mayor Good and a number of the city officials. During the day there was a series of sports, including a spirited ball game. Dinner was served at the Squantum Inn.

NOTES FROM NARAGANSETT GAIETIES THAT BRING OUT SMART ATTIRE.

The cottage colony has arrived, the Reading Room on Ocean Road, the Hotels and the Sherry bathing pavilion, have all resumed their activities. All signs point to an exceptionally gay season. The Point Judith Club is the scene of numerous outing parties and the lawn of Wildfield Farm is bright every fine afternoon with patrons sipping tea. The motor road to the Country Club is gay with motor parties, and Ocean Road sees as many more en route for the Point, and everywhere at any time of day almost where there is music and a dancing floor the devotees of Terpsichore are footing it in the latest dances.

SMART ATTIRE.

The most popular materials for afternoon wear are crepe, taffeta foulards and organdies, with charmeuse and other satins not by any means out of the running, indeed the prediction is that in the Autumn satin will be leading the procession of smart dress fabrics. Over the lighter dresses light wrays and capes are worn and parasols of striking colors are carried. An especially pretty parasol of shaded silk, was of ordinary shape except that the silk was gathered a little at the tip of each rib. The shading ran from very pale pink at the centre to deep rose at the edge. For general and morning wear the most popular parasol is of pongee with borders three or four inches deep of colored satin. These as a rule have natural wood handles but sometimes enamelled ones are used.

A WELL DRESSED GROUP.

A smartly dressed group having tea the other afternoon on the lawn at the "Farm" attracted many admiring glances. A tall dark young woman wore a gown of heavily embroidered organdie, a large hat of marine blue straw trimmed with green feathers, and a green lined blue cape very short in front and full all round. A young matron well known in society, a costume of Venetian lace, page cape of black satin with white lining collar and black velvet hat with feathers. Another costume was of ecre crepe with waistcoat of black moire. Large black hat trimmed with black velvet leaves and black lacquered daisies.

A young girl—white golfine costume with hat of white straw banded with green velvet, trimmed with field daisies.

LARGE HATS.

One of the surprises of the Summer has been the vogue of very large hats. Those made their appearance at the June Polo Match on Long Island but have since been notably worn in contrast to the prevailing popularity of very small hats.

Watching the polo practice at Point Judith lately a morning frock with smart points attracted attention. Of black foulard spotted and striped with white, this was made up with white Gladstone linen collar, linen cuffs and waistcoat with black buttons. Worn with it was a big crowned, small brimmed hat of black straw having a touch of white in its trimming.

PRINTED STOCKINGS.

Stockings printed with gay flowers, from knee to ankle are worn with white shoes and white frocks. Roses a couple of inches in diameter that nearly cover the fabric of the stocking, daisies and nasturtions are all seen in these novelties.

Black velvet hats either all velvet, or with crown of velvet and straw rims are very smartly worn, while all white hats of satin and straw in similar combination keep their lead. Wing trimmings of black or white, and enamelled flowers and fruit are the preferred garniture. Everything quite stiff in effect, except the cherries, and these are apt to droop in festoons over one ear whether they are black or colored. Yellow cherries on blue straw made an especially fetching combination.

SHOULD MEET WITH FAVOR.

There is talk of an amendment to the federal constitution that ought to meet with favor. This to make it possible for the President to veto any item of an appropriation bill instead of compelling him to withhold sanction to an entire measure when he disapproves of any part of it. Of course the objection to permitting the Executive to pick out portions of an act for his disapproval is that it virtually gives him power to amend, which properly belongs to the legislative branch of the government. But if this power were confined to appropriation bills, this would be no objection for the different items of an appropriation bill are generally each a law by themselves, in the strictest sense.

Giving the president power to select items of the supply measure for veto would put an end to the log rolling practice which is not uncommon in legislative bodies, and the almost equally pernicious practice of attaching riders to these bills.

SINCERE LIFE.

(By C. G. Ames)

Do we turn for satisfaction to our human relationships? They are among our most precious and holy helps. But our fitness to live with others, or to get the good of living with others, depends chiefly on our fitness to live alone. We must be, in order to do; we must have wisdom and love, in order to give them; we must be just before we can put rectitude into conduct. We cannot even speak the truth, as it deserves to be spoken, unless we are true. A wise pagan says, "how much sincere life the gods exact before we can speak a sincere word!"

SAFETY FIRST.

(Salem News)

The running board danger would be nil were corporation rules to forbid riding on this narrow strip. But there is no such rule. On plenty of occasions, these running boards are packed with passengers from one end to the other. The conductor must then practise the arts of the gymnast in collecting fares. It is a poor arrangement all around.

As the Legal Mind Saw It.

In a case heard at the Belfast (Ireland) summons court a a few days ago, in which the complainant was named Fortune, Sir Andrew Newton-Brady remarked to the defendant: "If you stop annoying Mrs. Fortune, misfortune will not follow your footsteps."

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufarturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

"REVELATIONS" DO NOT EXIST

Government Forced to Back Down In Caillaux Trial

EX-PREMIER SCORES TRIUMPH

Alleged Documents Important Enough to Crush Him Are Found to Be a Myth—Duel With Antagonist May Follow Bitter Political Outburst—Receives Ovation Outside Court

Paris, July 23.—Ex-Premier Caillaux was again the central figure in the proceedings in the court of assize, where his wife is on trial for the killing of Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro.

The courtroom was crowded to its utmost capacity in the expectation of sensational revelations arising from M. Labori's ultimatum that he would refuse to plead unless a full statement was made by the government regarding documents which, it was alleged, were important enough to crush Caillaux.

The procurator general said he was authorized by the government to declare that the documents referred to in Tuesday's testimony did not exist. Instead, therefore, of utterly discrediting the ex-premier, the incident ended in his triumph, as his brilliant antagonist, M. Chenu, counsel for the Calmette family, was obliged to acknowledge.

When the procurator general resumed his seat, Labori, counsel for Mme. Caillaux, said: "We consider the incident closed."

Chenu replied sarcastically: "The incident is closed to the satisfaction of Caillaux, but to my mind it was nothing but a clever diversion most opportunely arranged, and I admire the skill with which it was arranged. It has pleased Caillaux to transform a criminal trial into the trial of a political cause. Somehow, as the result of circumstances, we reach this paradoxical issue: That Caillaux comes out of the proceedings with a certificate of disinterested patriotism."

Twice during the session there were exciting scenes. On the first occasion, Chenu having declared that it did not become Caillaux to come there and endeavor to soil the grave which his wife had made, the ex-premier exclaimed:

"Since I must take notice of what this lawyer has said, I will ask him if he will take personal responsibility for his words."

When the uproar which this utterance occasiond had subsided, Chenu replied: "I take the entire responsibility. You cannot menace me here."

Caillaux did not interpose further in the proceedings until Auguste Avril, political editor of The Figaro, in his deposition declared that early in November, 1913, Caillaux had stopped him in the lobby of the chamber and asked how much longer Calmette was going to continue his campaign. He gave an evasive answer, and Caillaux then said to him:

"You know I am a crack shot. I go every day to the shooting gallery and get a bullseye every time."

The ex-premier demanded to be confronted with the witness. The two stood face to face at the bar. Caillaux affirmed that he had no recollection of ever saying such a thing; Avril maintained with equal determination the exactitude of his testimony. Finally the two men withdrew, and the matter resolved itself into a question of reliability.

As Caillaux left the court at the close of the hearing many hands were outstretched to him. He seemed to be deeply touched by these manifestations of sympathy.

A small crowd assembled outside the main gates of the palace of justice to see Caillaux depart. They gave him a rousing cheer, mingled with a few hisses.

Meanwhile, on the opposite side of the palace, a small crowd, waiting in vain to see the ex-premier, began to discuss the case and soon came to blows. It required determined police interference to disperse the rioters.

IN WOLLASTON

Statements of Wollaston Citizens Are Always of Interest to Our Readers.

To many of our readers the streets of Wollaston are almost as familiar as those of our own town, and we are naturally interested to read of happenings there. The following report from a well-known and respected resident will be helpful to numbers of men and women here in Quincy.

P. J. Garrity, National Sailors' Home, Wollaston, Mass., says: "I was so badly troubled by kidney disease that I could hardly work. My back was very lame. It hurt me to stoop over or straighten. The pains never left me, even at night. I could find no position in bed that gave me any ease. I had to get up during the night as often as ten times to pass the kidney secretions. I could see that my health and strength were declining and was at a loss to know what to do, as the various remedies and different treatments I had tried had been useless. Doan's Kidney Pills were strongly recommended to me one day and I began using them. Before I had finished the fourth box, my old-time strength and health had returned."

No Pie Crust Promises

Wise advertisers never make "pie-crust" promises.

They know that to break faith with the public would be fatal—worse than throwing their money away.

That is one reason why advertised goods are more in demand.

People know that there is quality behind them.

They look on them as standards. Any dealer knows that there are more calls for advertised goods than for goods not advertised.

This is especially true if they happen to have been advertised in the newspapers which directly reach the people.

The standard of advertising is more exacting today than ever before. Advertisers are more careful of their promises and more interesting in their text and illustrations.

The world grows better.

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER.

Between Bugles

A Salt Water Romance.

By MATTHEW WHITE, JR.

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

The dressing bugle had sounded some time since, but Dorothy still stood looking out over the sea. She was thinking how unfortunate it was that dinner on shipboard always robbed her of a view of the sunset. She was a good sailor and consequently had no excuse for taking her meals on deck.

"Still, if this were the only thing I had to worry over," she reflected, "I might indeed be a happy woman."

And this was why Dorothy Shaw was a mystery to all her friends. She refused to be happy, though rich.

"Try it yourselves," she would reply to their expressions of incredulity. "Have so much money left you that your every movement is followed by reporters. If you happen to order a different paper on Friday from the one you bought on Thursday you are certain that you will read in all of them on Saturday that you have decided to give a million to the campaign fund."

She felt that she could trust no one. By sorry experience she had learned that wealth was a bait few could resist, and "How much does he or she want now?" was her first thought on the advances of every new friend she made.

Finally in desperation she had taken passage in a slow ship under an assumed name, but even so was beset by the constant fear that some one on board would have seen her picture in the papers when her uncle left her the fortune which was her nightmare. That was an additional reason why she liked to linger on deck after most of her fellow passengers had gone down to array themselves for dinner.

"Oh!"

The exclamation was forced from her by a sudden gust of wind that took her tam on its wings and blew it straight across the gap of lower afterdeck that intervened on the Alicia between the first and second cabins.

The next instant she smiled and barely refrained from applauding. A man standing well forward on the deck had stretched out his hand and caught the truant bit of red worsted as it went whizzing by him.

A half minute later and the two were standing on the neutral territory of the deck below, for Dorothy had descended in order to meet him halfway in restoring her property.

"I'm very much obliged," said she.

"Not at all," said the man.

He was tall and straight and had the clear blue eyes that Dorothy preferred above all others.

She was about to turn back when the other exclaimed:

"Look; there's a whale! He's just spouted. He'll come up again in a minute, if you care to watch. See, where my finger points."

Dorothy certainly did care to watch. In all her crossings she had never seen a whale. Now she was rewarded with a fine view of a large specimen.

As it happened, this one kept on in the direction of the steamer for awhile, and after each spout she felt she must wait and see the next one. And then her companion seemed to know a good deal about the creatures, which he imparted in a voice which possessed for Dorothy an indefinable charm.

Voices were a sort of hobby with her. She often declared that this was the one point on which she was not thoroughly patriotic—she could not bring herself to admire the average American accent.

But this stranger's voice puzzled her. He looked and dressed like one of her countrymen, but he spoke with neither the western bur, the southern twang, the Boston affectation nor the New York flatness.

She did not know until some weeks later that he was English born, but had come to the States as a young fellow hoping for better opportunities to make a living than his mother country afforded him. He was returning to England to claim a sum of money left him by an uncle.

The dinner bugle sounded, and the man, as if reminded by its notes that he belonged in a different atmosphere (the second cabin is called to meals by a plebeian bell), lifted his cap and walked away.

For the remainder of the voyage Sherwood Roberts hung over the back rail to gaze into the swirl of waters surging out from the twin screws and curse the fate that had led to his meeting this pretty woman on the present trip instead of on the one he expected to take a few weeks later.

"I might as well be a thousand miles away from her as in second cabin," he muttered between clinched teeth. "Idiot that I was for coming this way. And to think that within ten days I could lay a fortune at her feet. And the conventions won't even permit that I send her a note to say that this is positively my last appearance in poverty. But perhaps I'll meet her in London."

He never did, however, although he haunted Hyde park and the fashionable hotels after his claim to his uncle's property had been established and he had come into the possession of that which enabled him to dress three times a day.

"I wonder now," he would sometimes ask himself, "if I had put my pride in my pocket and borrowed enough on my expectations to come over first instead of second, would things have turned out differently? She looked as if she didn't mind so very much my having detained her to talk about whales. I wonder if"—

But what was the use of wondering anything about a woman he would probably never see again?

So this Englishman who had lived so long in the States that he could not keep away from them re-embarked for his adopted country in a first cabin deck room and tried to be happy in spite of a handicap that he couldn't forget.

During the first night out it came on to blow great guns. Roberts lay in his berth late, debating whether to get up or not, when suddenly something shot through his open port and hit him squarely in the face.

It was soft and red, with gold threads running through it, and—

"Great Scott!" ejaculated Roberts, starting up in his berth. "Her tam!"

Surely there could not be two of them—at least, he hoped there couldn't. But how had it come into his cabin?

It could not be possible that she knew he was there and had taken this means of apprising him of her presence? Why, she had scarcely spoken half a dozen words to him in her life.

But the cap was hers unmistakably.

He fondled it foolishly for a minute or two and then got up and proceeded to dress with all speed, or at least with as much speed as was consistent with the rolling of the vessel.

All day he haunted the ladies' room and the decks, almost deserted on account of the storm, and had begun to read the cards affixed beside each stateroom door when he suddenly remembered the foolishness of this plan to find a woman whose name he did not know.

"This is simply maddening," he told himself after a day of fine weather and still no sight of the tam's owner. "At this rate she will escape me again."

Then he bethought him of a brilliant expedient.

He took a pen and wrote the following notice:

Found.—A lady's red tam, shot with gold. Owner may have same by applying at cabin 23 between bugles any evening.

This he affixed to the bulletin board in the companionway and that night dressed a half hour before the first bugle sounded so as to be in readiness to receive company during the period named.

But nobody appeared that evening nor the next, and now there were only two days left on the voyage.

He had passed a half hour of impatient waiting in the stuffy stateroom on the third day of the notice, and, quite discouraged, threw open his door to go to dinner, when he stepped squarely into the person who had emerged from her room just opposite in the narrow entryway.

"I beg your pardon," said Roberts, and then he fairly gasped as he realized that the other person was the lady of the tam.

"I have something of yours," he blurted out—"that red tam you lost once before."

The girl's cheeks suddenly took on the hue of the cap that hung over Roberts' berth.

"Oh," she said, "was it your port I flung it into? I didn't know. It started to blow away again that first morning, and I thought I was tossing it into my own cabin."

"And you've been just across that five foot space," Roberts rejoined, "while I've been ransacking the ship for you—to restore the tam," he hastened to add. "Didn't you see the notice on the bulletin board?"

"No. This is the first I've been out since the storm. It left me with a nasty reminder of the shaking we all received. I'm so glad to be on deck again! Did you have a pleasant trip on the other side?"

"Jolly fine," answered Roberts.

But he wasn't thinking of the other side at all when he said it, but of the woman he had lost and found again.

Unconsciously they had walked to that part of the deck where Dorothy had been standing when the tam blew off on the voyage over.

"I suppose I must pin the cap in tightly this time," she remarked. "You won't be there to catch it if it flies off again." And she glanced over at the second cabin.

He looked up at the one she was wearing.

"That's a very pretty tam," he observed irrelevantly. "I trust it is skewered in tightly."

Whether she read his inner meaning, she gave no token then, but suggested that it was nigh time they both went down to dinner. The next night was the dance, and after the final two-step she reminded him that in the morning there would be the bustle of landing.

"And I haven't relieved you of that tam yet," she added.

"I shall miss it very much," he replied. "And you won't need it now the voyage is over."

"Yes," she said softly, her eyes fixed on Nantucket light, toward which they were swiftly cutting their way. "I suppose it has served its purpose, but I don't want to lose it again."

Roberts knew she wasn't thinking of all the words implied, but he was quick enough to seize at the opening, and—well, before they faced the customs officers on the pier he knew where to take the tam.

But he always forgets to carry it with him when he calls, and when Dorothy one evening said "Yes" to a certain question he asked her she added, "This is a desperate step to take to regain possession of a little old red tam-o'-shanter."

For the Children

Little Man Who Would Be a Brave Boy Scout.

The gallant young soldier in the picture hopes some day to be big enough to join the Boy Scouts of America. At his home in Hoboken, N. J., he has two brothers who are members of that famous organization, now known in almost every civilized nation on the globe. He was among the visitors at city hall, New York city, last Fourth of July when the boy scouts acted as guards and ushers at the "safe and sane" celebration conducted by Mayor Mitchel and other city officials. While there he had his picture taken by the camera man. You see that he has soldierly ideas, and his uniform is more military even than that of the real boy scouts. He is only five, and therefore he has a few years to wait before he can qualify as a tenderfoot. But he is optimistic and bravely waits for that glorious time.

A Porch Party Game.

Jennie was invited to a porch party where they played quiet games, the kind you use pencil and paper for. One was called "A Geographical Game," and after the pencils and paper had been given out the hostess said that she would dictate some sentences, each one of which could be answered by the name of a place on the map. Here are the questions with the answers. Try them when you have a porch party:

A piece of carpet? Brussels.
A sprig of elm? Elmwood.
A bit of red pepper? Cayenne.
A piece of liver and a pan of water? Liverpool.
A cigar? Havana.
A dish of salt water? Salt lake.
A new boat? Newark.
A small stone? Little Rock.
A cord tied to a bell? Belfast.
A number of newspapers? Reading.
A large champagne bottle cork? Cork.
A can marked 2240 pounds? Canton.
A fine straw hat? Leghorn.
A roll of wrapping paper? Manila.
A piece of cardboard? Bristol.
A peanut shell? Hull.
A key and the setting sun? Key West.
A sofa bed? Davenport.
A horn tied to a seaman's cape? Cape Horn.
A tree with a long branch? Long Branch.
A wagon marked 2,240 pounds on a bridge? Bridgeton.
A child peeking in at a door? Peking.

Riddles.

When are two apples alike? When pared.

What instrument of war does the earth resemble? A revolver.

When does a man impose upon himself? When he taxes his memory.

What would contain all the snuff in the world? No one nose (knows).

Who were the first astronomers? The stars, because they have studded (studied) the heavens ever since the creation.

If all the women went to China, where would all the men go? To Pekin (peek in).

When is a blow from a pretty girl welcome? When she strikes you agreeably.

Johnny's Jokes.

Mother told Johnny to go to the shop and get her a water cracker.

Johnny came back with an ice pick, and his mother failed to see the joke.

Johnny was taken to the postoffice by his father. They were talking about all sorts of things when the father remarked, "What an unpleasant odor!"

"I guess," answered Johnny, "it comes from the dead letters here."

"What is that noise in the library?" asked papa of Johnny.

"Must be history repeating itself," answered the incorrigible.

IT IS SAID ABOUT QUINCY

That sidewalks on Ward One thoroughfares need attention.

• • •

That there should be a concrete or granolithic sidewalk the whole length of Coddington street, as many people desire to visit Mount Wollaston cemetery.

• • •

That Canal street should have a better sidewalk.

• • •

That since the opening of Kincaide's Theatre Revere road is much used, and a permanent sidewalk is necessary.

• • •

That Elm street with churches at each end needs a granolithic sidewalk,

• • •

That a permanent sidewalk should be built in front of Bethany church.

• • •

That it will be a big improvement when Hancock street gets its new sidewalks.

• • •

That Greenleaf street has been side-tracked long enough.

• • •

That a start should be made on an Adams street sidewalk.

• • •

That children who attend the Coddington school via Faxon avenue often find the avenue muddy.

• • •

That Dimmock street should have sidewalks on both sides.

• • •

That the bridge should be lengthened the same as at Beale street.

• • •

That the steps on Saville street terrace will be something new in sidewalks.

• • •

That with the Upland road extension to Granite street there should be permanent sidewalks on each side of the street.

• • •

That all these streets are much used; and should not wait for petitions from abutters.

• • •

That all streets of the city should have granite curbing.

• • •

That on some streets, like Chestnut street, paving stones have been used for curbing.

• • •

That some street corners are now "protected" by large rocks.

• • •

That old fashioned curbing like that on Elm street is almost as bad as none at all.

• • •

That on some sidewalks, the curbing is higher than the sidewalk causing water to form ponds after each rain.

• • •

That there has been improvement in sidewalks in recent years in some localities.

• • •

That in many cases it is the newer streets, while old streets are still waiting.

NEW APPARATUS FOR WEYMOUTH

Lively Debates at Special Town Meeting

The interest in the special town meeting held Wednesday evening was equalled only at the special meeting held last spring regarding a school house.

When the meeting was called to order at 7.30 by John A. Raymond, Town Clerk, the seating capacity of the hall was filled and sixteen voters stood at an open door. William J. Holbrook was chosen moderator, and called for committees to report. No response, so Martin Hawes moved to take up Articles 3 and 4, regarding the purchase of fire apparatus.

Peter Gallant rose with the statement that there was a fire committee to report, which all wished to hear. Mr. Loud, secretary of the committee then read the report which recommended that the town purchase a first class auto pumping machine with chemical tank, hose capacity ladders and full equipment to be located at the Broad street house in Ward Two also an combination hose and chemical auto car to be located at the Hose house, Ward One. Also that the Broad street house be fitted for at least one permanent man who shall be on duty at all times and shall sleep in the house. The motor car in this house to respond to all fire alarms in the town.

That the town purchase and install a Universal non-interferring fire alarm box to be installed at the Broad street house from which any box may be rung by a phone message to the central house.

The immediate installation of meters to conserve the supply of water in main.

The estimated expense of the apparatus above specified together with the cost of changing and furnishing the buildings to house this apparatus and the salary of a permanent man at Ward 2 will be about $19,000. The committee also urged the importance of regulation to prohibit the use of inflammable material for roofing in the town.

Mr. Hawes was most anxious to consolidate Articles Three and Four. "Cad" Howe entered the discussion here and said he is a crank on this question and South Weymouth will get what they want anyway, even if they trade a school house to do it. Here Mr. Gallant entered the field again and in a comment on the committee's report was called to order, but was complimented by Preston Lewis as the best fireman in Weymouth, if not highly educated. Peter says education doesn't count when fighting fire, and he ought to know.

In taking the floor again, Mr. Hawes said that we have been confronted with a prelude to the Salem fire. The committee, investigated and reported faithfully. We need more and better apparatus, for nothing but help from Quincy and Hingham saved the town on the evening of May 27.

Chief Walter W. Pratt of the Fire Department said he had looked into the matter carefully and thoroughly favors a Central station. He had been advised by phone of fires in North Weymouth four times since May first, and has no means of pulling an alarm. He also questioned the advisability of putting such apparatus as may be purchased into buildings not fireproof.

Rev. William Hyde, contended that town officials were responsible for allowing the two buildings, filled with combustibles to exist in such close proximity to other buildings, and says that fire prevention must be considered. Getting back to the question of apparatus, Mr. Sheehy says one man is not enough, two at least being needed to operate.

A citizen from "Gravel Hill" created much merriment in his dissertation on the fire department in general and firemen in particular. Preston Lewis arose and said "You are going to vote your money before you are ready. You are not figuring the cost. Wait until the March meeting and until the prevailing excitement subsides, or you will have a repetition of the James Humphrey school."

The house called for the question and B. B. Wright and Walter Sladen appointed tellers. By a vote of 280 to 102 East Weymouth gets an automobile truck with pump at a cost of $9000 and $300 for needed alterations at house.

North Weymouth had an able champion in Frank H. Torrey who in a few-concise remarks told of the banner tax ward, assessed for $3,500,000 and of the needs of people who in twelve years have built houses to the value of $750,000.00 exclusive of land. He said "We don't want to hear the "Bug" (Combination Three) "coming toot-toot all the way from the Landing and pass us every time. The best fire fighters are in Ward One, and plenty of men who can operate an auto truck." Thanks to him Ward One got just what the warrant called for $3500 combination truck, by a vote of 344 to 2.

Matthew O'Dowd, engineer in Ward Five presented the needs of that district, which covers a route of from two to 2 1-2 miles in several directions from Columbian square. Ten minutes is the time allowed for the apparatus to travel from Sentral Station to the outskirts of South Weymouth, which he says would be a fatal delay. This company in this ward was the first to adopt regular uniforms, the first to decorate deceased members graves, and one of the first to install swinging harness, this at their own expense. And by a vote of 274 to 16, Ward Five gets a $9000 pump.

Article Six was changed by the petitioner to read to consider the employment of men worked or used in the Moth Dept., in working and maintaining highways and those employed in the Water Works as laborers, that they must and shall be citizens of Weymouth. This change in the Article was made to overcome a criticism mentioned in a previous issue. The discussion resolved into a debate between Lawyers Garafalo and Sullivan on the meaning of the word "citizen" which was finally construed as meaning "resident." This article was carried and a motion to adjourn carried at 10.50, with the majority satisfied with the result.

NEW BUILDING IS FAVORED

Addition to Washington Building not Likely

The possibilities of an addition to the Washington school grows more remote daily and the belief is strengthened with the announcement that the School Committee is preparing to go over the Quincy Point district for the purpose of viewing prospective sites for a new building in Bigelow Park.

The agitation for an addition to the Washington school was stated several years ago and has been a prominent topic at the Point, particularly the further end. People living in this half exeprss the belief that a new school in the centre of the district will also afford some opportunity of relieving the crowded condition of the Washington and Coddington schools.

Mayor Miller and many members of the School Committee are favorable to a new school, believing an addition would be useless. They argue the population is moving this way and that in time a new building will be required.

BLUEBERRY OUTING CLUB

The berrying season this year has been a very popular one and daily parties of men, women and children from all parts of the city are seen wending their way toward the berry centres from whence they return in the afternoon with filled pails and a good appetite.

Distance is not taken into consideration, many of the pickers entering the Blue Hill reservation at Willard street an continuing through to the Randolph, Canton and Holbrook lines. Although some sections they frequent abound in rattlesnakes no one has been bitten and it is not within the memory of the oldest resident that any berry picker has ever been attacked by a snake unless it was first cornered and had to fight to escape capture.

Several clubs of girls have been organized and last Sunday the Blueberry Outing club, composed of well-known West and South Quincy young ladies chartered an auto truck and motored to Wareham. On their arrival they donned kimonas and sunbonnets and luncheon was served from the hampers of home cooked food. They made a well-known grove their rendevouz and when they met several hours later to examine the harvest they had enough berries to supply a large bakery. Other clubs plan to make such trips the balance of the season.

WEDNESDAYS FIRE RECORD

Sparks set fire to the woodwork in the railroad bridge over Neponset river Wednesday evening and boys who saw the flames shooting in and out of the steel structure ran to the house of Engine 20 and made a report. A company was sent over and the fire extinguished before serious damage was done. There was considerable reflection from the flames and many though the bridge was doomed.

The Quincy apparatus passed a quiet day Wednesday. In the afternoon the Atlantic combination put out a grass fire on the Shore boulevard.

At 8.44 P. M. a false alarm was sounded from Box 34 at High and Franklin streets. Just before the box was pulled a stranger was seen close to the box. People living nearby ran to the box when it sounded but no one was in sight. It is thought an escape was effected to Braintree, over Franklin street or through the woodlands of the district. Another false alarm was sounded from that box several days ago.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Kingman of Brockton are guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Goodridge of Granite street, this week.

A pocketbook, evidently the property of some poor woman, containing some small change was picked up in City Square this morning.

A large number of yachtsmen from the Quincy yacht club held an outing Wednesday evening at Nantasket making their headquarters at Paragon Park.

Miss Ruth W. Parker of Russell street has been appointed a director of physical work in the Young Womens Christian association of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Marion Cutter age seven, was quite badly injured Sunday by tripping over a stump and striking her forehead on a projecting point. Dr. Bruce was called and took two stitches in the wound. The plucky little girl had the stitches taken without any anesthetic.

The Cambridge Board of Trade turned out in full force at their outing and dinner at Squantum Inn Tuesday. Some of the party came by cars but many travelled by automobile. A base ball game was a feature of the day's fun. They brought their own band and made them work over time.

The funeral of Harold F. Stevens of Bellevue avenue, was held Wednesday at the home of his parents in Dedham. Mr. Stevens has been sick for about four years with diabetes and his parents thinking that the salt air might prove beneficial recently built an attractive cottage at Squantum and for a time he seemed better and was out of doors Sunday. Although a new comer to Squantum Mr. Stevens has made many friends and the report of his death Tuesday proved a shock to the community.

THREE RIBS FRACTURED

Bicyclist run Down by Milk Wagon early This Morning

Sanford Davis, a well known shoe-dealer of Quincy Point was badly injured on East Howard street about six o'clock this morning when a milk team struck the bicycle he was riding and he was thrown to the street.

He struck on his side and was picked up by the driver of the wagon in a semi-conscious condition. He was carried to the office of Dr. W. J. Middleton who found three ribs had been fractured.

Mr. Davis is now at his home at 11 Baxter street. It is expected that he will be obliged to remain in bed a week or more.

SALE ENDS IN COURT CASE

Joseph Culter of Broadway was in court this morning charged with the larceny of an automobile. The principal witness, David Feinberg of Lynn, testified that his employer had purchased for him an auto from Cutler for $142 and that the following day he found the machine not as represented. Fienberg said he telephoned Cutler that he would return it and was willing to lose $10 or $15, that on while going through Boston the engine backfired and set the machine afire, damaging it considerably. The machine was brought to Quincy and while here a shoe and tube valued at $20, a prestolite tank valued at $12 and wheel rim valued at $4 was removed.

He sought the return of the goods having reason to believe they had been removed while the machine was in Cutler's yard. A search warrant was issued and the goods recovered from Cutler's cellar.

Cutler told the court that the transaction was in many respects all right but that a check of $42 given in addition to $100 in cash had been protested.

The goods were ordered returned to Feinberg and Cutler was found not guilty.

REUNION OF SPEAR FAMILY

The annual reunion of the Spear family is being held today at the Quincy yacht clubhouse, Houghs Neck, and it is expected that many of the descendants of this old Quincy family who have not met perhaps since a year ago, will gather about the family board this noon.

The program of the days reunion is similar to that of other years. There was no special time set for the participants to be on hand this morning, the only requirement being that they should be ready for the lunch which was served at 1 o'clock. Quite a few however went down during the early morning planning to make a day of it at the beach. The tide is just right today for sailing and it is not unlikely that many will enjoy a sail in the bay.

Dinner or lunch, as it is called was served in the clubhouse a little after o o'clock and following this there was a short business session at which routine business was transacted.

Following the business session reminiscences will be in order and some entertaining impromptu remarks are anticipated.

STILL ACTIVE ALTHOUGH 92

Although 92 years of age, Oliver Houghton, for many years the head of Weymouths police department is as spry as a kitten and none were more active Wednesday at the eleventh annual outing of the Norfolk County G. A. R., association and Women's Relief Corps at Bass Point. More than four hundred were in the party including several from Quincy. Dinner was served at the Bass Point house and the afternoon was spent in visiting the many places of amusement in which the point abounds.

The outing was in charge of a committee composed of Edward H. Dunbar, Commander Edward O. Pierson of Weymouth and Edward Hawes of Stoughton.

Woman's World

Mrs. Catt, Noted Suffrage Leader and Orator.

MRS. CARRIE CHAPMAN CATT.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt is one of the most interesting and magnetic of the suffrage leaders. She began life as a teacher in Iowa, was superintendent of public schools at twenty-two years of age, went into the suffrage ranks as an active worker in 1888. Since then she has studied law and medicine and has the equipped mind of the woman who has traveled the world over studying conditions of women in all foreign lands. She is the president of the International Suffrage alliance and has addressed audiences in England, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Holland, Saxony, Bohemia, Prussia, Hungary and in Africa and the far east. Everywhere the charm of her womanhood won her admiration, and when the alliance met in Stockholm three years ago she was called all over Scandinavia "America's uncrowned queen."

Mrs. Catt is an orator as well as organizer and a teacher of the suffrage school. Her written words bristle with oratory. She has spoken for the suffrage in every state in the Union save Florida, carrying her message before legislatures and constitutional conventions. On her return from Europe, where she has been attending a meeting of the International Suffrage alliance, she expects to take part in suffrage work in New York.

The Empire State campaign committee is making many plans for fall. After election representatives from every state in the Union where women vote will assemble in New York. These women will be actual voters, women who have attained the standing of citizenship in their states and who have learned from actual experience what the privilege of the vote in their hands means. What they have learned they will endeavor to impress upon the doubting Thomases of the state.

QUEENLY KINDNESS.

How the Little Old Boot Seller Was Befriended by Queen Mary.

The kindliness and consideration shown by Queen Mary recently endeared her still more to the hearts of the British public. Some time ago a firm of boot sellers, which for years had enjoyed royal patronage, dismissed their manager for no other reason than that he was too old.

He set up for himself in a small shop in a southwestern suburb and was hugely surprised and delighted when it was indicated to him that Queen Mary had heard of his dismissal and had resolved to transfer her patronage to him. And now the tiny shop sports the royal arms instead of the gorgeous premises from which the manager had been dismissed.

We All Feel That Way.

To the unthinking, senseless knocker who is nothing more than a monumental nuisance that planks his bag of bones upon everything for the common good that comes up. May the bubonic plague grasp him.—Petaluma Courier.

WINS HIS FIRST CASE.

Edward Avery, son of Judge Albert E. Avery made his first appearance, since admittance to the bar, before thee court Wednesday and succeeded in having the complaint against H. M. Stone, charged with the larceny of a watch, dismissed.

Stone was arrested Wednesday by the police on a warrant. John McKinnon the complainant, was in the court house when the police left to make the arrest but said he was too busy to accompany them and identify the man. Their search was successful but when they returned McKinnon was not in the building.

At the afternoon session Stone was arraigned and pleaded not guilty. When no complainant appeared Counsel Avery made a motion to have the complaint dismissed. He argued that the man knew the case was coming into court and because he had not remained he forfeited his right to prosecute. Judge Pratt, presiding during the absence of Judge Avery, admitted the motion and Stone left the courtroom.

MAKING PLEA FOR AMNESTY

Mediators Seeking Satery For Supporters of Huerta

ASK WILSON'S GOOD OFFICES

Rebels' Effort to Invade Mexico City Will Be Resisted Unless Guarantees Are Forthcoming—Carranza Starts For Tampico, Where He May Meet Carbajal Representatives

Washington, Juy 23.—Ambassador DaGama of Brazil and Ministers Suarez of Chile and Naon of Argentina, the three mediators in the Mexican affair, appealed to President Wilson to have the United States use its influence with General Carranza to obtain a general amnesty for those who supported the Huerta government.

It was the first formal call of the three mediators since the conference at Niagara Falls adjourned. They were accompanied by Secretary Bryan and discussed the Mexican situation in all of its phases.

They expressed the view that Francisco Carbajal, provisional president of Mexico, is ready to turn over the government to General Carranza, but wants guarantees that there would be no wholesale executions, arrests or confiscation of property.

They told President Wilson that unless these guarantees for the protection of the lives and property of those who supported Huerta shall be given the Carbajal government would concentrate all its military forces and resist to the utmost any effort to invade Mexico City.

The president and Bryan listened attentively to the views of the South-American diplomats, especially as they indicated that their governments probably would be unable to recognize any administration in Mexico which refuses to give quarter to its enemy or to establish itself by peaceful means, in accordance with civilized practice.

The three mediators also pointed out the danger of an armed entry of constitutionalists into Mexico City, and urged that the United States use every influence to bring about a peaceful transfer of power.

General Carranza is on his way to Tampico, according to official advices to the state department. He will remain there a few days and then return to his headquarters at Monterey.

That his mission to Tampico may have to do with meeting Carbajal representatives is considered probable in state department circles, although the official message shed no light on this point. It was also considered a possibility that his visit is in connection with the receipt of an expected shipment of arms due soon at Tampico.

Despite the reports from Mexico that the entire constitutionalist army is being massed to take Mexico City by assault, administration leaders continue confident this will not happen.

Secretary Bryan, who has had charge of the matter, believes the two chieftains are impressed with the need of peace and he does not believe an open break will come. Other officials who know Carranza's unyielding and Villa's stormy natures are far from being so sanguine.

FAILURE IS PREDICTED

King's Home Rule Conference Scheduled to Break Up Today

London, July 23.—The prediction is generally made that the king's home rule conference will break up today without reaching an agreement on the Ulster problem.

The Unionist papers are especially emphatic in declaring there is no possibility of any compromise being agreed upon, and many Liberal organs say the conference was foredoomed to failure from the beginning.

The criticism of the king, which had reached alarming proportions, has been turned aside to some extent as the result of the admission of Premier Asquith to the effect that he assumed full responsibility for the king's speech.

Army Worm In Connecticut

New Haven, July 23.—The army worm has appeared in various parts of Connecticut. The Connecticut agricultural experiment station here is receiving reports from its field agents as fast as the worms are found.

Clinton H. Ward was fatally injured when his automobile went over an embankment at Morrisville, Vt.

SOME FCATS ABOUT CITY OF QUINCY

A Leader in Industries, Value of Products and Persons Employed

Per Capita Valuation Is Increasing Rapidly

The facts relative to the City of Quincy presented below are from the census of 1910 and other official figures, and there is much of which people of the "City of Presidents" may be proud:

AS AN INDUSTRIAL CITY

The last census showed Quincy to have more industries per capita than Boston, Quincy has 151—one for every 202 people, while Boston has 2,747, one for every 244 people. The industries of Quincy are large industries and employ 5,371—one out of every six of population —while the industries of Boston employ one out of eleven. The value of Quincy products is unusually high,—$8,082,446 annually, or $273.92 per capita; while the Boston value is $274.89 per capita.

SHIPYARD OF WORLD-WIDE FAME

Builders of battleships New Jersey, Rhode Island, Vermont, North Dakota and Nevada for the United States government; battleship Rivadavia for the Argentine Republic; submarines for the United States and Japanese navies; also other warships, passenger steamers and freight steamers. Employs about 4000. Has entertained many notables of the United States and foreign countries.

QUARRIES OF QUINCY GRANITE

The standard for excellence among Granites—Increased demand—Quality improving—Inexhaustible rock ribbed mountains—Takes the best polish. Extensively used for memorials both large and small, to be found in all the large cemeteries of the country, the battlefield at Gettysburg, and other battlefields of the Civil War. Bunker Hill Monument is built of Quincy granite; also the First Parish church, Quincy City Hall, and other public buildings.

A POPULAR SEASIDE RESORT

Quincy with its 23 miles of sea-coast has several attractive summer resorts, many now occupied by all-the-year residents. Houghs Neck and Squantum are both parts of Quincy, and all along the shore of Quincy bay between these two peninsulars are resorts of different names—Atlantic beach, Wollaston beach, Quincy Shore reservation, Merrymount, Adams Shore, Post Island, Manet Beach and Great Hill,—also Rock Island, Bethel Boach, Germantown and Quincy Point, all popular for yachting, bathing and cool breezes. The fact that Quincy has four large yacht clubs shows the interest taken in yachting; all these clubs have clubhouses and many yachts enrolled.

AS A RESIDENTIAL CITY

Rev. A. L. Hudson says—"Of all the cities of the country, Boston stands easily the FIRST in the beauty and variety of its many suburbs; and among them all NONE has so many attractions to offer to the home seeker as OUR OWN QUINCY. Its diversified area, sloping from wooded hill tops with their ocean view over rolling parks and level downs to sweeping shore line of the bay, gives ample scope for each man, according to his taste, to possess the one most desirable building site in ALL THE WORLD."

A WEALTHY CITY

In 1870 Quincy had an assessed valuation of $4,449,500, representing a per capita valuation of $597.89. In 1880 the per capita had increased to $712.21; in 1890 to $817.73; in 1900 to $844.54; in 1910 to $994.33. In 1913 the assessed valuation was $36,716,260, a per capita valuation of OVER $1,000.00. Note the BIG increase in valuation, and the fact that the per capita valuation is nearly TWICE as large. Quincy is 20th in valuation in Massachusetts as well as 20th in population.

RESERVATIONS AND PLAYGROUNDS

Quincy has within its borders MORE in Reservations, Parks and Playgrounds than any other city of Massachusetts. Over 2,600 acres in Metropolitan reservations are in this city, also Merrymount park of 91 acres with a shore front, Faxon park of 27 acres and several ward playgrounds. Dr. Eliot says, "Cities with the most exempt property are the best to live in."

AN EDUCATIONAL CITY

Quincy one of the first to employ a Superintendent of Schools. Under Col. Francis W. Parker our schools obtained a National renown. In 1900 celebrated the 25th anniversary of Col. Parker's election. In 1914 all public school buildings are of brick. Quincy is 8th among the 33 cities in number of grammar school graduates, and 14th in High

LID CLAMPED DOWN TIGHT

New Corrupt Practice Act Limits Expenditures

Candidates at the primaries and the state election this fall will discover that the new "corrupt practices" act clamps the lid down tight on campaign expenditures.

Prior to this year a candidate for governor or for any other office could go the limit on "personal" expenses, which among other things included circularizing and an individual was allowed to contribute to the campaign expenses of another as much as he pleased.

Under the new act of this year $2500 for a primary and $5,000 for an election is the highest that any candidate for public office can go in the furtherance directly or indirectly of his own campaign and these sums must include everything not excepting the so-called "personal" expenses.

A second drastic limitation prohibits the individual from spending more than $1,000 in expenses incident to an election and the primaries preliminary thereto.

Some of the following features of the new law as summarized by the office of the secretary of the commonwealth should be given careful attention by candidates and the voters before the campaign gets under way:

Candidates are prohibited from promising the appointment, nomination or election of another person to aid or promote his own nomination or election.

Expenses are limited to the following amounts:

	Primary	Election
United States Senator	$2500	$5000
Governor	2500	5000
Lieutenant Governor	1500	3000
Secretary	1500	3000
Treasurer	1500	3000
Auditor	1500	3000
Attorney General	1500	3000
Member of Congress	1500	3000
State Senator	500	500
Each Rep. in Dist.	100	100

For any other office an amount not exceeding $20 for each 1,000 or major portion thereof, of the registered voters qualified to vote for candidates for the office in question at the next preceding election. But he shall not expend more than $1500 for the expense of a primary nor more than $3,000 for the expense of an election.

Any candidate may expend a sum not exceeding $100 for primary or election expenses.

Contributions to political committee are included in the foregoing sums as well as contributions from any source and every payment or promise of payment for any purpose made by the candidate or for his benefit except payments and expenditures of committees.

Detailed accounts of receipts and expenditures must be kept. Payments of $5 or more must be vouched for by receipted bill. Vouchers and receipts must be preserved for six months.

Political committees shall have a chairman and treasurer whose names —and in case of committees not elected a statement of the purpose for which such commitee is organized with the names of at least three additional members—shall be filed with the secretary of the commonwealth before any money is received or disbursements made. Political committees not elected must consist of five or more persons. Changes in offices and members must be certified to the secretary of the commonwealth. The treasurer shall remain subject to all duties and liabilities imposed by law until the appointment of his successor is certified or he files his writ ten resignation with the Secretary of the commonwealth. No expense shall der his authority can receive or disbe paid or incurred during the vacancy in the office of treasurer. Detailed accounts, vouchers and receipts must be kept.

Only persons acting under the authority or in behalf of a committee or a candidate or person acting under his authority can receive or disburse money or its equivalent.

Any individual, not a candidate, may contribute to committees or to candidates, a sum which in the aggregate, shall not exceed $1,000.

The free services of persons and the payment by themselves of personal expenses incidental to rendering of such services and the free use of property and the exercise of ordinary hospitality is permitted.

Political committees are prohibited from paying the personal expense of candidates except by a contribution to fund of such candidates.

EISMAN HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Is Alleged Abductor of Fern Hallian

The celebrated case in which Louis Eisman, the chauffeur was charged with abducting Fern Hallian, came up by continuance in the district court at Hingham this morning, before Judge Kelley. No evidence was presented in the case this morning by the defendant and after the few opening preliminaries Judge Kelley held Eisman in $1,000 for the grand jury.

The bonds which are considered somewhat small were immediately furnished by Solomon J. Eisman, a brother and M. J. Lewis.

Atty. Shugrue, counsel for Fern Hallian announced Thursday to Clerk of Courts Lawrence Lyons that the applications for warrants from this court had been withdrawn.

HISTORIC GAVEL GONE

The historic gavel with which Court Officer William M. Marden brings his official opening of the District Court to a close has disappeared and it is thought, that it was stolen Thursday afternoon following the adjournment of the session.

An investigation is being made but up to noon no trace of the valuable gavel has been discovered. It is probable that complaints will be filed before the day is out charging parties, whose name has been withheld, with larceny.

MISS LUCRETIA A. DOW.

The funeral of Miss Lucretia A. Dow was held at her late residence, 238 Norfolk street, Wollaston, Tuesday afternoon at 2.00. o'clock. The services were conducted by the Rev. George L. Perrin of Boston. The favorite hymns of the deceased, "Crossing the Bar," "Sometime We'll Understand" and "When the Mists have Rolled Away" were beautifully rendered by Edward E. Bullock. The floral tributes were many and beautiful and attested the love and esteem in which she was held by her many friends and associates.

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER.

MILK THIEVES AGAIN BUSY

Arrests May Follow if Practice is Not Stopped

Milk thieves have been operating throughout the city the past month and complaints have been heard generally from all sections. The most flagrant offenses have been committed in City Square where milk has been taken off the steps of the restaurants.

Most of the thefts have occured in the early morning hours. They started on a small scale and have grown to a point where eight quart cans are none too large for the lifters.

When the first milk disappeared an investigator was sent here by one of the companies that delivers a large percentage of its product to residents. He spent nearly a week in this vicinity and gathered enough information to bring the case to court but took no action.

The raids are commencing again however and providing evidence of this nature is secured again complaints will be preferred against the persons said to be involved and arrests will follow.

A sensation may be created if this comes about inasmuch as the parties connected with the disappearance of milk are said to be well known in the community.

A series of small thefts have been committed the past month, the most unusual one being the wholesale stealing of articles of food and pastry from the ice box in the home of Dr. Frank S. Davis, Elm street. Boys are held to be accountable for this.

WILL PROBABLY RUN.

Daniel Scouler, Jr., Quincy's Inspector of Milk, announces this morning that he will probably become a candidate for the Republican nomination as Representative from the Fifth district. The entrance of Mr. Scouler into the field means that Col. Whitman will have to hustle as both gentlemen come from the Point district.

STEAMSHIP ATLANTIC TO SAIL ABOUT AUG. 15

Quincy Built Vessel Therefore Will be One of First to Use Panama Canal

Canal Limited at First to Vessels Not Drawing Over 30 Feet

Two announcements that will interest Quincy people are made today. One that the Panama canal will be formally opened on August 15, and the second that the steamship Atlantic, built for the Boston-Pacific line, by the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation will sail on her maiden trip about Aug. 15. This means that a Quincy built steamship will be one of the first to pass through the great canal on the way to the Pacific ocean.

The first announcement is contained in a dispatch from Washington which says that Sec. Garrison has announced the opening of the canal to the world's commerce will be on Aug. 15 and that first vessel to pass through will be the Christobal, a war department vessel now at Colon. At first only vessels drawing not more than 30 feet will be allowed to enter the canal.

The second announcement comes from the offices of the Boston-Pacific Line operated by the Emery Steamship Co. which is to the effect that the company is now ready to begin operating its regular service from Boston to the Pacific coast ports and that the new steamer Atlantic will sail about Aug. 15. If the cannal is open at that time the Atlantic will pass through and as stated above she will be one of the first steamships to use the new water way.

If not ready the Atlantic will go by the way of the Straits of Magellan.

BOY PUT ON PROBATION

To Make Restitution for Money Falsely Obtained

James C. McCarthy, a 16 year old West Quincy boy who "fessed up" to the larceny of $44 from the office of City Treasurer John Curtis was in the juvenile session of court Thursday afternoon. He was sentenced to the Lyman school for boys and later the sentence was suspended until July 8, 1915 and he was placed in the care of the probation officer with the condition that he make restitution in the sum of $42.

McCarthy on two occasions visited City Hall and rew money due workmen, amounting to $44. When arrested he had $2 left. He spent $42. on two trips to Nantasket, two to Boston, one to Houghs Neck and for the purchase of two jack knives. The purchase of the knives and the detective work of Patrolman Jeremiah Hinchon resulted in his arrest.

Even if your wife is away at the summer resort, it is no excuse for throwing banana peel and peanut shells on the parlor rug.

The shell game is said to be pretty well worked out at the county fairs, but there are still some people left who will believe a Congressman when he promises economy.

Although beef will be higher than ever this fall, it is believed that the ordinary consumer will be able to afford soup made from the hoof, horns, and tail.

It is proposed to put a 25 per cent tax on heiresses who marry titled foreigners, but most people would be willing to waive it on condition that said scions of nobility are never brought back to this country.

It certainly is hard work to be a Senator and have to go up to the Capitol every day and sleep in those stuffy chairs.

A leading educator wants to have girls taught costume designing rather than algebra. The boys would then have some chance to get to the head of the mathematics class.

The railroad stockholders who find fault because the company directors don't attend to their business are usually the same ones who always throw the annual report into the waste basket unread.

That German aviator that went up 24, 606 feet probably looked down to earth and wondered why these motorists will take such chances.

HELP ENFORCE THE LAW.

Three pieces of legislation recently enacted in this State are of special interest to every user of the highways. 1. Horse drawn vehicles, whether in the country, town or city, are required to carry lights at night. 2. Motor vehicles are absolutely forbidden to cut out the muffler in the thickly settled or business districts of a city or town, that is to say wherever buildings average less than 200 feet apart for a distance of a quarter of a mile. 3. Motor cycles, on and after Jan. 1, 1915, must carry number plates.

It is the manifest duty of carriage drivers to light their vehicles at night, not only for the sake of others, but to protect themselves. It is likewise incumbent upon automobile operators to discontinue the practice of opening the cut out, which investigation has proved to be of little or no benefit to the operators, but which is a constant source of annoyance to other travelers. With the motor cyclist, long an offender both in the matter of speed and noise, effectually tagged for identification, it is hoped that he too will perceive the advisability of complying with the law.

If the public wants these and other automobile laws enforced, it must take the trouble to secure compliance, either through appeals to decency, or by assisting the authorities in compelling obedience. These authorities are unable, owing to the magnitude of the automobile problem at the present time, to handle it without the assistance of individual members of the public. It is the duty, therefore, of every person having the public welfare at heart to encourage and actively to aid the officers of the law in their insistence on obedience thereto.

READING THE MURDER STORIES.

This newspaper remarked the other day on publicity as a deterrent to crime. Another problem is the effect on the public mind of the constant crime stories in the newspapers.

Booth Tarkington, on being interviewed at a New England summer resort, expressed the opinion that the people of that section are devoting an inordinate amount of time to reading about recent murder mysteries. Probably the same could be said of the newspaper readers elsewhere.

Mr. Tarkington felt that it was not time well spent. True, it diverts the public mind from the larger interests of government and social progress.

A persistent reader of murder cases may acquire a certain amateur experience in crime. He becomes familiar with detective methods. It may be said that this gives one experience of human nature. But this information deals largely with morbid types of personality. It is not useful in daily life.

Still, if the newspapers did not print murder stories, people would draw similar tales from the libraries or buy them at bookstalls. The fictional writer about crime is apt to confuse moral judgments.

Yellow newspapers also distort the true significance of crime. If they must thus deal with the dark side of human nature, they should at least tell the truth and strip the gloss from passion. Often they apologize for it or make it alluring.

Inordinate interest in crime is morbid. But these sensational and dramatic crimes often convey a great deal of information as to public morals. They are the sensational results flowing from false standards of life. They reveal unwholesome conditions, that might long pass unnoticed did they not break out in some startling climax. The newspaper that simply tells the plain truth about these tragedies, and lets the facts speak for themselves and point their own moral, performs a service that has value.

MORE STATELY DANCES.

The National Convention of Dancing Masters has decided that time is ripe for reaction to the stately minuet and kindred dances of grace and charm. History teaches that the dancing of a people has been an expression of the dominant sentiment, from its origin in religious ceremony through its transition to the pantomime of what happens to be the ruling emotion.

There is an underlying truth in the saying that, as a people dances, so it feels. Waves of feeling ebb and flow, and the waves of its expression swing back and forth with them, generally the first visible sign of reaction. The displacement of the contortion dances of the moment by the sober and graceful dances of a century ago should signify more than a change in the taste for amusement. If it is more than a mommentary freak, the wave of reaction must spread through dress and speech, manner and conduct, private point of view and public action. —Haverhill Gazette.

LESS OUTSIDE STUDY.

Meeting the popular demand for less study outside of the schoolroom, the Spokane, Washington, board of education has decided to lengthen the hours of attendance in the high schools by three-quarters of an hour. Commencing in September the high schools will convene at 8.30 A. M. instead of 9 as formerly and will close at 2.45 P. M. instead of 2.30.

In a statement regarding the change Superintendent Bruce M. Watson said: "This schedule provides for seven school periods per day instead of six, as formerly. It does not contemplate more subjects or heavier programs for pupils, nor generally for teachers. The seven-period system makes possible a school program caring for the numerous activities of a complex high school organization to better advantage that the six-period plan. It also enables a pupil to choose his program to better advantage.

"The new plan gives every pupil one more period for study in school under conditions better for study than most homes afford, and also affords better opportunities for consultation between pupils and teachers."

J. Grier Long, president of the board, suggested that the change in hours might interfere with contracts under which pupils were working outside of school hours. It was decided that such cases could be met by special arrangements. Mr. Long also pointed out the danger of overcrowding the school courses by giving pupils opportunity to take more subjects. The duty of guarding against this was left to Superintendent Watson and the new schedule passed by a unanimous vote of the board.

—Civic and business organizations of Spokane, Washington are preparing to organize a city safety committee to handle the entire local accident problem, at the suggestion of Thomas G. Aston, claim agent of the Washington Water Power company. "We need the co-operation of the chamber of commerce, automobile association and the city commissioners to get the 'safety first' idea properly disseminated," states Mr. Aston. "One of our plans is to have the 'safety first' principles taught in the public schools. By attacking the accident problem in a large way I am certain we can get best results."

—Although W. W. Lombard, mayor of Othello, Wash., aged 60, has lived for the last year within a block of a motion picture theatre, he says that he witnessed his first "movie" July 4th. "They are wonderful," said the mayor, "and had I realized the entertainment they furnished I should have been familiar with them years ago."

"DEAD" MAN PROVED TO BE AGED MUMMY

New York Sleuths Make an Unexpected Discovery

New York, July 24.—"Rush a detective right up to 354 Forty-Fourth street. There's a dead man hidden in the cellar," said a voice over the telephone to police headquarters.

Three detectives "hot-footed" up to the address given. When M. A. Moloxsa, a Greek, opened the door they brushed right by him without a word. Into the cellar they plunged.

Boxes were everywhere. After moving about eighty of them they found the body. It was that of a man about 6 feet 6 inches tall and broad of shoulder.

"Say, that guy's been dead some time," said one of the sleuths.

"About 4000 years," said the Greek, who told the detectives that he had bought the "dead" man—a mummy—in Alexandria a year ago.

FATALLY SHOOTS CREDITOR

Police Hunting For Man Wanted on Charge of Murder

South Framingham, Mass., July 24.—Francisco Luiza, who made his escape after fatally shooting Piedro Titone, is wanted on a charge of murder.

After the shooting, in which Titone received two bullets in his left side, Luiza made his escape into the Winthrop street swamp, leaving his companion to die.

He had asked him, it is alleged, to step out on the sidewalk where he declared he was going to pay him $5 he owed him, when he drew a revolver and fired twice.

CONFERENCE IS AGREED UPON

Peaceful Transfer of Power In Mexico Will Be Arranged

SUSPENSION OF HOSTILITIES

Assumed That Carranza Has Agreed to General Amnesty—Washington Fearful That Villa May Cause Trouble Because Breach Between Him and "First Chief" Is Widening

Washington, July 24.—President Carbajal, General Huerta's successor in Mexico, has officially informed the Brazilian minister that a conference has been arranged between his government and Carranza for the purpose of providing for a peaceable transfer of power into the hands of the rebels.

General Iturbide says that an armistice was signed providing for the suspension of hostilities throughout the republic. It is assumed in some quarters that Carranza has agreed to a general amnesty, though this is doubted by his agents in Washington.

Little weight need be given the statements that unless amnesty is granted Carbajal will resist the entrance of the rebel army into the capital. The constitutionalists can take Mexico City at will. Any opposition from the inadequate and demoralized federal army would spell disaster to the city.

It is reported that General Villa has been in communication with Carbajal and offered him the services of his army to prevent Carranza taking over power. It is freely predicted that the split between the rebel leaders is growing wider and that Villa will start a counter-revolution.

Washington is fearful of some such outcome and is urging by every means at its command that the jarring factions get together. Consular Agent Carothers accompanied Villa to western Chihuahua, where he was to attempt to impress upon the general the necessity for co-operation among the revolutionary leaders. John R. Silliman, personal representative of President Wilson, was with Carranza performing a similar office.

Treasury agents along the Rio Grande were given orders to take precautions against the smuggling of war munitions across the border. Administration officials are determined that there shall be no accumulation of ammunition that might be used in a counter-revolution.

"DOPE FIENDS" SUFFER

Ask Police to Lock Them Up Because Deprived of Drugs

Rochester, N. Y., July 24.—Driven desperate by their inability to purchase habit-forming drugs since July 1, when the new state law prohibiting their sale became effective, eight young men applied to the police during the past two days and asked to be locked up.

Some of the voluntary prisoners declared if they were not placed in confinement they feared they would either commit murder of suicide.

"Either give us the drug, or lock us up until we are cured," summed up their appeal.

McLauchlin was held in $1000 for the September term. He was arrested in Washington and was brought to this city, when it was learned that he was wanted here on a more serious charge.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.

The Dedham Transcript says editorially:

The other day a local merchant elevated his chin, squared his shoulder assumed a belligerent attitude, and defiantly told us that "advertising doesn't pay."

He is still alive, but let us consider a minute:

A London baronet who manufactures pills has sold a part of his real estate for the tidy sum of $30,000,000. He made it out of the profits of his business, and he built that business up by advertising, often spending as high as half a million dollars a year in printer's ink.

John Wanamaker, the best known and most successful merchant in this country, made his millions by advertising, and said so.

The department stores of the country are kept alive by advertising, and are coining money by more advertising.

You never hear of a large mercantile house in this country that does not advertise, and advertise heavily.

If a politician wants to make himself known to the dear people he uses the most effective means—newspaper publicity. That is advertising.

If a new son arrives at your house you are keen to have it "put in the paper," where your friends will see it, thereby advertising the fact that you are walking on eggs.

If the editor called you a thief in a two line item and stuck it away in the most obscure corner of the paper, would you pass it by in the belief that it "would never be noticed?"

NEVER! You would consider yourself defamed before the entire community, and would paw up the earth in your bellowings. You would be only too quick to concede that every line in the paper is read.

Yes, advertising certainly pays.

There is no ad so small, or insignificant, but what some one is waiting for it.

There are plenty of people who want what you have to sell, but they are weary of looking through a haystack for a needle. They prefer to find it in an advertisement.

And they will look in the local paper for the ad.

They will find someone's—will it be yours?

BILL NOT A PORK BARREL

Appropriation for Rivers and Harbors Not One of Graft

In the past few months there has been a concerted effort on the part of certain newspapers and periodicals to make the public believe that the river and harbor appropriation bill, which has been before the Senate since June 18, is a "pork barrel" bill pure and simple, and is full of "graft," to such an extent that it ought to be beaten.

As a matter of fact, "pork barrel" legislation no more fits the river and harbor bill than it would fit the post office appropriation bill, the army bill, or the navy bill, for they all concern the whole country.

It has, however, become the fashion on the part of particular newspapers and journals of a more or less sensational character to cry "pork" when the river and harbor bill comes before Congress, with the result that many unthinking people believe that it is primarily a bill designed to assist the political ambitions of representatives and senators, when the unvarnished truth is that there is no big appropriation bill that is so free from the selfishness that prevails in legislation to a more or less degree, as this same river and harbor bill.

Many years ago river and harbor bills were passed without very scrupulous regard for reports of engineers or the merits of particular projects. Such bills were passed under suspension of the rules, without opportunity for discussion or amendment, and, naturally, resulted, in two instances at least, in well-remembered vetoes. It was under such conditions that the title of "pork barrel" bills came into use. Of late years, however, it has been the policy of the Committees of Congress dealing with the improvements of our rivers and harbors, to refer all new projects to the Corps of Engineers of the Army for recommendation as to the need and utility of every individual project, and, as a result, nothing in the way of appropriation has gone into a bill for such project unless the Engineers have given it their sanction.

It is, therefore, impossible to believe that the Corps of Engineers, jealous, as it is, of its good name before the people, would be found giving its endorsement to anything that might savor of "pork" or "graft." As General Dan C. Kingsman, Chief of Engineers, tersely put it the other day, when interviewed as to the merits of the river and harbor bill: "My judgment is that there is less than one-half of one per cent of 'pork' in the river and harbor appropriation bill now pending in the Senate."

AUTOMATICALLY CANCELLED

Quincy Expressman Loses His Pony Express Permit

Through the conviction of Peter Gaccicia, for violation of the liquor law, there will be one less expressman in Quincy holding a permit to transport spirituous or malt liquors for hire or reward, reducing the total to twelve.

Gaccicia anticipating that a complaint would be issued against him, requested Inspector Goodhue if such was the case to bring it Thursday afternoon. His request was complied with and he was immediately arraigned before Judge Avery for the illegal sale of liquor.

Evidence was introduced by the police department that he had sold liquor in violation of the law and he was found guilty and a fine of $50 imposed which was paid.

Under the socalled pony express law any person holding a permit to transport liquor immediately forfeits the same upon conviction. The permit of Gaccicia therefore is automatically cancelled.

DECIDES TO PAY.

Rosario DiBelli, one of the 11 defendants in the recent liquor crusade against violaters of liquor law came into court this morning and withdrew his appeal from a finding of $50 made against him Thursday. He accepted the fine of $50 and paid money on account and was given time to pay the remainder.

DON'T WORRY RETIRE EARLY

Reasons Given by 94 Year Old Lady for Her Good Health

"Don't worry," is the motto of Mrs. Jerusha Lovejoy ninety-four years young who arrived in Squantum Tuesday from Maine to make an extended visit to her son Fred Lovejoy of Hampden street.

When the Squantum correspondent called on Mrs. Lovejoy she found her prettily dressed in a black and lavender silk gown, seated before a spacious window in the living-room enjoying the ocean view, this being her first visit to Squantum.

When asked to what she attributed her good health and old age Mrs. Lovejoy replied "I never worry, have always retired early; never drank tea or coffee but plenty of water. I can look back to my past life with great pleasure and because of kindness of my children it has all been worth while."

Mrs. Lovejoy has the distinction of being born the same year as Queen Victoria. A few days ago she sat for a group picture in which were five generations of her family.

When asked if she would like to go up in a flying machine she said she would like to if the operator was a competent person. The styles of today she thought were abominable. Mrs. Lovejoy remarked that her glasses were not packed with the rest of her clothing but as she had not worn them very much the last two years she wouldn't send for them. Two years ago she was compelled to give up sewing and except for this she enjoys all the pleasures of life of a person many years her junior.

Mrs. Lovejoy was born in Readfield, Maine, in 1820. She passed most of her life in North Wayne in that state. When asked to recall some of the experiences of her younger years, her eyes filled with tears as she recalled her elder son, now living in Maine, going away to the Civil War. So keen is her memory that it appeared as if it was but of recent occurance. Her son however is alive and well and now in his 72d year. Mrs. Lovejoy had five children. Her youngest son, Fred Lovejoy has for many years held a responsible position with the firm of Schreve, Crump & Low, Tremont street, Boston.

On her trip from Maine this week, Mrs. Lovejoy travelled seven miles by carriage to the train, rode from Maine by train and upon arrival at the North station came by automobile to Squantum. That night she ate a hearty meal including some of her favorite dishes—lettuce, cucumbers and radishes, and sat up beyond her usual hour conversing animately with her son and family.

Few women so near the century mark retain their keenness of wit and humor as does Mrs. Lovejoy. When asked if she hoped to reach the century mark she replied—"So long as I can live happily, I would like to live, but when I die, I want to die gracefully." She is an optimist and she conveys to those around her the happy spirit which has made her own life so pleasant.

When the interviewer arose to depart Mrs. Lovejoy insisted upon arising and remarked with a keen twinkle in her eye—"I don't want to give in at my age."

SUPPER AND ENTERTAINMENT.

Rebecca Wiswell Tent, No. 53, Daughters of Veterans, will hold a supper and entertainment tonight in Grand Army hall. A fine program will be given and included among the artists will be Mr. and Mrs. Harry Griffiths of New York, professional singers, who are performing in the sketch "California" which opens a Boston engagement Monday.

Mrs. Griffiths, under the stage name Leslie Leigh, is a coloratura soprano and her husband is a baritone singer. They have been in Quincy the past week as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter M. Packard of Hancock street.

VIOLATED AUTO LAWS.

Aaron W. Porter, 28 Kendall street, Boston, a colored chauffeur, was ordered committed to the Dedham jail this morning when he was unable to pay a fine of $20 imposed for violation of the speed laws at Milton. The complaint was brought by U. G. Davis of the Metropolitan Park police. The charge of stealing an auto was dismissed.

William P. R. Duff, 56 Sawyer street Boston and Elmer F. Morse of 87 Millet street, Boston were arraigned for violation of the speed laws. Morse pleaded nolo and paid $10 on account of costs and Duff was fined $15.

STRIPPED AND LASHED

Fathers of Girls Who Were Insulted Take Law In Own Hands

Montreal, July 24.—In the case of George Becker, an American motorman, citizens of St. Lambert are congratulating themselves that they have awarded exact and ample, if somewhat irregular, justice.

They administered it criss-cross on Becker's bare back with a cat-o'-nine tails. Then they took him to the railway station, put him aboard a train and gave him a chance to leave the town upon his promise never to return.

This was after the young daughters of several citizens had accused Becker of insulting them grossly. They told their mothers, and when their fathers came home a hasty meeting was held with the result that when Becker came in on his last trip from Montreal he was taken from his car by a committee of leading citizens.

Becker, it is said, made a full confession in writing. The next step was to take the man away to a park, strip him to the waist and lay on the stripes in good order.

GIVES UP JONES FIGHT

Wilson Withdraws Nomination For Federal Reserve Board

Washington, July 24.—President Wilson ended the bitterest fight of his administration by withdrawing the nomination of Thomas D. Jones of Chicago to be a member of the federal reserve board. Jones had written urging that he no longer be permitted to remain a cause of embarrassment.

The message of withdrawal, totally unexpected by everybody, created a mild sensation and cut short a debate that promised to run indefinitely.

Opposition to the nomination had been based on his connection with the Harvester company, which is under indictment as a trust, and the senate banking committee had submitted a majority report adverse to confirmation, signed by all the Republican and two Democratic members.

COSSACKS SHOOT DOWN STRIKERS

Six Are Killed In Riots In Streets of St. Petersburg

St. Petersburg, July 24.—Desperate fighting between soldiers and police on one side and workmen on the other occurred in the strike which has made 300,000 men idle in Russia.

Strikers erected barricades in the streets here and Cossacks started to raze these fortifications. The troops poured several volleys into the strikers, killing six and wounding eleven.

The labor unrest has marred the visit of President Poincare. The program of entertainment has been curtailed.

WIELDS A RAZOR

Lynn Man Cuts the Wrists of Sweetheart and Himself

Brockton, Mass., July 24.—Many elements of mystery exist in the attempt of John L. Butler, 45, of Lynn, to kill his sweetheart, Miss May Fielding of Taunton, at the Hotel Victoria last night, and afterward to take his own life.

Both are in a hospital. Butler's condition is critical, and his recovery is doubtful. The woman will probably live.

Butler slashed Miss Fielding's left wrist with a razor and afterward cut a similar gash across his own right wrist. The police say they found a loaded .22-calibre revolver and a bottle of poison in the room occupied by the couple.

Washington, July 24.—Secretary of State Bryan has "hit the Chautauqua trail" again. He went to Harrisburg Wednesday night, where he showed with some Alpine yodlers.

He returned to Washington yesterday and left again at noon for the "heart of Pennsylvania," where he spoke again last night. He will be in Pennsylvania all of Saturday making speeches. For each appearance he is guaranteed $250.

Kitchen Notes

The Fireless Cooker.

Make or buy a fireless cooker. It is unexcelled for stews, cereals, puddings and vegetables. A fireless cooker keeps the kitchen cool, saves labor and fuel and does not encourage flies, because there is no odor of cooking to attract them.

To manufacture a homemade cooker take a large wooden basket or box not less than sixteen inches high and fifteen inches across, an eight inch granite dinner pail holding about a gallon, with a tight fitting cover and some excelsior.

Pack the excelsior into the wooden bucket to the depth of about three inches and on this place the granite pail and pack the excelsior tightly around it to the top. If properly packed the pail can be lifted out of the excelsior without disturbing the packing.

To cook vegetables prepare in the usual way, put in the pail and boil for ten or twenty minutes in the pail.

Then place the pail in a box, pack the excelsior around it and pay no further attention to it until ready to serve the vegetables, which should be in a short time. However, as different cookers have different heat retaining properties the time can be best determined by experiment. With a fireless cooker there is no danger of having burned or scorched food.

Asparagus For Hot Weather.

Asparagus has medicinal qualities that are beneficial at this season. There are many ways of serving it, but the simplest way is the best. The tough ends should be cut off and the remaining stalks bound together in small bunches with a strip of muslin.

Boil in just enough water to cover until tender, but not soft. Cook about twenty minutes if the asparagus is young and fresh.

Remove the stalks from the water, drain thoroughly and place on toast.

With it can be served a sauce made of half a cupful of the water in which it has been boiled, a tablespoonful of butter, level tablespoonful of flour and half a cupful of rich cream.

The butter should be thoroughly mixed with the flour before it is added to the hot water and cream. An old fashioned way of serving asparagus is to cut the tender portions of the stalk into half inch pieces and boil them until they are tender, thoroughly drain and serve with butter, pepper and salt.

Peach and Rice Meringue.

Put rice on the fire in a saucepan of cold water. Stir occasionally while it is heating. Let boil five minutes; then drain in a sieve and pass cold water from the faucet through it. This is called blanched rice. Now cook a cupful of blanched rice and salt in three cupfuls of milk until tender and dry, add three egg yolks, one-quarter cupful each of butter, sugar and whipped cream. Make a border of rice on a serving dish that will stand the heat of the oven. Surround this with halves of peaches (fresh or canned), with skins removed. Inside the border place sliced peaches and rice in layers, sprinkling the peaches with sugar and giving the whole a dome shape. Cover with meringue, dust with sugar and set in oven about ten minutes.

Huckleberry Muffins.

To make these take two cupfuls of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, a cupful of milk, an egg, a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful of sugar, a tablespoonful of butter and a cupful of huckleberries. Sift the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar into a bowl; add the milk slowly, the well beaten egg and melted butter, mix well and add the huckleberries which have been carefully picked over. Brush muffin tins with lard, put a spoonful of the mixture in each and bake thirty minutes in a moderate oven.

The After Meal Rest.

One should rest after meals if it is at all possible for a quarter of an hour at least. This is especially necessary after the chief meal.

Many people are addicted to the short nap after dinner, which is a good habit if the sleep is only a short one. But if the sleep is of two hours' duration it is decidedly bad for both digestion and health.

Baked Asparagus Tips.

Boil asparagus tips in salted water until tender. Have ready some slices of buttered toast. Arrange the asparagus in small mounds on the toast, sprinkle with buttered breadcrumbs and a little grated cheese and set in hot oven for five or eight minutes, just long enough to get perfectly hot. Pour over dish, just before serving, a little hot cream.

Raspberry Turnovers.

Roll out pie crust and cut in sections about four or five inches square. Put a spoonful of raspberry jam in center, fold over twice and press down the two ends and trim off with a sharp knife. Brush the tops with milk and bake in a hot oven.

Summer Economy.

Practice economy in small things. When using the oven for roasting bake a pie or pudding, bake the potatoes, eliminate the use of the other burners. Don't burn gas for toast to save a few pieces of stale bread.

THE PLAYHOUSE

SHUBERT THEATRE.

The business at the Shubert Theatre, Boston where Paul J. Rainey's 1914 series of African Hunt Pictures is being presented for a limted engagement, is so enormous that the management is forced to give an extra performance Sunday evening, which will take place at 8.30.

This 1914 series depicts the wild animals of the jungle, their ways, habits and peculiarities in a most realistic and fascinating manner and a talented lecturer, who has hunted wild animals in the jungle, will give a detailed description of the numerous films.

Besides being instructive and interesting, this series shows one of the most daring and wonderful films ever exhibited. It is a picture of the charging of a ferocious lion and was taken under most trying circumstances at the risk of Mr. Rainey's life. On the screen one can see how close the beast was to the moving picture machine when it was killed. It was within five feet of the camera and just ready to spring upon Mr. Rainey and his attendant. Nothing so thrilling has ever been depicted on a moving picture screen before and one can learn more from a visit to Paul J. Rainey's pictures at the Shubert Theatre than they could from reading a dozen books on natural history.

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

The most notable dramatic stock engagement since the days of the old Boston Museum will take place at the Majestic Theatre next week beginning Monday matinee, when Edmund Breese himself, the famous Broadway star will be seen in his greatest play "The Master Mind" supported by the Majestic Players. Mr. Breese was some years ago Boston's biggest stock favorite at the Castle Square Theatre, and since then has become one of the most powerful figures of the American drama. For this engagement he will receive the largest salary ever before paid an artist for stock production in Boston.

The public is familiar with his wonderful creations of the leading characters in "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Third Degree" and "The Spendthrift," but all of these are excelled by his marvelous portrayal of the mysterious person called the "Master Mind." The piece is without doubt the most powerful offering the stage has seen in many a year. Because of the extremely low summer prices which will prevail, the opinion of many is that Mr. Breese will be presented in moving pictures. This is not so. He will be here himself in the flesh. He brings with him his own leading lady, Miss Florianne Larramore. The balance of the cast will include the well known Boston favorites, Donald Meek, Rose Morison and a host of others. An early reservation of seats is suggested, for the management desires to announce that tickets bought from speculators will positively be refused at the door.

WATCH AND TOOLS RECOVERED.

A watch owned by John McKinnon was recovered in a Boston pawnshop Thursday by Capt. Daniel R. McKay. Later in the day a valuable kit of carpenter tools belonging to William C. Jinks was recovered.

McKinnon's watch disappeared on Wednesday and he filed a complaint against H. M. Stone charging him with the larceny of it. Stone was arrested and was discharged that afternoon for lack of prosecution because McKinnon was not in court.

SOME FACTS ABOUT QUINCY

school graduates when Woodward Institute is included. May honestly be compared with other cities in the Metropolitan district.

QUINCY AN HONORED NAME

It was Rev. Daniel Munro Wilson, a former pastor of the First Parish church, who said:—"Quincy seems the one name essential to the spirit and history of this locality. Deeprooted in chivalrous Norman life, transplanted here with the first settlers, associated with so much that is fine and high in many who here bore it, and in utterance full and dignified, it tastes of the soil, it seems almost the natural product of environment, and not a title fixed by formal vote. Honored at home, abroad revered, it is a distinction to be called OF QUINCY."

NAMED FOR COL. JOHN QUINCY

"The more the name of Col. John Quincy is scrutinized the more he is exalted. For 21 successive years, that is from 1719 to 1740, he was returned to the House of Representatives with unfailing regularity. His personality, his character and judgment, and his sturdy provincial patriotism so impressed his fellow representatives that they elected him Speaker of the House from 1727 to 1741, a period of 14 years. A tribute from town and Province that stamps him as no common man."

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

Many neighborhoods where each one takes a personal pride in the ppearance of his own home, and co-operates with others.

MODERN CONVENIENCES

Reference might also be made to our public conveniences:—abundance of Metropolitan water, Metropolitan sewer system, auto fire department, permanent police department, electric lights and gas in all parts of the city, nine electric car routes, good train service, excellent banking facilities, daily and weekly newspapers, city hospital, public library, etc. etc.

A PATRIOTIC CITY

With Adams and Hancock as Revolutionary statesmen Quincy early became distinguished. She sent to the Civil war one of the FIRST companies of MINUTE MEN. The first call of Lincoln was issued unexpectedly April 15, and the next day Co. H, Fourth Massachusetts Volunteers, reported in Boston and left for Fortress Munroe, and was mustered into service April 22. FIRST soldier killed in engagement was from Quincy. Sent 954 men to Civil war although population of town was then only 6,800. Erected a Soldiers Monument as early as 1868. In the war with Spain, a majority of the members of Co. K, Fifth regiment M. V. M., were from Quincy. Flag today honored and revered.

BECAUSE OF ITS REMARKABLE GROWTH

In 1875 Quincy was a small town with a population of less than 10,000. We have not only made rapid gains but we have PASSED SEVERAL OTHER TOWNS AND CITIES in the race. A good index of progress. In 1880 Quincy was 29th in population in Massachusetts; in 1885 we had moved up to 27th place; in 1890 we had jumped to 23d; in 1895 to 22d; in 1905 to 21st; and the last census in 1910 showed us No. 20, with a population of 32,642, which has since been increased to nearly 40,000. A rapidly growing city is always a good place for business.

WOMEN'S CLUBS FLOURISH

Prominent in the civic work and social life of Quincy are its Women's Clubs of earnest, able, self sacrificing women, who esteem it a pleasure to work for the uplift of the city and its people. These include the Quincy Women's Club, Wollaston Women's Club, Squantum Women's Club, Riverside Women's Club, Lady Associates of Houghs Neck, Young Women's Club, King's Daughters, Women's Relief Corp, Quincy Catholic Club, Hospital Aid Association, Day Nursery Association, and many others.

A CITY OF CHURCHES

The number of churches in the city is a surprise to everyone, but with two or three exceptions all are flourishing and doing the work of the Master. There are seven Congregational, including one Swedish and one Finnish; four Catholic; four Methodist, including one Swedish; three Baptists including one Swedish; three Episcopal, including a Swedish Lutheran; two Unitarian, two Presbyterian, two Hebrew, one Universalist, one Christian Science, and other mission churches. Many of these churches are free from debt and constantly making improvements.

MANY GENEROUS BENEFACTORS

Few cities have been so favored as Quincy in endowments which are almost without limit, and meet many requirements: an institute for the education of girls, a City Hospital, including the Rice pavilion and a Nurses' home, two large public parks, a beautiful Public Library building, and funds for schools, charity, etc.

JUST A FEW WORDS HISTORICALLY

While Quincy has so much to talk up without delving in history, she has much in history to make her proud, being the birthplace, home and burial place of two Presidents of the United States; the birthplace of the FIRST Vice President; the birthplace of John Hancock, the bold signer of the Declaration of Independence, who was the FIRST Governor of Massachusetts under the Constitution; the site of the FIRST incorporated Railroad in the United States. The birthplaces of the Presidents are preserved today as show houses, also the Quincy mansion owned by the Colonial Dames, and the Church of the Presidents now known as the First Parish church.

GOING AFTER THE PENNANT

Nichols of Syracuse to Pitch for Fore River Hereafter

Nichols, the Herculean pitcher and captain of this years University of Syracuse base ball team has signed up with the Fore River team of the Manufacturers league and makes his local debut here Saturday when the shipyard boys play the Forbes Lithograph Co., at Merrymount park. Nichols has secured a position in the yard and intends to stay here until college opens.

As a pitcher he was considered one of the best in intercollegiate circles and it was with considerable difficulty that his contract was secured. Nichols has turned down several offers with minor league teams and has worked before the major scouts but because of the ruling on summer base ball he was obliged to act accordingly.

He held Harvard to two hits and Pennsylvania to one and Penn. beat Columbia and they beat Harvard. Nichols is in the pink of condition and when this six foot figure takes his position in the box he ought to be given an ovation.

Bishop will be on the receiving end and there will be no changes in the balance of the lineup. All are working in harmony and the boys are all desirous of taking the remaining four games which will give them the championship. The balance of the schedule is:

July 25—Forbes Lith. at Merrymount.
Aug. 1—Bird & Sons at Merrymount.
Aug. 8—Forbes Lith. at Chelsea.
Aug. 22—G. E. Electric at Lynn.

ARMY'S ATTITUDE SCARES UNIONISTS

King's Home Rule Conference May Be Successful

London, July 24.—To the surprise of the entire country the home rule conference called by King George did not end in failure, as had been predicted, and hope is once more expressed that a solution of the Ulster problem may be found.

The rumor is current that the Unionists showed unmistakable signs of weakening and that this condition was brought about when the Royal Irish guards indulged in a wild demonstration for Redmond and Dillon, the Irish leaders, as they passed from Buckingham palace to the house of commons.

To get the full significance of the incident it should be remembered that the Royal Irish guards are really the guardians of Buckingham palace and of the royal family, and that their colonel-in-chief is Lord Roberts, who has been an ardent supporter of Carson and the Ulster Unionists.

It is taken to mean that the majority of the army will by no means be found on the side of the Ulster Unionists, as had been boasted by the Carson followers.

M'Graw's Latest Find Proves Year's Outfield Sensation

JOHNNY M'GRAW has broken one of his ironclad rules and flashed a newcomer in the middle of the season's run. Mac never did this before in his life, but in the case of "Demon Dave" Robertson he certainly seems justified.

Dave came to the Giants three years ago as a pitcher, but an injury to his arm queered his twirling career, and Mac had to set about making an outer gardener of him. He succeeded so well that his new find is the greatest fielding and hitting sensation of the year.

LITTLE BITS OF SPORTING CHAT

DODGERS SIGN ROBINSON.

Three Year Contract For Brooklyn Manager—How Veach Fools the Tacticians—The Kaiser Offers a Cup For Yacht Race at Panama-Pacific Fair.

J. S. Edstrom, Sweden; Szilard Stankovits, Hungary; Frantz Reichel, France; James E. Sullivan, United States, and Mr. Fisher, England, have been named as an international jury for the Olympic games to be held at Berlin in 1916.

The committee has decided that the Olympic games of 1920 be held at Budapest.

James E. Sullivan, head of the American delegation, has received the entries of fifty additional Hungarian athletes for the Panama-Pacific games at San Francisco.

The Brooklyn National league club has signed Manager Wilbert Robinson to a contract covering 1915, 1916 and 1917. This sets at rest all rumors regarding a change in the management of the Superbas. Outfielder Joe Riggert was released to the St. Louis Nationals.

Some time the strategists will cease passing Cobb or Crawford or both in a pinch to get Bob Veach. Then maybe they will win a game from Detroit that has gone into its ninth inning or into overtime tied. In the tenth inning of a recent fray with Washington Owen Bush, the first batsman, reached third base on his own hit, Moriarty's sacrifice and a steal. Cobb and Crawford then were walked intentionally, as anything at all would win the ball game. For the fourth time this season, in this sort of situation, Veach was called to the bat, and for the fourth time in such spots he delivered. The Illinois boy smashed a single past Morgan to right center. Before it was retrieved Bush was home and the Tigers were possessed of victory.

The announcement that the German emperor will give a cup to the winner of the sonderklasse yacht race at the Panama-Pacific exposition was contained in a telegram received by the German consul at San Francisco, Franz Bopp, from the German ambassador in Washington.

This makes the third cup from the head of a great nation, as President Wilson has offered a cup for the winner of the twelve meter race, and King George V. of England has put up a cup for the Class N race under universal rules.

Ted Meredith, Penn's great athlete and holder of the world's half mile championship, is the author of some interesting facts about the running game. He says: "To run a half mile in the world's record time of 1 minute and 50⅕ seconds is only a little thing in this present day of notable achievements, but to travel that distance a shade faster than perhaps any other person on the globe is somewhat of a consolation to any of us. Many of the critics believe that the mark for this distance is placed at a point where it will stand for many years to come, but I feel certain that, like many of the other records, it is bound to be shattered, and when it does come it will make us all wonder how it all happened."

Coach Pooch Donovan of Harvard university is of the opinion that no athlete should be required to run two hard races on the same day, especially in a meet like the eastern intercollegiates.

It is expecting too much of an athlete to run two races in one afternoon, claims Donovan. Nowadays the class is getting so high that a runner tackling two such events is apt to work serious injury to himself.

Vaughan Merrick of Philadelphia has been elected captain of next season's Pennsylvania crew, Merrick rowed No. 6 in the varsity race. He prepared at St. Paul's school. Merrick never rowed on a freshman crew, but made the varsity last year on his first trial in a shell. Merrick and six of his crew mates remain as a nucleus for next season's crew, with which Coach Nickalls expects to move up to first place next year.

Vincent G. Sanborn of New York city, a junior in Columbia college, was elected captain of the varsity crew for next year at a dinner held after the regatta. Sanborn rowed No. 4 on the crew which won the first championship Columbia has had in nineteen years. Sanborn prepared at Morris high school, New York.

J. H. Crocker, former secretary of the Brantford (Canada) Y. M. C. A., has been appointed instructor of athletics to the Y. M. C. A. members of Shanghai.

At the present time Mr. Crocker has in charge the preparatory work in China for the Berlin Olympic games, and he confidently expects that the issue of his efforts will be a Chinese team among the leaders.

GROOMING NEWPORT COURTS.

About $50,000 to Be Spent In Preparing Them.

Blades of grass seem a trivial thing to collect, yet the casino at Newport is spending the tidy sum of $50,000 so as to have a fine plot of turf over which Maurice E. McLoughlin may streak like a comet and the famous Anthony F. Wilding, the Australian, may bring off his terrific shots without fear of a bad bound of the ball.

Officials of the United States National Lawn Tennis association and the board of governors of the picturesque casino have begun early in the season to get the historic field in readiness for what promise to be the greatest battles over the nets that the courts have ever known for the American championship titles.

The grand stands about the court are being made over new so as to seat twice as many spectators as hereto fore.

SUIT TO BREAK GREAT COMBINE

Government Brings Action Against New Haven Railroad

HAS GRIP ON NEW ENGLAND

Charged With Controlling Nine Railroad Systems, Twenty-Two Boat Lines and Hundreds of Miles of Trolleys—Divorce From Boston and Maine Included In Demand

New York, July 24.—Under orders of President Wilson and Attorney General McReynolds, a Sherman law anti-trust suit to dissolve the New Haven railroad, trolley and steamship combination in New England was filed here. The combination was scathingly scored as a "combination in restraint of trade and commerce."

The bill charges that the New Haven has acquired control of nine railroad systems, twenty-two boat lines and 1500 miles of trolley lines. It charges that the New Haven earns about 91 percent of the gross freight revenue and about 95 percent of the gross passenger revenue of all New England railroads.

The government asks that the contract, combinations and conspiracies in restraint of trade and commerce, together with the attempts to monopolize, be declared in violation of the Sherman anti-trust law. It asks for the separation of all the railroads, steamboats and trolley lines, and for the breaking up of the control of steamboat lines through the navigation company.

It is further asked that the courts declare the acquisition of the Boston and Maine stock by the New Haven illegal, and that the New Haven company and the Boston Railroad Holding company be directed to sell all the stocks and bonds held by them in the Boston and Maine and its leased lines.

Finally the government prays that all of the sales necessary to the breaking up of the alleged monopoly be made under the supervision and direction of the court to persons not stockholders or agents, or otherwise under the control or influence of the New Haven company.

It is charged in the suit that, in acquiring railroads, trolleys and steamship lines necessary to a traffic monopoly, complicated and elusive methods have been resorted to in order to conceal the real character of the transactions.

The suit has nothing to do with the criminal aspect of the New Haven case. The department of justice is now preparing a mass of evidence to submit to a federal grand jury in New York when it asks criminal indictment of New Haven directors.

The action was brought about by the New Haven's refusal to obey the recently enacted Massachusetts law providing for sale of the New Haven's Boston and Maine shares with the provision that the state have the right to purchase the securities at any time at a value to be fixed. The directors refused to comply with this law on the ground that its conditions would weaken the market value of the securities.

REFUSES TO EAT

But Becky Edelson Shows No Weakness From "Hunger Strike"

New York, July 24.—Although physicians on Blackwell's island question the sincerity of Becky Edelson's hunger strike, they removed the young woman anarchist to a prison hospital last night in order to observe more closely her physical condition.

Since Monday night she has refused to eat, but apparently she has not grown weak from hunger and prison officials expressed suspicion that she had been surreptitiously eating food which has been smuggled to her cell by other prisoners.

Although Becky is confined to her cell most of the time, there is plenty of opportunity for her to mingle with other women prisoners and sympathizers could easily smuggle bits of bread, meat and dainties to her.

Detroit, July 24.—Jilted for another, Mike Levandowski, jealous suitor, followed a newly married couple from Pittsburg to Detroit, put a bullet into the back of the husband, Steve Rivichko, and sent three more into the body of the woman, killing her instantly.

Levandowski then ended his own life by levelling the revolver against his chin. Rivichko has only a fair chance of recovery.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail-order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

No Pie Crust Promises

Wise advertisers never make "pie-crust" promises.

They know that to break faith with the public would be fatal—worse than throwing their money away.

That is one reason why advertised goods are more in demand.

People know that there is quality behind them.

They look on them as standards. Any dealer knows that there are more calls for advertised goods than for goods not advertised.

This is especially true if they happen to have been advertised in the newspapers, which directly reach the people.

The standard of advertising is more exacting today than ever before. Advertisers are more careful of their promises and more interesting in their text and illustrations.

The world grows better.

A Story of an American In Mexico

By F. A. MITCHEL

Malcolm Burch, having inherited enough money to enable him to set himself up in some sort of business and not fancying mercantile pursuits, cast about for an out of door method of investment. He visited the west, looked over the sheep growing industry and concluded that under the conditions it was not inviting. Going down to Galveston, he sailed for Vera Cruz, Mexico, and thence he went by rail up to the capital.

Coffee raising appeared much more attractive to him than sheep raising, and he decided to spend some time on a coffee plantation studying the culture of the bean. Every morning he mounted a horse, donning Mexican riding costume, which consists of tight trousers with a row of buttons running the full length of the leg, a short coat and a profusely decorated sugar loaf sombrero. In this attire Mr. Burch looked very handsome and, being a young man in the twenties, was especially fitted to capture the hearts of Mexican maidens.

One morning he was riding along a road lined with tropical verdure. The sun shone brightly and would have shone hot had not its rays been tempered by the high altitude of the Mexican plateau, which is more than 7,000 feet above the sea. The country combined the beauties of the tropics with the exhilarating air of the mountains. Indeed, there were peaks all about him, while in the distance an elongated mountain presented the form of a woman resting on her bier, the snow forming her winding sheet.

Before Malcolm Burch tripped a little Mexican girl. Her jacket, covered with spangles, reached barely to her waist. Her skirt, bedecked in like manner, fell not far below the knee. Not needing her robosa—a garment Mexican women wear over their heads and shoulders—she carried it on her arm.

"If anything were needed," said the American to himself, "to complete this delicious landscape it would be the little figure sparkling in the rays of the sun."

When he reached the girl she turned and cast a glance at him. She was neither Spanish nor Indian, but a mixture of the two races. Her Spanish ancestors must have once dwelt under the Pyrenees, where the climate is mild and many of the people are fair, for her hair had a gold tinge in it, and her eyes, if not blue, were certainly not black. She was apparently about sixteen years old.

Burch had picked up a few words of Spanish for ordinary use, but not enough to carry on a conversation. But a man does not need words to express admiration. Indeed, the word beside the look would seem very tame. Burch knew the words to express "Where are you going?" but did not understand the reply. He put out his hand and his foot resting in the stirrup, meaning, "If you will give me your hand and put your little foot on mine I will lift you up behind me and carry you whithersoever you are going."

The girl hesitated, then advanced, did as he indicated, and he swung her up behind him on the horse's back. To keep her position she must put her arms about his waist, and whenever his hand touched hers there came a tingle that ran by leaps and jumps to his heart. He asked her her name, and she said it was Rosa Puente with such a musical voice that, pretty as it was, the name sounded much prettier.

They rode along, he mixing English and Spanish, three parts English to one of Spanish, she adhering to the musical language which was the only one she knew. She looked and acted unsophisticated, but when they approached a clump of adobe houses she slid down on the ground, knowing full well that she must not appear in company with a man. Had she been of the upper class she could not have been more particular in this respect, that class in which girls are not permitted to converse with members of the opposite sex except through a barred window, or the man standing in the street while the girl stands on a balcony above him.

Malcolm Burch said "Buena bye," mixing his languages as usual, and the girl replied in the vernacular. He forced his horse to walk very slowly in order that he might keep her ahead of him, partly that he might feast his eyes on her graceful figure and partly to observe where she went. She stopped at an adobe house with a thatched roof in the center of a small yard in which chickens and vegetables and flowers grew indiscriminately.

The knowledge that Rosa Puente was not one of the higher class Mexicans, while it brought a shadow of disappointment, did not deter Burch from following up an affair which he should have dropped at once. When he went to sleep that night he passed from consciousness to slumber with a jumble of Rosa Puente and other varieties of roses, adobe houses, chickens and such articles running and jumping before him, and during the night he dreamed that he was trying to catch Rosa Puente and the chickens were always in his way.

What use to lay down the devices practiced by these two to meet without their meetings being known to the girl's relatives and friends? The Spanish custom of putting young women behind bars is not conducive to keeping them from men when they are, so to speak, "out of jail." Rosa was far more adept in arranging meetings with Burch than an American girl of her age would be. While she possessed the native innocence of youth, she had for several years been given to understand that she was not trusted, and it is not easy for such persons to consider themselves on their honor. Be this as it may, Burch met Rosa frequently, and she laid all the plans for their meetings.

Burch went to Mexico City just after the revolution that landed Victoriano Huerta in the presidency. When Carranza, governor of the state of Coahuila, determined to revolt and avenge the death of Madero the conditions rapidly changed. The governor first got all the arms there were in Saltillo, then proceeded to take all the money. Burch was not pleased with this condition of things and decided that, after all, he would not care to invest his money in Mexico. Such being the case, there was but one thing for him to do, go somewhere else. This was a very easy mental process for him, there being nothing to regret in leaving Mexico, not even Rosa Puente, for three or four months' association with a girl who lived in a mud edifice is usually quite enough for a man born with a silver spoon in his mouth. Somehow it did not occur to Burch that there would be any objection on Rosa's part to part with him. He had never seen any member of her family, though she had told him she had a father, a mother and some small brothers and sisters. She said that her father was away from home a good deal of the time. When he returned he had plenty of money, a part of which he spent in buying what the family needed and the rest in the national drink, pulque. When it was all gone he returned to follow the same course as before.

But Burch was not interested in the Puente family, for he had not followed the ordinary process of courting in vogue in the country and had made no application for Rosa's hand. He looked upon his affair with the little Mexican girl as a very pleasant one. At first he had wished that she was a lady that he might marry her, but time had cured him of that. What concerned him now was how to get out of Mexico with $20,000 that he had brought there to invest in a coffee plantation as soon as he had learned how to manage one.

He turned his money into American banknotes and distributed them in different parts of his clothing. Then when he was ready to start for Vera Cruz, proposing to make the journey on horseback, he sent Rosa word by a messenger he had used before to meet him at their usual trysting place. When they met Burch was on horseback ready for his departure for Texas. Dismounting, he took Rosa in his arms, kissed her and told her that he must go to the United States. It was not safe for him to keep money any longer in a country where levies of cash were made on the citizens by one side or the other. He was going to get his money in the bank in Galveston; then he would come back to her—that is, if it were possible to get through.

Rosa received the announcement with her head on Burch's breast, so that he could not see her expression. He feared she might object to his going, but was surprised after a prolonged silence to see her look up and say:

"You are right. Put your money in a safe place. If you will wait till I can get a horse I will go part way with you."

There was a peculiar expression on her face when she said this that he did not quite like. However, he expressed pleasure at having her with him, and she went to get a horse. She came back presently with one she had borrowed from a neighbor, and the two started northward.

Rosa said very little, which Burch naturally attributed to her reluctance to part with him. He thought it best to talk about what he would do when he returned, but this did not move her to a more pleasurable feeling. When they came to where the road forked she insisted that the one on the left was the shortest route to Burch's destination, Laredo. He knew better, but allowed himself to be persuaded to go her way. When they had been on the road a couple of hours he suggested that she turn back, since she had far to go and would be tired. But she said she would go a little farther.

In passing over a declivity they looked down on a small clump of trees, and he saw a group of horsemen. Burch paled. He knew that he had met with a force of rebels or bandits; he suspected the latter. A man sang out from below for them to advance. They did so, and the men in the camp spoke to Rosa familiarly, as if they knew her. A man approached, and she called him "Padre." Then she told him something in Spanish which Burch did not understand.

Turning to Burch, he said, "Money," which was the only English word he knew. Burch saw at once that he had been led into a trap by the girl whom he had considered a plaything.

Half an hour later the American, at the request of Rosa Puente, was permitted to resume his journey, but without his $20,000 and without the girl.

"Goodby, senor," she said. "I thought that your money would be safer with my father than in the bank at Galveston. You needn't trouble yourself to come back on my account, for I would not think of mating with a 'gringo.'"

She said this in a mixture of Spanish and English, the latter having been picked up in the love passages that had occurred between her and the American.

CAILLAUX' LIFE BARED IN COURT

First Wife Tells of Murderous Mood at Bedside

HE THREATENED TO KILL HER

Forgave Him When He Begged on His Knees After Discovery of His Love For Woman Whom He Afterward Married — Sensational Recriminations at Paris Murder Trial

Paris, July 24.—Mme. Berthe Gueydan, ex-Premier Caillaux's first wife, a slender woman with wasted cheeks and black eyes, came into the court and faced her former husband and put, as though upon a rack, the woman who had won him from her—Mme. Caillaux, now on trial for the killing of Editor Calmette.

She laid bare many of the secrets of her life with Caillaux. She told of his liason and of his throwing himself at her knees and asking her pardon. She described her methods of defense against what she termed "the Machiavellian maneuvers of an unfaithful husband." She testified that he even threatened her life.

"My husband became irritable and I was nervous," she testified. "One day he said to me: 'Do you know, I came to your bedside last night to kill you?' After that I felt I ought to leave. I went to Versailles and wrote to him. I thought he would follow me and bring me home; but no! He went to the department of the Sarthe and I returned to Paris, but he did not and you know why."

At another point in her testimony Mme. Gueydan said:

"I never suspected that my husband had a mistress. I first knew it when he threw himself at my knees and asked my pardon. He humbled himself and I pardoned him, but the day after he returned to this person. I did not cease to believe his lying talk. I believed that the evil surroundings of my home had gone, for I thought I saw the bottom of his heart in his tears."

Mme. Gueydan was to tell her part in the publication in The Figaro of the now celebrated "Thy Joe" letter, but she declared she knew nothing about it, and affirmed that she had told Calmette nothing.

The emotional summit of the trial was reached when other private letters were handed over by Mme. Gueydan to Fernand Labori, counsel for Mme. Caillaux. A deep and impressive silence fell upon the courtroom, which was crowded to suffocation.

"Here is the packet of letters I took at Mamers," said Mme. Gueydan, giving them to an attendant, who passed them to Labori.

"I will consider with Maitre Chenu what shall be done," said Labori, "but whatever we decide, the jury may rest assured they will be apprised of their contents, as is their right and duty to expect."

"Among them," added Mme. Gueydan, "are the two letters referred to as the private letters."

Mme. Gueydan left the box, having completely dominated by her remarkable personality the whole procedure. For three hours she spoke, and her voice gained strength and carried to the remotest corner of the room. She more than held her own against the great advocates, Labori and Chenu, and the judge gave up trying to direct her deposition.

The sympathies of those in the courtroom she gained rapidly with telling phrases and shafts that seemed to sink deep. There were murmurs of applause despite the admonitory rappings of the judge and threats to clear the court. When she returned to her place, many crowded around her with outstretched hands and cries of "Bravo!"

Caillaux, returning to the bar, said: "M. Labori was right in thanking Mme. Gueydan for the letters. The calumny does not come from us, but from persons who used methods against us never used against others. But that is a diversion. I return to that poor woman there,' pointing, with a dramatic gesture, to the dock where Mme. Caillaux sat, quivering with her emotion. "With all my strength I will defend her. I ought to be beside her; nothing shall separate us."

Caillaux went on with wild gestures to depict the years which had preceded his marriage to her. "I made but one mistake," he said, turning to Mme. Gueydan, "that was in marrying you."

Muskrats Overrun Bohemia

NEW OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

The annual reunion of the Spear family Thursday was not quite as largely attended as anticipated, the inclement weather doubtless preventing many from being present. However about 25 sat down to the noon day lunch about the family board, and it was a happy occasion.

Immediately following the dinner there was a short business session at which officers were elected for the ensuing years as follows;

President, Joshua G. Spear of Braintree.

First Vice-President, James Spear of Roxbury.

Second Vice-President, John Q. Newcomb of Quincy.

Secretary and Treasurer, Mrs. Charles A. Gragg of Quincy.

The business of the day over the family settled down to enjoy the afternoon as best they might. There was some little speech making in which family incidents of long ago were retold, and there was many a laugh as these were brought back to mind. Taken as a whole, therefore the day was a most enjoyable one.

COMPLAINT DISMISSED.

Thomas F. Phillips of Houghs Neck was arraigned on two charges of larceny in the District Court this morning on complaints preferred by State Officer Keating of the insurance department.

It was charged that Phillips withheld premiums amounting to $62.59 due the Rhode Island Fire Insurance Co., and $242.80, the property of the International Fidelity Co.

He entered a plea of not guilty and following a long conference between Judge Avery, Officer Keating and counsel for the defense, the charges were dismissed for want of prosecution. It was stated at the court room that a new complaint of a different nature will be preferred.

PASSED THE EXAMINATION

Yachtsmen Qualify for Squadron Certificates

Ten of the sixteen members of the Quincy Yacht club who took the examination for certificate of membership in the power boat squadron have successfully passed the government requirements and certificates and flags will be issued to them at an early date. Now that they have passed it becomes necessary for them to make formal application for the certificate which will be issued from the office of the secretary John O. Hall.

Those to pass with the name of their power boats as far as known were as follows:

Cosey—Thompson B. Crane.
Calypso—George W. Berry
Woggie—W. S. Hibbard.
Yaarab—Leonard L. Files.
Micmac—Charles W. Laing.
Susan W.—George H. Wilkins.
Pilgrim—F. W. Easterbrook.
June 30—S. A. MacDonnell.
Lamaru—Ralph E. Winslow
———, Edwin H. Higgins.

In order to become a squadron attached to any one yacht club it is necessary for ten to have passed the examination. This therefore entitles the club to a branch which will be known as the Quincy Branch of the United States Power Boat Squadron.

The officers of the branch are:
Commander, Charles W. Laing.
Vice Commander, W. S. Hibbard.
Treasurer, George S. Morse.
Secretary, John O. Hall.

The squadron will be furnished with copies of the book of manouevers, such as are used on battleships of the U. S. Navy and the squadron will have to practice going through manouevers in the same manner as battleships.

It will be an interesting sight therefore to watch them performing in the bay from the club house piazzas.

MARANO IN COURT AGAIN

Mrs. Mae Hoffman, a prominent vocalist and wife of Robert S. Hoffman, water commissioner of Weymouth was the complainant in a charge of assault and battery heard before Judge Avery this morning.

The defendant, Joseph Marano, was brought here from Dedham jail where he is awaiting a hearing before the Grand jury on two serious complaints.

Mrs. Hoffman identified Marano as the man who spoke to her several weeks ago while she was returning to her home on Broad street and said she returned the salutation, thinking he was an aquaintance. Marano, she said then walked beside her and attempted to converse with her. On seeing her mistake she crossed to the other side of the street and the defendant followed. She turned and explained the situation. He persisted in talking and she said to him "you have made a mistake, I am not one of your countrymen."

She alleges that Marano then took her by the arm with some force and told her to be quiet, and said "I am going to walk along with you and be nice to you." Mrs. Hoffman said she then turned and knowing it would cause her further annoyance if she betrayed any fear, threatened to strike him with a parasol she carried.

She said she recrossed the street and that Marano followed. He stopped when she mentioned the name of a man of her acquaintance, and before she was out of hearing distance said "very well, I will go no further but I will not leave until you are out of sight."

Marano was represented by John J. O'Connor of Boston who asked Mrs. Hoffman in cross examination what was her business.

Mrs. Hoffman answered "I am a mother."

And, said Mr. O'Connor, that is a business, but tell me Mrs. Hoffman, have you a profession. Then Mrs. Hoffman said she was a professional singer and the spectators in the court room for the first time realized that the principal witness was one of the best known artists on the South Shore.

Judge Avery sentenced Marano to six months in the house of correction and an appeal was entered. He set the bail at $300.

HURDY-GURDY MAN KILLED

Run Down by an Automobile in Hingham Thursday Night

Francisco Guglielmetti was instantly killed about 10.30 Thursday night by being run down by an automobile near the line of Cohasset. Guglielmetti with his son John were proceeding along the street drawing a hurdy-gurdy which was unlighted. While in a particularly dark spot an automobile came along Boston bound and struck the hurdy-gurdy killing Guglielmetti instantly. The boy escaped uninjured. The dark night together with the locality and the unlighted hurdy-gurdy prevented the driver of the automobile from seeing it until too late. The automobile was owned by Joseph Magrane of Lynn who was running the car. With him were Joseph Donahue of Allston and Charles J. Johnson of Boston.

THANKS ARTHUR, DO IT AGAIN

THE KITCHEN CABINET

The mind may feed on fancy, but the matter of fact stomach imperiously demands something more substantial.

Diet cures more than the doctor.

SOME WAYS WITH MEATS.

A tasty way of cooking a rabbit is the following: Joint and wash a rabbit, drain it, slice up two Spanish onions; take a saucepan, lay in a thick layer of onions, then a layer of rabbit, a sifting of flour, pepper and salt, another layer of onions, and proceed until all the rabbit is used, finishing with the onions. Place the saucepan over a moderate fire and when heated draw to one side and let simmer very gently for two hours or more. As in this cooking there is no water added, it is necessary that it be slowly and carefully cooked to keep from scorching. Serve with mashed potatoes. The rabbit may be put into a casserole and covered, then baked in the oven.

Chicken Terrapin.—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add one of flour, and when well cooked a half cupful of cream and a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of pepper and mace. When boiling stir into this a cupful or more of chicken, with two hard-cooked whites of eggs chopped, and the yolks put through a ricer, add two tablespoonfuls of orange juice and serve at once.

Shepherd's Pie.—Cut enough butter into inch-pieces to make a cupful. Cut from three to four medium sized potatoes in dice and put them in a baking dish; add half a cupful of stock or water and a tablespoonful of butter cut in bits. Season with salt, pepper, and a bit of mint, and cover with potatocrust.

Mutton Hash.—Take a pound of cooked mutton, cut in small pieces and add to the following sauce: Cook together one onion and two tablespoonfuls of butter, then add one tablespoonful of flour, various seasonings, like mushroom catsup, marjoram, parsley and salt; add the meat, and when hot serve on toast.

Mix one cupful of cold cooked chicken cut in cubes, one cucumber pared and cut in cubes, one cupful of chopped English walnut meats and one cupful of French peas. Marinate with French dressing, arrange on a serving dish and garnish with mayonnaise dressing.

POLICE NOT INTERESTED.

Consternation prevailed among the Italians who participated in the fight in Fallon's grove Sunday when the Daily Ledger on Thursday published the approximate location of the house where the man most seriously injured is confined.

It was currently reported about West Quincy this morning that the name of the injured man is Luigi Marini.

As far as is known the man was struck on the back of the head by a bottle and a gaping wound was opened up which may have dangerous results.

Most of those present believe that the disclosure of the location of the house which is doing hospital service preceeds a series of arrests in connection with the affray.

As the riot occurred in Braintree it is up to the police of that town to clear it up but they have exhibited but little interest in the case to date.

SERIOUSLY ILL.

Henry F. Guild, an elderly second cousin of former governor Curtis Guild, is dangerously ill of heart trouble at his summer home at Squantum.

He was stricken Thursday morning and has since been under the constant attention of Dr. Charles Thompson of Newton Highlands, his family physician.

The Guilds have a magnificent home in Newton Highlands and are occupying the Magrane cottage at Squantum for the summer.

Mr. Guild is a retired manufacturer of jewelry at Boston. He was born in Squantum.

Mrs. Guild is at her husband's bedside.

Brookline, the wealthiest town in the state, announced its tax rate Thursday. The rate this year will be $14.50 an increase of $1.20 over last year in spite of the fact that the valuation of real and personal estate in the town has increased more than $3,000,000. The increase in rate according to the town officials is due to larger appropriations and to increases in the state tax together with a low treasury balance.

The town of Foxboro will have a tax rate this year of $18.30 a decrease of 10 cents from that of last year. The valuation is placed at $2,727,125.

The rate this year is based on a valuation of $121,000,000 an increase of $4,000,000 over the year 1913, and is the highest rate in the history of the town.

The largest individual tax payer is Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee who pays a personal tax on property valued at $650,000 and Mrs. Emma B. Dane pays a tax on personal property valued at $600,000.

The largest tax payer is Schuyler S. Bartlett trustee of the Henry Lee estate which is valued at more than a million dollars.

The appropriations this year by the town show an increase of $107,140 over the year 1913.

VIOLATION OF FEDERAL LAW

More Trouble Coming to Violators of Liquor Law

Federal officers are in Quincy today making investigations of what is said to have been violation of the Internal Revenue acts. Their visits is the forerunner of a series of cases which may be preferred against the defendants in the recent liquor crusade, all of whom have been convicted for the sale of liquor.

Whether or not the Federal authorities have reason to believe that "kitchen barrooms" flourished here is not known but their investigation has to do with selling liquor in unlicensed places.

If, as anticipated the defendants are brought into court, additional fines may be imposed. In some cases the fines have been paid while on others a deposit was made. That matter is now in care of Probation Officer Francis J. Fahy

Their luck, as proverbial as that of many others, consisted of small catches and they were in the pool.

Mr. Milford hooked a two pound cod, and Mr. Fallon a one pound sculpion. Both are now believers in inland waterways.

Man Supposed to be N. S. Brown of Wollaston, Suicide

A man who was known as "Mr. N. S. Brown" of Wollaston tried to commit suicide Friday by shooting in the Copley-Plaza hotel, Boston. He fired the shot through his right temple and was taken to the City Hospital in a dying condition, and as he lapsed into unconsciousness he said he lived in Wollaston.

He is about 55 years of age and had been a guest at the hotel for about a week. He talked but little but to the attaches of the hotel he complained that rheumatism was bothering him. He was found in his room on the fourth floor by a bell boy, who immediately notified the office, which in turn notified the police.

Mr. Brown died shortly after 5 o'clock. His identity was established by a bank book in the name of Nathan S. Brown and by the initials N. S. B. on his watch charm.

SQUADRON TO BE INSPECTED

Commander Upton, U. S. P. S. to Review all Branches

The newly formed auxiliary force of private power boats, ready now for active service in case of war, will be given their first official inspection and review starting today. Roger Upton, commander of the U. S. power squadron leaves on a tour of North Atlantic waters today.

The first review will be on the Hudson River and at the end of his journey over 1000 power boats, both steam and gasoline, will have passed before his official flag.

It was only five months ago that the project was proposed to form this semi-naval organization and more than enough boats for any service that might be required in case of war have been obtained.

The Quincy Branch of the U. S. Power Boat Squadron, of which Charles W. Laing is commander, was one of the first to organize and ten of their members have qualified for certificates.

Mr. Upton started the project at the instigation of the Navy department and with the co-operation of Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy.

The Government believes that this auxiliary force of small power boats would be of use to the navy in times of defensive warfare, particularly for coast patrol, inshore duty, laying and guarding harbor mines, despatch service, and, in emergency, for landing marines and sailors.

Motor boats used for this work would release just so many small boats of the navy equipped for harbor service. The squadron boats would in time of war be equipped with wireless masts and instruments.

Until a few weeks ago it had been planned that a grand rendezvous of all the Atlantic boats should be held in Narragansett bay at the end of this month, but in the end it was de-

BIGELOW PARK SCHOOL LOT

School Committee Select Site for New School Building

Chairman Mackay and other members of the School Committee visited the Bigelow Park district Friday afternoon looking at possible sites for a new school building, which the board will doubtless recommend being erected in that section.

This means that the prospects of a four room addition being built to the Washington school building are very remote and that this scheme will probably be given up.

School accommodations in the Quincy Point district have been before the City Council for some time. At first the residents of the Washington district petitioned for an assembly hall for the present building. Later it was decided that more room was needed as the school was in a crowded condition. At that time the School Committee seemed to be unanimous for a four room addition and assembly hall, and Mayor Miller who was then chairman of the School Committee was also said to be in favor of the plan.

Later however residents of the Bigelow Park district woke up and decided that a new building in that district would be the proper thing. Petitions looking to that end were filed with the City Council and are still pending.

In support of the plan for a new building it was pointed out and admitted by the school committee that a four room addition to the Washington school would only provide accommodation for five years at the end of which time additional room must be provided.

The City Council went ahead with the plans however and the supposition was that the four room addition with assembly hall could be built for $38,000, but it was found that it would require nearly $44,000 to complete the job.

The School Committee was far from being unanimous and to cap the climax Mayor Miller sent a communication to the board favoring a new building in the Bigelow Park district rather than an addition to the Washington building. This evidently meant that if passed by the Council the order would be vetoed by the Mayor.

The Finance Committee of the Council was also divided on the question, and when the Council adjourned for the summer the sentiment of the committee was that it would pass an order to purchase land in the Bigelow Park district this fall but would not pass the addition scheme.

The sentiment of the Finance Committee was quite well known and the School Committee woke up to the fact that a site for a new building was in order.

It was for this reason that the committee visited the district Friday and looked at several sites. Of these sites the committee were practically unanimous in favor of a lot containing between 70,000 and 75,000 square feet of land. The proposed lot is situated between South street and Ellerton streets. That is, it is bounded on the west by South street, the north by Berkley street, the south by Clarendon street and the east by Ellerton street.

The land is owned by the Bigelow Park Real Estate Trust and it is more than probable that when the Council meets in September it will receive a communication from the School Committee recommending the purchase of this lot.

FIRST TASTE OF SERVICE

Special officer Thomas Fallon, the "ice cream king" had his first taste of actual police service Friday evening when he assisted in the arrest of Angus Beaton who lives near the Quincy Adams station.

The police say they entered the Beaton home to warn the inhabitants that they were creating a disturbance and that Beaton who was in bed at the time of their visit, later dressed and approached both officers on the street. He is alleged to have threatened them with bodily harm and he was placed under arrest by Patrolman Malone. Special officer Fallon was obliged to go to the assistance of his brother officer and the man was walked to the station because the auto was out on a call. He was charged with drunkenness. In court this morning he was placed in care of Probation Officer Francis J. Fahey.

QUINCY MEN IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Two Autos in Collision in Milton Early This Morning

A car of an official of the Metropolitan Park Commission operated by R. L. Arbuckle the chauffeur, and the machine of Clarence B. Houston of Mears avenue, Houghs Neck collided at Reedsdale road and Canton avenue Milton at 7.50 this morning and were almost wrecked. In the Houston car were Frederick Baird of 85 Sea acenue, Houghs Neck and John Blanchard of Sea street, Houghs Neck.

The four men were tumbled to the street but all escaped serious injury. Bairds left arm was wrenched, his face and hands lacerated and sustained severe body bruises.

Houston was badly shaken up and Blanchard's hands were both lacerated. The Quincy men were carried to their homes in the Milton police ambulance.

Arbuckle remained to superintend the removing of his machine and about an hour after suffered a reaction and was carried to the Metropolitan Park Commission station on the Blue Hill Parkway where first aid treatment was given him.

The spot where the accident occured is almost opposite the Milton Public library. The Houston machine was going up Canton avenue and the machine driven by Arbuckle came out of Reedsdale road. Both were proceeding at fair speed. The Chauffeurs tried to avoid a collision and had almost passed each other when the rear of the machines sideswiped.

The commission machine was practically wrecked. A forward wheel was smashed, the lamps shattered, the fenders ripped and the body of the car twisted. Houston's machine is in almost the same condition, excepting that the wheels withstood the shock.

QUALIFIES AS A FIREMAN

If Ed Lennon, the Sanitary inspector of the Board of Health should ever decide to take the civil service examination for the fire department service his percent for experience would receive an extra high marking on account of his lively experience this morning in extinguishing single handed a lively little blaze that evidently started from sparks from a smokers pipe among the cushions of his buggy.

Ed. drove down to City Hall shortly before 10 o'clock this morning with a pipe firmly between his teeth puffing away as though his life depended upon it. Great clouds of smoke were coming from the bowl of the pipe and evidently some sparks, the latter alighting in the hair cushion at his back.

Shortly after his arrival at the City stone building it was discovered that the back and bottom cushions were both on fire. Ed. did not get a bit rattled but getting a bucket of water proceeded in true fireman style to extinguish the blaze. The operation was watched by a crowd of curiosity seekers who freely applauded after the fire had been conquered. The loss was small, but Ed had qualified as a fireman.

TELEPHONE: QUINCY 425.

When a boy sneaks out of sight to go in swimming, it is of course due solely to a conscientious conviction that cleanliness is next to godliness.

The automobile horns make worse and worse noises, but people have to find some outlet now that the sane July Fourth movement has become so general.

President Wilson wears white duck suits in summer, but probably Mrs. Wilson makes him change them before he goes out to weed in the garden.

Many people feel it is fortunate that they began to save money for Mother's Christmas present, as now they have a fund to spend on a high jinks vacation.

THE STAY-AT-HOMES.

No matter how widely the summer vacation habit spreads, there is always a steadfast section of the population who almost never travel.

With some persons it is a natural lack of "wanderlust." Others can't quit their job, or think they can't. Some lack the price of the railroad ticket. But anyway, these stay-at-homes have a stability that one must admire.

The man who turns up every week day in the year at his place of labor or business may lack the broadening culture of travel. But there is a splendid discipline in his regular habits of work.

Usually he becomes a good deal of a philosopher. He finds that even his own home town is a world by itself, a theatre of absorbing comedy and tragedy. The sun shines just as bright, the oxygen is just as stimulating here as anywhere. As far as happiness goes, that is not a matter of location or movement, but a capacity for taking an interest in the human life around us.

INDOOR WORKER AND HEALTH.

The somewhat frequent indispositions to which President Wilson is subject are noted with regret and some uneasiness. He has been more or less upset several times during the past eight months. So slight an exposure as lower temperature encountered in an automobile ride has just laid him up for a day or two.

The President's experiences are very like those that most men of sedentary habits have to meet. It is true that a president has to encounter an extraordinary nervous strain. Yet the physical conditions of his work, like ventilation, etc., must be exceptionally favorable.

Most men give slight attention to measures of health preservation. They would not hesitate to work extra hours a day if they saw some addition to their income in it. But ten minutes a day for simple gymnastics that might greatly increase their working capacity are impossible.

If it pays Mr. Wilson, with the tremendous pressure on his time, to give a half hour or more a day to a physical culture trainer, surely it would pay the ordinary man to devote a little time daily to physical exercise.

Few people today are good walkers. Country people take pride in their horses or motor cars. They often look down on people who enjoy tramping, as to be pitied for their inability to own horse flesh. City people usually look at a mile walk as prohibitive. A whole tribe of lawn mowers and gardeners springs up in any large town, to do the work formerly done by householders.

Probably the hours President Wilson has spent golfing have been more effective than all that his trainer has been able to do. Not every one can join a golf club or enter gymnasium classes. But every one can walk or take simple calisthentics. Nor is it necessary to buy a handsome system of painted chest weights either.

EX-CONGRESSMAN McCALL.

There is no discounting the high favor which ex-Congressman McCall enjoys in the estimation of the Republican rank and file in Massachusetts. He has many strong points which commend him to people who do their own thinking. Two of these may be mentioned. The first is that he never plays the demagogue. The second centers in the fact that he says what he means and means what he says. Ordinarily, these qualities would not be emphasized. In these days of "unrest," however, when so many claimants for suffrage favor are indulging in flapdoodle and lending themselves to various 'isms, it is worth something to find an aspirant for the honors of standard bearer who will neither play to the galleries nor lose sight of the fundamentals.

The party, of course, has not been impeccable. It has made some mistakes, and for these it has grievously paid within the past few years. But it is now getting ready to "come back." Without derogation of the available men which the party can furnish, it may be said that Mr. McCall is eminently well qualified, as leader and champion, to call to his support a goodly proportion of those independent Republicans who have been straying, these past few years, from the familiar field. He is willing to run, and he ought to be nominated with a hurrah.—Salem News.

SALEM FIRE LESSON.

We Americans are a generous people. Whenever disaster overtakes a community, national, state, and local governments send money and food and clothing, and private relief committees and individuals contribute liberally.

And well they may for we Americans are a careless people. We build flimsy houses, huddled closely together and filled with inflammable materials. Our back yards are too often cluttered with rubbish.

We pay large sums in premiums to insurance companies, and we maintain expensive fire-fighting apparatus; for we have yet to learn that "prevention is better than cure."

Baltimore, San Francisco, Chelsea, and now Salem. And yet there are those who would have us go very slowly lest we put property owners to needless expense!

The immediate cause of what happened in Salem was an explosion of chemicals in a leather plant. Why were explosive materials kept in an inflammable building? Were the ordinances adequate and were they violated? Was there proper inspection

Indirect causes were low water pressure, defective water main, inadequate facilities for pumping harbor water, inadequate fire apparatus, wooden, houses, close together, factory buildings of non-fire-resisting construction. These conditions are not unique; most of them could be duplicated in cities all over the country. All that is needed is an explosion or an overturned lamp and a strong wind. And yet there are those who would have us go very slowly when we would interfere with the right of one man to jeopardize the property and the lives of his neighbors! What do you know about the conditions in your city?

The direct loss—4 persons killed; scores injured; 10,000 homeless; property swept from a strip of territory 3 miles long and a mile in width; $12,000,000 worth of property destroyed; colonial mansions wiped out—finest examples of New England's great architectural era.

The Indirect Loss—Several persons dead from shock; 9,000 out of work; workingmen leaving town with their families many never to return; some industrial concerns certain to locate elsewhere; the tax burden will increase; rents will be higher and business disturbed.

The gain will be a forced recognition of the necessity of preventive measure—adequate water supply, adequate water pressure, a proper building code, rigid inspection of premises.

Fire loss is absolute loss. There are those who will say, "Here is work for many; here is a source of new employment for labor, transferring money from the owners of property to those who must work to live." But such is not the case. "A fire may increase wage payments in certain trades in a particular locality, but there are two indirect consequences of the fire which generally make the apparent advantage to laborers worse than illusory. In the first place the money used to rebuild the burned house is almost always diverted from some other line of expenditure, so that the gain to one group of workmen is offset by a loss to other groups. In the second place, this utilization of labor to replace commodities which have been destroyed, instead of producing new ones, means that the community in the end has fewer comforts and enjoyments than it could otherwise have commanded. This scarcity shows itself in advanced prices. For a considerable time after a fire rents will be higher than they were before. The destruction of property by the fire does not represent something taken from the capitalist and given to the laborer. It represents a loss of comfort in the community from which as a rule, no class can wholly exempt itself."—President A. T. Hadley, Yale University.

THE BIRD FOLKS.

The birds are holding high carnival in the clean-swept hay fields. Whether they find hay-seed or bugs, they descend in numbers as soon as the field is cleared and assume an air of proprietorship. Grackles, flickers, robins and meadow larks in great numbers, walk and hop about. The robin is the most at home on the ground. His progress is a series of rapid hops, not ungraceful. The flicker suggests a lady with a tight bobble skirt. He hops, one hop at a time, clumsily and with much effort. The grackle, who is in every motion like a diminutive crow, walks with a duck-like waddle.

The birds have resumed their interrupted spring songs, chastened and subdued by the labors of raising a family, with possible tragedies in the loss of young ones through predatory cats, snakes or boys since last year, yet the chorus is nearly like that of early spring. Even a bob-o-link is occasionally heard, but rather half-heartedly, reminding us that the summer is rapidly passing us by.—Framingham News.

SENSIBLE EDITOR CHRISTIE.

Editor Christie of the Worcester Telegram is tired of the talk by the Bolston chamber of commerce how to boom Boston. Instead of so much cheap talk he suggests that the Boston patriots of commerce imitate the "clipper ship" days when the stars and stripes were to be seen at the masthead of Boston owned and Boston manned ships in almost every part of the world. Says the Telegram editorially:

"Nothing is carried away by an American ship and nothing is brought back by an American ship. People in foreign places judge New England by what it does not do, not by what it does out that it should do. Men have paid for that kind of reputation until they are sick of it.

"Start a subscription to build a ship. Get a few thousand dollars and go ahead, and lose it if that must be the first result. That would be success as compared with the dope and written stuff with which the market is surfeited. Discharge all the presidents and secretaries, and pay captains and sailors to go somewhere, and come back. Make Honey Fitz captain of the first steamboat. Put him under contract to sing Sweet Adeline' in at least five foreign ports before he returns. He would make more business for New England on one such trip than in 100 years as chairman of the committee on foreign trade of the Boston chamber of commerce.

"Make the secretary of that same committee, S. F. King, the mate of the first ship. Turn on the same kind of energy the old men of the clipper ship days did, and there will be results. Bring the goods to Worcester and they will sell. Take away twice as many more and sell them. Keep the railroads so busy all over New England that they will have no time to consider frenzied finance and there will be no more bother about that.Go do what the men of the clipper ship days did. The chances for success now are 100 to 1 as compared with those days."—Practical Politics.

TUBERCULOSIS CENSUS.

A Tuberculosis Census of thousands of churches in various parts of the country will be taken in September, under the direction of The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. The census will be part of the preparation for the Fifth Annual Tuberculosis Day to be observed during the week of November 29th.

The ministers of several thousand churches wil be asked to report on the number of deaths from tuberculosis in the last year, the number of living cases in their parishes on September 1st, the number of deaths from all causes, and the number of members or communicants. These figures wil be made the basis of an educational campaign, which will culminate in the Tuberculosis Day movement, for which occasion sermon and lecture outlines and other forms of tuberculosis literature will be distributed free to ministers.

Last year nearly 75,000 churches, schools, and other bodies took part in the Tuberculosis Day observance. The movement had the endorsement of leading church officials of every denomination. More than 1200 anti-tuberculosis societies scattered all over the country will work this year to make Tuberculosis Day a success.

DEFENSE IS LED INTO A PITFALL

Mme. Gueydan Puts Veto on Principal Argument of Labori

COUNSEL HAS LOVE LETTERS

First Wife of Ex-Premier Declines to Receive Them Back and Their Contents Will Be Revealed In Court—Prominent Politicians and Brother of Slain Man Testify

Paris, July 25.—The defense in the trial of Mme. Caillaux for the murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro, was caught in a trap innocently set by Mme. Gueydan, once the wife of the prisoner's husband.

The principal argument of M. Labori, counsel for Mme. Caillaux, has been that his client was driven to her desperate act in shooting Calmette through fear that two letters of which she was aware photographic productions existed, would be published by Calmette and the secrets of her inner life thereby given the public.

This argument, it is said, will be reduced to nothing by the reading of the letters, which Mme. Gueydan reluctantly gave over to Maitre Labori Thursday. Yesterday she refused to receive them back from Labori and, replying to a question by Labori as to what she desired done with them, Mme. Gueydan said:

"I do not care what you do with them. Publish all of them if you wish to do so."

Their reading is now regarded as inevitable. Mme. Gueydan's counsel, S. G. Archibald, said concerning the letters:

"They are innocuous. They contain several disparaging references to Mme. Gueydan, then Caillaux's wife, and consider the possibilities of his obtaining a divorce from her. This, however, he says, would have to be after the elections. They are completed by allusions to local politics of no importance whatever."

The unprecedented spectacle of two former premiers, Barthou and Caillaux, and prominent politicians standing together at the bar and maintaining with no little heat various opinions on the case, was hardly of less interest than the fencing of Labori and Chanu, representing the Calmette family, over the letters.

Pascal Ceocaldi, an intimate friend of Caillaux, preceded Barthou and, stung by a taunt of Ceocaldi that he had not a word of pity for the woman on trial, Barthou, when he was on the stand, turned toward her and said:

"I had the honor, madame, to be a guest of your house, and you have been a guest at mine. I have said nothing of a nature to aggravate your situation. I wish to say that I have the most sincere respect for you in your position. But, madame, up to the present the prosecution has hardly pronounced a word against you. You are defended by friends whose devotion I admire and by a husband who stands here full of activity, energy and talent. It was not for me to speak in your defense. I could only give you the respectful salute which is your due. My pity has been for him to whom it rightfully belongs."

A dramatic bit of testimony was given by Dr. Calmette, director of the Pasteur institute at Lille. He paid a high tribute to the character of his brother.

"I am convinced," said Dr. Calmette, "that if Mme. Caillaux had simply opened her mouth, if she had only said to my brother: 'Is it true that you have in your possession the private letters?' my brother immediately have reassured her. If you knew how scrupulous my brother was with his word! He would have removed Mme. Caillaux's apprehension.

PUBLIC FORUM

CIVIC AND SOCIAL WORK.

Editor Daily Ledger:

May I be permitted to correct, through the columns of your paper, a wrong impression which recent articles in the Quincy papers may have conveyed to those unfamiliar with the purpose for which the Atlantic Improvement Association was organized and is constantly working, by stating that the sole object of the Association is to promote civic and social improvements in the community and not to promote nor assist, in any way, the political ambitions of any individual or party.

The fact that candidates for Mayor addressed a public meeting held under the auspices of the Association in the interest of the public for the purpose of determining ways and means for the suppression of the mosquito nuisance would appear to be insufficient reason for the statement that politics were injected as a side issue. Politics were not touched upon in any way, shape or manner at this meeting.

BRAINTREE Y. M. C. A. CAMP.

The Y. M. C. A. Camp at Manomet is now in fine working order. Several improvements have been made and the activities have been in full swing. Last Saturday night a Mock Trial was held at the camp and many of the campers from the cottages along the shore witnessed the performance. Cook Phelps was the judge, Assistant Superintendent Leadbetter and Superintendent Gumb were the lawyers. Frank Ballou was found guilty of hanging Mr. Pants, an uncle of Tom Barry, to the camp flag pole. The prisoner was sentenced to eat a pot of beans at the breakfast table. Frank was equal to the task, and it is said that he asked for more.

On Monday nineteen of the boys returned to their homes. More boys went to the camp from Braintree with the Rev. Mr. Grimes and on Tuesday ten boys went from Sharon with Mr. Griffith to spend ten days at the camp.

The following boys have succeeded in winning their honor emblems:—Thomas Barry, Harold Wilson, Kenneth Burnham, Alexander Barry, Harold Bryant, Davis Bates, Earl Leadbetter, Frank Ballou, Carl Phelps, Hugh Ferguson, Edward Hunt, Reginald Gilmore, George Webber, Richard Hunt, William Loring, Alexander Robb, Hartley White, Hanley Ellis, John Marr, Clifton Harlow and Irving Gumb.

The directors of the Y. M. C. A. recently announced that the camp at Manomet will be for the exclusive use of girls (betweeen the ages of about 11 and 14 years) during the two weeks beginning August 17. A considerable number of applicants have already reported to Herbert A. Bryant, and the girls are in for as good a time as the boys are having. Miss Nellie E. Bolles, teacher at the Jonas Perkins school will be in charge of the girls at the camp during the two weeks. Supt. Gumb and the others in charge of the camp will remain during the time the girls are there so the same "jolly time" and good food is assured.

WANTED TO SEE KING

Two Suffragettes Belonging to Nobility Arrested at London

London, July 25.—Two suffragettes belonging to the British nobility, Lady Barclay and Miss Edith Fitzgerald, were arrested at Buckingham palace, where they made persistent attempts to present King George a letter written to him by Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst.

The letter demanded a personal interview with the king and claimed the same right to an interview as certain militant men—Messrs. Carson, Craig, Dillon and Redmond—who had, it was pointed out, been invited to Buckingham palace by the king on his own initiative.

The two women arrived at the entrance to the palace carrying a large scroll prettily draped with purple ribbon streamers. They announced their determination to remain until they were given an audience with the king.

The police then took the women in custody. Lady Barclay and Miss Fitzgerald were arraigned at Bow street police court and were bound over to be of good behavior.

READY FOR CALL TO ARMS

Ulster Volunteers Are Prepared For General Mobilization

Belfast, July 25.—Ulster is again ablaze with excitement, and orders are momentarily expected to have the Ulster volunteers mobilize and the provisional government assume the reins of power.

While no authoritative announcement of the plans of the leaders has been made, it is declared that the first move will be a general mobilization of the volunteer force as a kind of "armed demonstration" which may impress the government.

If the government is still unyielding it appears certain, according to declarations by prominent Ulster men, that a provisional government will be set up at once.

CANNOT AGREE ON ULSTER EXCLUSION

Asquith Announces Failure of the Home Rule Conference

London, July 25.—The fact that the conference at Buckingham palace between the leaders of the various political parties had been rendered abortive by its failure to agree on the area of Ulster to be excluded from the control of the Dublin parliament was confirmed, by Premier Asquith in the house of commons. His statement was very brief. He said:

"The possibility of finding an area to be excluded from the operation of the Irish home rule bill was considered, but the conference, unable to agree in principle or in detail on such an area, brought its meeting to a close."

Asquith merely added: "That is the report made, Mr. Speaker, by the chairman of the conference to the king."

Asquith then announced that the second reading of the bill to amend the Irish home rule bill would be taken on July 28.

MAKES BAD USE OF TEETH

Man Without Hands Forges Checks In His Mother's Name

Terre Haute, Ind., July 25.—Albert McQuiglin, aged 32, was arrested and charged with forging checks, although he has no hands. Moreover, he has been under arrest before for forging checks and doing it so well he was able to pass them.

When arrested some time ago the mother made good the amount the son obtained and he was not prosecuted. He was bound over this time to the circuit court.

AID TO THE WOE-STRICKEN

Divorce Prevention Bureau Formally Opens at Chicago

Chicago, July 25.—The Chicago divorce prevention bureau of the municipal court opened its doors as the first branch of a court created solely to fight the divorce evil.

"In many instances a frank discussion will make great woes seem temporary vexations," said Judge Torrison. "My assistants and I will welcome all who feel they are at the parting of the ways. I have seen many cases where friendly counsel and a sober view of the future might have brought about a new understanding."

WARD TWO BOYS WIN

Defeat Ward Three Team in a Pitchers Battle Game

In the best game of the season so far, the Quincy Point playground boys defeated the South Quincy team by the score of 3 to 2 at the Ward Two Playground Friday. The game was a pitchers battle with Iver Anderson, last year's High School pitcher in the box against Jimmy Gamble, who pitched for the Washington Grammar School Team. Joe Ryan started in the box for Ward Two but was hit on the leg by a swift grounder from Anderson's bat and was forced to retire from the game. Anderson had 12 strike-outs to his credit while Gamble fanned 9 of his opponents. Only 3 hits were made by the Point boys while South Quincy made 5, Barry and Gorman each getting 2 hits while Anderson made the other.

Neither team was able to score until the fifth inning when Ward Two made two of their hits which, mixed up with a couple of errors and a base-on-balls, made it look as if Anderson was in for a good trimming. Ward Three came right back in the sixth however and scored one and then in the seventh they added another tally to their score making it two each. The Point boys got on base in their half of the seventh because the South Quincy catcher muffed the third strike and threw wild to first. Levenson promptly stole second and came home on a fine single by Gamble.

The South Quincy players made a great bid for the game in the eighth inning as they had three men on bases in this inning only to see them doubled up on a nice play by Barr and Gallagher and Early.

The battery for the winners was Ryan, Gamble and Gallagher. For Ward Three Anderson and Cahill and MacDonald were in the points.

The Wollaston boys will play at the Point on Monday afternoon and the game ought to be a hummer for the Point boys are still smarting under the defeat of the 1 to 0 game of last week. Dorford Bruce was elected Captain of the Wollaston team this morning.

NEW HAVEN WON'T TRANSFER STOCK

Court Postpones Action In View of This Stipulation

Boston, July 25.—Pending a reasonable postponement, the New Haven Railroad company has agreed not to transfer any of the stock as relates to the respondents to the bill in equity brought against the corporation and former and present directors of the road.

In view of this stipulation no action was taken by the court when the order of notice as issued by Judge Braley of the supreme court a week ago was returnable. Counsel for the two individual respondents also agreed that nothing should be done with their stock until the merits of this controversy may be determined. By agreement the case went over until Aug. 7.

MARTIAL LAW AT ST. JOHN

Turbulence In Connection With Strike of Street Car Employes

St. John, July 25.—This city is quiet following a night of rioting. Market square, where a mob overturned and burned several cars and drove the firemen from a power house, was blocked and traffic was at a standstill, though the operation of the electrict plant has been resumed.

Four hundred soldiers were mobilized under command of Colonel McAvity and the city is practically under martial law during the strike of street car employes.

Mayor Frank issued a proclamation warning the public to keep off the streets at night until the possibility of further disorder shall have disappeared.

BODY SHIPPED TO OHIO

Medical Examiner Says Robinson Was a Physical Marvel

Boston, July 25.—The body of Lawrence Robinson was shipped last evening to his old home at Washington Courthouse, O., for burial. A representative of the dead gunman's mother made arrangemehts for the removal of the body.

Dr. Magrath said, after an autopsy on Robinson, that the man was a physical marvel. The brain, according to Magrath, was ordinary. His nerves indicated that he was a man who thought and acted quicky.

PEACE HOPES ARE BRIGHTER

Conciliatory Attitude of the Various Leaders In Mexico

VILLA MESSAGE IS COURTEOUS

Reassuring Word Also Received From Carbejal, Carranza and Zapata—Armistice and Amnesty to Be Followed by Carbejal's Resignation and Carranza's Election

Washington, July 25.—Direct advices to the United States from Provisional President Carbajal, General Carranza, General Villa and General Zapata—the four chief elements in the Mexican problem—renewed the hopes of officials here for peace.

Carbajal officially declared that he was willing to transfer the executive power to Carranza and has sent a delegate to arrange with the constitutionalist chief. Carbajal reiterated that he merely wanted an amnesty for political offenders and guarantee for the safety of the property of people who had supported Huerta.

Carranza manifested his readiness to be lenient with the foes of the constitutionalists and gave the desired guarantees.

Villa, in a message phrased in most courteous terms, spoke of his desire to see peace established on a basis of justice and liberty and gave assurance he would do his utmost to restore normal conditions.

Communication with Zapata has been difficult, but official word has been obtained from him in which he manifests a desire to join with the constitutionalist chief in rehabilitating the government machinery throughout Mexico.

Emissaries from Carranza to Zapata with authority to promise a program of agrarian reforms are expected to reach the southern chief within a few days.

The program of peace in Mexico, according to the officials and others conversant with the situation, is this:

A declaration of a complete armistice within a few days between Carranza and Carbajal.

Signing of an agreement between the two forces for an amnesty and guaranty for the protection of property.

Dissolution of the present congress, and reassembling of the deputies and senators elected under President Madero whose terms do not expire until next September.

Resignation of Carbajal to the Madero congress, and designation by the latter of Carranza as provisional president under the constitution.

Conferences of chiefs in Mexico City, including representatives from Zapata and Villa, for the formulation or a reform program for the new administration.

The influence and power of the American government is being exerted toward such an end.

GRAVE BALKAN CRISIS

War of Powers May Result From Austria's Ultimatum to Servia

Berlin, July 25.—Unless Servia backs down from the expressed intention of refusing to comply with the unprecedented demands of Austria, Europe will see the beginning of a "world war." This is the opinion freely expressed in governmental, military and diplomatic circles.

Officials declare the gravest situation will be presented should France and Russia attempt to interfere. In such event, it is declared, the conflict would be shifted overnight from war between Austria and Servia to a situation menacing the peace of all Europe.

Conflict has been expected by all Europe since the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand of Austria by Serbs. An ultimatum has been received at Belgrade calling upon the Servian government to suppress the Pan-Servian movement and punish those responsible for the assassination.

It is understood Servia will refuse to comply with the demands of the ultimatum, which calls for a reply by tonight. Austria has massed troops to invade Servia if the ultimatum is rejected.

New York, July 25.—Becky Edelson, the Industrial Worker of the World orator, serving a sentence on Blackwell's island, is not on a hunger strike.

Dr. Davis, commissioner of corrections, declared that after a careful investigation it had been determined that the young woman anarchist had eaten food smuggled in to her by other women patients in the hospital ward of the workhouse.

Miss Edelson, the commissioner declared, was in far better condition physically than when she entered the institution.

REPUBLICANS WILL NOT FILIBUSTER

Intend to Push Along Trust Measures In Congress

Washington, July 25.—Republicans of the senate, hoping to adjourn congress by Sept. 1, have determined to hold the Democrats to their own legislative program, permitting no business except legislation and conference reports to come up for discussion.

"The Democrats have the trust bills before the senate," said Senator Smoot, "and we propose, if the country must have them, to help get them out of the way as soon as possible."

Other Republican senators expressed the same view. Such expressions from the Republican senators came as a surprise to some of the Democratic leaders, who had been led to believe that the opposition proposed to filibuster and hold congress in session as long as possible.

DEFIANCE IS WITHDRAWN

Structural Weakenesses Cause Elimination of Cup Race Candidate

New York, July 25.—Certain structural weakenesses in the cup yacht candidate Defiance are given from an authoritative source as the cause of the yacht's withdrawal from the competition for the selection of a defender of the America's cup.

Some of these weaknesses are of such importance that they would make necessary a complete rebuilding of her mast step before she could be safely or efficiently raced, and the repairs could not be made in less than three or four weeks, which would be almost at the end of the racing season. In view of these facts, formal notice of the yacht's withdrawal was sent to the New York Yacht club.

Defiance was designed by George Owen and built by the Bath Iron Works at Bath, Me.

BODY BURNED TO CRISP

Girl Aparently Crazed by Flames Fights Off Would-Be Rescuer

Farmington, Me., July 25.—Refusing to flee from the flames that quickly enveloped the kitchen after the alcohol lamp of a coffee percolator which she was filling had exploded in her hand, Adele Rosmann, a domestic, was burned to death in a fire which destroyed the large camp of Dr. Virgil Coblinz of Brooklyn at Clearwater pond.

The girl, apparently, was driven insane by fright at the explosion. A son of the girl's employer tried to drag her from the blazing kitchen. He was himself badly burned about the arms. She stubbornly refused to leave the house and her body was found burned to a crisp in the ruins.

MRS. WAKEFIELD FEARED PLEW

Testimony to That Effect at Second Trial of Woman

OFTEN WHIPPED HER CHILDREN

Then Sent Them to Bed That He Might Be Alone With Her—Woman Accused of Murder Feared Bodily Harm When She Remonstrated With Man Since Hanged

New Haven, July 25.—The defense in the trial of Mrs. Bessie J. Wakefield, charged with the murder of her husband, William A. Wakefield, yesterday put on seven witnesses.

Some of the evidence presented tended to show that Mrs. Wakefield stood in fear of James Plew, who was hanged some months ago for actualy committing the murder.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Webster of Middlebury, the aged parents of the accused, and her sister, Mrs. Hattie Drake, told of incidents when Plew whipped Mrs. Wakefield's children and sent them to bed, in order to be alone with Mrs. Wakefield.

Mrs. Webster said she had been aware of the intimacy between her daughter and Plew, but said Bessie always appeared to be afraid of him.

Thomas Kelly of Woodbury, a farmer, said he employed Webster and had known Mrs. Wakefield for the last fifteen years. She was a quiet, peaceable woman, he said.

James T. Mather, prosecuting attorney of Bristol, was recalled to the stand for the purpose, counsel for the defense explained, of showing that all had not been told in his direct examination of the interview he had had with Mrs. Wakefield when she was held as a suspect in the murder.

Before Attorney Devine, for the defense, could ask any questions, Juror Davidson requested permission to ask one question, which was granted.

"Did you have a suspicion as to her guilt?" Davidson asked.

"Not as to her guilt; but that she might be connected with the death of her husband," said Mather.

On cross-examination Mrs. Webster said her daughter was always frightened when "Jim was around," meaning Plew.

Mrs. Martha Judd, who was Mrs. Wakefield's school teacher in the Middlebury public schools, testified that "Bessie was then a normal child of ordinary intelligence."

David Drake, husband of Mrs. Wakefield's sister, testified, in corroboration of his wife's testimony, that Plew frequently whipped her children. He also said Mrs. Wakefield appeared to be in fear of bodily harm from Plew, when she remonstrated, on such occasions.

State Attorney Alling moved that certain portions of the evidence put in by the state be stricken from the records.

This is the second trial of the woman on this charge. The first trial resulted in her conviction of first degree murder, but the supreme court granted her appeal for a new trial.

In making his motion Alling said there was some doubt as to whether the supreme court meant "that certain evidence should be in or out of the case and in order not to jeopardize the interests of the defendant, I wish to withdraw that evidence." The court granted the motion, there being no objection by the defense.

The evidence had to do with a chloroform bottle which has figured in the case and with statements made by Jafes Plew about the murder.

WELCOMES LIBEL SUIT

Oyster Bay, N. Y., July 25.—The reply of Theodore Roosevelt to the $50,000 libel suit of William Barnes was a renewed attack on the Republican state chairman and a promise to help the suit forward.

No Pie Crust Promises

Wise advertisers never make "pie-crust" promises.

They know that to break faith with the public would be fatal—worse than throwing their money away.

That is one reason why advertised goods are more in demand.

People know that there is quality behind them.

They look on them as standards. Any dealer knows that there are more calls for advertised goods than for goods not advertised.

This is especially true if they happen to have been advertised in the newspapers which directly reach the people.

The standard of advertising is more exacting today than ever before. Advertisers are more careful of their promises and more interesting in their text and illustrations.

The world grows better.

A PESSIMIST

He Was Converted to Optimism

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

Billy Bryce and I were inseparable companions, bosom friends. We were opposites in disposition, and I think such dissimilarity is one of the most effective of all causes of friendship. Billy was as cheery a chap as ever lived. I was inclined to be morose. Billy said nice things to people which he only half meant. I said gruff things to them that I didn't mean at all. I didn't need to understand Billy, because he always appeared amiable, but Billy needed to understand me, for I was constantly saying something disagreeable—why, I scarcely know myself, quite likely to cover up a liking for the person to whom I spoke.

I was very dependent upon Billy for cheerfulness, and when he wrote me that he was engaged to be married it was a sad blow to me. I had had other friends who had married, and the friendship between us was never the same as before their marriage. I would go to their homes for Sunday dinner and be heartily welcomed, but it was always plain that the wife and children had supplanted me. I was a second, third or fourth consideration.

Billy's letter indicated that he realized the change his marriage would cause in our intimacy and seemed intent on preventing it so far as possible. "I wish," he said, "that there shall be the same friendliness between you and Luella as between you and me. You shall have the freedom of the house at all times, whether I am at home or absent. You must not expect me to have the slightest jealousy for you. My fiancee agrees with me perfectly in this and, instead of having that jealousy brides are subject to for a bosom friend of her husband, will welcome you to the family circle as one of us."

This did not reassure me at all. I was supplanted, put down from first to second place. I knew Billy's optimistic disposition and also knew that he could not suspend a natural law. I wrote him that if he did not wish the lady he was to marry to freeze me out of the house he had better tell her that if she wished it he would never see me again. "That's just like you," he replied, "but you can't move either me or Lulu with your pessimism."

Billy asked me to be best man, but I detest ceremonies and took care to be called away on a matter of business at the time of the wedding. But I sent a handsome wedding present. I was not so brutally frank as to tell Billy I had gone away on purpose to get rid of officiating at his wedding, but I told him that doubtless his bride would appreciate my wedding gift far more than she would me.

After the wedding Billy brought his wife to the city where he and I had always lived. The first time I met his wife I was surprised that he should have married a girl with a disposition so like his own. His wife grasped my hand cordially, looked at me with a smile on her pretty lips and a twinkle in her bright eye and said:

"Billy says you are awful grumpy, but we'll take that out of you, won't we, Billy?" and she looked at him knowingly.

My first call was short. I suppose I am prone to look out for trouble, but it seemed to me that Mrs. Bryce was a trifle too demonstrative. I was stricken with fear that instead of being jealous of me, as I had supposed, she might make Billy jealous of me, and that would be ten times worse than if she should freeze me out. I went away determined that I would not be drawn into any such danger. To be supplanted in first place with my friend was bad enough; to be placed at enmity with him would be harrowing. I resolved that I would not call on Mrs. Bryce again for a month at least.

But the very next day I was summoned to the telephone and heard the lady's cheery voice say:

"Is that you, Mr. Quimby? Come up to dinner this evening. We dine at 7. You needn't bother about evening dress if you don't wish to. Don't fail me. Billy has to go out, and I shall be all alone."

While I was trying to frame an excuse I heard a click, and that was the end of the one sided dialogue. All that afternoon I was trying to persuade myself that there was no way out of the matter, but the truth is that in my heart I didn't wish to find a way out of it. I had no place to spend the evening but my club, and I was tired enough of it. I wished to bask in the light of Mrs. Bryce's cheeriness.

Resolution is of no use where a pretty woman is concerned, and I could scarcely wait after business was over for the dinner hour; it came at last and was made welcome by Billy and his wife. Billy regretting that he was obliged to go out during the evening, but he would come home as early as possible. He was ever so much obliged to me for the favor done him of "keeping Lu from being lonely."

Just before dinner was served I saw a servant carrying a tray covered with dishes upstairs. I supposed Billy and his wife were alone in the house except for the servants and asked if any one was ill.

"A relative of Lu's," said Billy. "She's not ill, only bashful; doesn't like to meet strangers, you know."

Billy didn't more than half finish his dinner before he arose from the table.

"Sorry to leave you, old man," he said. "You'll excuse me, won't you? Lu will take good care of you. I'll try to get in before 10. Don't go till I come back."

I was left tete-a-tete with a pretty woman, and Billy had taken care to have a bottle of good wine on the table, so that had I not been sensible of the danger of the situation I should have rejoiced. I was somewhat reassured by a twinkle in Mrs. Bryce's eye when she kissed her husband goodby, for I began to think, after all, they had conspired to get rid of my belief that Billy's marriage would be a deprivation to me.

Whatever was their design, I fell into it. I did not fear for Mrs. Bryce, but I did fear for myself. She showed no disposition to go back on Billy by deed, word or look. It was I who in my heart envied my friend his wife.

Billy did not return at 10 o'clock or at 11. At half past 11 I tore myself away after having passed a delightful evening.

During the next week Billy and his wife were constantly telephoning for me. I found myself becoming infatuated with her and tried to keep away, but they wouldn't let me do so. Billy was as persistent as his wife and she as persistent as Billy.

A guilty conscience needs no accuser, and it seemed to me that Billy must notice my embarrassment, my shamefacedness. But he didn't. At any rate, he was as cordial, as jovial, as affectionate as he had ever been. And, as for being jealous of me, such an idea appeared never to enter his head. Indeed, he seemed to be constantly contriving to leave me alone with his wife.

I had not been introduced to Mrs. Bryce a week before Billy announced that he was called away on business and would be absent for about ten days.

"What!" I exclaimed. "Leave your wife so soon after your wedding?"

"What can I do? Business won't wait while a man is spooning with a new wife. Besides, Lu won't go with me."

"Indeed, I won't," said Lu. "I detest traveling. Besides, how would I amuse myself, shut up in a hotel, while Billy was attending to business? No, thank you. I'm comfortable here."

"There!" said Billy. "You see what marriage is. They're very sweet on you till they get you; then you discover that it's all put on."

His wife reproached him, but seemed to have difficulty in repressing a smile. Truly they were taking a great deal of trouble to make me feel that I had been a gainer instead of a loser by Billy's marriage.

I spent every evening at Billy's house during his absence. I made one sickly effort to miss an evening, but Mrs. Bryce asked me what in the world she would do alone. I asked her if the relative Billy had mentioned as being with her would not be a companion for her, but she said that person had gone the same day as Billy.

By the time the ten days of Billy's absence had gone—and they seemed but half a week—I had so far given my heart to his wife that I dared not meet him. I asked Mrs. Bryce when she expected him, and she said not for a couple of days. But when dining with her I heard a key in the latch of the front door and knew that my bosom friend—now my bosom enemy—had returned. He ushered in a lady who I noticed resembled his wife. She came up to me smiling and put out her hand.

"I am Mrs. Bryce," she said. "We have all been playing a game. Billy thought it would be a good joke to introduce you to my sister, Edith, as his wife. He said he thought it would break the formality of your coming under the new conditions. I kept out of the way till Billy concluded to be absent for awhile; then I went with him."

"And you are the relative to whom a dinner was carried upstairs?"

"I am."

"To tell the truth, old man," Billy broke in, "you were getting so devoted to my wife that I thought I'd better"—

"William!" protested she, who had played the part of his wife.

This was a great bouleversement both for me and Edith. So long as she had been the leading lady in a play she had not scrupled at anything, but now that she must be herself again she began to show signs of embarrassment. I was too stupid to see that this plot had been intended to take proper care of me in the loss of my friend by giving me a wife. I confess I was at a loss to understand why they had thought proper to play such a joke on me, but I did not refer it to its true source.

We had a merry dinner together, which was only marred by Billy, who could not resist the temptation to guy me for my devotion to one whom I had supposed to be his wife. His taunts were only appreciated by himself. His wife tried to frown him down, his sister-in-law looked daggers at him, while I looked silly. However, the dinner at last ended. Billy and his wife went upstairs ostensibly to rest after their journey, but really to leave me alone with Edith.

I put an end to the embarrassmest attending the joke that had been plaed upon me by proposing to Edith that since she had played the role of wife so well she had better be a real wife. She assented. Mr. and Mrs. Bryce were the next day informed that the play had ended in a reality. Billy enjoyed his joke hugely, declaring that it was the only way I could have been saved from a lonely old pessimism.

Good Form

Training Maids.

A little patience and system in dealing with maids, especially if they be young ones, without very much experience, will often work miracles. Even if they are older and can justly claim to be experienced, there is always much for them to learn in entering a new household.

Every mistress has her own particular way of having certain things done, and the new girl must conform to this way even if she has been accustomed to doing the same work in a different manner.

One mistress encourages her "green" girls by engaging them at a small wage and increasing it as they master various menus. When the maid can prepare all of them she is given the sum that her ability would earn for her anywhere.

It is not hard to teach a girl to cook by this system. Most girls will take a deeper interest in their cooking than they will in many other branches of housework, and if instructed by this or some other equally good and definite system they will try harder and hence learn more rapidly than when instructed in a haphazard way.

Correct Stationery.

The newest note paper is very long and very narrow and fits into envelopes of precisely the size of the unfolded sheet. This style is smartest in dark cream and pale gray tones.

Then there are the sheets of heavy linen in buff, blue and gray that must be once folded lengthwise to fit into their envelopes, and there are the sheets of very thin but stout white paper which fold once to fit into square envelopes lined with a color. These formerly were used only for foreign correspondence, but now they are coming into domestic use.

Correspondence cards never have been daintier, and everybody is now using them at the slightest excuse. Some of them are absolutely square, and some of them are long and narrow, with beveled edges.

Artistic Compliments.

It is not the compliment that is, so to speak, laid on with a trowel that really reaches our hearts. No; it is the delicate and subtle sort that we do not recognize as a compliment.

This species is best and most successful when it is expressed by deeds rather than by words.

Let some one show a decided liking for our society when there are others present who are more attractive or clever or famous and how can we help but be pleased?

If their amusements and interests take a second place and ours usurp the first, then that, too, is a delightful form of flattery.

Table Usage.

Good manners at the table stamp the well bred person. The knife is used only in cutting the food, never to raise any particle of it to the mouth. A few general rules follow:

Lettuce is cut with the fork, a small portion rolled about the tines and thus eaten.

Oranges are peeled, cut or divided into quarters and eaten, or cut in half and eaten with the orange spoon, a spoon narrower and smaller than the ordinary tablespoon.

The Unfriendly Reminder.

Of all trying things the "I told you so" person is one of the worst. When you confide any trouble to them you are usually met with an "I told you so, but you wouldn't listen to me," which is distinctly annoying. They really might have the generosity not to rub it in. There is very little chance that you would have forgotten their warning, and they might refrain from the petty satisfaction of reminding you of their superior wisdom.

The Family Bore.

Friends and even members of a family ought to take care not to overstep the border line between interest and inquisitiveness. If one has been out and comes back looking pleased, it is annoying to be immediately asked, "Well, whom have you been with?" and then requested to go into details of the pleasant time spent.

Cordiality to Newcomers.

A resident of a town or village can call with propriety on any newcomer and the newcomer should return this call if she desires to continue the acquaintance. The time of calling is settled by the customs of the place, but after two o'clock and before six is generally correct.

When to Call.

Ceremonious calls are not made between women in the morning, evening or on Sunday afternoons. A man, owing to the exactions of business, may call in the evening and on Sunday afternoon.

Tea Invitations.

Invitations to afternoon teas are very often in the form of visiting cards. On the lower left hand corner of the card write "At home from 3 until 6. Thursday, April 20."

Hospitality to Strangers.

Before an invitation of hospitality is given to a stranger a call should first be made.

NO CLEW YET OF MISSING GAVEL

No clue has been obtained by the men investigating the disappearance of the gavel of court Officer William M. Marden which dropped out of sight Thursday afternoon following the adjournment of the session.

The formal opening of the court this morning however did not lack its customary finish for a pencil was substituted in its place.

The removal of the gavel from its accustomed place follows the theft of several articles in the court house. Several days ago a hat of Chief of Police Frank Burrill was taken and other disappearances have been reported.

CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

William W. Raymond, last survivor of Gilmore's orchestra observed his 91st birthday at his home in Weymouth Friday.

He has been a life long resident of the town and was born there July 24, 1823. He has been prominent in musical circles and in 1845 became a member of the Stetson band. He later joined Bond's band and in 1869 became connected with Gilmore's band of Boston which played at the Peace Jubilees at Boston 1869—1872, his instrument being the trombone.

Two members of Stetson's band are still alive, Loring Stetson, the leader and Francis H. Tilden.

Mr. Raymond is a former member of the Board of Selectmen and Assessors. He has been twice married.

PROGRESSIVE PARTY SOLVENT

Charles E. Ware, Jr. former treasurer of the Progressive state committee denies that the party is practicall bankrupt and would not be able to pay more than fifty cents on a dollar. "I am sure, and I am assured by a statement from Lawrence G. Brooks, treasurer of the Progressive party, that it is simply a question of time when the debts of the Progressive party will be settled to the satisfaction of each and every creditor."

Continuing he said "It is well known that the Republican party has been, and may still be in a similar condition, and that it has more outstanding debts than the Progressive Party and that the Democratic party has been and is still in a similar condition.

AUGUST AMERICAN MAGAZINE.

In the August American Magazine Ray Stannard Baker tells "How Uncle Sam Spends Your Income Tax Dollar." He went to Washington, made an investigation, and reports penny for penny what becomes of a dollar when Uncle Sam gets it—63 cents for this 17 cents for that, etc. His article is full of news and genuine surprises.

Will Irwin tells a wonderful true dog story; Walter Prichard Eaton tells a love story; Stephen Leacock writes of "Arcadian Adventures with the Idle Rich"; Number 6606, a convict in a western penitentiary, writes another Boston Blackie story entitled "The Story of Dad Morgan;" Alice Hegan Rice, famous as the author of "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," writes a story of a Kentucky mountaineer called "Pop"; Marjorie Benton Cooke goes on with "Bamby"; a husband with twenty-five years' experience in matrimony writes of the discoveries and experiences of middle age; and the Interesting People department contains intimate accounts of five remarkable characters.

PAPERS FILED.

The first nomination papers of the year were filed in the office of City Clerk Crane this morning by William J. Sullivan, secretary of the Democratic city committee.

The papers were circulated in the interests of Lieut. Gov. Edward J. Barry, who is a candidate for re-election.

The names will be approved by the Board of Registrars tonight after examination. Joseph B. Grossman, the youngest registrar in the state, will serve as a member of the board for the first time in his official capacity.

NEWSY BRIEFS

Letter Carrier Thomas Carey is on his annual fifteen days vacation.

The condition of Henry Guild who is seriously ill at Squantum remains about the same.

The young daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Johnson of Maple street are at Ashland, N. H., visiting their grandparents.

About thirty couples atended the dance at the Squantum Inn Friday evening, Mrs. Louise Osborne Holt acting as patroness. Music was by the Postal clerks orchestra.

The Willard estate, on Clive street, which has been vacant since Mrs. Willard's death over a year ago, is soon to be ocupied by Mr. Smith, who recently purchased the place.

The Minute Boys of Memorial church visited different sections of Quincy Saturday to find the best place for a day's outing and were convinced that Ward Two playground, Atlantic or Squantum are the best places.

Sons of Veterans auxiliary celebrated its 16th anniversary this week. An enjoyable affair was held after which refreshments were served and games played. The program was under the direction of the good of the order committee.

The Atlantic Methodist church has granted its pastor, Rev. E. C. Pollard a vacation until Sept. 6, he to supply the pulpit for the next three Sundays after which the church will be closed until September. Mr. Pollard left Monday for Bath, Maine where he will spend a month.

Rev. M. Oakman Patton rector of Emmanuel church, Braintree will be the celebrant at Holy Communion at St. Chrysostom's church, during each Sunday in August except the first at 9.45 o'clock. Mr. Patton will also have charge of the 10.30 A. M. service.

Mrs. Theodore Parker of Russell street, Atlantic is hostess next Wednesday for the all day sewing meeting of the Woman's Guild. These meetings have been well attended and during August the dates will be the 12th and 26th at the homes of Mrs. Howard D. Fowler and Mrs. Daniel C. Miller.

Mrs. Clara Alice Way, daughter of the late Cyrus and Maria Smith Patch of Quincy died at Concord, Mass, June 30, leaving a husband and two young children to mourn her loss. She was a woman of strong character and bore with christian fortitude many months of great suffering.

The hot night last week Friday interfered with the plans of the Atlantic Improvement Association in its effort to stir the community to take some active part with the city and Squantum Association to help eliminate the mosquito. But many will be glad to know that the city has sprayed the pools in the marshes around Atlantic.

The Ward Six Patriotic Association awarded the prizes for the Fourth of July parade and sports Thursday evening. While some of the most active in the Association are inclined to give up the efforts for the Fourth for a few years on account of criticisms yet the most public spirited men of the community feel that the Atlantic Fourth has been a big success by the efforts of the Association, and the money wisely spent.

To Kill Odor of Onion.

To kill the odor of onions on the breath eat lemon afterward or drink strong lemonade. Many persons who never eat onions in any other form cannot very well avoid them in some salads which would taste exceedingly flat without this vegetable.

What He Wanted.

Four-year-old Myron was served with some waffles one morning for the first time in his memory, and upon finishing them with a relish he called: "Mamma, please bring me some more of those pancakes with windows in."

MAKING AN EPIGRAM.

The Prize Winner Was Evidently a Married Man's Effusion.

The head epigrammatist of the great wit and humor factory bent over his work bench and rested his gaze upon an epigram that had been used and used until it was cracked and frazzled.

"It's a shame to throw it away," he said, "for I believe it can still be turned about so that it will have a commercial value. I know what I will do. I will offer a prize to the workman who brings in the best new twist."

So when the workmen were gathered in the room he told them that he wanted them to beat out a new and clever turn upon the old motto "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." He gave them just one hour at their anvils, with a monetary prize for the best effort and honorable mention for the others. When the time was up this assortment was handed in:

"A chauffeur in the front seat is worth two under the motorcar."

"A kiss in the dark is worth two under the electric light."

"A grain of sand on the beach is worth two in the eye."

"A gift from a husband after marriage is worth two from a lover before."

"A week's wages in bank is worth two in a trousers pocket that the wife is going through at night."

And, while the first four received honorable mention, it was the last one that won the prize.—New York Sun.

BLOWN TO SAFETY.

Curious Incident of an Explosion That Wrecked Fifty Homes.

It happened that in the last month of the reign of Charles I. a certain ship chandler of London was foolish enough to busy himself over a barrel of gunpowder with a lighted candle in his hand. He paid the price of his folly. A spark fell into the gunpowder, and the place was blown up.

The trouble was that the man who did the mischief was not the only one to perish. Fifty houses were wrecked, and the number of people who were killed was not known.

In one house among the fifty a mother had put her baby into its cradle to sleep before the explosion occurred. What became of the mother no one ever knew, but what became of the baby was very widely known. The next morning there was found upon the leads of the Church of Allhallows a young child in a cradle, baby and cradle being entirely uninjured by the explosion that had lifted both to such a giddy height.

It was never learned who the child was, but she was adopted by a gentleman of the parish and grew to womanhood. She must surely all her life have had a peculiar interest in that church.—Sir Walter Besant's "London."

Misplaced Sympathy.

Sitting near the door in a subway car was a middle aged man reading a newspaper. At one station there got aboard this car a mother and her son, a small boy maybe four years old.

As those two came through the doorway and into the car the small boy, quite by accident, of course, hit the middle aged gentleman reading the newspaper a good, smart kick on the shin, causing the man to wince, while the boy's progress was checked for a moment by his thus kicking up against something.

The mother looked down, but she said nothing to the man. It was to the boy she spoke:

"Did you hurt yourself, dear?"

Which seemed a case of misplaced sympathy.—New York Sun.

The City and the Child.

New York city—the length and breadth of Manhattan—and Boston, from the Fenway in three directions to the water front, are as unfit for a child to grow up in as the basement of a china store for a calf. There might be hay enough on such a floor for a calf, as there is doubtless air enough on a New York city street for a child. It is not the lack of things—not even air—in a city that renders life next to impossible there. It is rather the multitude of things. City life is a three ringed circus, with a continuous performance and interminable sideshows and peanuts and pink lemonade. It is jarred and jostled and trampled and crowded and hurried, and it is overstimulated, spindling and premature.—Suburban Life.

Studied Insult.

"I wish," said the waiter who had been serving the man with the grim face and the pert looking girl, "I could think of some way to get even with that fellow. He complained about everything I put on the table and growled about every move I made."

"What did his bill amount to?"

"A dollar and ninety cents."

"And how much money did he hand you?"

"A two dollar bill."

"It's easy. Have it in two nickels when you return his change."—Chicago Herald.

Legend of a Lake.

Avernus is the lake in the neighborhood of Naples where the waters are so unwholesome that birds never fly near its banks. In ancient times it was thought to be the entrance to Hades and where Ulysses descended to the lower regions.

Not Always Certain.

CONTROL OF THE ARMY WORM.

When detected, all efforts should be centred on keeping the worms out of crops not yet attacked, and confining their injury to as small an area as possible. As a barrier to their progress, either make a dust furrow of road dust and place around material liable to be attacked or plow a deep furrow ahead of the worms' line of march. But poisoned bran mash in this furrow. This should be made of 1 lb. of paris green, 25 lbs. of middlings or bran, moistened with a quart of cheap molasses and 1 gallon of water.

The best way to kill them in large nubers is to spray crops which they have not yet attacked with a heavy dose of paris green, 2 lbs. to 60 gallons of water. This strength will uot burn the leaves, but in order to be effective the crop or strip of grass which is selected must be sprayed copiously. Paris green is better than arsenate of lead for this purpose, because it washes off more easily, and so will not injure the feeding value of the crop. Where a town is severely attacked with the army worm, the farmers should combine and use a power sprayer, as much more effective work can be done in this way. Get the local moth superintendent to co-operate by loaning the town sprayer, where there is one.

cided that Comdr. Upton should make the tour of inspection as now planned.

Protected by a patent, taken out by Comd. Upton, the new flag of the squadron, adopted at meetings last winter, and displayed on boats for the first time this spring, now flies from about 30 boats in Boston harbor. Attempts are to be made to have Congress approve this flag, making it official throughout the country.

As an experiment, the Government has issued orders to the United States customs guards at this port, that all boats flying the flag of the squadron in conjuction with that of the Boston Yacht Club, shall be exempt from annoyance of being "held up" and examined by the guards.

The flag means that the squadron stands back of the boat, as a guarantee that equipment of the craft complies with regulations of the Government.

NEW COUNCIL CANDIDATE

Councillor Charles W. Guy is to have opposition this year in his efforts to secure the Democratic nomination for Friday Isaac Simon of Ward 21, Boston, took out papers for the Democratic Councillor nomination

For years the Democratic nomination for Councillor in the second district has gone begging for it was thought impossible for a Democrat to win out. The same condition prevailed a year ago when Mr. Guy took the nomination. Few had any idea that he would be elected but through a similarity of names he defeated Guy A. Ham, the Republican nominee. Mr. Guy has announced himself as a candidate again this year, and according to general custom, the nomination should go to him.

It was supposed that Mr. Guy would have no opposition this year and he was also planning to grab the Progressive nomination as well. If Mr. Simon files his papers it means an interesting contest.

HIGHER FARES.

There have been intimations from time to time that the street railroads would be compelled to charge six cent fares if they were to pay dividends and maintain the efficiency of their service. Now the first step in this direction in New England has recently been taken. The Middlesex and Malden street has asked permission to increase its fares one cent, and it is said that the permission is to be granted. Other roads are likely to follow suit and it may spread all over New England. Increased operating expenses and increased cost of material are the reasons given for making the change necessary.—Taunton Herald.

STATISTICS OF CITY FINANCES

Report of the Cost of Municipal Government in Massachusetts

Too Large a Percent Required in Quincy For Deb'.

The reasons for Quincy's high tax rate is to be found in the sixth annual report on the "Statistics of Municipal Finances for cities and towns" just issued by the Bureau of Statistics, under the title "The cost of municipal government in Massachusetts."

Unfortunately the figures are not up-to-date, as it takes a long time to get returns from all cities and towns, compile the statistics and have them printed. The figures are for the year ending between Nov. 30, 1911, and March 15, 1912, two years ago.

There is almost a bewildering array of figures, and only the student of municipal affairs will be interested in the 257 pages concerning the 33 cities and 247 towns. Many valuable comparisons, however, may be made, and from time to time during the next month the Daily Ledger will present them.

Charles F. Gettemy, the director of the Massachusetts bureau reports that Quincy is one of the 59 cities and towns which have adopted the accounting system.

The first analysis shows the excess or deficiency of revenue for the five years—1907 to 1911 inclusive, which is not at all favorable to Quincy, as the net deficiency of the city for these five years was $138,612, as follows:

In 1907, Deficiency	$43,670
In 1908, Deficiency	81,493
In 1909, Deficiency	20,822
In 1910, Excess	17,063
In 1911, Deficiency	9,690
Net deficiency	$138,612

The Mayor in 1907 was Hon. James Thompson, and in the other four years Hon. William T. Shea.

In 1912, the first year of Mayor Stone he advocated and secured an appropriation of $150,000 to meet the above deficiency, and bonds were issued.

TOO MUCH FOR DEBT.

It is Director Gettemy's analysis of the distribution of charges against revenue on page xx,—into maintenance, interest and debt requirements by amounts and percentages,—that shows why Quincy's tax rate is high, and why the city is handicapped in making improvements.

The total revenue of Quincy for the year was $916,527.12, and the charges and percentages were as follows:

	Amount	Per cent
Maintenance,	$534,083.81	59.2
Interest,	155,637.25	17.0
Debt,	217,806.06	23.8

SUDDEN DEATH OF FIREMAN

Overcome by Gas at Factory of Hall & Co.

Luther O. Harrington of 14 Blake street, employed as a firemen at the factory of William Hall & Co. at Wollaston, was overcome by gas on Saturday, and although desperate efforts were made to save his life by the use of a pulmotor they were unsuccessful. Saturday morning a slight leak was discovered in the gas storage tank, which Mr. Harrington attempted to repair. He placed his head in the man hole of the tank, evidently with the idea of better locating the leak, so that it might be repaired from the outside. The fumes were so strong that he was overcome almost immediately, and was unable to pull himself out of the hole. When found his head was inside of the tank with his feet hanging outside. He was pulled out unconscious, and while fellow employees worked over him a hurry call was sent to the police station for the pulmotor. This was rushed to the scene and although physicians worked over the man for some time they were unable to bring him back to life.

Funeral services will be held Tuesday afternoon, at 1 o'clock at 14 Blake street.

GIRL SUICIDE AT WOLLASTON

Domestic Employed in Family on Norfolk Street

Miss Ida Mitpa, an Italian domestic employed in the family of Louis J. Lobin of 167 Norfolk street, Wollaston, committed suicide Saturday by hanging herself to a rafter in the attic. When discovered life had departed and the girl had evidently been dead sometime.

The girl did not appear as usual in the morning and it was at first though that she had not returned the night before. As the morning wore on however the family became suspicious that all was not right and a search of the house was instituted. On going to the attic the family were shocked to find the girl hanging to one of the rafters. The body was quickly cut down and physicians summoned but life had departed. Medical Examiner Jones was notified, and after viewing the body it was given in charge of an undertaker.

It was said that the girl had been somewhat melancholy of late, and it is thought that she decided to end it all by taking her own life. As far as known the girl had no relatives in Quincy.

The girl left a note written in Italian which Medical Examiner Jones took and had translated into English. This note begged forgiveness of God and her parents for her act. She said nobody but herself was responsible and that she was seeking rest and peace which she could not find in this world.

Sunday the body was claimed by an uncle, Guiseppe Gallini of Roxbury, and Sunday afternoon it was buried in St. Michael's cemetery, Roxbury.

NARROW ESCAPE FOR CHILDREN

Caught Up Stairs by Fire on North Street

There was a lively blaze at 11 North street, early Sunday morning in which eleven persons had a narrow escape from being suffocated. The fire was in the house of Isaac Spector. The owner with his wife and two children occupied the lower part of the house, the upper tenement being occupied by Henry Green, his wife and three children, also two Russians as boarders.

The fire evidently started on the piazza at the northeast corner, near where a five gallon can of kerosene had been set. Chief Billings thinks that some one must have thrown a lighted cigarette from one of the upper windows which started the blaze. When it was discovered the whole east side of the building was on fire and blazing fiercely, the smoke pouring in through the windows which had been broken by the heat arousing the Green family.

Mr. and Mrs. Green rushed down stairs to the Spector's apartment. Then they tried to go back up stairs for their three boys. By this time however the fire had gained such headway that they were unable to get back. Going outside they saw the faces of their boys at the window. The Russian boarders were also in the upper part of the building trying to dress and they were begged to save the children.

Evidently the men did not hear, or did not understand, for they jumped out of the window. Mr. and Mrs. Green by this time were nearly frantic but determined to save their boys or die in the attempt they got down on their hands and knees and began to crawl up stairs. They succeeded in reaching the room where the boys were and wrapping some bed clothing about them started back down the stairway which was now as light as day from the flames. With considerable difficulty they managed to reach the open air but all five were nearly overcome by smoke.

In the meantime someone had sounded an alarm from Box 174 at 2.20, which brought the fire department from the Quincy Point and Central stations. When the department arrived they found that the fire had made considerable headway and it took some hard work before the flames were under control.

When told of the escape of the Green family, inquiries were made as to where they were. The firemen instituted a search and some minutes later found them huddled together in woods near by. They had nothing on but their night clothes and the children were shivering from exposure. The Chief ordered the firemen to bring some horse blankets which were wrapper about the unfortunates.

The Spector family who occupied the lower floor of the house had no difficulty in escaping, as the flames crept up the side of the house into the upper windows. The loss will not be large and it is thought that $200 will cover it.

CLOSET FIRE ON MAIN STREET

Smoke issuing from a clothes closet on the first floor of M. Fish's home at Cyril and Main streets Sunday morning resulted in the discovery of a brisk fire which threatened the house.

The fire burned through the walls of the closet and worked up to the second floor. The heavy smoke filled the house and poured from the open windows. Neighbors became alarmed because a conflagration seemed imminent.

The alarm from box 173 was sounded about 9 o'clock and the department seeing the smoke banks over the tops of the trees made a quick run. The fire was put out by a stream from the auto chemical.

MANY STITCHES REQUIRED

Serious Assault Case on Arthur Street

Murder was almost committed in a fight among Finns, outside the Finn hall on Arthur street Saturday night, when Arthur Gropst, of 49 Arthur street, received a cut which would have partially severed the head if it had been an inch lower. The cut was the worst that ever came to the attention of the police.

Gropst was slashed from the corner of the right side of the mouth across to the ear. The lower part of the face dropped down, exposing the teeth and gums. The wound is an inch deep and bled freely. He was rushed to the Quincy City Hospital where 25 stitches were taken in the wound.

Patrolman Dinneen later arrested a man who gave his name as Narta Kingsonen, of 49 Arthur street, who is said to have done the slashing. Kingsonen is 26 years old and married. At the police station he talked but little and when asked about the fight repeatedly said "I don't know, too much whiskey."

A search for the knife was without results and it is thought that someone in the crowd must have picked it up and hidden it.

AUTO TRAVEL ON INCREASE

Over 3,525 Cars Pass One Point on Hancock Street

Auto travel through this city on Sundays is on the increase and more machines passed yesterday than on any Sabbath of the season.

Between the hours of 9.30 A. M. and 7 P. M. there were 3525 machines clicked off on the automobile counter of Arthur B. Hultman, assistant court officer, whose home is on Hancock street corner Russell park. This is over six per minute during the day. Only 90 horse drawn vehicles appeared during that time.

This number of machines passing through City Square required extra police protection and several men were on duty.

The cars of the Bay State Ry. Co. were crowded with pleasure seekers and there is no knowing how many passengers were carried during the day. The day in the vicinity of City Square passed without any accidents.

BURGLARY AT BRAINTREE

One successful burglary, an attempt to enter a store, and a false alarm of fire are reported by the police of Braintree. All infractions were committed during the night.

This morning it was discovered that the Atkinson restaurant in South Braintree had been burglarized and as far as is known eight boxes of cigars and a quantity of candy was taken. A gum machine was also rifled. Entrance was gainedby breaka rear window.

A wooden shutter balked the efforts of the marauders to enter the Allison Clothing Co. store in South Braintree. A window was broken, but the shutter could not be removed.

The false alarm was sounded from box 134, located at Commot and Washington street, at 12.40 o'clock.

POSSIBLE CANDIDATE.

Councilman Charles A. Ericson of Ward One, it is expected, will in a few days take out papers for representative from the fifth Norfolk district on the Republican ticket. No formal announcement of his candidacy has as yet been made but Mr. Ericson admits that he is considering becoming a candidate.

BOULEVARD FROM BOSTON

Contemplates Using the Present Neponset Bridge

After many years the agitation relative to a boulevard that will extend from Boston to Quincy and towns along the South Shore is nearing settlement as far as plans are concerned. It is reported that $475,000 is already available for takings along the route. When completed the boulevard would give direct access from Boston to towns along the South Shore.

The plan shows the boulevard to start from Columbia road Dorchester following the line of the railroad to Savin Hill thence along to Neponset crossing the present Neponset bridge into Quincy.

For some time past a large gang of men have been at work completing the boulevard from Marine Park to Columbia road, the route being practically the old road bed of the railroad. The present plans call for the road to swing into the bay at Savin hill and cross to Mallock's wharf. From this point the road will run across Freeport street to Mill street, and then across Bark Warrick cove. It will pass along Teneah beach to Neponset across the bridge and then connect with the Quincy shore reservation at Atlantic street.

Columbia road also connects with Massachusetts avenue so that easy access by good roads can be had to the boulevards at the west of Boston.

It would be much more satisfactory to Quincy if the new boulevard crossed the Neponset river east of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R., and would enter the Quincy Shore reservation more directly. Arrangements will not be satisfactory so long as pleasure travel and business traffic use the same bridge, and business should not be excluded from the present Neponset bridge.

SUDDEN ILLNESS.

Paul Poehler, champion candlepin bowler, collapsed Saturday afternoon in his allays in the Pandora, Houghs Neck, and was taken to his home. He is thought to have suffered an attack of pleurisy.

The sickness may interfere with his match with Archie Walsh, the Boston bowler, which is scheduled as the opening attraction at the Wardwell alleys in the new Kincaide block. The articles of agreement were practically signed.

AUTO CAUGHT ON CROSSING

Boston Car Has a Close Call at Elm Street, Braintree

Two women and a man in a large touring car had a narrow escape late Saturday night from being run down by a train at the Elm street crossing in Braintree. The car was driven by a man who said his name was J. Laibel of 20 Summer street, Boston. The gates had been lifted to allow another car to pass in the opposite direction, but Saibels car was caught between the gates when they were suddenly lowered. The train as it whizzed by smashed the rear of the automobile but the occupants were not injured. The occupants of the train were somewhat shaken up when the engineer suddenly applied the emergency brakes. The train was stopped and the train crew went back to make an investigation. The automobile was able to proceed, although the back of it was smashed.

CHALLENGE NOT ACCEPTED.

The Imperator 23 sailed from the Wollaston Yacht club float Saturday afternoon for Adams Shore to take up that challenge of the Hell-to-Pay for a race. The latter boat however was found tied hard and fast to her moorings and no amount of urging could get her skipper to race. His excuse was that there was too much wind. After a litle rest the Imperator 23, sailed away for Wollaston, claiming the race by default.

The popular rest cure this season is dancing the tango until 1 a. m. at the summer resort hotels.

According to the prevailing scale of tips, a smile from the colored elevator man at the summer hotel costs about 25 cents.

Probably every one would be willing to go to work at 6 A. M. in summer, and get through that much earlier, if it were not that they would be able to do more work that way.

Pajamas may be more stylish, as some of our contemporaries argue, but a man who wears the good old time night-shirt can usually be depended on to go to church and vote the straight ticket in November.

The fact that a bride can decorate a church in June with the most exquisite sense of harmony and proportion is no sign that she can make a digestible berry pie in July.

Seven per cent of eggs packed for shipment, it is complained, are broken when they reach destination. Perhaps the mistake was made of marking them "Handle with care."

Birmingham, Ala., has annulled the ordinance forbidding kissing in the public parks. A new supply of park benches should be ordered at once.

A sport writer who states that a ball player was hit "in the head," insted of using the approved expression "in the bean," should be assigned to report the meetings of the Antiquarian societies.

The Cleveland women have put up anti-swearing posters in the street-cars and factories, but strangely enough they omitted to post the golf links.

DROWNING ACCIDENTS.

One of the most distressing aspects of the summer season is the number of drowning accidents. Every Monday morning's paper through the warm weather brings a catalogue of deaths. "drowned while bathing." All through the week, from the surf bathing beach, to the village swimming hole, there is one long story of sorrow and death. Overturned canoes and row and sail boats, contribute a heavy toll.

And the parents does not secure safety for his youngsters by teaching them how to swim. That may encourage them to go far out into deep water, without friends to accompany them, taking chances of sudden attacks of cramps and chills.

Certainly every boy and girl ought to learn to swim. With a little pains and effort, this can be arranged almost anywhere. Also let them know how many accidents are all the time happening from a too venturesome spirit. Young people should not be permitted to use canoes and boats until they have learned to quit fooling on the water.

AT THE SUMMER RESORTS.

A person who should make a tour of a considerable number of summer resorts would be impressed by the enormous amount of money being spent in what may fairly be called extravagances.

Tourists must often question who supports all the top priced hotels. The millionaires occupy a large place in the public eye. But when you come to enumerate them, they are a very limited class. A great many of them travel in Europe, some do not care for travelling as they find it physically wearisome. Either many of these expensive hotels must run at a loss, or else they are being patronized by persons who can not afford to pay for their magnificence.

Take the case of many people who live at home in very simple style. They may keep no servants, or at most a single work-horse of a general housework girl. Yet when they start off for a summer outing, they must have the best there is. At home they may be content to do their own "passing" at table. At the public resort they wish to be as good as any one, and must have their own individual waiter, to save them any "reaching" or delay.

The spirit of extortion and exaction seems to prevail. The livery man will not take you on a general drive to show you the main features of interest for a fair price. The driving roads are split up into sections, so that one can get the leading features only by taking them all at separate times. Waiters and bellboys have elaborate systems of signals and exchange of information, to assure themselves that every one "comes across" with a fat tip. At home a man may black his own boots and shave himself. At the hotels he is made to feel that it is degrading if he lifts a finger to serve himself.

All who entertain the public at resorts will do well to remember that the great majority of Americans live very simply at home. The majority of them would like to live simply, but comfortably, when they travel.

An Unconventional Duke.

Kew Parish church had among former worshipers the first Duke of Cambridge, a strong but unconventional churchman, who made audible comments while the service was in progress. To the exhortation, "Let us pray," he would reply, "By all means," and during a dry summer he added to the "Amen" after the prayer for rain, "But we shan't get it till the wind changes." On hearing the words, "For we brought nothing into the world, neither may we carry anything out," he would ejaculate, "True, true; too many calls upon us for that."—London Globe.

The Smile of God's Love.

As the ice upon the mountain, when the warm breath of summer's sun breathes upon it, melts and divides into drops, each of which reflects an image of the sun, so life, in the smile of God's love, divides itself into separate forms, each bearing in it and reflecting an image of God's love.—Longfellow.

FOUR KILLED; SIXTY INJURED

Scene of Serious Rioting and Bloodshed In Dublin

NATIONALISTS ARE FIRED ON

Company of King's Own Scottish Borderers, on Way to Capture Arms Landed From Yacht, In Conflict With Mob Which First Attacked Them—Echo of Gun-Running

Dublin, July 27.—Three men and one woman are dead and more than sixty persons are in the hospitals wounded as the result of a battalion of the King's Own Scottish Borderers firing into a mob in the streets of Dublin.

Seven of the wounded are expected to succumb to their injuries. The wounded include three women and a boy of 10.

The affray was the result of a gun running exploit of the Nationalist volunteers, who were being aided by a mob composed largely of women and youths.

A consignment of rifles, said to number 10,000, was landed at noon Sunday at Howth, nine miles from Dublin. The vessel on which the arms were brought to Howth was a private yacht.

The Nationalist volunteers cut the telegraph wires and stopped travel on the Dublin roads and, according to reports, sent away most of the rifles, together with 70,000 rounds of ammunition, in motor cars.

A battalion of the King's Own Scottish Borderers was ordered to capture the arms when the authorities heard that the volunteers were bringing them into the city.

The soldiers encountered a detachment of volunteers at Clonmell bridge and an outbreak resulted. There was no shooting, however. A great crowd soon collected and followed the troops, jeering them and cheering for John Redmond and home rule. Finally the mob began throwing bottles and stones and several of the soldiers were injured.

The battalion then replied to the attack of the mob with a scattered fusillade. In an instant the street was covered with wounded, while the crowd ran in all directions.

St. Juras' hospital is situated only 200 yards from the scene of the affray and the wounded were quickly taken there. Four of them died within two hours. The soldiers and police seized a hundred rifles from the volunteers.

Excited crowds filled the streets of Dublin, some of the men carrying rifles. The Borderers are confined to barracks to prevent the people from attacking them. Further rioting is feared.

The yacht from which the arms were landed was a sailing vessel, the name of which had been painted over. A woman, or a man in woman's clothing, some persons say, commanded the yacht.

A thousand volunteers marched openly from Dublin to receive the arms. They said, however, that they were merely making a practice march. The local police and the coast guard tried to prevent the landing of the arms, but were driven off.

When the Dublin authorities learned of the landing they sent sixty police to seize the arms. These police later were reinforced by 200 others. The police were drawn up on both sides of the road along which the volunteers were returning, with the military in the centre of the road.

When the volunteers saw the mobilization most of them got away with their arms, scattering through the fields. The police and soldiers tried to disarm the remainder.

In the resulting affray several revolver shots were fired by volunteers, and a corporal and a private were wounded. The volunteers also used their rifles as clubs.

The soldiers fired and used their bayonets freely. Then they had a running fight with the volunteers and the rapidly growing mob through the streets to their barracks. A number of policemen have been suspended for refusing to try to disarm the volunteers.

After the troops had fired into the crowd, the angry populace attacked individual soldiers and beat them brutally. Members of the Scottish Borderers, who were riding bicycles along the quays, were pulled from their machines and beaten and the bicycles were thrown into the river.

The lord mayor issued a strong letter of protest, in which he declares that the troops were ordered out without permission having been asked of the lord mayor of the city, and he demands that the responsibility shall be fixed for the calling out of the soldiers and for supplying them with ball cartridges. He adds:

"Dublin and Ireland look with confidence to John Redmond and his colleagues to bring to justice those responsible for this shocking outrage. There must no longer be one law for a section of the Ulster people and another law for the remainder of the Irish people."

DEATH PROBE HALTS

Police Now Inclined to Think Ada Taylor a Suicide

Boston, July 27.—The investigation of the metropolitan park police into the case of the death of Ada Taylor, the Winthrop domestic whose body was found on the beach at Ocean Spray ten days ago, has halted. Nothing further will be done on it until after the inquest, which is to be held within a few days.

Superintendent West of the Revere Beach police division had been led by the recent developments in the case to believe the woman committed suicide and therefore has called his men off the case until after the inquest has officially announced the cause of death.

ONLY DID WHAT ANY FATHER WOULD DO

Claim of Remorseful Slayer of Youthful Son-in-Law

Haverstraw, N. Y., July 27.—"I did what any father would do under the circumstances. I am ready to take the consequences. But I didn't know they were married. Oh, if Anna had only told me. Poor little girlie."

These were the words expressed in his cell by William V. Cleary, town clerk of Haverstraw, who shot and killed his son-in-law, Eugene M. Newman, boy husband of a few hours.

It was the first lucid moment since Cleary's arrest. Then he broke down and huddled on his prison cot sobbing like a child. He begged the keepers to let him see his daughter.

THREE KILLED BY TRAIN

Newly Married Couple and Friend Are Caught on Tracks

Manchester, N. H., July 27.—The bodies of the three persons who were run over and killed by a Boston and Maine train were identified as those of George Cullen and his wife and Harry Kelley, a friend. All three lived in this city. Cullen was a watchman in the Amoskeag mills.

While no details regarding the accident are known, the police believe the three were walking the tracks and became confused when the train bore down upon them. They were between 25 and 30 years of age.

The Cullens had been married only two months. They had been spending a half-holiday in a grove and were walking along the tracks on their way home when the train struck them.

RIOT AT A PICNIC

Squads of Police Called Out to Quell Serious Disturbance

Saugus, Mass., July 27.—The police of three cities were called out last evening to quell a riot among 200 men and women picnickers at Spencers grove, at the junction of the boundary lines of Saugus, Malden and Melrose.

Three arrests were made and many persons, both men and women, had their heads split by clubs in the hands of the rioters or the police.

The disturbers are said by the police to be members of a club which was holding its annual picnic at the grove, which is in the section known as the Saugus pines.

SENSATIONS IN CAILLAUX TRIAL

Prisoner Collapses and Presiding Judge Wants Duel

LOVE LETTERS OF EX-PREMIER

They Cause Great Uproar When Read In Court After Prelude In Which Associate Judge Is Asked to Apologize For Criticism or Settle on Field of Honor

Paris, July 27.—"I send you a thousand million kisses"——Attorney Labori reached this point in the reading of the love letters that had been exchanged between Joseph Caillaux and Mme. Claretie before she became his wife.

Mme. Caillaux, on trial for the murder of Gaston Calmette, sobbed convulsively. Then she collapsed in the prisoner's dock.

Gendarmes rushed to aid her. Caillaux, leaping from his seat, forestalled them. He took the limp form in his arms and carried her from the court. Thus ended the session, which was marked by dramatic period after dramatic period, and fraught at every angle with a new thrill and a new sensation.

Eight love letters had been produced. Three, by order of the court, were read by Labori. Five remained in the judge's hands. The great crowd hung upon every word of the letters read by the man who, in France, is best qualified to give effect to the meaning of words.

In spite of the tremendous interest and the magnificent elocutionary powers of the advocate, there was an uproar as the reading progressed. Shouts of derision came to challenge the shrieks of triumph that came from enemies of the defense.

There had been a sensational prelude. Judge Albanel of the assize court had challenged Judge Dagoury to a duel. The duel was provoked by the letters. Dagoury charged that his associate had acted with partiality in deciding the issue as to the admission of the letters. Immediately the president of the court sent his seconds to his fellow-jurist, demanding an apology or satisfaction on the field of honor.

The courtroom was ringing with the tidings of the duel when the letters came to sweep the audience from its feet and bring a sudden and unexpected ending to the session.

CARRANZA TURNS ABOUT

Now Said to Be Against Granting Amnesty In Advance

Washington, July 27.—Advices to the effect that General Carranza is not disposed to make a formal agreement granting amnesty in advance of his actual assumption of power in Mexico City reached Washington from the headquarters of the constitutionalist chief.

This is not in line with what the American government has previously understood to be Carranza's position, and if it is insisted upon it may disrupt the proposed peace conferences in Mexico at their very beginning.

Provisional President Carbajal has been urged by all elements to obtain an amnesty before yielding the reins of government.

The United States has taken a definite position urging that an amnesty and guarantee be given.

Alleged to Have Been Adopted by Harrison In Philippines

Washington, July 27.—Investigation of the dismissal of Spanish war veterans from the civil service in the Philippine Islands was proposed in a resolution by Representative Miller, Republican, of Minnesota, which he made the vehicle of an attack on Governor General Harrison.

"From the first day of his arrival in the islands," he said, "Harrison ruthlessly violated the civil service rules and applied the principles of Tammany. The conditions there at this moment assumes the proportions of a national disgrace."

STATISTICS OF CITY FINANCES

quirements was the largest among the 33 Massachusetts cities. While the average was 12.8, Quincy was almost double.

Other cities having high percentage of debt requirements were: Beverly 19.05; Pittsfield 19.0; Gloucester, 18.5 Woburn, 17.1; Fall River 16.1; Cambridge 15.4; New Bedford 15.4; Haverhill 15.4; Fitchburg, 15.3; Melrose 15.3; Marlboro 15.3; and Everett 15.0.

The average percentage of revenue required for interest in the 33 cities was 15.02. Again Quincy was above the average, requiring 17.0 per cent. The only cities with larger percentage than Quincy were Chelsea, Newton, Boston, Cambridge, Medford and Melrose.

Because of the high percentage required for debt and interest, Quincy's percentage for maintenance or current expenses was the smallest among the 33 cities, only 59.2. In other words less than 60 cents of every dollar of revenue, can be used for maintenance. Over $40 out of every $100 paid in taxes goes for debt and interest.

Quincy's debt requirement of $217.-$96.05 was not only more than in all the smaller cities, but also more than in Everett, Taunton, Fitchburg, Newton, Salem, Haverhill, Malden, Brockton, Holyoke and Lawrence, which are larger in population. In fact only nine of the 33 Massachusetts cities have larger debt requirements than Quincy.

Chelsea is the only smaller city that appropriates more for "maintenance" than Quincy, while Quincy appropriates more than the larger cities of Everett and Taunton.

Chelsea again is the only smaller city that has a larger interest account, while Quincy pays more interest than the larger cities of Lawrence, Holyoke, Brockton, Malden, Haverhill Salem, Fitchburg, Taunton or Everett.

Fortunately, Quincy's increase in valuation has been large. In the four years from 1907 to 1911 it was $7,130,-060. The only smaller cities to make a larger increase were Pittsfield and Beverly.

Quincy's increase was larger than in Lowell, Cambridge, Somerville, Holyoke, Haverhill, Salem, Fitchburg, Taunton or Everett, all larger cities.

In percentage of gain, Quincy was 26.2, which was only excelled by Pittsfield, Beverly, New Bedford, Springfield, Lawrence, and Chicopee, among the 33 cities.

Quincy's revenue for current charges increased $249,517 in the four years from 1907 to 1911. Pittsfield was the only smaller city with a larger increase, viz. $253,024.

These larger cities had a smaller increase in revenue: Lowell, Cambridge, Malden, Haverhill, Salem, Fitchburg, Taunton and Everett.

In percentage of increase only five cities were larger: New Bedford, Springfield, Beverly, Pittsfield and Chicopee.

Current charges against revenue nearly kept pace in Quincy with the revenue, showing an increase of $215,537 in the four years. No smaller city had a larger increase in current charges.

The following larger cities had a smaller increase: Lowell, Lynn, Lawrence, Somerville, Bockton, Malden, Haverhill, Salem, Newton, Fitchburg, Taunton and Everett.

Quincy's percentage of increase was 30.7, which was only excelled in Pittsfield, New Bedford, Springfield and Chicopee. In North Adams there was a decrease.

In the next article the receipts of Quincy will be compared item by item with other cities.

IN AID OF THE DAY NURSERY

Cabaret Dansant at the Quincy Yacht Club

The "Cabaret dansant" at the Quincy Yacht Club on Saturday evening, given under the auspices of prominent ladies of the city in aid of the Quincy Day Nursery was one of the most select parties of the year. The attendance was good and a neat sum was realized.

Tables were laid the length of the hall, and at 8.30 none were available for those who arrived late. All the tables were prettily decorated making a delightful contrast with the immaculate white linen covers.

The cabaret features were given while the luncheon was served and after 9 o'clock dancing was in order. Among the guests of the evening was Rev. Houghton Schumacker, formerly assistant librarian at the Thomas Crane Public Library and now an ordained minister, filling a pastorate in the west.

The program opened with an entertaining Sailors hornpipe by Miss Ruth Bass, after which Miss Dorothy Packard cabareted, singing the popular song, "On the good ship, Mary Ann." Miss Packard pranced around the tables and made a decided impression.

The program was not without exponents of the modern dances, and the Argentine tango was given by Miss Florence Barker and her brother Benjamin, and Miss Eleanor Whittemore and Ryder Gay presented the Brazilienne Maxixe. Both couples were roundly applauded. Ryder Gay also appeared with Miss Ruth Catherine Johnson in a speciality introducing "The Harbour of Love" song. Edward "Bull Moose" Brown, the hit of the Y. M. C. A. minstrels, repeated his one man minstrel act, singing "Dixie" with all the art of a professional. He was given overwhelming applause.

Wallace Bennet, captain of the Harvard gymnastic class in 1908, and a premier athlete, contributed an exhibition of Indian club swinging that equaled any of the hits of the evening.

The cabaret closed with the song, "I love the ladies" by Bruce Saville, assisted in the chorus by a group of well known young men of the city.

The committee in charge of the evening was Mrs. John N.Johnson, Mrs. Eugene Hultman, Mrs. George W. Abele and Mrs. Theophilus King

The serving was by well known young ladies and included the Misses Olive Fay, Daisy Brooks, Geraldine Van DaLinda, Barbara Johnson, Margaret Johnson, Ruth Jones, Millicent Chapman, Dorothy Brokaw, Juanita Metherell, Margaret Magee, Dorothy Edwards and Gladys Hunt.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

George P. Kimball was arrested at Fitchburg on Friday for the Milton police by whom he was wanted for the alleged breaking and entering of the garage of C. W. Whittier and the larceny of a motor cycle valued at $375. He was arraigned in the Quincy court this morning on two complaints, one for breaking and entering and one for larceny from a building. Kimball pleaded guilty to the larceny charge and was sentenced to one year in the house of correction. As Kimball desired to appeal the court decided to decline jurisdiction and the finding was vacated and he was held in $300 for the grand jury. He was also held in $500 for the grand jury on the breaking and entering charge.

TRIBUTES TO FIRE FIGHTERS

Quincy Remembered in Salem's Review

Salem is slowly recovering from the effects of its conflagration on June 25 when 21 fire departments, including its own, and one private concern helped in its fight for life. There were 67 pieces of apparatus present and in all cases the superiority of motor over horse drawn apparatus was demonstrated. Lack of water however proved to be a big handicap to many of the visiting fire companies.

The places that sent assistance were Gloucester, Lawrence, Lynn, Marblehead, Manchester, Malden, Medford, Newburyport, Peabody, Quincy, Reading, Revere, Stoneham, Somerville.

The Salem Evening News pays Quincy a fine tribute in its resume of the fire fighting force that answered its call for aid. The reference says:

"Quincy, as a city, was not asked to send aid, but the Fore River Shipbuilding works, where the keel of the U. S. S. Salem was laid, has a new pumping engine, which was enroute home from Manchester, N. H. Arriving in Stoneham, its crew learned of the Salem fire, and promptly came to the assistance of the city. It located near the Normal school and supplied five lines of hose, the shortest 650 feet, the longest 1800 feet, remaining in commission until 11.30, when the water supply was exhausted.

Had it been able to have secured water, it could have done much more efficient work. It was a most powerful machine and very effective."

And it further says, in connection with Stoneham's assistance that:

"A Seagrave combination wagon was sent from Stoneham in response to the call for aid and its lines were attached to the Fore River pumping engine. But for the Stoneham firemen, who piloted the Quincy machine to Salem, this powerful piece of apparatus would probably not have attended it was proceeding through Stoneham when the call came, and accompanied the combination to this city. The Stoneham company did 12 hours of service.

The Fore River apparatus worked in conjunction with the hose wagon of Medford in South Salem.

The Fire and Water Engineering magazine, in an article points out the superiority of the motor apparatus, its reasons follow:

"The many advantages motor apparauts have over horse-drawn apparatus was shown at this fire as never before. Most of it went to Salem over the roads under its own power. It would have been impossible for most of the apparatus which was taken to the fire to have been drawn by horses.

"It took 35 minutes to load the Boston horse-drawn apparatus on cars. Motor truck 21, of Boston, which went to the fire under its own power, was at the fire in 30 minutes from the time orders were received for it to go. It took the horse apparatus some minutes to unload after its arrival at Salem.

"In moving from one location to another motor apparatus went under its own power instead of being compelled to wait for horses or men to draw it as with horse-drawn apparatus. Motor apparatus never has to wait for transportation.

"All cities have large quantities of gasoline, while few have coal such as steam fire engines require for fuel, which became exhausted at Salem in a few hours. There was plenty of gasoline at Salem during the fire for motor apparatus.

"The longest continuous service of a motor engine at the fire was 17 1-2 hours by Engine Two of Lynn, an Ahrens-Fox machine.

"All calls for assistance were made by telephone, and were made quickly and without a hitch or delay of any kind, demonstrating that the telephone is wholly adequate and the best method for that purpose."

NEW MOTOR BOAT.

Harry Moody, a well known Quincy Point yachtsmen, is giving his new speed boat her trials on the Town river. The boat is 20 feet long and was designed and built by Mr. Moody during the winter months. She is equipped with a six cylinder Ford engine and has made nearly 20 knots an hour. Several minor adjustments will be necessary before she is in trim for racing. Mr. Moody believes that his, as yet unnamed product, will be one of the fastest in the harbor and contemplates entering her in the power boat races to be held during August and September.

CARBAJAL A MAN OF HIGH CULTURE

New Head of Mexico Is Gentle Mannered.

REGARDED AS ABLE LAWYER

He Is a White and Not a Black Mexican In That He Is of Almost Pure Castilian Origin—Nothing of the Bellicose About Him—Is Forty-eight Years Old.

Francisco Carbajal, who becomes provisional president of Mexico to succeed General Victoriano Huerta, despite the fact that he is only forty-eight years old has been for many years considered one of the leading lawyers of Mexico. He is a warm personal friend and by many considered a protege of Francisco Leon de la Barra, who as foreign minister in the last cabinet of General Porfirio Diaz succeeded that old warrior statesman in the presidency of Mexico. De la Barra, however, succeeded to the provisional presidency with the full consent and approval of the revolutionists.

So far at least as Mexico City is concerned, Carbajal is now the ad interim president of Mexico, and as such his personality becomes interesting. To begin with, he is of the Mexican aristocracy. There is nothing of the bellicose about him. He is gentle mannered and gentle spoken. He is highly educated. He is a white and not a black Mexican in that he is of almost pure Castilian origin. Carbajal practically was unknown outside of Mexico prior to the spring of 1911. He had been for a few years prior to April of that year a justice of the Mexican supreme court, an office which he owed to the friendship of Porfirio Diaz, who previously had shown his friendship for him when for a brief time he sent him to Costa Rica as the Mexican minister.

Treating With Madero.

When in the spring of 1911 the fall of the Diaz regime was admitted even in Mexico City to be a matter of only a few weeks it became necessary for the Diaz government to treat with Francisco I. Madero, whose irregular and ragged troops were then sweeping triumphantly over the entire northern part of the republic. Madero, just as Carranza and Villa have recently done, had announced his intention of continuing his victorious campaign to the very gates of the capital, and it was to prevent that humiliating end to his long continued dictatorship that Diaz consented, on the advice of his best friends, to attempt to make terms with Madero. Madero's army was then encamped outside Juarez, the adobe city opposite El Paso, and was threatening daily to storm that most important of the Mexican border towns.

So it was that on April 28, 1911, President Diaz announced that he had appointed as a peace commissioner to treat with Madero Justice Francisco Carbajal of the Mexican supreme court. He notified Madero of Carbajal's appointment, and the victorious rebel chieftain named Francisco Madero, Sr., his aged father; Jose Pino Suarez, who was to be his vice president, and was to be his companion in death a year later, and Dr. Vasquez Gomez as the revolutionary representatives to discuss terms of peace with Carbajal.

On May 2, 1911, Carbajal arrived in El Paso, and the next morning he met the Madero commissioners. The meeting place was under a cottonwood tree at the foot of a barren hill on the outskirts of Juarez, near the Rio Grande. Madero was present, and at the end of the conference it was announced that peace was in sight. Matters did not progress satisfactorily, however, and on May 6 Madero announced that the armistice with Diaz was terminated, and two days later the battle of Juarez was fought, and the city fell into the hands of the rebels. The taking of Juarez broke the backbone of the Diaz government, and on May 15 peace negotiations were resumed.

Carbajal Is Honored.

Carbajal this time treated direct with Madero, and six days later, at 10:35 p. m., May 21, the peace agreement that ended the Madero revolution, sent Diaz into exile and subsequently elevated Madero to the presidency was signed by Carbajal as the representative of Diaz and by Madero as the head of the revolution.

When Huerta was made provisional president following the killing of Madero Carbajal was one of the keen lawyers to whom he looked for expert advice. Huerta showered honors on Justice Carbajal. First he sent him to London as Mexican ambassador, but soon recalled him, and when Carbajal arrived home he named him chief justice of the supreme court. In January of last year it was said he for a time considered the advisability of sending Carbajal to Washington as an emissary to the government of the United States. This plan, however, was abandoned, and Carbajal remained in the City of Mexico as the chief justice of the highest court.

The name of Carbajal was in November last first mentioned as the probable successor of Huerta. At that time Huerta promptly denied the accuracy of the report, and when Secretary of State Bryan was asked about the rumor he replied that he had never before heard of Justice Carbajal.

WOES OF THE POOR RICH.

How the Wife of One Wealthy Man Got Her Spending Money.

In the American Magazine, in a story by Rebecca Hooper Eastman, is a satire on the poor rich, in which the wife of a wealthy man tells as follows how she gets hold of her spending money:

"Kitty, dear, I can't bear that you should misjudge me, and so I am going to tell you what not a soul in this world knows. I have absolutely no money and no way of getting any. My husband doesn't think it is necessary for me to have money when I can charge things. I owe you a dollar. You think I have forgotten, but I have not. And I am going to pay you—when I can.

"I want to tell you that I have just discovered a way to make money. You see, I have borrowed so many small sums for tips and car fares that I am quite in debt.

"We have one of the finest cooks in New York, as you know, and I order him to make cakes. He thinks they are for a bazaar. In reality I sell these cakes at a certain woman's exchange for $1 a loaf, cash. Kitty. I leave my car at a nearby hotel, walk through the hotel to the exchange on the next street, wear a plain suit and a thick veil, which I put on in the hotel dressing room. Nobody knows."

WHAT CAUSES CRYSTALS?

An Obscure Process That Plays a Large Part In Nature.

In answer to the question, "Will a sudden jar ever cause crystals to appear in a supersaturated solution, or can this be produced only by the introduction of one of the crystals?" Edgar Lucien Larkin in the New York American says:

"Supersaturation and crystal formation are obscure phenomena. Let water dissolve salts until it is supersaturated when perfectly still; then let the containing vessel be suddenly moved, tapped or disturbed; then crystals of the dissolved substances will instantly form. Pure water, distilled, may be put into a closed container and a thermometer placed below the surface.

"Keep the whole very still and the water may be cooled a number of degrees below the freezing—that is, crystallizing—point without crystallizing. Suddenly strike the vessel and the liquid will crystallize. Many solutions of superdensity will thus behave.

"This little understood process underlying the fascinating mathematical science of crystal forming plays a highly important part in nature in the building of solids, of crystalline rocks and general structure of our house—the earth."

End Came Quickly.

The experiences of local jewelers with prospective bridegrooms have been many and varied. Some wish to buy on the installment plan, some wish to take a half dozen sizes to be sure of a fit and some bring "beautiful verses" to see whether they can be engraved in the ring.

One jeweler in recounting his experiences said a young man came into his store and when asked whether he wished anything engraved inside the ring became confused, fumbled a bit in his pockets and finally produced a paper on which was scrawled, "The love that never endeth," which the jeweler said was just the proper sentiment.

A month later the young man returned and told the whole history of his marital life in five words, "Can't you cut that out?" pointing to the engraved sentence.—Indianapolis News.

Glacier National Park.

Glacier National park is in northern Montana and is bounded on the north by the Canadian line, on the east by the Blackfoot Indian reservation and on the south and west by Flathead river. It has an area of about 915,000 acres and derives its name from many glaciers, which are scattered throughout its area. There are about eighty glaciers, between five square miles and a few acres in area. The park is a rugged mountainous region and contains over 250 lakes, which are surrounded by steep and beautifully wooded mountains or precipitous rock walls. The methods of transportation in the park are by automobile, horse stage, launches on the lakes and saddle and pack horses.

Inductive and Deductive.

Deductive reasoning is from theory to facts, while inductive reasoning is from facts to theory. Deduction is sometimes mere dreaming, oftentimes very foolish dreaming, while induction is the sane reaching out from particular facts to general laws.—New York American.

Policy, Not Politeness.

Gibbs—I noticed you rise in the car this morning and give your seat to a stout lady. Dibbs—Yes; it was a question whether she or I was going to stand on my feet.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Train Momentum.

The momentum of a modern twelve car railroad train running a mile a minute is equal to that of a ton weight falling from a height of twenty-one miles.

Fixed Both Ways.

SERVIAN PLOT LEADS TO WAR

State of Siege Is Declared Throughout Dual Monarchy

ALL EUROPE MAY BE INVOLVED

Russia Bars Austria's Effort to Secure Supremacy In Vast Territory—Long-Pent-Up Race Bitterness May Become Loose—Action Hastened by Murder of Archduke Ferdinand

London, July 27.—A telegram from Vienna states that war between Austria and Servia has been declared. A proclamation declares a state of siege throughout the dual monarchy.

The Servian legation here, while without official confirmation, is not surprised at the statement that war actually has been declared.

With the declaration of war upon Servia by Austria-Hungary it is predicted that the seizure of Belgrade, capital of Servia, will be the first act of the Austrian troops.

Belgrade already has been abandoned by King Peter and his ministers, who have set up a temporary seat of government at Kraguyevatz.

The Austrian army has been massing for several days along the banks of the Danube, ready to strike her blow to wipe out the hatred of years, which reached its climax when Archduke Ferdinand, heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, was assassinated as the result of a Servian plot.

But, even with the declaration of war, it is not upon Austria and Servia that the anxious gaze of the chancelleries of Europe is directed.

With the Russian army under orders for instant mobilization by the personal orders of the czar, France preparing to assume the responsibilities of her position as Russia's ally, Emperor William speeding back to Germany from a swiftly interrupted holiday and with Italy trembling at the prospect of becoming involved as a member of the triple alliance, all Europe shrinks on the brink of a conflict which threatens vast toll of human lives and an appalling loss of property and money.

To the last moment every government of Europe sought to prevent hostilities between Austria and Servia. Now that those efforts have failed all are striving desperately to confine the struggle to the two principals and to arrange a basis of diplomatic agreement that will stay the hand of Russia.

In this work England, which has no direct interest involved, has taken the lead, but with little hope of success, as Russia is known to be determined to use all the force of her arms to maintain the present balance of power in the Balkans.

There is grave fear that the letting loose of long pent-up race bitterness may cause a situation in which the governments of Germany and France may not be able to restrain the popular demand for war.

Frenzied throngs march through Unter den Linden, the principal thoroughfare of Berlin, shouting eagerly for war in behalf of their Austrian brethren, while other crowds in Paris and throughout France await the word that the nation is ready to place its standard and its cannon beside those of Russia in repelling aggression by the German peoples.

Austria alone might easily scourge the Servians, wipe out with blood for blood the murder of Archduke Ferdinand and settle once and for all the question of supremacy in the territory to the east were it not that Russia bars her way.

Russia, thwarted for more than a century in her design to be pre-eminent all the way to the Ægean sea, is settling upon a policy of blocking the efforts of any other nation to make impossible the ultimate realization of the dream of an open gateway to the Mediterranean.

There was no Sunday holiday in any chancellery of Europe. All of the telegraph offices in the capitals were kept at maximum efficiency for the rapid exchange of diplomatic suggestions and entreaties that a way still be found to prevent the war from involving all the powers from the Atlantic to the Asiatic borderlands.

Special pressure was brought to bear upon Russia that she would not take the step that would instantly put the armies of Germany on the march, as the sworn ally of Emperor Francis Joseph, and in turn force France into the field to aid the Russian program. What effect these representations were having could not be learned. Secrecy was maintained in every capital.

Great Britain will leave no expedient untried in her eagerness to halt a general war. Sir Edward Goschen, British ambassador to Germany, left hurriedly for Berlin. The British government felt it was urgently necessary for him to be at the German capital in order to make personal representations to Emperor William in the crisis.

England hopes France will second her efforts for peace as long as may be possible, but this dependence is necessarily a slender one, as France is bound to Russia by as close an alliance as that which will put Emperor William at the head of his troops as companion in arms to brother emperor and ally, Francis Joseph of Austria.

FORE RIVER IN ELEVENTH

Won from Forbes Company by Score of 5 to 3

Fore River defeated the Forbes Lithograph Co. in an 11-innings game in the Manufacturers league at Merrymount Park on Saturday afternoon and if they beat Bird & Sons, leaders of the league, they will jump into first place.

Upsets in the games Saturday resulted in the elimination of some teams. The Gillette Safety Razor Co. and the United Shoe Machinery Co. of Beverly are both out of the race now, Norwood Press are tied with Fore River.

Bird & Sons have won eight and lost four and Fore River have won seven and lost four. A victory for the locals over the leaders will mean eight wins and four losses for them, against eight wins and five losses for Bird & Sons.

Saturday was an ideal base ball day, and throughout the entire game the fans were given thrill after thrill. Nichols, varsity pitcher of Syracuse University, made his debut in a shipyard uniform, and got 17 strike-outs. He allowed only three hits.

Hangus Hoyt was responsible for the scoring of the Fore Rivers. In the fourth he drove out a homer and scored Cain, and in the 11th his hit to right field scored Nichols for the winning run.

Bishop, the local catcher, had an off day, and it was through his playing that the Forbes boys got their runs. In the fourth inning Larkin crossed on a passed ball, and in the seventh Cassani was caught between bases on an attempted squeeze play and in running him down Bishop threw wild and tied up.

The Forbes players tightened up after the fourth inning and their defense was almost impenetrable. Several hits were made in this period but fast infield playing held Fore River in place. They played an errorless game.

Smith of the visitors issued but one pass, and that was in the 11th when he sent Cain down to first, filling the bases, with the intention of either fanning Hoyt or making him hit short. Hoyt out generalled him by singling to right field and sending the extra run across. The summary:

OLD INDICTMENT NOT SATISFACTORY

District Attorney Seeks New One In Carman Case

Freeport, L. I., July 27.—District Attorney Smith has begun active preparations to go before the grand jury and ask for a new indictment against Mrs. Florence C. Carman, charged with the killing of Mrs. Louise Bailey.

Smith would not say just how strong a case he would seek in the proposed new bill, but he made it plain that he was not satisfied with the indictment for manslaughter upon which Mrs. Carman was recently freed on $20,000 bail.

Detectives have been active in the investigation of certain reports ever since the conclusion of the preliminary hearing.

A. O. H. WIN FROM K. OF C.

The A. O. H. beat the Knights of Columbus in a West Quincy league game on the Ward Four playground on Saturday afternoon, 10 to 2.

The game was one of the best on the schedule for five innings after which the Division 22 players broke it up and started run getting. With the bases filled in the eighth "Red" Leary drove out a homer. Jack Duane also circled the four bases. McPherson pitched a good game, the only one hitting him was Flaherty who turned in thre. Flaherty also made three pretty catches in left field.

QUINCY YACHTS AMONG WINNERS

Quite a large fleet of Quincy boats took part in the annual open race of the Mosquito Fleet Saturday afternoon, the Warwenock of ex-Commodore Dawes carrying away her leeboards by striking an obstruction at the line and afterward would not steer. There was a fine sailing breeze and the race was an interesting one.

In Cilass A the Eleanor of the Wollaston club won second position. In class S the Maritiza also of the Wollaston club won first position. In class D which was composed entirely of Quincy yachts the Dartwell of ex-Commodore Whittemore carried off the honors with the Clara second and Dolly third.

In class H the Wanderer IV of the ex-Commodore Dawes carried off the honors. In the Sonder class the Harpoon formerly owned by C. F. Adams carried off the honors, and in class 1 the Dorchen II was the winner.

PARADERS FULLY ARMED

Bold Demonstration of Orangemen In Streets of Belfast

Belfast, July 27.—A parade of two full regiments of Ulster volunteers, numbering several thousand men, was held here. All the men carried rifles and their equipment included several machine guns, which were strongly guarded.

The marchers traversed the principal streets of the city and their demonstration, the boldest exhibition of Orange strength attempted to date in the home rule struggle, aroused great enthusiasm.

Referring to Ireland and the failure of the recent conference of party leaders held at Buckingham palace in a speech at Steyning, Francis D. Acland, under secretary for foreign affairs, said:

"There is much cause for regret, but much hope. Something has been gained in their being heard as the representatives of the great parties. At the table the members of the conference learned to respect each other's point of view."

FLEE IN A HURRY

Cock Fighters Leave Valuables Behind When Surprised by Police

Hanover, Mass., July 27.—With a fusillade of revolver shots, Deputy Sheriff Condon, Chief of Police Stewart of Rockland and two police officers surprised a party of fifty men who were conducting a cocking main here.

A sentinel gave warning of the approach of the officers. As the party scattered into the woods the police opened up with their reolvers. The fusillade so frightened the law-breakers that they abandoned not only seventeen game cocks, but two utomobiles and two horses and carriages.

Such was the desire of the owners of the birds to flee that they left each cock tagged with the name of the owner and the town he came from, affording a means of identification of the various persons fighting birds in the main.

COSGROVE REFUSES TO BE CANDIDATE

Name Will Not Appear on Bay State Progressive Ticket

Boston, July 27.—Daniel Cosgrove of Lowell, candidate for the past two years for lieutenant governor on the Progressive ticket, made public a statement in which he declared that he would not again be a candidate for the office.

While it had been rumored for several weeks that Cosgrave would not be a candidate this fall, some of his friends believed he might be prevailed upon to run.

With Charles S. Bird and Cosgrove out of the race this fall Progressives admit that the Masaschusetts Bull Moose is not the fighting animal he was a year ago. Cosgrove is probably as well known to Progressives as Bird himself and because of his large personal following it will be difficult to fill his shoes on the Progressive slate.

SHOOTS THREE ON TRAIN

Bandit Held Without Bail to Await Outcome of Victims' Injuries

New York, July 27.—Charles S. Parnell, who shot three persons in an attempt to hold up a train on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, was arraigned before Coroner Flynn and held without bail to await the result of the injuries of his three victims.

Two of them, a man and a woman, are in critical condition and are not expected to live. Flynn took their ante-mortem statements. Both identified Parnell as the person who shot them.

The train came from Boston and was boarded by Parnell at Bridgeport, Conn.

IN RANKS OF FURIES

Becky Edelson Indulges In Tactics of English Militants

New York, July 27.—With loud demands for her lawyer, accompanied by expressions that startled those employed in the workhouse, Becky Edelson ceased to be a quiet hunger striker and adopted tactics similar to those of the suffragette furies in England.

The prisoner threatened to smash all the furniture in the hospital, and became so boisterous that she was forced to give up her comfortable bed in the hospital and return to the cell in which she was kept for the first two days of her three months' term.

ALL AMERICAN EIGHT IS PICKED

Columbia Gets Five Seats In Theoretical Hall of Fame.

HADSELL CHOSEN CAPTAIN.

Yale, Cornell and Pennsylvania Divide Remaining Three Places—Three of the Men Stroked Their Varsity Crews—No Regard Paid to Position In Naming Members of the Boat.

The All American collegiate eight for 1914 should be as follows, according to Dr. Peet, the well known rowing authority:

C. F. McCarthy, I. W. Hadsell, W. N. Bratton, S. Pitt, Jr., V. G. Sanborn ..... Columbia
J. A. Appleton ..... Yale
B. C. Spransy ..... Cornell
W. R. Littleton ..... Pennsylvania

This year's varsity boat races brought out so many good men—more than ever before—that it is indeed difficult to select the best eight. However, the names of these oarsmen, by reason of their work and accomplishment, bulk large.

As usual, the men have been picked in great measure according to the outcome of the races. Also the opinions of the various coaches have had much to do with it.

C. F. McCarthy, the little wonder at Poughkeepsie this year, who stroked

CAPTAIN HADSELL AND COACH RICE OF COLUMBIA.

Columbia to victory, is slightly over five feet seven inches in height, but he has tremendously long arms, which stand him in good stead in setting a long stroke. He is nearly twenty-four years old and weighs 156 pounds. In 1911 he stroked the freshmen crew, which easily won at Poughkeepsie.

Captain Hadsell, who rowed at No. 7, is twenty-one years old, six feet one and three-quarter inches in height and weighs 167 pounds. He has had much experience in rowing and was perhaps the calmest man on the river, and his judgment and advice to stroke and coxswain throughout the race had much to do with the outcome.

Bratton, the big man of the boat, is twenty-three years old, six feet tall and weighs 180 pounds.

Pitt is twenty-three years old, six feet tall and weighs 166 pounds. He is a veteran and has been on the All-American eight before. Pitt was the most polished man in the boat.

Sanborn is nineteen years old, five feet eleven inches in height and weighs 175 pounds. His rowing is remarkably good, and he is very well built for the waist of the boat.

Rothwell and Williams, Nos. 2 and 3 respectively, are rattling good oarsmen, and if the theoretical eight could be stretched a bit certainly they would be on it.

Jack Appleton, the phenomenal Yale stroke, is twenty-two years old, six feet one inch in height and weighs 165 pounds. To his clever stroking was due in very great measure the victory of Yale over Harvard on the Thames.

Spransy, Cornell's stroke, is twenty-four years old, six feet one inch in height and weighs 184 pounds. He is one of the biggest men that ever stroked a boat, yet withal he is one of the best pacemakers and a wonderful oar. He stroked the crew that won so easily from Princeton and Yale at Ithaca on May 23 and from Harvard on May 26.

Littleton of Pennsylvania is twenty years old, six feet one and one-half inches tall and weighs 178 pounds. Remarkably well built and nicely muscled, he rows most properly and exemplifies Vivian Nickalls' stroke better perhaps than any man in the boat. He is very calm and rows with great judgment.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says, it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

YOU CAN'T GO WRONG IN FOLLOWING ADVERTISEMENTS.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.
Norfolk, ss. Probate Court.
To the heirs-at-law, next-of-kin, creditors and all other persons interested in the estate of Ellen P. Wilde late of Quincy, in said County, deceased, intestate:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court to grant a letter of administration on the estate of said deceased to Charles F. Wilde of said Quincy without giving a surety on his bond. You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Dedham in said County of Norfolk, on the second day of September A. D. 1914, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted. And the petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Quincy Daily Ledger, a newspaper published in said Quincy, the last publication to be one day at least before said Court.

Witness, James H. Flint, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this fifteenth day of July, A. D. 1914.

J. R. McCOOLE, Register.

No Pie Crust Promises

Wise advertisers never make "pie-crust" promises.

They know that to break faith with the public would be fatal—worse than throwing their money away.

That is one reason why advertised goods are more in demand.

People know that there is quality behind them.

They look on them as standards. Any dealer knows that there are more calls for advertised goods than for goods not advertised.

This is especially true if they happen to have been advertised in the newspapers which directly reach the people.

The standard of advertising is more exacting today than ever before. Advertisers are more careful of their promises and more interesting in their text and illustrations.

The world grows better.

At Times the Hand Is Quicker Than the Eye

By MARVIN DANA

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

It happened more than a score of years ago. The golden spike had just been driven at Portland, Ore.—that last spike of the Northern Pacific railroad by which the continent was spanned.

Helena, Mont., was in the heyday of lusty, unabashed, crude youth. The released graders from the completed railroad thickened the crowds in its streets. All had money; all were aflame to spend it. The ugly main street was two lines of saloons, dance halls, gambling hells, all open, all crowded from dawn to dawn.

Of the several busy ministers of fortune then and there present, Railroad Jim was the busiest. He ran a little game of three card monte in a back room off the Montana Parlors, by which name was glorified one of the smallest and worst saloons in the town.

He was busy indeed, for custom was brisk, and he had no assistant. An assistant, to have been anything but a costly luxury, must have had fingers as agile as Jim's own, in their peculiar way. Such a one was not to be had very readily. The last had been shot by an indignant victim. In Railroad Jim's opinion, the man had deserved his fate, for he had been culpably careless, almost awkward, and had thus invited his doom.

So now, perforce, Jim toiled indefatigably. When he slept was a mystery beyond any man's solving. His meals were sandwiches, swallowed during the progress of the game. His sole drink was coffee.

Of course such labor deserved a reward, and equally of course Railroad Jim had it. A steady stream of men slouched from the saloon into the back room and anon slouched out again, much poorer and not a whit the wiser for their experience.

But there were no complaints—except against the goddess of fortune, who, in truth, was most ungallantly and vigorously cursed betimes. Yet, while the losers reviled their own bad judgment or ill luck, they candidly admired Jim for the dexterity with which he befooled them. For he won honestly—he ran a "square game," trusting to the artfulness of his ten fingers for his modicum of profit.

All who gambled there knew that Jim was honest, because he held the game down to a limit. Any one can see that, had he cheated, the limit would have been a palpable absurdity. No man would refuse to take all he could get on a certainty.

But Jim, aware that a sufficiently acute observer might sometimes pick the right card, refused to accept any single bet of more than $200. To be sure, no one had as yet offered to bet so large an amount on one throw of the cards, but that fact had no influence on public opinion.

Jim was a large man, with a large nose, a large chin, a lofty bald skull and bulging, glassy eyes. He was not at all pretty, but very imposing. He had big hands, too—hands that were like brooding wings over the three cards with which he toyed so constantly.

It was really an edifying spectacle to behold those hands as they manipulated the three cards—the ten of spades, the ten of clubs, the jack of diamonds. The cards seemed never quite to disappear from view. Moreover, the movement was rather slow than hurried.

The faces of the cards were first exhibited, two in the right hand, one in the left. Then they were held backs up and deposited softly, one by one, on the table. All one need do was to keep an eye persistently on the jack of diamonds—to watch it unwinkingly till it was at last put down. Then it only remained to place the bet and finally to turn over the card selected.

Unfortunately for the crowd, this card was rarely the jack. The unhappy losers shook their heads and ruefully admitted that Railroad Jim was "a cussed slick un with th' pasteboards."

Among many others, Old Ike lost. He had been in Helena just a week, and already he was a familiar figure in the various resorts. He was a man of about sixty, short, thin, clean shaven, bright eyed, taciturn.

He drank a moderate amount of whisky without going on the rampage, and he gambled here and there, also in moderation. Every night he dropped in at the Montana Parlors and regularly made two fifty-dollar bets with Railroad Jim. In his fourteen efforts he had lost precisely $700.

However, he took his losses calmly and remarked each night that he guessed he could afford it, whereby all his hearers knew him to be a man of wealth.

On the eighth night of his stay in Helena Old Ike got drunk. He visited every bar in the place and drank at each with democratic impartiality. Anon he varied this pursuit by a mild effort to beat a faro game, in which he failed ignominously.

It was near midnight when he staggered into the Montana Parlors and invited every man there present to the bar. Having drunk, Old Ike announced to all and sundry that he purposed "buckin' ag'in" Railroad Jim's monte game.

In the back room the crowd made way for him, and he stationed himself directly opposite the manipulator of the cards. With garrulous comments he made his usual two bets and lost. Every moment the effects of drink showed more plainly in his flushed cheeks and thickened speech.

Then suddenly, just after the big hands with the agile fingers had swept in the second $50, Old Ike became foolish.

"Is th' limit off?" he demanded and stared at Railroad Jim with bloodshot eyes.

Jim's orbs returned the old man's gaze without apparent emotion.

"Tain't reg'lar," he replied lifelessly.

Old Ike banged his hand viciously on the table.

"Is th' limit off?" he shouted.

Railroad Jim ran a wary eye over the company before he answered, then: "All right, unless any gent objects," he declared coldly.

"Any ornery cuss as wants ter object 'd better say so ter me!" the old man spluttered, glaring about. And to Jim: "Th' limit's off, huh? Be I right?"

"Th' limit's off," Railroad Jim agreed.

Old Ike drew forth a battered pocketbook and laid it before him on the table, one hand still clutching it.

"Throw yer keerds," he commanded.

Railroad Jim obediently displayed the three cards to the company and to the old man. All could see them distinctly, the ten of spades, the ten of clubs, the jack of diamonds. The thrower passed them back and forth gently, slowly, then dropped them delicately one by one on the table.

"I'll bet my pile I pick th' jack," Old Ike clamored.

"How much?" Railroad Jim asked. His voice was colorless still, but a fleck of red burnt in either cheek.

"Just a plumb $4,000!"

Ike opened the pocketbook and displayed a thick roll of bills. Twice he counted them. There were tens, twenties, fifties, hundreds. The total was an even $4,000. He laid the money in a neat pile on the table midway between himself and the three cards.

"Match it," he commanded tersely.

Railroad Jim produced his pocket book in turn and counted out an equal sum in bills of large denomination, fresh from the bank, his profits of two weeks. This money lay on his side of the table. Between the two heaps of bills the three cards waited silently, arbiters of fortune.

Suddenly something happened—a swift movement, a flash, a thud. A bowie knife stood quivering in the table, its polished steel a shaking flame. The bowie's point was buried deep in the table top, and it pierced and held fast in its place the center card of the three.

Old Ike, his spectacular deed wrought, stood back a little and laughed aloud. The tension of the startled crowd relaxed somewhat. They had expected a robbery, a murder. They leaned forward in breathless attention.

"That's my keerd," the old man cried triumphantly. His right hand was at his hip; his left pushed his stack of bills up against the center card. "That's my keerd," he repeated defiantly. "My $4,000 is bet on jest that same pertic'ler keerd. And it's there t' win!"

Railroad Jim had neither moved nor spoken. Now the eyes of the two men met and locked for a long half minute, and neither flinched in his stare.

But at last Old Ike again put forth his left hand, and now he turned over the card on the right. It was the ten of spades.

A moment more of pause, then he turned over the card on the left. It was the ten of clubs. The third card remained face downward pinned to the table by the bowie's blade.

Once more Old Ike raised his eyes to those of Railroad Jim.

"Do I win?" he asked tauntingly. And again he laughed.

The monte dealer thrust his pile of banknotes toward the old man. He displayed no emotion, but the fleck of color in his cheeks burned brighter than before.

"Excuse me a minute, gents," he remarked in his cold tones. "I must git some more money t' go on with." With that he left the room by a back door.

Old Ike put away the $8,000 without undue haste, chuckling softly. This done, he pulled the bowie knife from the table. As the blade left the wood the card was loosened and fell on the table face up. It was the ten of clubs.

A gasp of amazement went up from the crowd. The three cards now lay plainly revealed to all—the ten of spades, the ten of clubs and—the ten of clubs!

A chorus of exclamations broke forth. The old man looked at the excited crowd and waved his hand for silence.

"Where's th' jack o' di'monds?" he repeated contemptuously in answer to the burden of the cries. "Why, Railroad Jim sleeved th' jack reg'lar. He never let it on to th' table when they was any money wuth while. Kept that other ten o' clubs out o' sight behind it when he showed th' keerds, then flipped the jack into his sleeve with them long fingers o' his'n.

"But I got onter his little game. An' he didn't dast let me turn up that other ten o' clubs. He'd ruther pay. He knew well yew'd string him up instanter. He'l—"

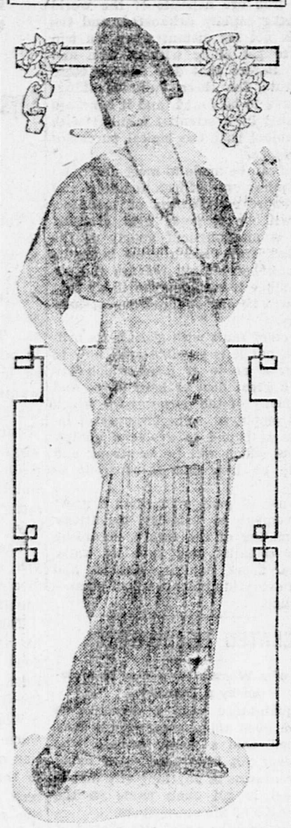

But Old Ike's voice was lost among the shouts and curses.

The crowd rushed forth to wreak vengeance on the man who had so deftly fleeced them. They were too late. Helena knew Railroad Jim no more.

Ike followed the crowd, sober.

FETCHING MODEL.

Smart Gown With Plaited Skirt and Short Overskirt.

APRICOT CRAPE GOWN.

The box plait, so long treated with disdain, has not only returned, but is occupying a place of popularity in the fashions of the season. On the gown of apricot colored Canton crape illustrated here the foundation skirt is closely box plaited and is topped by a plain little overskirt fastened in front by bullet shaped yellow buttons, edged with white. On the bodice the low shoulder line is evident. High buttoned boots with light tan suede tops add the finishing touch.

BEAUTIFUL LINENS.

Cottons, Too, of Rare Attractiveness For Summer Suits.

This season it is somewhat difficult to distinguish between linen and cotton in the heavier weavings, as they appear so similar, and many of them are provided with the excellent mercerized finish which not only gives them a silky appearance, but renders them less easily creased.

The principal weavings for tailor cut linen suits are the fine twill known as gabardine, ottoman, poplin, tussah and the neat surface that was originally seen in casement cloth. Most of these come in double width (forty inches) and in charming colors—mauve, linen green, dark and saxe blue, delicate gray and biege tints, old rose and shrimp pink.

An ultra smart linen suit was seen the other day made of shrimp pink linen, the skirt with a very deep tunic set in large plaits and finished with white pipings and buttons down the front. The simply cut and loose coatee was also piped. Admirable new touches were provided by the little kilted basque and the striped white and black collar and cuffs. The black Napoleon hat worn with this costume was of hemp, with roses in the cleft crown.

Rubberized Bathing Caps.

Bathing caps that are especially desirable have visors of rubberized silk mounted on a stiff frame. These caps would save much discomfort from the bright sunlight of the seashore. Some very pretty bathing caps, made of the rubberized silk, are shirred into a rosette over each ear.

The small corsage bouquets of rubber flowers that made their appearance last year are still in evidence for the bather, and sometimes rubber flowers are used as trimming for bathing caps.

Porch Pillows.

Nothing is more enjoyable than porch pillows for the hammock or easy chairs, and a balsam pillow is more delightful than any other.

The odor quiets the nerves, refreshes the tired one and induces a restful nap.

A pretty slip for such a pillow is best made of tan linen with a pine tree cross stitched upon it.

BLOUSE FANCIES.

The neck cord fastening to the simple white blouse is an attractive feature.

Crepe de chine blouses have chemisettes, collars and bands of hemstitched Paris muslin.

Some of the new blouses have darts in them and fitted girdles.

All tones of yellow, especially maize, are in favor for separate blouses.

Figured crepe de chine blouses make a delightful change.

Long kimono sleeves, tapering to the wrist, are as popular as ever.

Burnt banana and green apple are among the new colors.

OLEANDERS OF BERMUDA.

In Summer Time They Fairly Run Riot Over the Islands.

Back in the fifties, when Anthony Trollope held a roving commission as postoffice inspector for the British government, he visited Bermuda, then practically unknown to any people save mariners. The distinguished author said some uncomplimentary things about the native Bermudians, much to their amusement, but he could not help praising the scenery of their island home and particularly the oleanders. He voted that Bermuda should be called the "Oleander Isles."

Curiously enough, Bermuda is better known as the home of the onion and the Easter lily, to say nothing of the potato and the rose, although the oleander is the most gorgeous and conspicuous shrub in the islands. Shrub is hardly the word to describe the oleander. It is really a tree, lifting its top twenty feet in the air and growing in thickets that the island planters use as screens or windbreaks.

In summer the hedges are covered with a profusion of pink, white and crimson blossoms that last well into the autumn and make great splashes of color on the hills and at the roadside. The oleander has no enemies. Animals refuse to touch it, and the tree runs its riotous way all over the islands. Those who visit Bermuda only in winter miss the glory of the oleander blossoms and also many of the other gorgeous flowers. While there is plenty of bloom in the winter months, the array of flowers is even greater in summer.—New York Post.

MOTHER'S BAKING DAY.

Modern Conditions Make It Practically a Thing of the Past.

We do not propose either to affirm or to deny that the bakers make better bread than "mother used to make." There used to be as many kinds of mothers as there are now varieties of bakers. And comparisons are odious.

But the baker is to be hailed as one of the chief benefactors of the age, on grounds which take no account of the relative merits of bread. He has emancipated women, at least one day out of the week. He has given a vast army of mothers more time to perform the duties other than those which have to do with the kitchen.

It needs no patriarch to remember what baking day used to be like. In summer's heat the stove had to be fired up to the melting point, and mother had to knead the dough until her back ached, and stick around in the kitchen lest the crust become too hard, and watch against a hundred other mischances which are to be expected when the heat releases the chemical action of the ingredients in the bread pan.

Baking day is a thing of the past in thousands of homes—at least, the old fashioned baking day is. The bread may be better or worse, but the baker is to be regarded as a benefactor in that he has practically put an end to that old roasting experience which formerly came to every woman at least one day out of seven.—St. Louis Times.

Why It Is the St. Lawrence.

The St. Lawrence river owes its name to the accidental conjunction of the festival of St. Lawrence with the day upon which the first explorer imagined he had discovered the river. Jacques Cartier in 1534 heard from the natives of the Magdalen islands of a mighty stream threading the continent to an unknown source, and it was while testing this legend that he sailed up the gulf until he could see the land on each side. In the following year he made a bolder expedition with three ships and the blessing of the Bishop of St. Malo. He sailed past Rimouski and on to Quebec, then known by the Indians as Stadacona. Here the fleet anchored. The French, however, failed in their efforts to colonize the country until a century had passed, largely owing to their high handed treatment of the Indians.—London Chronicle.

Tragic Wager.

In 1895 three Irishmen agreed to undertake a journey around the earth on foot for a pool of $150,000. Each one of the party deposited one-third of this sum in the Bank of Dublin, and it was agreed that whoever survived the trip and returned should receive the whole amount. In case all died a Dublin hospital was to become the beneficiary. On Dec. 24, 1895, they started east across Europe and Asia Minor to Egypt, where they took passage for Australia. Their wanderings through the inner wastes of Australia proved the hardest trials of the journey, and the severity of this trip resulted in the death of two of the travelers. The third, Captain Trevelyan, completed the voyage and won the money.

Puzzled.

The lady of the house was explaining things to the new colored maid.

"An' what's this, missus?" asked the girl, indicating a metal bottle.

"That is a bottle which will keep things either hot or cold, whichever you desire," replied the mistress.

"Well, foh the land sake," ejaculated the girl, "how is it gwine to know whether you want things hot or cold?" —Everybody's.

Out of His Mouth.

His youngest grandchild had managed to get possession of a primer and was trying to eat it.

"Pardon me for taking the words out of your mouth, little one," said the professor, hastily interposing.—Chicago Tribune.

A man can never do anything at variance with his own nature. He carries with him the germ of his most exceptional action.—George Eliot.

THE RIGHTS OF WOMEN

First Defendad in Quincy by Mrs. Anne Hutchinson

Located on Beale street at the junction of Grand View avenue is a tablet to Mrs. Anne Hutchinson, as it was at Mount Wollaston during Wheelwrights administration, that the first seeds of Antinomianism were sown, and Mrs. Hutchinson was the principal advocate.

Cyrus E. Dallin, the Arlington sculptor, has been selected to make the sketch model for the proposed statue of Anne Hutchinson—the first woman in America who stood up and fought for the rights of women to discuss freely all matters—which is to be placed in the Boston Public Library, probably opposite MacMonnies' statue of Sir Harry Vane.

The movement to have a statue of Anne Hutchinson in the Public Library started with the federation of women's clubs, several of which have been actively interested in the matter for some time, notably the Concord Women's club.

Anne Hutchinson was one of the most remarkable women of the early Colonial days. She came to Boston with her husband in 1634 from Lincolnshire, Eng. The husband became a member of the General Court. At the time the sermons of Cotton Mather were discussed one night each week by a body of men and Mrs. Hutchinson organized a body of women, who met and discussed the sermons the same evening—the first Woman's Club in New England.

Cotton Mather did not object to a discussion of his sermon by the men, but he was wroth at the idea of women presuming to do the same thing—or to understand them well enough to discuss them. And further, Mrs. Hutchinson was putting some new interpretations on his words and doctrines. In fact she criticised his words from an antinomian standpoint, which briefly means that she regarded the New Testament and its moral teachings as superior to the Old Testament. This was a new kind of heresy and Anne Hutchinson with her family were banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony. All the family except one daughter was massacred by the Indians in Dutch New York in 1643.

Besides the women's clubs there are many men interested in the project who have subscribed to the fund.

PLAYGROUND ATTENDANCE

A Double Header Tomorrow at Ward Three

Despite the fact that one and a half days were lost on account of rain last week the Playground figures for attendance ran up to the good total of 3956. Ward Three of course, leads with a total of 1997, Ward Two is next with 1209, and Ward five had an estimated total of 750.

The weekly sports of ward three will be held tomorrow afternoon and in addition to the 50 yard dash and the running high jump. the two postponed events of last week will also be run off. The storm of last Tuesday came so suddenly that only the boys 35 yard dash was finished, and as a consequence there will be "double header" tomorrow. The first event will commence at 2.30.

The girls of Ward two and three will commence this week to practice their folk dances and group games for the closing day exercises. The School Committee has kindly granted the use of the corridors and pianos of the Washington and John Hancock schools and the youngsters ought to present a very creditable performance on the final day. Miss Ruth Bass will work with the Ward two girls. while Miss Alice Arnold and Miss Virginia Cleaves will have charge of the Ward three girls.

Mrs. John Livingston of Elm street and daughter Abbie, left Sunday for a months vacation in Nova Scotia.

NOTICE

Dr. Edwin E. Davis will be at his office 34 Chestnut street, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays as usual from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. and evenings by appointment. 16-tf

CORNELL CLUB AT SQUANTUM

Annual Wash in Surf, Base Ball and Dinner

The Cornell Club of New England held its annual outing at Squantum Saturday afternoon, and 60 of the alumni attended. Among those present from this city were Carl Sheppard, Warren Ogden, C. E. Aldrich and James E. Neary.

In the afternoon the ball game between the classes having even numbers in their numerals and the odds, resulted in a win for the evens, 12 to 5. A. C. Bryant, '00, captained the winners, and Benjamin Wighton, '07 led the losers. Carl Sheppard of this city pitched for the evens for seven innings, and then McCarthy, the '05 varsity pitcher succeeded him. Bryant, '00, was on the receiving end. The losing battery was J. McCarthy '05 and Wighton '07.

George Grossman of Boston got a bad dislocation of the right knee while chasing a centre field drive, and was carried away in an auto. Webster, the aviator. flew over the grounds on his trip to Nantasket and saluted the boys. They returned the Cornell yell.

The annual "wash" in the surf followed the base ball game, after which the gathering assembled on the veranda and headed by their own "kitchen band" marched to the dining room of the Squantum Inn where they were served a shore dinner.

Fred M. Nellis, president of the club presided, and there were addresses by William Van Kirk of Bridgeport, Conn. "Ken" Roberts of the Boston Post, and A. C. Blount of Boston, secretary of the club.

E. J. Savage headed the committee which included "Ken" Roberts, Theodore Tewkesbury, and Charles P. Rockwell. During the evening there was a vaudeville entertainment, those appearing being Harry Johnson, and John Bond.

RIVADAVIA CREW COMING

Sailed a Few Days Ago from Buenos Aires

The crew to man the Argentine superdreadnought Rivadavia is now on its way to this city, and the big ship, delayed for months at the shipyard by a series of misfortunes and mishaps, will be ready for them on their arrival.

The crew consisting of 1000 men, left Buenos Aires a few days ago on the transports Chaco and Pampa and will arrive here sometime in August.

A patriotic demonstration in the city marked the departure of the crew and the deep sea trip will end first at New York where a demonstration will be accorded them and later at Boston where they debark for a stay of several weeks.

The program, as at present arranged, is to place the crew aboard at the Charlestown Navy Yard and then sail outside the three-mile limit to neutral waters where the United States flag will be hauled down and the familiar blue and white flag if the Latin republic will be hoisted to the mast head with the appropriate ceremonies.

The ship will then steam for her home port where one of the biggest celebrations in the history of Argentine is planned.

Her sister ship the Moreno, under construction at the New York Shipbuilding plant, is nearly completed, and although one of her turbines was sent here to replace one damaged in a chain test on the Rivadavia another is being made to take its place.

With both boats in southern waters the first part of a naval program of Argentina will have been filled.

During the recent Turkish-Italian war, the former country made strenuous efforts to buy the Rivadavia as it floated at the Fore River dock and although they offered $20,000,000 for her and the Moreno, the offer was set aside. This amount, large enough to build three ships, was not even considered, principally because it would occasion a long delay in fulfilling the plans Argentine has for seaboard protection.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Nicholls of Gloucester spent te week end with relatives in Quincy.

THE ERA OF GLASS.

It May Come After Our Iron Ore Deposits Are Exhausted.

The iron ore deposits of the world are being rapidly exhausted, and the time is not far distant when we will have to get along without iron and steel. Before that day arrives some substitute for these valuable things will have to be found, and it has been suggested by a scientist familiar with the subject that the logical successor will be glass.

Glass can be made to meet nearly all the requirements of iron and steel and with improved methods of manufacture will be a great deal cheaper. There is an abundant supply of the materials from which glass is made, and long before iron reaches the obsolete stage it is more than likely that glass will be one of its strongest competitors.

The chief fault with glass is its brittleness, but it is possible even now to produce a grade of glass which can stand a great deal of hard usage and serve many of the purposes for which iron is employed. The progress of invention is bound to evolve a quality of glass which will be as strong and durable as iron and transparent as well.

The use of glass will effect a great improvement in sanitary conditions. The building of the future, according to this scientist, will have its walls, ceilings, floors, sanitary fixtures and almost everything else made of glass.—Exchange.

BELATED RECOGNITION.

Plaint of a Woman Who Was Shadowed by a Detective.

"Acquaintance with a detective is not the good thing some people may imagine," said a young woman who has never yet been accused of being an adventuress or anything else that is supposed to get one's name on the front pages of the newspapers.

"A few months ago I was robbed of a belt that I prized very highly because it was unique and cannot be duplicated. I spent considerable money and had the assistance of a headquarters detective, but without recovering the belt.

"That was all well enough, but the other day as I was walking down Broadway I saw Mr. Detective. He saw me, too, and remembered that he had seen me somewhere, but had evidently forgotten the circumstances. He 'shadowed' me for a block; then when I turned into a store he slipped into a doorway and waited for me to come out. Again he shadowed me till I turned into my doorway.

"At that point he seemed to suddenly remember that he had known me as a client, not as a victim, for as I looked back he seemed to have a sheepish look in his face as he turned and walked rapidly away."—New York Globe.

New York's First Mayor.

The first mayor of New York, Thomas Willett, was inducted into office in June, 1665. Governor Richard Nicolls, the first English executive of the future Empire State, was responsible for the appointment of Willett, who was a wealthy merchant and trader and had a town house in New York and a country estate in Rhode Island, where his body was buried in 1674. Willett, who was a shrewd business man, governed New York honestly and well and after his first term of one year was made mayor again in 1667. The municipal government of which he was the head was composed of five aldermen, three Dutch and two English, and a sheriff, although police duties devolved largely upon the mayor, and he was police magistrate as well.—New York World.

A Wonderful Drummer.

Probably the most remarkable drummer who ever lived was Jean Henri, the famous tambour major of the Emperor Napoleon. One of his feats was to play on fifteen different toned drums at the same time in so soft and harmonious a manner that instead of the deafening uproar that might have been expected the effect was that of a novel and complete instrument. In playing he passed from one drum to the other with such wonderful quickness that the eyes of the spectators could hardly follow the movement of his hands and body.

Mansfield's Humor.

Richard Mansfield's humor was often misapprehended for conceit.

One night the company was playing under a tin roof upon which a sudden downpour of rain caused a terrific clatter. This startled Mansfield into exclaiming, "What's that noise?" "Rain, sir," was the answer. "Tell it to stop!" ordered the actor fiercely.—New York Globe.

She Was Prepared.

"I trust, Miss Tappit," said the benevolent employer to his stenographer, "that you have something in reserve for a rainy day."

"Yes, sir," said the earnest young woman. "I am going to marry a man named Mackintosh."

Perfectly Plausible.

Cautious Customer—But if he's a young horse, why do his legs bend so? Dealer—Ah, sir, the poor animal has been living in a stable too low for him, and he's had to stoop!—Exchange.

Pa's Solution.

"Oh, papa," called Willie excitedly, "there's a big black bug on the ceiling."

"All right, son," said the professor, busy with his essay; "step on it and don't bother me."

WE OF TODAY SLAVES OF SIN

Says Rev. P. S. Neldon of Hall Place M. E.

The Sunday morning sermon of Rev. P. S. Neldon at the Hall Place M. E. Church was taken from the story of the vine and the branches in St. John, 15th chapter. Christ desires something else besides branches. True it is that if the kingdom is to be advanced there must be branches, but He wants something more. He wants fruit. The fruit should draw the attention of others. Its quality should be the best that others may want the same. God wants much fruit. He is not satisfied with a little. Not Sunday fruit-bearing Christians, but fruit-bearing Christians every day.

The Epworth league devotional service at 6 P. M. was led by the First vice president on the subject "Christ's sanctification of labor."

The Pastor took for the subject of his evening sermon "The three Gardens of the Bible—the Garden of Eden, the Garden of Gethsemane and the Garden of the Resurrection."

When we go back to the Garden of Eden we go back to the time of creation of man and all things pertaining to the beginning of time and as we read in Genesis we find two distinctive accounts of creation, and then after we have read about the beginning of things we read about the conditions existing in that garden and what a beautiful place it was. We find that all of the evil conditions existing today including sickness misery, poverty, crime and the whole catalogue can all be traced back in some way to sin.

God in His wisdom and providence never intended man should pass through these conditions, but when placed in the garden he was placed as a free man who should choose what he would take and he chose to satisfy his selfish desires rather than to satisfy the demands of God. But with the fall of man came the promise of a Redeemer.

We in this modern time are in a measure slaves to sin. There is connected with our human nature a bent to sinning a going away from the things of God, of turning our backs on him as our Saviour and friend. We are in a measure fallen men and women, and few are the souls today who have not passed through that experience of fallen life. But we have a Saviour a risen Saviour, a living Saviour, who has passed through those experiences that we have, and He is to be our Saviour, our Redeemer and there is no other name whereby we may be saved but the name of Jesus Christ.

CAME TO BLOWS.

There was a lively fracus in City Square about 7 o'clock Saturday evening which quickly collected a large crowd and resulted in both men being sent to the police station. Just what started the row no one seemed to know. Shortly before the two men and a woman were walking up Washington street together. They passed through Temple street and when near the corner of Temple and Hancock street, suddenly came to blows. The blows fell thick and fast for a few minutes. Then Officer Olson came over on the run. As he did so the woman grabbed one of the men and pulling him along tried to escape by going through the church yard. The second man was grabbed by Officer Olson and it looked for a minute as though the woman would succeed in getting her man safely away. Just at this time however Officer Phillips came along in citizens dress and grabbed the fellow and placed him under arrest. Both men were sent to the police station and this morning Judge Avery acted as arbitrator in the case.

ELKS OUTING.

TAX RATE SOON.

The Assessors are now at work figuring out the tax rate and it is expected that the rate will be announced early in August. The general impression seems to be that the rate will be a little lower than that of 1913, due largely to increases in valuation.

STILL ALARMS.

The West Quincy apparatus went out on a still call at 4 o'clock Sunday afternoon for a brush fire off Willard street.

QUINCY COMPARED WITH OTHER CITIES

The Revenue and Non-Revenue Receipts of Taunton, Everett, Chelsea and Quincy

Payments of These Cities to Be Compared Later

It will be of interest to compare the annual revenue and payments of the city of Quincy with other cities, as given in "The cost of municipal government" just published by the Bureau of Statistics of Massachusetts.

The receipts are in two divisions—Revenue receipts and non-revenue receipts.

Revenue receipts of a municipality are the amounts received or receivable, in cash or other form, for meeting its expenses and outlays from the exercise of its corporate power of taxation and police control and its corporate authority for conducting business undertakings. Revenue receipts may be said to fall within two principal classes 1. General; 2. Commercial.

General revenues are moneys accruing to the municipal treasury under the general taxation and police powers, and from sources, in return for which the municipality renders only a general service without special regard to the possible benefit to be derived by the taxpayer in his capacity as an individual. It is for this general service that a person pays taxes in various forms, including fees for permission to engage, as an individual, in certain gainful occupations, which, because of their character, the law has said must be under regulation in the interest of the community as a whole. His returns for these contributions to the public treasury are the maintenance of order, the protection of property against fire, the conservation of the public health, the education of all the children in the community (a matter which is presumed to concern him, whether he has children of his own or not,) and the various other things which he expects the municipality to expend money for, though from many of them he may receive only an indirect benefit.

Commercial revenues, as distinguished from general revenues, are moneys accruing to the municipal treasury from property owners or citizens in return for a particular service rendered, including improvements calculated to permanently enhance the value of property, or thing of value furnished, to the individual by the municipality.

Non-revenue receipts consist of receipts on account of:—Certain Offsets to Outlays; Municipal Indebtedness; and Agency, Trust, and Investment.

The Daily Ledger today compares the receipts of the city of Quincy with

By giving the Tigers a good beating Monday morning in the Ward Two Playground league the Red Sox jumped into first place, and it looks now as if they would hold the lead to the end of the league schedule. HEATER BOYS ON A STRIKE

Claim 25 Per Cent of Earnings of Riveters

The heater boys at the Fore River shipyard declared a general strike Monday afternoon.

The boys say their strike is a protest against a further violation of their working agreement, which they claim allows the machine riveters 75 per cent of the money earned on contract work. The balance, 25 per cent, is supposed to go to the heater boys, but they claim to have been getting but 18 per cent.

The strike was brought about by a few boys who quit in the morning and when the whistle blew in the afternoon practically every heater boy in the yard had suspended.

The passer boys as well as the machine riveters will be affected by the calling of the strike. The former are paid by the company.

CANDY BOARD IS ILLEGAL

The Attorney General has given an opinion to Chief J. H. Whitney of the District police, in which he holds that the candy scheme for the sale of certain brands of candy is illegal. The scheme is one where on the deposit of ten cents, one punches out a hole on a card, which discloses a number. The number may entitle the purchaser to a ten cent box of candy or he may get a pound box. In any events he gets something .

The scheme was brought to the attention of the Attorney General by the Watch and Ward society, who were backed up by candy manufacturers not in the card scheme. The "precise question," says the opinion, "is whether this is an attempt to make the disposal of property dependent upon, or connected with chance."

"There are but few cases in Massachusetts adjudicating this particular statute, but reading the statute carefully, and especially in connection with many adjudicated cases in various states of the union, this 'punch board' would seem to be a method of stimulating purchases of candy by offering to the purchaser an opportunity or chance for something in addition to what he really pays for, without the use of any skill or giving any consideration for it."

One of these candy schemes has been located in a City Square store and has been doing a thriving business. In fact one entering the store often saw some party trying his or her luck. According to the ruling of the Attorney General however the scheme is in the same catagory as a lottery.

MORE AIR FOR THE ASSESSORS

Preparing, Possibly for Seige by Taxpayers

A large window, for ventilatiion purposes, is being cut through the partition of the private office of the Assessors at City Hall, into the main corridor. The private office of the Assessors has been located in a small hand-box like room adjoining the main office, by which it is separated by large windows. The ventilation of this as well as the main office has never been good, and complaints have often been made by other boards as well as by clerks. Now however this is to be remedied.

SLUG BALL AT PLAYGROUND

Girls Team of Ward Three Win from Ward Two

The South Quincy girls slug-ball team won the first of the series of three games Monday afternoon at the Ward Three playgrounds. There were several "slight" arguments over the rules, as the two sections had been playing their practice games under slight variations, but of course all of these differences only added to the excitement of the contest.

The Ward Two girls were able to hold their own for about three innings but in the 6th the South Quincy players piled up the huge total of 27 runs.

This lead was too large to be overcome by the Quincy Point team in their remaining time at bat, and the game ended with the score of 52 to 24. A return game will shortly be played at Ward Two.

RACE RIOT ON MAIN STREET

The first real race riot Quincy has had broke out in the Ghetto district at 6.50 Monday evening, and people living in the vicinity of Cyril and Main streets appealed to the police for protection when they saw missiles hurled through the air and knives flourished.

Headquarters were notified as the men were lined up for roll call, and nine of them were sent to the spot in the police auto. They arrived too late to stop the fight, but found scores of excited Jews and Syrians parading through the streets and acting in a menacing way toward one another.

As far as can be learned the riot grew out of a fight on Main street, when a Syrian who was riding a bicycle on the sidewalk hit a Jew and knocked him down and was in turn knocked down by a Jew. In side of three minutes all of the Syrians and Jews in that section were enlisted against each other in a general combat.

They learned the police were on their way, and a truce was declared, so that there was no actual fighting in progress on their arrival.

Patrolman Charles Broberg who is on duty in the district was ordered to place the parties responsible for the outbreak under arrest, and about 11 o'clock he called for the wagon. With the assistance of Officers Whelan and Corbett he placed the four men said to have started the fight under arrest.

William Wolff at the station claimed he had been bitten on the arm. A search of his pockets revealed warrants for the arrests of the Boosada brothers, Sahad and Maroun.

The four men were bailed about fifteen minutes later and appeared in court to answer to Patrolman Broberg's complaint.

This morning Isador Wolfe, William Wolfe, Maroun Boosader and Salird Boosader were arraigned in court for disturbing the peace, all pleading not guilty. Then it was discovered that one of the four, Salird Boosader was a juvenile, and he was placed in charge of the probation officer until Aug. 13 .

On the other cases Officer Broberg asked for a continuance which was granted until Aug. 5. The defendants were represented by counsel.

HOUGHS NECK SCHOOL.

E. H. Sears, the contractor for the addition to the Houghs Neck school building, commenced operations on Monday. Mr. Sears was the lowest bidder for the building, although his bid did not include the heating and ventilation system. Bids for this part of the work will be opened Friday at the office of Commissioner Brown. The foundation of the addition, was that of the original building, will be of cement.

PERMIT FOR NEW CHURCH

Also 10 Two-Family Houses and Eight Single Houses

In spite of the cry of dull times, building is booming in Quincy. That this is true is shown by the fact that this week applications have been made of the inspector of buildings for permits for ten two-family houses. The first of these filed was by John Berman who desired permits for four houses costing about $5,000 each to be built near the corner of Washington and James streets in the Point district.

This morning Herman F. McIntire filed applications for permits for six two-family houses to be built on Fayette street, Wollaston. Mr. McIntire's houses will consist of four rooms and bath. He will put in the cellars for the block of houses this season and the buildings will be erected in the early spring of next year.

Application has also been made by Rev. John J. Coan for a permit for the new Catholic church to be erected at 550 Washington street, the estimated cost of which is $20,000. The church will have a frontage on Washington street of 65 feet and a width on the back of 70 feet, the depth of the church being 116 feet.

The permit applied for last week by the Means & Thacher Inc., has been granted. This is the new manufacturing plant to be erected at the corner of Squantum street and Newport avenue.

Among the recent permits applied for and granted in addition to the above are the following.

Sylvester Lottelo, dwelling; Goddard street.

Thomas Currier, dwelling; Green street.

John J. Cunniff, dwelling; Butler road.

Maurice Kilpatrick, dwelling; Botolph street.

F. L. Cheever, garage; Elm avenue.

Merrilla A. Hayden, addition; Cleverley court.

John P. Granahan, 2 dwellings; Walker street.

Edwin H. Hanson, garage; Kemper street.

Florence M. Muirhead, dwelling; Scammell street.

REDUCTION IN METROPOLITAN TAX

State Treasurer Claims Sinking Funds Are Earning Four Per Cent Instead of Three

Will Save Quincy This Year the Sum of $6,971

State Treasurer Mansfield promises quite a reduction in the Metropolitan tax for water, parks and sewers this year, which will reduce the Quincy assessment of 1914, $6,971. Whereas a total of $813,063 was raised in 1912, and $812,869 in 1913, he claims that $492,402 is enough to assess the Metropolitan district this year.

The assessments for sinking funds on Quincy and vicinity will be:

	1913	1914
Quincy	$17,515	$10,544
Braintree	199	105
Weymouth	255	134
Milton	8,798	5,772
Dedham	2,327	1,614
Brookline	22,074	15,638
Boston	514,113	291,976

The State Treasurer claims that the sinking funds are earning four per cent instead of three per cent, and therefore smaller assesments will meet all requirements.

The Metropolitan asessments of Quincy in 1913 were over $100,000 as follows:

Water	$55,519.02
Sewer	29,948.08
Parks	23,343.79
	$108,810.89

To which was added $2,969.91 for Charles river improvements, $2,053.03 for Bureau of Statistics, and $133.50 for State highways.

ARRESTED IN NEWTON

For Transporting California Wine from Quincy

A protesting cry from the residents of Little Italy is deduced from the tale of woe recounted by Raphael Naclerio, 26 years old, of Liberty street, Quincy, who was arrested Monday on a charge of illegally transporting liquor in Newton.

Naclerio says "there is a choice and exclusive club" in Newton, formed of Italian noblemen. These men, jointly order wine from a Frisco firm which upon receipt dispatches a cargo to Quincy. The liquor, suitable to the Italian taste is then transported to Newton, to a little restaurant, where it is leisurely sipped.

And why to Quincy? Simply because the majority of the members live here.

Naclerio had delivered but four barrels when he was arrested. His machine was taken to police headquarters in West Newton, where seven barrels, totaling 288 gallons, were removed to the station for safe keeping.

Naclerio was released on bail and will be given a hearing in the Newton court today.

Miss Anna Dacey of South Framingham is enjoying a week's vacation visiting friends in Quincy.

WAS POISONED BY CLAMS

The next time that Tax Collector John J. O'Hara indulges in clams he will make sure that they come from flats that are not in danger of contamination. Last week he indulged in some clams that came from the flats about Adams Shore and has been sorry ever since. It was Saturday afternoon that he ate the clams and before morning he was in agony and his condition has been somewhat serious since that time.

Anxious to get back to his office, he came up Monday, but was not as strong as he thought, and after remaining a short time was obliged to return to his home.

There is no question but what the sewers at Moon Island and Nut Island have been a source of danger to those who eat clams taken from the flats of Quincy bay. Clams on the Hingham bay shores and the Fore river are regarded safe.

This morning Collector O'Hara was very much improved and was at his office in City Hall, but looking a little pale.

Ten of the 33 cities of Massachusetts have already reported their tax rates for 1914, and only three are less than $20, Waltham Springfield and Worcester. Fortunate is the city that can keep the rate down to $20 nowadays.

Some sleepy heads demand that the summer hotel orchestra quit playing the Argentine tango as early as 2 P. M.

If business isn't good at the ring counter after some of these lovely moonlight nights, it is not the fault of the girls.

An old fashioned rowboat will never be very popular at the summer resorts until it will tip over as easily as a canoe.

The great trouble with many of the colleges in this country is that the recitation halls were built before the ball field and the stadium.

In reply to an often repeated question, this newspaper would inform "constant Reader" that the maxim "Cleanliness is next to godliness" is neither from the Bible nor Shakespeare, but will be found in Rev. Charles Wesley's sermon on "Dress."

QUINCY REVENUES.

The revenues of cities are but little understood and the statistics of Quincy, Taunton, Everett and Chelsea of nearly the same population presented today are therefore worthy of a little study. The different sources of revenue are important, and a comparison shows how some cities derive more than others.

For instance, Quincy derives less from corporation taxes and bank taxes than Taunton, or Everett or Chelsea.

More from licenses than Everett, but less than Taunton and Chelsea which had liquor licenses.

More from fines and forfeits than Taunton and Everett, but less than Chelsea.

More for privileges than Everett or Chelsea, but less than Taunton.

Quincy derives nearly as large a revenue from health and sanitation as Taunton, Everett and Chelsea combined.

Several other comparisons may be made, and ways and means may be provided to increase Quincy's revenue in some items.

THE PLAYGROUND MOVEMENT.

Up to a few years ago, it never occurred to the older people that Young America needs a place to play in. It was commonly supposed that a live boy would find plenty of amusement in selling newspapers, running errands, or hoeing the back yard garden. If he must have his game of ball once in a while, there was the street or some one's vacant lot.

As a matter of fact it often happened, even in the country town, that there was no place where a set of boys could play a game of ball without being ordered to quit.

Most American towns were laid out with no provision for the children. There was ample foresight for anything in which money could be made. Railroads and factories never lacked opportunities. Land was often given to attract them. But the cases where land was given where young people could play their games freely, and work off superfluous and threatening energy, were rarely seen.

In the larger cities the modern playground, with a tangle of yelling kidlets, is a sight to do a wholesome hearted person good. The boy who is chasing a baseball is not robbing fruit nor standing on the street corner smoking cigarettes.

A playground entertaining a large crowd of children does not fully serve its mission unless carefully supervised by some competent person. The average boy gets altogether too much fun from tormenting some one under his size. Also the average crowd of 12 year olds is very far from ready for self-government.

But even if a neighborhood or a village can merely open up a vacant lot and turn the youngsters loose, the results are worth while. In that case the parents will occasionally have to intervene to make Young America "salute the flag."

GREY APPEALS TO THE NATIONS

Invites Them to Co-operate In Mediation Conference

PLAN IS AGREEABLE TO ITALY

Germany and France Said to Look Upon Proposition With Favor—Russia's Stand Has Perhaps Kept Austria From Servia's Throat Thus Far—Situation Is Very Delicate

London, July 28.—Sir Edward Grey has asked Austria, Servia and Russia to suspend operations pending a co-operative mediation conference to which he has invited Germany, France and Italy.

To the latter proposition Italy replied at once, accepting the plan. Grey says that the suggestion is accepted in principle by Germany, though the Berlin government has not replied specifically to the British invitation. The proposition is favorably entertained by France, it is said.

Failure to bring about a settlement, says Grey, would lead to the greatest catastrophe which could befall the concert of Europe, and its consequences would be incalculable.

Austria, commenting on Servia's reply to her ultimatum, calls it dishonest and cites as proof of this that Servian mobilization was ordered a few hours before her reply was handed to Austria.

To the average person who is informed as to Austria's actions in the past this mobilization of Servia simply indicates that Belgrade placed no faith in Austria. That Austria is not already at Servia's throat indicates that something has caused Vienna to pause. It may be that Russia has taken the stand that Servia has complied with every article of the Austrian ultimatum so far as is consistent with the preservation of her national sovereignty and that she also left open the door to further discussion.

It is difficult to see how Austria could fail to admit these facts except she intended to force war on Servia at all hazards. The Russian war minister is quoted as saying that war with Austria is inevitable and the military reorganization and preparation that Russia has made since the Japanese war make this no futile threat. At any rate, Austrian envoys at London, St. Petersburg and Rome have expressed a willingness to discuss the matter.

In the meantime every nation in Europe is preparing for war. The great British war fleet which was mobilized for the recent review is kept intact and is coaling preparatory to going to the North sea. The French fleet is held at Toulon. Russia is mobilizing and has established a censorship. Belgium is mining the bridges on the German frontier and is preparing her army. Austria reports a "partial" mobilization, while a "general" calling out of troops has taken place in Servia.

An engagement between Austrians and Servians is reported to have occurred on the Danube, but no details are available and it is not considered to have been of importance. As far as the censorship permits, it is known that Austria has not yet opened her military operations.

The crisis hinges on Austria's acceptance or declination of a proposal to mediate one remaining issue—right of Austrian officers to arrest on Servian soil Servians suspected of anti-Austrian plotting.

The situation in various quarters is summed up as follows:

Austria: Refuses to parley further with Servia.

Servia: Prepares to resist invasion and looks to Russia for aid.

Russia: Mobilizes and serves unofficial notice that Austria must not invade Servia.

Italy: Assures Austria she will abide by terms of triple alliance—meaning she will help Austria if Russia aids Servia.

Germany: Seeks to localize the conflict by inducing Russia to hold aloof, but unofficially announces she will aid Austria if Russia helps Servia.

France: Holds army and navy in readiness and prepares for counter attack on Germany in event of latter entering conflict.

England: Least agitated of European powers; calls on Germany, France tond Italy to mediate.

Vatican: Pleads with Francis Joseph not to stain last years of his reign with blood.

The amendment, adopted by a vote of 40 to 13, would apply to the section of the bill relating to unfair competition; and would provide that no order or finding of the proposed commission, or of a court in connection therewith, should be admissible as evidence in any suit, civil or criminal, brought under the anti-trust laws.

CONVICTS AID IN FIGHTING BIG FIRE

One Man Killed and Two Injured In Prison Yard

Concord, N. H., July 28.—Spurred on by the promise of a baseball game after supper, a large number of convicts at the state prison here rendered heroic service in fighting a fire which burned four large buildings in the prison grounds and caused about $100,000 loss.

One fireman, Amos Turner, was killed, and two others, Philip O'Connell and Clarence Clark, were seriously injured in fighting the flames. Turner was crushed by a pile of lumber which fell on him.

Sparks from a shifting engine are believed to have caused the fire, which originated in a big wooden storehouse containing 50,000 prison-made chairs.

GOES SUDDENLY INSANE

Court Clerk Kills Child and Self and Son May Die

Boston, July 28.—Two dead, one dying and another wounded represents the toll of an effort made by Thomas H. Dalton, clerk of the East Boston district court, to wipe his family out of existence.

With a revolver Dalton killed his 5-weeks-old infant, Priscilla, and himself, in his home.

Joseph, his 7½-year-old son, is on the dangerous list in a hospital. The boy was shot between the nose and upper lip. Mrs. Dalton was wounded behind her right ear, but is in no danger.

Long continued illness, culminating in a fit of sudden insanity, is thought responsible for the murderous attack of Dalton. He was 36 years old.

TROOPS HELD IN BARRACKS

Necessary to Prevent Further Bloodshed In Dublin

CROWDS ATTACK STREET CARS

Throw Stones When Unable to Wreak Vengeance on Scottish Borderers—"Massacre" Denounced In Resolutions Passed by Town Councils—Forty Riot Victims Badly Hurt

Dublin, July 28.—Rioting broke out again last night, but subsided without serious results. The rumor went about that the Scottish Borderers would entrain at the Amiens street station. A great crowd surrounded the station and amused themselves by stoning the street cars. The troops, however, were confined to the barracks, virtually prisoners, to prevent infuriating the crowds.

Six hundred volunteers paraded through the streets, a crowd of 4000 following them, singing.

Feeling runs high throughout Nationalist Ireland. Town councils are adopting resolutions denouncing "the massacre." The soldiers of the Limerick and Kilkenney garrisons are confined to barracks, and concerts by military bands in several towns have been cancelled.

The lord mayor of Dublin has called a meeting of the magistrates to consider the action of the castle authorities in calling out the police and soldiers without consulting the city officials.

The police threaten a strike unless those members of the department who were dismissed for disobedience of orders are reinstated.

It is announced that Police Commissioner Ross resigned as a protest against the suspension of Deputy Commissioner Harrell. The Nationalists are delighted, as Ross was unpopular.

The city of Dublin and the greater part of Catholic Ireland is in a state of greatest excitement over Sunday's conflict between the regular troops of the British army and the Irish Nationalists, which resulted in the killing of four persons and the wounding of many others, forty of whom are still in hospitals in a serious condition.

The landing of arms for the Nationalists was carried out in a more daring manner than similar feats achieved by the Ulster Unionist volunteers, as it was effected in daylight.

Assistant Commissioner of Police Harrell, who requisitioned the military, was suspended from duty pending an inquiry.

Sixteen policemen suspended for refusing to obey orders were placed under arrest and ordered to remain in barracks, but refused to obey.

DEBATE IS HELD UP

Dublin Tragedy Causes Delay on the Home Rule Measure

London, July 28.—The first effect of the Dublin tragedy has been to smash Premier Asquith's plans for taking up the amending bill today. The premier announced that the matter had been indefinitely postponed.

The Irish members are so exasperated over the clash between the regular troops and the Nationalist volunteers that they are in no frame of mind to grant any concessions to Ulster. The Laborites and many Liberals support them.

A special inquiry will be made, probably by a judicial commission. In the meantime the demand for the removal of the Scottish Borderers from Dublin has not been granted, largely because an attempt to march them out would be the signal for attacks by the mobs. They will remain prisoners in barracks until the anger of the people has cooled.

Schmidt claims the girl was not murdered, but died as the result of an illegal operation. He asserts he cut up the body in order to protect the physician who performed the operation.

FACING DEATH TO TAKE PICTURES; THRILLING DAYS DOWN IN MEXICO

American Press Association Man With Villa Took Life In His Hands.

Tact and Good Fortune Got Him Out of Difficulties. Relates Experiences.

By JAMES WARE.

[Mr. Ware, a photographer of the American Press Association, accompanied General Villa's rebel army in Mexico from Saltillo. In a preceding article he devoted himself to the rebel chief, and now he relates various experiences, incidents and impressions.]

IT'S all very well to laugh about it when you get back, but when you are some fifteen hundred miles in the interior of a country like Mexico and there's trouble and danger on every side you are not much in the humor. I know I was not. To be quite candid, the thought uppermost in my mind every night when I went to "bed" was, "Will I wake up to be tortured to death or will I wake up at all?" And there was a very good reason for these gloomy apprehensions. Here was I, a lone American, with Villa's army far away from any zone of protection and without news of the outside world. Suppose word arrived that the American soldiers were advancing from Vera Cruz. Imagine what would happen to me! I knew it would be all off in such an event—I'd never see the white lights of Broadway again. My one consolation was the knowledge that I was reasonably safe barring untoward developments, as my government was favoring the cause of the Constitutionalists.

I say reasonably safe advisedly, for during my stay in the turbulent republic the fact that it explained my real status was brought home to me more than once. My first exposure to grave peril came with the burning of Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, on the border. I arrived there when the federals were dynamiting and burning the city. American sharpshooters were picking off the Mexicans who were trying to blow up the international bridge. I wanted to cross that bridge to take pictures, but Colonel Crane warned me not to. "It looks like sure death if you do," he said. Finally he yielded, permitting me to make the passage at my own risk.

Thought His Day Had Come.

Arrived on the Mexican side, I was met by fifteen mounted Mexicans much the worse for liquor confiscated in the raid on Nuevo Laredo. They were conducting themselves in a boisterous and gleeful manner, shooting off guns in the air in celebration of the federals' evacuation. They immediately surrounded me, regarding me, dressed as I was in an American army shirt and hat, as an American soldier. It was a mighty uncomfortable moment. Yet to my surprise they allowed me to enter the city when I made known my business. But an adventure was in store for me. It came when I went to the car shops about three miles out to take pictures of the destruction that had been wrought there.

As I was approaching one of the crude fortifications a Mexican scouting party called upon me to give the countersign. I didn't know what they meant. Standing there looking down the nose of a rusted old Mauser and ignorant of what was expected of me, I felt I was in for it good and proper. Sure enough I was. After failing to explain my mission, I was escorted at the point of a gun to the headquarters and prison. On the way I asked my captor by making signs to pose for the camera. He readily consented.

At the prison good luck favored me. There I met Captain Palasz, who made amends for my arrest. He permitted me to photograph the prisoners and officers in the prison yard, presented me with a box of his best cigars and took me riding in his automobile. He could understand English, but could not speak it. Eventually we became excellent friends, and he escorted me with his company on the journey to Monterey.

Ware as a Diplomat.

At Monterey, on the way to Saltillo, where was anticipated one of the biggest battles of the revolution, I saw an opportunity to take a flashlight of a group of officers assembled in a cafe. While I was getting ready to make the picture a surly young captain under Gonzales did all he could to spoil it and show his disgust for the Americanos. Two other Americans were with me and when they saw what I was about bade me a hasty farewell. "We're going to beat it," they said. "You're flirting with bullets."

Later one of the officers asked me to drink a glass of champagne. I would not have dared refuse, as to do that would in Mexican eyes be regarded as an unpardonable affront.

I had my wits about me and drank to the success of the Constitutionalist cause, thereby relieving an awkward situation. Yet even after this stroke of diplomacy my surly friend made some remarks in Spanish the nature of which I did not understand, though I knew they were not complimentary.

Villa's Resourcefulness.

The most interesting incident and one not heretofore told so far as I know was that of how the Constitutionalists captured Paredon and why the federals evacuated Saltillo. When Villa's scouts were marching on to Saltillo the federals met them at Paredon, fifteen miles south, with one of their heaviest armies in that vicinity. After the attack Villa discovered that he was outnumbered by thousands and foresaw defeat unless he could resort to masterful measures. After the fight had progressed an hour or two he summoned seventy-five of his mounted soldiers and ordered them to cut down a goodly quantity of mesquite trees, which grow in bush form. These he ordered tied to the horses and started his men riding through desert vantage points. The purpose of this was to create the impression in the federal ranks by raising great clouds of dust that he was being heavily re-enforced, and in this he was highly successful.

Outwitted and apprehensive, the federals thereupon retreated to Saltillo and reported the coming of Villa's troops with re-enforcements. In their haste to evacuate the city they had no time to set off mines to accomplish its destruction, as had been their purpose. But they did burn the large Casino, the finest in Mexico.

The result of this clever plan of the resourceful Villa was that his forces walked unmolested into Saltillo, and the rebel commander split his sides laughing over the success of his ruse.

Ate by His Wit.

At Torreon I had an amusing experience in satisfying the wants of the inner man. I was unable to make the Mexican waiter understand by word of mouth what I wished to eat, so I resorted to my pencil and drew a picture of a hen laying an egg and another picture of a hog. He laughed heartily and understood that I wanted ham and eggs. When these were set before me they were about as big as a silver dollar and cost me 60 cents American money.

On my first trip to Zacatecas, before the bloodiest battle of the revolution, I had a spectacular ride on a handcar to my destination. This handcar was propelled by four peons who had been directed by General Villa to take me wherever I wished to go. We started out at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, riding all night through mountains infested with wild animals and all the next day. The handcar had an acetylene lamp for a headlight, and frequently during the slow and tiresome journey I would espy the blazing green eyes of a wildcat or the great red eyes of a wolf as the beast crouched on the tracks directly in our path, fascinated by the glare of the light. More than once I thought we should hit one of the animals, but they always scampered off into the blackness of the night just in time to avoid being run down. I did some great shooting that night, and from yelps that followed my shots many of them took effect.

A Live One Among the Dead.

At Zacatecas, following the battle, I witnessed an uncanny incident. A cartload of dead soldiers stood within a hundred yards of General Villa's car, and no notice seemed to be paid to it. When General Villa's attention was called to this he asked why the bodies had not been burned. He was told there was no oil available for the purpose. He saw that it was supplied forthwith, and then it was that the incident to which I have referred occurred.

At the lighting of the first torch one of the "corpses," a wounded federal soldier, rose up among the dead in silent protest. He had been hiding among the bodies in the hope of escaping under cover of night. I suspect he thought himself at the mercy of the officer, that kindly individual whose function it is to dispose of the suffering.

After ten days in this place of horrors the split came between Villa and Carranza, and Villa ordered his entire army to return to Torreon.

On Colonel Fierro's Train.

Coming home, after we arrived at Torreon following the fight at Zacatecas, we found no trains were leaving for the border. There had been cloudbursts, and the roads had been washed out for eighteen days. After camping in the railroad yard for four days I noticed a freight train was being made up to carry Colonel Fierro, the man said to have killed Benton, the Englishman, and who had been wounded at Zacatecas. This train was bound for Juarez. I got aboard without permission, as I wanted to beat my rivals to the border with my pictures. This I did, arriving forty-eight hours before they appeared. En route at 8 o'clock the first night Colonel Fierro left his train at Santa Rosalia, despite his wound, a painful one in the thigh, to visit friends. He did not return until 2 p. m. the following day, and in the meantime we almost starved.

Fierro speaks English, and when we were within 150 miles of the border he said to me, pointing west to the mountains, "There's where my gold mines are; guess I'll stop the train and have a look at them." Suffering though he was, he rode his horse the distance, five miles at least. That's the Mexican of it; they won't give in even when they're dying. I saw a woman shot in the stomach by a stray bullet and her little girl, also wounded, walking the streets of Zacatecas two days after the battle without medical attention.

From Juarez I went by auto to El Paso, Tex., where I met all the newspaper men on the border, who evinced great interest in such of my experiences as I related. Then I boarded a train for home, thank God. My adventure in Mexico was over. I was as happy as a boy going to the circus for the first time. I was going to see the white lights of Broadway again, after all.

UNCLE SAM GOT HIS CENT.

Threatened Prosecution if Ex-Postmaster Didn't Meet "Shortage."

Luther H. Clifton, for seventeen years postmaster at Blades, Del., received word from the postoffice department in Washington that he would be prosecuted if he did not pay a shortage of one cent. He settled and escaped trouble.

The affair was peculiar. Clifton was succeeded as postmaster last November by Caleb R. Cannon. The accounts were gone over by an expert when the transfer was made, but it was impossible to learn the amount of cancellations, this being the basis upon which the postmaster's salary is fixed.

The report of the expert finally was that the government owed the retiring official 1 cent. Later, however, the department sent word that the debit was the other way about and threatened prosecution for nonpayment. Clifton paid the money to his successor and got a receipt.

Lily Irvine Flies Seventy Miles Over Water in Sixty Minutes.

Lily Irvine made a seventy mile flight in a hydroaeroplane from Cedar Point to Euclid Beach, O., in sixty minutes, breaking the record for this trip, made by Glenn Curtiss, and making the longest over water flight ever made by a woman.

Miss Irvine started her hydroaeroplane gliding from the beach and mounting in a spiral. Then she headed her craft directly for Cleveland. She was accompanied by a mechanician.

A strong west wind helped her to make her trip in remarkably fast time. Glenn Curtiss made the same trip in 1910 in seventy minutes.

TRANSFER OF MISSISSIPPI

The Grecian residents of this city wore the flags of their homeland Monday in recognition of the official transfer of the battleship Mississippi at Norfolk, Va. to Greece.

The stars and stripes were lowered for the last time in the presence of a large gathering of Americans and Greeks, and the flag of that country was run up in its place.

The ship to be known as the Kilkis was immediately manned by 750 Greeks sailors who arrived on the steamer Athenia Sunday night, and large quantities of ammunition and stores are being put aboard.

If the present strained relations between Austria and Servia result in war the ship will probably see service, as Greece will side with Servia.

The local Greeks were jubliant over the transfer, and have taken intense interest from the start of negotiations. It has been their belief that with several such ships the recent war between Greece and Turkey would have soon ended.

FASHIONABLE JERSEY COAST.

Pretty Dresses Worn At The Fashionable Shore Resorts.

Notwithstanding the tricks that damp sea-breezes play with one's daintiest gowns, there are few places where one sees more elaborate dressing than at the resorts along the fashionable Jersey Coast.

VIVID COLORS IN BLOUSES.

High colored blouses in linen, voile or mull in deep rose, orange, yellow green, Cobalt-blue, or purple are a striking feature of the season. These are made with kimono or raglan sleeves very plain as a rule, their style varied by the shapes of the collars, and flare pointed cuffs. All white blouses are preferred for more dressy wear, and all waists are full in cut and drooping at the waist as those of chiffon have been.

SALIENT FEATURES.

Kimono shoulders, long tunics, wide girdles, Manchu collars, embroidered Chemisettes, three-quarter sleeves, are along the salient features one notices on the smartly-dressed crowd. In tailored styles, shortened skirts, simulated boleros, pockets in skirt fronts, and coat backs and capes of all descriptions.

CAPE SUITS.

Cape suits, where the cape replaces a jacket, are among the newest and most desirable additions to the outfit, and be it whispered, are a boon to home dressmakers since with a good pattern these are easily turned out. In white serge, and in ramie linens and eponges these suits are especially good looking and the younger contingent wear them with wide girdles of patent leather, finishing with an upstanding bow.

A LINEN NOVELTY.

The newest thing in linen is in damask weave, slightly suggestive of table linen but very pretty nevertheless. A girl wearing a costume of this material in tan color, wore spats to match, very apparent under her skirt which cleared the ground by six inches. A small waistcoat in dull blue ratine showed in front where the short coat was rounded off. A collar, of double fine linen, rose high above her coat revers. She wore beads of amber and heart shaped lapis, strung on a gold cord with smart tassel as a finish, and her blue straw hat was wreather with marigolds.

COLORS.

Dark blue, with white for relief in collars of starched linen, or organdie keeps its lead, and white serge especially in cape suits is exceedingly well-liked. With the coming season, it is said that dark quiet tones will lead in contrast to the garish colors and crude combinations that have marked "Cubist" fashions.

NEW VEILS.

The masque veil is the latest mode, and quite as becoming to the girl of today as it was to her grandmother. Very thin tosca nets with narrow borders of chenille dots are the popular choice for these. In contrast with these, voluminous veils of sprigged and figured lace that fall to the shoulders or lower are considerably seen.

IT IS SAID ABOUT QUINCY

That the needs of the public schools require that there should be a woman on the School Board.

That one politician says he can guarantee 500 votes to any woman who will become a candidate next fall.

That smoking at meetings of the School Committee would be tabooed with a woman on the board.

• • •

That Mabel E. Adams was a valuable member of the board during the terms which she served.

• • •

That more English and less Greek and Latin should be taught at the High school.

• • •

That dead languages are of but little use to the majority of boys and girls in their battle for a livelihood.

• • •

That too much time is given to athletics and too little to study in our High schools.

• • •

That new schools at Bigelow Park and Norfolk Downs are needed in the near future.

• • •

That proposed sites have already been selected in both localities.

• • •

That the City Council will probably authorize the purchase of one of these lots this fall.

• • •

That at the present time that at Bigelow Park seems to have the call.

• • •

That there is little likelihood of an addition being build to the Washington school.

• • •

That the residents of that district wanted an assembly hall and wanted it bad.

• • •

That they probably will not get it, at least for some time yet.

• • •

That a hall was much needed for meetings of the parents-teachers association.

• • •

That these associations are doing much for the public schools and should be encouraged.

• • •

That Ward Two is the only ward in the city that does not have a school hall.

That Houghs Neck also wanted an assembly hall but did not get it.

That the predictions made when the original building was erected at Houghs Neck have been fulfilled.

• • •

That if the district keeps on growing another addition will be necessary before many years.

That Chairman Mackay of the School Committee had rather trust to his luck at re-election than run for representative.

That he and Dr. Curtis of Wollaston will be candidates for re-election next December.

That Dr. Bushnell will also be candidate for election as member at large.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

PLAYGROUND BASE BALL

Quincy Point Wins From Wollaston 7 to 2

The Wollaston Playground baseball team was given a good drubbing by the Quincy Point boys Monday afternoon in the return game of their series 7 to 2. The first game was won by the Wollaston players last week by a score of 1 to 0. The game was stopped by rain in the fifth inning however and the Ward Two team was not at all satisfied with the result, and they promised a good "trimming" to the Ward Five boys when the return game was played.

Both pitchers were in good shape, Gamble of the winners getting 14 strike-outs, while Brown was able to make 7 of the winning team fan the air for outs. The Point boys made 8 hits, while Wollaston only made 4 off Gamble's delivery. The battery for Ward Two was Gamble and Gallagher, and for Ward Five Brown and Barron did the box work.

CHILDREN'S TEETH.

When They Should Appear and the Order In Which They Come.

The milk teeth (first teeth) are twenty in number. The time at which they appear is subject to considerable variations, even under normal conditions. The following table gives the order and average time of appearance of the different teeth:

Two lower central incisors, six to nine months.

Four upper incisors, eight to twelve months.

Two lower lateral incisors and four anterior molars, twelve to fifteen months.

Four canines, eighteen to twenty-four months.

Four posterior molars, twenty-four to thirty months.

At one year of age a child should have six teeth.

At one and one-half years it should have twelve teeth.

At two years it should have sixteen teeth.

At two and one-half years it should have twenty teeth.

It is not easy to explain where there are so often variations from the average. The order in which the teeth appear is more regular than the time of their appearance. Marked irregularities in order of the appearance of the teeth are the rule in idiotic children or those suffering from slighter mental effects.

Delayed dentition is generally caused by rickets. Many healthy children, however, frequently have no teeth appear until the tenth month of age.—Philadelphia Record.

BATHING IN JAPAN.

Natives Wash Themselves Clean Before Getting Into the Tub.

Partial accounts of the luxury of a Japanese bath lead us to believe that we have something yet to learn about what is regarded by many in this country as a necessity and by more as a supererogation—in Japan the bath is not only a necessity, but a delightful recreation.

The Japanese have a way of their own of taking a bath. They have a system that, in some respects resembles that enforced at swimming pools in this country. You must first wash the body thoroughly, and then you enter the tub, the water of which is heated by an individual system. There, if you are in a public bathhouse, you may smoke and doze and chat with your friends in a dissipation that is said to be exceedingly refreshing. The water is kept hot, perhaps increases in heat, and when you leave the tub it is still regarded as fit for the next customer. In a private house the master and mistress may have their baths first, and the same water serves for the invigoration and diversion of the servants. The ignorant foreigner, who goes into the Japanese tub for the purpose of cleansing his body and with soap spoils the water for further use, is not only guilty of a social error, but entails a hardship on the household, including the servants.—Rochester Democrat.

Recognized.

A Pennsylvania lawyer known throughout the state for his sharpness once met his match in a very unexpected quarter.

An old woman was being cross examined by him as to how the testator had looked when he made a remark to her about some relatives.

"I don't remember. He's been dead three years," she answered testily.

"Do you mean to tell me that your memory is so bad that you cannot go back three years?" demanded the attorney.

The witness was silent.

"Did he look anything like me?" the lawyer finally ventured.

"Seems to me he did have the same sort of vacant look," responded the old lady.—New Orleans Times-Picayune.

CLEARY HELD FOR KILLING SON-IN-LAW

Wife of Murdered Youth Is Prostrated by Tragedy

Haverstraw, N. Y., July 28.—Twenty-year-old Mrs. Anna Newman was the central figure in the tragedy that has jarred this town when her father, William V. Cleary, was arraigned on a charge of murdering her 18-year-old husband, Eugene M. Newman, and held for the grand jury.

Recognized as the most important witness, the girl, prostrated at her father's home, refused to make any statement. She was unable to even attend Newman's funeral.

By testifying that Newman had wronged her before their marriage and that her father was aware of it, the girl will save her parent from the electric chair, is the belief of many.

Amateur Champ Advises Swimmers to Practice It More.

MOST NATURAL POSITION.

Therefore Is Less Tiring Than Trudgen or Breast Stroke—Others Fast Becoming Obsolete In Competition—This Country Improving Rapidly In Art of Competitive Aquatics.

Speed swimming, an art long neglected in this country, is coming into its own here, according to Bud Goodwin, amateur long distance champ, who points out the number of youthful phenoms who have been uncovered since the advent of the crawl in American aquatics.

"Before long we will probably see the crawl supersede all the other strokes even for Marathon swimming," says Goodwin. "We are slowly coming to it, and the only reason that it has not already driven out the trudgen lies in its short life among us. It must be remembered that it is practically a new venture with us and that it takes early adoption and a lot of application to enable one to hold any kind of a scientific stroke over two or more miles.

BUD GOODWIN.

"For speed swimming the side stroke is quite obsolete, and it is likely that the trudgen will be, too, as soon as our racing men become better acquainted with the crawl, but for ordinary purposes both strokes will prove satisfactory, as they are based on the same principles. So slight is the difference that swimmers who use the trudgen exclusively in competition often revert to the side stroke at other times.

"With the above in mind it will be easy to differentiate after reading how to swim the trudgen. The stroke is started with the body resting comfortably on the water, face down, muscles relaxed, in the exact position of one plunging for distance. Now roll the body slightly to one side, either the one that comes naturally or right shoulder below if you have no preference, bringing down the upper arm at right angles to the front of the body, describing a semicircle to end at the thigh; then bend the arm at the elbow and carry forward above water to the original position. The underarm is started when the upper arm has covered half the downward stroke and describes a like orbit parallel to the other.

"Meanwhile, as the lower arm starts the legs are opened for a kick, and they snap closed as the upper arm finishes. This kick, the scissors kick, is made by opening the legs front and back as in walking, the upper leg coming forward a little, almost straight, with toes pointing downward, the under leg moving back to a kneeling position; then they are snapped together sharply. Breath is taken by twisting the head from the shoulders while the upper arm is on the first part of its downward sweep.

"In the crawl stroke the movements of the arms and upper body are the same, except possibly for a shorter reach in sprinting, but the legs, instead of a kick, indulge in a continuous alternate up and down thrash, about twelve inches in width. This thrash keeps the body constantly under way and avoids the check experienced in the trudgen, while the arms are recovering and no propelling force is being used."

IS THE RIO CANUMAN

What Explorer Millward Says of Roosevelt's River of Doubt

New York, July 28.—Russell H. Millward, who returned to New York after a tramp of 874 miles in uncharted parts of South America, came laden with large collections for the museum of natural history, the Zoological society and numerous archeological, ethnological and anthropological organizations with which he is connected.

Millward also brought back a strong conviction that Theodore Roosevelt's "River of Doubt" has been known to school children in Europe and South America as the Rio Canuman, and that for over a century it has been well known as one of the important tributaries of the Madeira river.

"I do not think the colonel looked for that river on the maps with the microscopic vision of an analytical mind," said Millward.

THRASHES BIG HUSBAND

But Midget Is Released When She Faces a Prosecutor

Camden, N. J., July 28.—Prosecutor Kraft, who has made a reputation for sending wife beaters to jail, was called upon to consider a case where the shoe was on the other foot. George Quinn caused the arrest of his wife for giving him a thrashing.

Kraft was told this was Mrs. Quinn's method of sobering up her husband when Quinn needed heroic treatment. He then sent for the woman with the intention of telling her she must not take the law into her hands.

The prosecutor was not equal even to giving a reprimand when he saw a little woman whose head did not reach to the shoulders of her husband and who weighed 100 pounds less. He ordered her release without comment.

Becky Edelson Voluntarily Breaks Her Hunger Strike

New York, July 28.—Becky Edelson's hunger strike is off. The sometime fiery I. W. W. agitator and anarchist called it off herself when the workhouse doctor took two soft-boiled eggs to her cell. The doctor didn't have to do any forcible feeding.

There is much wailing and gnashing of teeth around anarchistic headquarters. Becky had promised to become a "martyr" and starve herself to death if necessary to get her release from the workhouse. And because she didn't do it anarchist leaders are downcast.

Philadelphia, July 28.—After having undergone injections totalling 120,000 units of anti-toxin in six weeks, Thomas Wilson, 9, one of the most hopeless cases of tetanus ever admitted to the Methodist hospital, was discharged from that institution cured. He took all hearts and good wishes with him when he went.

He had larger injections of anti-toxin in his arm than ever was known to have been used before. During two weeks his body was rigid, and anti-toxin was injected every two hours. How he got the lockjaw germs was never known, for he had not a scratch.

DEATH OF DR. HOVEY

Achieved Fame as Explorer of Numerous Caves and Grottoes

Newburyport, Mass., July 28.—Rev. Horace C. Hovey, who was the greatest authority on American caves and grottoes, also an explorer and scientist of nation-wide fame, died in his home here. He was 81 years old and death was brought about by a general breakdown.

Hovey devoted practically the whole of his life to the ministry and geology, particularly in reference to subterranean construction. He explored more than 300 caverns and grottoes and his inventive genius solved the difficult problem of photographing underground scenery.

ADJOURNMENT IS NECESSARY

Another Great Uproar at the Trial of Mme. Caillaux

HUSBAND IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Has Sensational Clashes With Dramatist and Counsel For Calmette Children—Tries to Show Jurors That Editor Blackmailed Those Whose Secrets He Learned

Paris, July 28.—The trial of Mme. Caillaux for the murder of Gaston Calmette came to a dramatic halt when Henri Bernstein, the dramatist, created one of the greatest sensations of the case.

On Saturday Ex-Premier Caillaux, in referring to Bernstein, said: "The defense doesn't call deserters as witnesses."

He thus called attention to the fact that Bernstein had never done his military service. Yesterday afternoon Bernstein demanded that he be confronted by Caillaux. He then attacked the ex-premier fiercely, saying in conclusion:

"If war were declared tomorrow I would fight for my country immediately. I would not call upon my wife to fight my battles for me and fire on the enemy. This man is attempting to raise himself to the highest office on his wife's shoulders."

A tremendous uproar followed. In order to stop it the court had to clear the room and suspend the hearing.

Caillaux projected himself into the spotlight again at the trial of his wife. The trial was running smoothly, with the defense presenting testimony to show that Calmette's life might have been saved had the physicians attending him acted promptly, when Caillaux leaped to his feet and rushed to the witness stand.

"I demand an opportunity to refute the allegations made by Etenne Flagey," cried Caillaux. Without waiting for the court to give or withhold permission, Caillaux launched into an attack on Flagey, a journalist employed by Le Figaro, of which Calmette was the editor.

Earlier in the trial Flagey had testified that Caillaux had attempted, with an offer of $200, to bribe him to testify in behalf of Mme. Caillaux.

"It's a damnable lie!" shouted Caillaux. "I never tried to bribe him. The truth was that Flagey approached me and asked me for a bribe. I spurned him like the dog he is."

By that time the court was in an uproar. Friends and foes of Caillaux were cheering or jeering. Amid mingled hoots and groans, he presented documents to prove that money had been sought from the defense.

Then he proceeded to attack Le Figaro as a corrupt newspaper, and produced Calmette's will, in which the slain man bequeathed a fortune of $2,600,000.

By this he put the thought before the jurors that Calmette had acquired his wealth by blackmailing persons whose secrets had been learned by reporters of his newspaper.

M. Chenu, counsel for the Calmette children, leaped to his feet in anger and shaking his fist in the face of Caillaux cried: "Stop this mud-slinging at a dead man."

The two men engaged in a sharp altercation, but the words were drowned by the cheers and hisses that came from the audience.

The quarrel became so bitter and the confusion so great that court was adjourned.

Caillaux renewed the conflict when the session was resumed. He protested against an article in yesterday's Figaro charging him with suborning witnesses. He said Le Figaro was trying to work for the Hungarian government. Reverting to the fortune left by Calmette by Mme. Boursin, Caillaux cried:

"There's only one thing worse than losing one's life; it's to use it to attack a woman and live on her generosity."

Chenu jeered at Caillaux for ignoring court procedure and ironically addressed him as "Monsieur, le Minister," accenting the last word. Uproar broke out and Caillaux retired from the court.

No Pie Crust Promises

Wise advertisers never make "pie-crust" promises.

They know that to break faith with the public would be fatal—worse than throwing their money away.

That is one reasen why advertised goods are more in demand.

People know that there is quality behind them.

They look on them as standards. Any dealer knows that there are more calls for advertised goods than for goods not advertised.

This is especially true if they happen to have been advertised in the newspapers which directly reach the people.

The standard of advertising is more exacting today than ever before. Advertisers are more careful of their promises and more interesting in their text and illustrations.

The world grows better.

The Man She Married

A Story Told at a Ladies' Luncheon Party.

By F. A. MITCHEL

A number of married ladies were at luncheon, and the hostess proposed that each give an account of how it came about that she married her husband. In order to set the ball a-rolling, she gave her own experience first. She had met the man she married at a dinner party. They were sitting side by side, and he upset a glass of red wine over a white silk dress she wore for the first time. At the moment of the accident she was recounting an incident, and simply applying her napkin to the saturated spot she went on with her recital as though nothing had happened. The man, who realized that he had ruined the dress and could not with propriety offer to replace it, was so much pleased with her consideration for his feelings that he finally asked her to marry him.

The next narration was that of a lady who met the man she married at a horse race. At the luncheon hour the hamper containing the refreshments was brought from the boot of the coach in which the party had gone to the races, and one of the gentlemen opening a bottle of champagne shut his eyes when the pop came, and the cork hit the narrator in the face. The man was so distressed at what he had done that to make up for it he married her.

"Come, Mrs. Dorrance," said the hostess after several such romances had been recounted, "give us your experience. I am quite sure the ladies will be pleased to hear it."

Mrs. Dorrance, being urged by the others, finally consented.

"I was traveling abroad," she began, "on my way from Thun to Paris. Those barbarous people over there refused to check my trunk farther than Berne. On arrival at Berne I tried to find the trunk and failed. A gentleman noticing my distress asked if he could be of service to me, and when I told him what was the matter he went with me to the other end of the station, where we found a man slowly wheeling a truck. On the truck was my trunk. The gentleman who was with me spoke French fluently. I don't know what he said, but he succeeded in getting the trunk to the train a minute before it started."

"I, too, met my husband while traveling abroad," said one of the ladies, sipping her wine.

"Oh, I didn't marry that gentleman," Mrs. Dorrance proceeded. "He was going east and I west. I thanked him for the service he had done me and made a rush for the train that was just starting. All the doors were locked, and I very foolishly stepped on to the footboard. In a few moments the train was going so fast that I dare not jump off, and I couldn't get into the compartment. I was clinging to a brass rod intended for persons to help them into the coach. A gentleman in the compartment reached out and tried to drag me inside through the window.

"I was more fleshy then than I am now, and the effort was a failure. I shall never forget the disappointed look on his face when he gave up trying to lift me."

"How lovely!" remarked a lady. "Was he dark or light?"

"I was too frightened to notice."

"But you did afterward."

"I never saw him again."

"Oh! Go on."

"There are several compartments in those foreign coaches. A gentleman got out through a window at the front end of the car I was on and made his way toward me. I felt a strong arm about my waist—oh, how relieved I felt!—and glancing upward looked into one of the finest, bravest faces I ever saw in a man."

"I have heard that Mr. Dorrance is very handsome," remarked one of the ladies, sotto voce, to another.

"The gentleman," continued the speaker, "held on to me, encouraging me with a deep, sonorous voice that did not indicate the slightest fear or excitement, and somehow, under his protecting care, I felt perfectly safe. We clung there together till the train had passed over about ten miles, when we reached a station. I got into the compartment to which I was clinging, and my preserver returned to his own. I did not see him again till the train reached Dijon, when he handed out a fat woman and five children, disappearing with them in the station. He was evidently married."

"How unfortunate!" exclaimed several ladies at once.

"Two romances nipped in the bud."

"I pursued my journey to Paris and thence to London, where I attempted to engage passage on the next steamer to sail for New York. Every room was taken, and I must be at home within ten days to attend the wedding of my dearest friend, for whom I was to be bridesmaid. So the day the steamer sailed I went aboard, trusting that some passenger might miss reaching the steamer on time or something like that, but when I went to the purser after we were off he told me there was not a vacant room, not even a vacant berth in the ship.

"A gentleman was standing at the purser's window waiting till I had got through with my questions and, hearing what I said and seeing my disappointment, raised his hat, not with the flourish of a parvenu, but to the manner born, and with a sympathetic expression in his glorious eyes said:

"'Will you do me the honor to accept my stateroom?'

"Of course I told him I wouldn't think of incommoding him and all that, but he insisted, and when the purser told him that one of the officers on the upper deck would, for a consideration, give up his room to him I accepted the sacrifice."

"This is going to be delightful," was whispered from one lady to another.

"I was seasick and didn't leave my room till one night—there was a dense fog—I lay listening to the whistle repeat 'toot-toot' every few moments. I heard a crash and felt the ship careen. I knew at once that there had been a collision and, springing up, put on what I could find, seized a life preserver and ran on deck. One of the first persons I met was the gentleman who had so kindly given up his room to me."

"Ah, he saved you! I have always heard you married a brave man!"

"He did no such thing. He snatched my life preserver and ran away with it."

"Oh, dear! How disappointing!"

"I made my way to one of the boats. An officer was superintending its landing, keeping the men back and putting in the women and children. The man who had taken my life preserver, crazed with fear, tried to force his way into the boat, and the officer was obliged to threaten to shoot him to keep him away.

"The boat was filled before I could get into it, and I was obliged to seek safety in another direction. There were not boats enough for half those on board, and before I could get a place in one the last had been lowered and pulled away from the ship.

"Oh, that awful night! I looked about for something to float me—for the vessel was rapidly sinking—but could get only a steamer chair. It seemed to me not that the vessel was sinking, but that the water was rising to engulf me. Slowly it came up like a hungry monster stealing upon its prey; then suddenly the bow pitched, the stern rose, and I was engulfed in the cold black ocean.

"When I came up I was still clinging to the steamer chair. But I knew it would not serve me long, for I was rapidly becoming benumbed with the cold. I was losing consciousness when I felt a hand seize my arm and I was dragged on to an improvised raft. Then I felt a rope being placed around my body and knew that I was being lashed to my support. But there was no one on it with me. Presently I felt a pair of lips pressed against mine. I opened my eyes and saw a man's face. He had fiery red hair. That's all I gathered of his appearance—his hair was very red. Then I felt my raft slightly lightened. I knew that a man had pulled me on to the raft, and, since it would not bear two, he had got off into the water. I lost consciousness with the knowledge that he had given his life for mine."

"Poor fellow!" remarked the hostess.

"The wireless telegraph had called for help, and I was picked up by a boat from a steamer that had come to our rescue. As I was carried on to the deck from the boat who should I see standing with his hands in his pockets looking at me but"—

"Your preserver?"

"The red headed man. He saw me and blushed. Coming to me, he said, 'I beg your pardon for what I did.'

"'What do you mean?' I asked.

"'The kiss. I didn't expect to ever see you again.'

"'I know you didn't. You expected to give your life for mine. Come here.'

"He came to me shrinkingly as a child expecting a whipping. I threw my arms about his neck and cried with my lips against his."

"Ladies," said the hostess, the speaker having finished, "we don't need to ask who is Mr. Dorrance. It's plain enough."

The story teller did not deny the fact, and the party broke up.

"That was a very affecting story of Mrs. Dorrance's," said a lady to another.

"Very. But what a pity it was that he had a red head!"

Good Form

The Traveling Bore.

The really well bred traveler is quiet. He does not move about in a restless fashion. She does not complain of her fellow passengers. She remembers that she is only one of many thousands who are spending their days speeding over the surface of the earth.

There is a type of traveler who is a public nusance. She boards the train with half a dozen small bags and packages in her arms and spends perhaps the first half hour of the journey getting them settled. When she gets herself settled she finds she needs find some infinitesimal object in the particular package or box that is in the most inaccessible position. When it is disinterred she settles herself again. Then she pulls down the shade to keep the sun out of her eyes and immediately thereafter runs it to the top of the window because the train is too dark. She fidgets and fumes because of the heat and worries because of the draft and scowls at the mother of a crying baby. And she makes her fellow travelers as unhappy as she herself is unless they are endowed with an active sense of humor.

Another unpopular type is the traveler who talks in a loud tone. Fellow travelers are treated to unwelcome details of some unknown relative's toothache or forced to hear a recount of the romance of second cousin somebody's young life.

The well bred traveler speaks in a low tone and refrains from recounting any bit of news that might not well be considered public property.

Then there is the traveler who is careless of the comfort of the other travelers.

Tennis Luncheon.

An appropriate luncheon can be given as a sequel or introduction to a tennis match. One of the most attractive was given around a table decorated in this way:

In the center of the table there was an oblong of green felt—a tennis lawn, of course. This was properly marked off with white chalk, and across the center was drawn a little net. Four small dolls dressed in white flannel were fastened to the green, and in their hands were tiny tennis rackets. To be sure, their pose was rather stolid for tennis players, but they were effective nevertheless.

The color scheme of the luncheon was green and white—with a cream of spinach puree, olives and celery, boiled halibut with white sauce and new potatoes with parsley, chicken breasts in aspic, creamed asparagus, pepper salad with cream cheese balls and wafers and tennis balls of ice cream. Of course the same balls when they are served at Christmas are dubbed snowballs, but they answered their purpose.

The place cards showed little water color sketches of tennis playing, and the favors were bunches of white roses and ferns.

Public Manners.

The actions of some women in public conveyances and in public places at times invite severe criticism. Some women push and shove others in a way that suggests a state of savagery. It is a common habit of women deliberately to take another's place in line. The rule of "first come, first served" is ignored by the thoughtless majority.

Do not wrangle over paying the fare of a woman companion. Either pay it or let her pay it and then stop talking about the thing.

Women thus make themselves conspicuous in a foolish way, men laughing in a superior scorn at the weak, vacillating feminine mind. Decide to correct this error.

The action of a woman in public is the best test of her manners. After all, the behavior when there is no one looking is a fine criterion by which an individual should be rated. So be careful in public.

Courtesy For Sisters.

A large, round table at a certain famous summer hotel accommodated a family the parents of which say they never intend to grow old. Handsome themselves, they were surrounded by four beautiful children, two sons and two daughters. The mother remarked with pride that each boy had a sister to care for until he or she married.

The effect of the arrangement was plainly evident to those who noted the attention the girls received. The boys had been taught to place their sisters' chairs at the table, to help them with their wraps, to see that they had all the necessary attention at the informal hotel parties—in short, to do all those pretty things that many boys never dream of doing until they have met the "one girl," who probably is some one else's sister.

Disposing of the Spoon.

When drinking from a cup the spoon is left in the saucer. It should never be left for a moment in the cup, being used only to stir and dissolve the sugar.

Manners Make the Man.

Manners are of more importance than laws, being the foundation stones of civilization.

The Spirit of Courtesy.

Most of the rules of etiquette are based on kindness and unselfishness.

PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Their Coast Line Is Longer Than That of the United States.

"It is not generally known perhaps that the coast line of the Philippine Islands is longer than that of the United States," said a man who has spent more than fifteen years in that country. "The Philippines are numerous islands," he continued. "It would take one many months to tour all of the islands. Of course the climate varies, but in most parts it is delightful. The average temperature is lower than in many parts of the United States, and the humidity is not nearly so great. Records of temperature in the Philippines have been kept since 1805, and in that time the maximum recorded was 103 degrees. The mean temperature is from 70 to 80 degrees.

"If the humidity were great there are times when it would be almost unbearable, but ordinarily I would rather live in the Philippines than in most sections of this country. It is fortunate that in the month of greatest humidity, September, the temperature falls lower than at any other time of the year, which makes it possible to endure the conditions.

"I have frequently been asked if there is much drinking among the Filipinos. There is comparatively very little. The Filipinos have discovered, even if some of our own countrymen have not, that alcoholic drinks and the tropics do not mix. It is seldom you see a Filipino intoxicated. There are native brewed drinks in different islands, but the people do not overindulge."—Washington Post.

SPONTANEOUS COMBUSTION.

More Liable to Generate In Powdered Than In Solid Substances.

The scientific phrase for combustion is oxidation, or the combining of some substance with the oxygen of the air. Some substances have greater affinity for oxygen than others, and whenever the combustion reaches a certain point of rapidity fire results.

Anything that increases the facility of combination with oxygen increases the danger of spontaneous combustion or explosion, and for that reason a substance is more dangerous when pulverized than when solid, because the separated particles of matter are brought more directly in contact with the oxygen of the air. There is no danger of spontaneous combustion or explosion in a mass of unground wheat, but mills have been destroyed by explosions of flour dust.

Fixed oils absorb oxygen and give out carbon and hydrogen, causing a rise of temperature that may reach the burning point, as has often occurred in heaps of rags, tow, sawdust and similar bodies soaked with oil, paint, varnish, turpentine and sometimes grease.

Bituminous coal is liable to spontaneous combustion when moistened with water, and the coal dust in mines is a common cause of explosions. Moisture aids spontaneous combustion in piles of damp hay or freshly mown grass, and barns have been burned from that cause.—Philadelphia Press.

The Deciding Voice.

In a business men's club in a western town there sprang up two factions, one which criticised the steward because he did not provide the members with good meals and one which defended him hotly.

The dispute got fiercer and fiercer. Half the club wanted to fire the steward at once. The other half said he was efficient.

Then without warning the steward himself decided the momentous question.

One day at lunch time a member of the club asked the waiter:

"Where's the steward?"

"He ain't here," replied the waiter. "He said he was going down the street to get something good to eat."—Popular Magazine.

A Progressive Monarch.

Alfred the Great of England has few equals in history, for he was in advance of his times in everything. Born in Wantage, in Berkshire, in 849, he drove the Danes out of the eastern part of England, so after ridding his country of the foreigner he occupied himself in the advancement of learning. After thirty years of wise rule Alfred died in 901 A. D.

Sensitive.

Mistress—Why, Mary, isn't this your Sunday afternoon out? Aren't you going for a walk this lovely day? Mary—Please, ma'am, I'd rather stay in. You see most of the people out on a Sunday is couples, and I don't like to be conspicuous.—London Punch.

Trying to Please.

"Painting your own portrait, eh?"

"Yes."

"Vanity, my friend."

"Oh, no; I was just trying to see if I could paint one person who would be satisfied with the likeness."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Curiosity.

"Pop, did you say a little bird told you I was naughty?"

"Yes, my son."

"Pop, was it a little bird with a tell tail?"—Baltimore American.

So Memory Reminds Us.

The little boy had been whipped as far back as he could remember.—New York Sun. That, we believe, is the customary place.—London Opinion.

Sterile Land.

Two thousand miles of the western coast of South America above Valparaiso are dry and sterile to a width of forty to sixty miles.

LA TENA'S SHOW.

The Aroostook Times of Houlton, Maine, in its July 1, issue says of La Tena's show:

"Bright and clean and overflowing with genuine acts and of worth-while quality, La Tena's Big Wild Animal circus played to capacity crowds here last Wednesday, pleasing young and old alike, with its excellent program of novel numbers more than one of which would have done credit to a much more pretentious show. Every thing about the show was clean and well regulated the costuming and staging of the various acts was beyond reproach and the entire outfit proved one of even quality and considerable merit.

It was Houlton's third taste of circus entertainment this season and the show offered by the LaTena outfit was of a high order considering the size. Both in the quality of the program and in the show, LaTena's circus proved a genuine credit to the show business as a whole.

"From the opening parade to the final number there was not a dull moment for somewhere, either in the ring, on the stage or within the big steel animal arena, an act worthy of notice was in progress. A feature that proved well worth the price of admission alone was provided by Wesley's seals, an aggregation of trained animals that would be hard to equal anywhere. They play ball, play in a band and one old fellow actually succeeds in walking a tight rope unaided. In vaudeville, Wesley's seals would be termed a big time act, as a circus attraction the number has few equals.

"Other animal acts worthy of more than passing notice were Walter Allen and his performing elephants, Buckman's bears and last, but by no means least, Marguerite's lions. A fancy riding act, featuring a tango on horseback savored of the Barnum and Bailey show and was done with grace and ability by two clever equestrian performers. The program also included a very clever troupe of wire walkers who did many novel tricks and a gifted family of contortionists besides a number of aerial performers of merit. Trained dogs, a small army of clowns and a host of other attractions added the necessary variety and all in all it was a fine entertainment.

Will be in Quincy Monday, Aug. 3.

MAY AWARD CONTRACT.

An important meeting of the directors of the Sachem club was held Monday evening at which time the plans of the new clubhouse were gone over, as well as the several bids submitted for the erection of the building. ARRESTED FOR STEALING RIDE

Quartette Had Travelled by Side-Door Pullmans

Four young fellows begrimmed with dust from riding on "side door pullmans" were taken into custody in Weymouth Monday night by the police of that town and committed to the lockup.

They gave their names as John F. Fidler, 20, of New Bedford; John E. Smith, 21, New Bedford; William Murphy, 22, of Fall River and Amadee Baillargeon, 16 of Fall River.

They told the police they had travelled from Fall River to Brockton by stealing rides on freights, and that they reached Braintree the same way but had walked to Weymouth.

Fidler, when arrested had a marriage intention in his possession bearing the name of Eliza Bailey of 3 Abbot street, New Bedford, as the prospective bride. His address was given as 459 South Orchard street. With the intention was also an unsigned slip usually used to show the consent of parents to the marriage of juveniles. Neither papers were signed by any official of New Bedford, and the police believe the blank intention and slip were secured and filled in by the boys.

The boy who gave his name as William Murphy admitted this morning he was Michael Shea of Fall River, who is now on parole from the Lyman School for boys.

Baillargeon, the juvenile of the crew, will be sent back today to his parents. He said he regretted his arrest as he wanted to reach Boston where he intended to either get employment or ship before the mast. He said he was a steeplejack by trade. The three adults were sent to the State Farm by Judge Avery.

VOLUNTEERS FOR IRELAND

The members of Quincy branch, No. 61, United Irish League, the oldest organization of its kind existing in the United States, met Monday evening and informally discussed the situations that envelope the Home bill, and if the plans of some of the members are carried out steps will be taken without delay to form the young Irish-Americans into volunteers to act in behalf of its rights.

To them the question is "shall Ireland be ruled by a people that constitute but one fifth of its population?" A strong negative goes with the query.

The branch organized in the dim past has had enrolled prominent Massachusetts men, since deceased, whose very love for the Emerald Isle prompted them to contribute the greater part of their fortunes, and it was thought that when the Home Rule victory was gained that the branch could retire from its conflict of years and become a social organization.

The developments of the last few hours however have materialy changed the situation and the deaths of four persons and the wounding of 60 others, all unarmed, is considered one of the most serious errors ever made by England.

The city is filled with young Irish-Americans whose patriotism has not yet been challeneged, and the members feel that in calling for volunteers these boys will hearken to the call. A similar movement is about to be started throughout the country and in Philadelphia, Pa., the first steps have already been taken and a uniform regiment is drilling.

DISTRICT COURT.

James F. Duffy of Weymouth was fined $30 on two complaints for drunkenness at Weymouth.

Patrick Mitchell, Patrick Mallow and Eugene A. O'Connor were fined $15 each for drunkenness at Quincy.

John Fiddler, John E. Smith and William Murphy were sent to the state farm for being tramps at Weymouth.

Isador Wolfe, Maroon Boosder and William Wolfe were arariged for disturbing the peace at Quincy. Cases continued until Aug. 5.

The continued case of August Carlson for creating a distubrance on the street cars at Weymouth was called and he was fined $15.

Mrs. Michael Monahan and daughter Agnes of Crescent street, and Miss Margaret Burke of Common street, are today expected home from Maine where they spent their vacations.

NEWSY BRIEFS

The last week of July.

Plenty of rain of late.

J. J. McAnarney is spending a few days on the Cape.

Richard Williams of the Central fire station and family are taking a rest a Charlottown, P. E. I.

John Deasey, whose interest in police happenings earned him the title of "inspector," returned to his duties at a Boston store Monday after a two weeks' vacation.

Capt. George, owner of the Edith took a party of 15 members of the Medford Boat Club, with ladies, on a water trip to Nantasket, Sunday, and on the return brought them up the Fore river for a view of the shipyard.

According to all predictions the month of August is to be a record breaker as to heat. People who have been sighing for the lack of hot weather will have plenty of it next month.

Miss Charlotte Sweeney of 72 Phipps street, Quincy, who has been buying the ladies and misses suits in Kansas City, Mo., has accepted the buyership of the misses suits, coats and dresses with Magrance-Houston Co. of Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. Clair L. Baker left Wollaston Sunday for El Paso, where the Mexico City Smelting Co. has established headquarters until it is safe to return to Mexico City. Mr. Baker is the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Baker of Wollaston, and was recently married.

The temperature at noon today is the coldest since early in the month, or to speak exactly the coolest day at noon since July 3. On that day the noon temperature was 63 degrees and today at noon it was but 67 degrees. Quite a welcome change from some of the hot muggy weather experienced a week ago.

William Carey who has been the guest of Mayor "Jim" Burke of Provincetown for several days, reached this city Monday after a pleasant stay. Mr. Carey met many former employees of the Fore River shipyard at Provincetown, the home port of boats on which they are employed as engineers.

Rear-Commodore Charles W. Laing of the Quincy Yacht Club left the clubhouse this morning in his power boat Micmac for a cruise along the north shore. On board the Micmac were Mr. and Mrs. Alf Swenson of Wollaston, Miss Elizabeth Laing, Miss Annie L. Laing, Miss Catherine Yule, Miss Grace A. Laing and Lawrence Ford.

Removing Fruit Stains.

Fruit stains are now in order, and two expert housekeepers have come forward with suggested remedies not generally known and yet labor saving. The first is pure glycerin. The stain is to be moistened with it before the article stained is sent to the laundry. It is claimed to be quite effectual, and 20 cents' worth of glycerin ought to last a year.

The other remedy is spirits of camphor, applied as soon as possible or before the stain is wet with water or sent to the laundry.

Snap Fasteners For Neckwear.

The fashionable high standing collars and ruches may be made removable. Instead of sewing the ruch or collar into the neck of the dress sew snaps every two or three inches along the facing of the neckpiece and the corresponding parts at equal distances on the neck of the dress. In this way a neckpiece may be quickly transferred to another dress or taken off when a dress is hung in the wardrobe or packed in a suit case.

FABRICS FOR EVENING.

Charming evening frocks are made altogether of net, dull rose or dull blue.

Gray and white craquele mesh lace is used with bright colored taffeta for evening gowns.

White net frocks are best for hot weather dress occasions.

Heavier textured satins are coming in for evening wear.

May Be Some Truth in This.

"There was a time in my romantic young life when I believed there was such a thing as a broken heart," commented Cordelia Killjoy, "but nowadays I think it is often mistaken for what is really a cracked head.'

☞Subscribers who are going out of town for a vacation can have the Daily Ledger sent to them by mail without extra charge. In notifying the office give both the old and the new address.

NOTICE

Dr. Edwin E. Davis will be at his office 34 Chestnut street, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays as usual from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. and evenings by appointment. 16-tf

QUINCY BUILT SHIPS AT CANAL

Will Assist in Opening Ceremonies at Cape Cod

It has been often said that nothing big ever happens but what Quincy figures in it in some way. It will not be surprising therefore when it is announced that Quincy will have a part in the opening exercises of the Cape Cod canal tomorrow. The part the city will play will be by the passage through the canal of three of Uncle Sam's fighting ships that were built in Quincy at the Fore River plant. Among the naval vessels ordered to the canal to participate in the ceremonies are the torpedo boat destroyers Perkins, Sterret and Walke, which are a part of the Atlantic reserve torpedo flotilla.

CONTROVERSY OVER CARTOON

The Board of Health is the target of the latest cartoon placed on view in the window of Edward Powers the candidate for mayor on the Independent ticket, and this morning it was the cause of a serious controversy between himself and a foreman of that department.

The purpose of the cartoon, says Mr. Powers is to bring a stop to foremen doing police duty and spending the greater part of the morning in court at the expense of the department.

The centre of the card bears this pledge—"I'll see that there will be teams to cart away the rubbish, and no man will hold more than one job," and on the right side of the card is a portrait of the candidate with his arm full length and pointing in its direction.

This drew the attention of William Taylor, foreman of the Board of Board of Health and a special police officer. He left the auto to read small lettering in the corner and saw it contained a recommendation to have civil service police do duty.

As Mr. Powers tells it, Mr. Taylor stepped to his open door and said he was a civil service man. "I know it," retorted the candidate, "but I take exceptions to your spending the entire morning in court to prosecute your case."

"When," asked Mr. Taylor. "Oh, answered Mr. Powers, I have not the date handy, but I have in mind a certain day when you were in court until 11 o'clock in the morning."

Mr. Powers said Mr. Taylor then spoiled a political argument by walking to his machine and driving off.

The cartoons in the interest of Mr. Powers that are displayed throughout the city have been the centre of many discussions, but it is said that they are being destroyed by men interested in the candidacy of other men.

Mr. Powers learned today that a valuable placard had been destroyed by a man furthering the interests of a defeated candidate, and says that unless the damage is amended serious difficulties may develop.

CARRIERS FLY FROM PLYMOUTH

Two baby carrier pigeons, three months old, piloted by a full grown bird who knew the course, have negotiated the distance from Plymouth to this city, over 35 miles, without a mishap.

The birds, the property of John Minihan, the West Quincy fireman, were released Sunday afternoon and reached home this morning. It is thought that they may have flown all night.

The older bird made the flight from Plymouth several times last summer in a few hours time. The delay in arriving this trip was probably due to the fact that she waited for the babies here and there.

In view of the age of the birds the flight is considered remarkable and pigeon fanciers who saw them this morning say they withstood the test well.

Mr. Minihan became interested in pigeons two summers ago and after much difficulty succeeded in breeding a real carrier pigeon. He devotes his spare time to birds and is contemplating entering them in the national races this fall.

WATER RECEIPTS LARGE BY COMPARISON

Seven Bigger Cities Have Smaller Revenue from Water than the City of Quincy

Somehow Chelsea's Receipts are $7,000 Larger

After all, Quincy does not make a bad showing in water receipts when a comparison is made with other cities of Massachusetts.

For the year ending Dec. 31, 1911, the water receipts of Quincy were $128,466, about $4 per capita on the census population of 1910.

In the summary below are included all the cities with a population of less than 80,000 and over 15,000, and also the town of Brookline. The water receipts are official figures from the annual report of the Bureau of Statistics just issued by Director Gettemy.

Only one smaller city had larger water receipts than Quincy, the city of Chelsea with $135,201. In fact only three of the ten larger cities in the list had larger water receipts than Quincy, viz Newton which has 7,000 more people, and Holyoke and Somerville which have about twice the population.

The population and water receipts were:

	Population	Water
Somerville	77,236	$237,673
Holyoke	57,730	129,296
Brockton	56,878	125,025
Malden	44,404	97,326
Haverhill	44,115	112,160
Salem	43,697	112,985
Newton	39,806	161,012
Fitchburg	37,826	92,719
Taunton	34,259	84,719
Everett	33,484	110,288
QUINCY	32,642	128,466
Chelsea	32,452	135,201
Pittsfield	32,121	103,149
Waltham	27,834	95,834
Chicopee	25,401	61,472
Gloucester	24,398	112,596
Medford	23,150	72,774
North Adams	22,019	60,126
Northampton	19,431	55,122
Beverly	18,650	70,565
Melrose	15,715	43,081
Woburn	15,308	51,185
Brookline	27,792	104,321

Malden which has often been quoted for small consumption of water because of meters, receives a revenue of only $97,326, a little over $2 per capita.

The water revenue of Brockton, Malden, Haverhill, Salem, Fitchburg, Taunton and Everett are all less than Quincy. Some of these cities are in the Metropolitan water district while others have independent supplies.

Since the year 1911 the water rates of Quincy have been reduced for dwellings, and the receipts have dropped off a little, the totals by years being:

Year.	Receipts.
In 1910,	$115,766.57
In 1911	128,466.48
In 1912,	125,655.29
In 1913,	122,036.44

RIVADAVIA DATE FIXED

Will Be Delivered at Boston on August 23

The last work in connection with the superdreadnought Rivadavia is nearing completion, and providing no further accidents occur that will occasion a delay the ship will be turned over to the Latin republic representatives in Boston Harbor on Aug. 23.

The men to man the ship are now on their way and the transports, with 1000 men aboard, should reach Quincy early in August. Already artillery men are here studying the mechanism of the guns, and the Argentine commission members who have superintended the construction of this wonderful fighting machine are making their final examination of the boat's equipment which will be in their charge.

The official transfer, to take place with appropriate ceremonies, will be followed by a run to New York where the ship's bottom will be scraped, after which she will have her last 24 hour endurance run with an Argentine crew aboard and officers of that country in command as required in the contract. The ship will then leave for a trip up the Rio de la Plata river in Argentine.

The Pampo, one of the transports now heading for Boston will after the debarkation of its crew, cross to European ports where supplies and coal will be taken on for its return to Argentine. The Chaco, the other transport will load here, her principal cargo being ammunition, which will be delivered at the Buenos Aires magazine.

The ships it is expected will be back at the home port in time to carry the men of the Moreno, sister ship of the Rivadavia, to the New York Shipbuilding Co. where it is under construction.

As soon as the repairs to the engine room of the Quincy built boat have been finished, the supplies will be placed aboard and thousands of pounds of ammunition will be shipped to Quincy to be placed in the magazines of the Rivadavia. The greater part of it has been manufactured and is awaiting shipping orders. Special precautions will be taken during the loading of the ship and no one will be allowed inside a naval line unless special permission has been given by the Commission members.

SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED

One for Quincy Young Man at Institute of Technology

The State Board of Education announced on Tuesday the award of scholarships in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the Worcester Polytechnic Institute for the academic year. Under the law passed by the legislature in 1908 and 1912 the State Board of Education each year awards eighty half scholarships in the Worcester Polytechnic, Institute, two in each Senatorial district and two full scholarships in the Institute of Technology in each senatorial district. In some districts there were several candidates for Technology who fulfilled the requirements and in these cases the board awarded two half scholarships instead of one full scholarship. In districts which failed to present applicants the scholarship alloted to that district was awarded to a boy from some other district.

From the First Norfolk district the Technology scholarships were awarded to Nathaniel Warshaw of Quincy and Roscoe G Dickinson of Hyde Park and for the Worcester Polytechnic institute in the first Norfolk district to Warren B. Burgess of Hyde Park and Harold A. Maxwell of Lowell.

FOY'S MEN ON ANNUAL OUTING

Ball Game Between Two Stores a Big Feature

The employees at the Adams market and Water street market of R. E. Foy & Co. are holding their annual outing today at Glen Echo park and a good time is assured the party. In order that all the time possible might be had the stores which usually close at 1 o'clock on Wednesdays, closed at 11 o'clock today and a few minutes later the employees were aboard a special car bound for the park. Lunch was served immediately on the arrival at the park and a band and orchestra enlivened the occasion. This afternoon a program of sports was arranged, not the least interesting of which was a game of ball between the Adams market and Water street store clerks, which will be fully reported in the Daily Ledger tomorrow.

A number of prizes have been donated the clerks, by wholesale houses, as prizes for the sporting events, not the least of which is a handsome frosted cake by the Drake Co. The sporting events will take place immediately after lunch, the first being a game of ball between the Water street store and Adams market. The two teams will line up as follows:

ADAMS MARKET.

Each team will be allowed fifteen minutes in which to limber up.

The field sports will follow the ball game. For these Robert E. Foy is the honorary starter and L. Tinney the active starter. The judges are Carl J. Johnson and E. T. Messier. The several events are as follows:

100-yard dash for males.
100-yard dash for ladies.
Fat mans race, for all over 185 pounds.
50-yard dash for boys.

One-half mile running race.

There will also be a series of water sports, and suitable prizes will be awarded in each event.

In the evening at 7.30 the picnickers will assemble at the dance hall and the band will play all the popular airs, and all are expected to join in the chorus, for a good get-together-time.

Messrs Foy and the committee have but one injunction to impose and that is, "Come prepared to make a noise. Don't be a dead one."

The general committee in charge of the outing are L. Tinney, Frank Foy and L. A. Hurley.

CANNOT HOLD TWO OFFICES.

The Supreme court has decided that a man cannot hold two offices and draw two salaries in Brockton. The case in question is that of James F. Powers who holds the office of "Superintendent of outdoor work" and at the same time a position under the Highway Commission. The petition was brought before Judge Hammond by Mayor Howard who sought to have determined the right Powers had to hold the two offices. The court rules that Powers is holding the office of "Superintendent of outdoor work" illegally.

OPENING TODAY OF CAPE COD CANAL

Steamer Rose Standish Safely Navigated the New Canal on Tuesday

Sandwich Is Also Celebrating 275th Anniversary

Today is a gala one at Cape Cod, for two celebrations are in progress. The first and foremost of these is the formal opening of the Cape Cod canal. Second and fully as important to many, is the celebration of the 275th anniversary of the foundation of Sandwich and its old-home day.

There are many in Quincy who claim the Cape as their birthplace and they will be numbered with the many thousands who are present today. Sandwich is alive with returning sons and daughters and every building in the main part of the town is decorated with flags and bunting of the national colors.

Quite a number of Quincy people, who own automobiles made the trip to the Cape over the road this morning, leaving Quincy in the vicinity of 8 o'clock which gave them ample time barring accidents, to arrive in season to see the fleet pass through the canal. Ample parking places were provided along the banks of the canal for automobiles.

NOTABLE GUESTS.

Sandwich, Mass., July 29.—The new Cape Cod canal, by which coastwise vessels will be spared the many dangers of the trip around Cape Cod, was formally opened today. The canal will cause a very material reduction in the time of transit from Boston to points south and is epoch-making in the aid it will provide in making coastwise trade safe.

A large number of guests, including Governor Walsh of Massachusetts and Governor Glynn of New York, inspected the completed work. A half hour later the fleet which participated in the exercises in connection with the opening left New Bedford for the trip through the canal.

The fleet included a boat which carried Franklin Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, and a torpedo boat destroyer, having on board Rear Admiral Knight, commander of the United States naval station at Newport. A large excursion steamer afforded accommodations for about 800 guests. A large number of private yachts also attended the ceremonies.

On the arrival back at Buzzards Bay the guests were landed for the official ceremonies connected with the opening. In the harbor were several warships. Seth Low, president of the chamber of commerce of New York, presided, and the other speakers were President Coolidge of the Boston chamber of commerce, August Belmont and William B. Parsons, the engineer. Governors Glynn and Walsh had something to say also.

There were a great many people gathered along the route, especially at Sandwich, where there is an observance of the town's 275th anniversary, Old Home day and the opening of the canal combined.

The canal was built by the Cape Cod Construction company, of which August Belmont is president. It is eight miles long, 250 feet wide at the surface and 100 feet at the bottom and 25 feet deep at low water. The tide saves it from the complication and expense of a system of locks.

It will save the commerce plying between New England ports and the south a distance of seventy miles. It will avoid the fogs which hover around the end of the cape and the dangerous shoals that the vessels which round the cape must encounter. It will also avoid the still more dangerous storms which have destroyed so many hundreds of lives and wrecked so many hundreds of vessels.

VAUGHN CASE NEXT WEEK

The appeal from the finding of Overseer of the Poor Perry Green, who upheld the action of administration in its removal of William Vaughn as warden of the almshouse, will be heard before Judge Avery in the District court next Wednesday.

Mr. Green, who preferred the charges which brought about the removal, was obligated by law to preside at the public hearing granted Mr. Vaughn and could not testify. Because of sensational testimony introduced by the defense Mr. Green may take the stand to refute it.

The hearing required three days and nearly 20 witnesses were examined. Over 150 pages of typewritten testimony, as taken by Miss Mildred Houston, the court stenographer, is practically ready.

Judge Avery will review the evidence and determine whether or not the charges were made in good faith.

CANDIDACY NOT ANNOUNCED

Walter E. Piper May Not Run For Representative

Ex-Representative Walter E. Piper denied emphatically this morning that he had announced his candidacy for the nomination of Representative from the Fifth district. The statement published he said was without his knowledge or authority, and that when he decided to run he would let the public know. Mr. Piper did not say what the prospects were of his becoming a candidate.

UNLICENSED DOGS.

Chief Burrill has reappointed David Gordon of South Quincy as special officer to kill unlicensed dogs. Mr. Gordon has served in this capacity for several years but in 1913 made a record which it will be hard to surpass.

Over 125 dogs were killed last year because owners did not comply with the law. The difficulty in determining whether or not a dog has a right to live was overcome when City Clerk Crane two years ago introduced a system of tags to be attached to the collar of licensed dogs. These are issued when the license is paid and any dog wandering about without it can be shot.

Last year in Quincy there were 1095 male and spayed registered dogs, 155 females and four kennels. The amount derived from licenses and paid to the county treasurer was $2,814.20. Of this amount $250.80 was allowed the city for its efforts in keeping track of the animals or twenty cents a head.

The money paid to the county treasurer is, under a recent agreement, turned over to the Board of Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library, after damages done by dogs are paid. The damage last year will be somewhat in excess of previous years because several mad dogs on rampages bit cows throughout the city and caused their death.

To attract the crowd to a summer hotel, good food and comfortable beds are not as necessary as a lot of stylishly dressed people to sit out on the front piazza.

It would be interesting to learn whether the water rates of Chelsea are higher or lower than in Quincy. The population of Quincy is a little larger but the water revenue of Chelsea is $6,735 larger. Both cities are in the Metropolitan water district.

INFORMATION OF VALUE.

It is an old saying, that a man is not always appreciated in his home town. It is doubtless the same with a newspaper, no matter how hard it may labor for the uplift of the city. Once in a while we get praise from an unexpected quarter. Here is a letter written by a St. Louis. man who was in Quincy last week.

It would seem that he purchased a copy of last Friday's Daily Ledger. On Saturday, after he reached Boston, he write as follows:

Copley Square Hotel,
July 25, 1914

Dear Ledger:—

A visitor wishes to thank you for the admirable editorial, July 24, captioned "Some facts about Quincy." Such information is particularly serviceable to tourists. But the editorial merits of your columns do not stop at this one. "Less outside study" and "Reading the murder stories" are timely and good sound counsel to the public. That "Dope fiend" item ought to open the eyes of these unfortunates. The entire second page is also commendable, to make no further note of the merits of your excellent paper."

FIRE PROTECTION TO HOTELS.

A guest at a popular mountain hotel this summer was the subject of a good deal of amusement, when the fact leaked out that he kept in his trunk a knotted rope for safe exit from his room in case of fire. Guests off for an outing are often at a loss for things to talk about. This provided amusements to the gossips for several days.

Considering the kind of protection against fire furnished by many popular summer hotels, the man who fortifies himself with a rope in their upper stories really shows some sense. Perhaps the laugh is on the rest of the people, who venture into all kinds of lofty accommodations with poor fire escapes or none at all.

The average summer hotel is a flimsy affair. It is up against the proposition of making dividends in two months when money is lying idle the other ten. But no such excuse for lack of proper equipment exists in the case of city hotels that run the year around.

The average number of hotel fires in the United States is shown by the latest insurance statistics to be about 50 per month. A great many of these fires are accompanied with loss of life.

When a countryman used to go on his travels, he was very apt to object to being placed above the third floor. Such caution is regarded now as a sign of rustic habits. Yet the insurance authority that prepared the statistics quoted above says that 99 per cent of the hotels have unsafe features in their construction. The countryman may show some judgment after all.

The public usually gets what it demands. Many people want luxury in a hotel, large rooms, handsome rugs, lavish supplies, many times as much as they can eat on the tables. As long as the travelling public demands that kind of service, the landlords will be apt to economize on the number and security of their fire escapes, concerning which few people make inquiry.

THE FREEDOM OF TRAVEL.

Any man who makes a study of the newspaper personal columns during the summer must feel that the American people are doing an enormous amount of travelling.

It is not merely that the millionaires are on the go, fitting hither and yon to kill ennui, anxious to be somewhere where they are not. Even the little country town shows that simple hearted people of very moderate means are visiting here and there and taking long journeys.

The type of person who used to stick closely at home year after year has almost disappeared. A generation ago it was common to see old timers who boasted that they had not slept outside their own houses for 10, 20, or 30 years. The inertia that settled over them was appalling. It seemed an unsettling and revolutionary effort for them to pack a little grip and go over to the next town to spend a week-end with a relative.

Of all the modern ways of spending money on things not strictly necessities, travelling probably brings the largest returns of intelligence. Narrowness is a result of hearing only one point of view. The moment a fellow stirs around and gets into another state and another section, he begins to see that his home folks are not the only guardians of wisdom. He learns that there are other points of view and some of them are good ones.

The benefits derived from travel differ greatly. Some people on their return can talk of little save of the food they got at the hotels and the comfort or discomfort provided by the railroads. To others every tree in the fields, every building, every person met, suggests subtile and interesting differences from the scenery, the manners, and the customs of the home environment. Such persons also get a great many good business suggestions. The farmer finds an object lesson in every field, and the merchant a selling idea in every street.

WELL SETTLED.

Now that the matter has definitely been settled, it is worth while to refer to the half a dozen or more movements that were recently proposed, in different parts of the commonwealth, to allow baseball games on the Sabbath for the purpose of aiding the Salem fire sufferers. Whatever may be said of the good intentions of those elements whose members first raised the issue, as well as of the people who followed up the idea by like appeal, the plain English of the case is that it was proposed to nullify law in the name of charity.

Of the worthiness of that bounty which it was specifically proposed to aid, we need not dilate. That is everywhere conceded, while from far and near private offerings have combined with state and national bounty in tangible sympathy, for which Salem will ever remain grateful.

Looking back upon the appeals, it is easy to see and appreciate that if the law had in any instance been winked at, or if there had been a straining of provisions on the reasoning that the ends justified the means, a sorry state of affairs would have been established. From that time on the precedent would have continually been invoked. Indeed, there is warrant for the statement that from pointing to a great calamity as justification for ignoring a plain law, appeals for nullification would have been pressed in matters of far less moment. In that event, who shall say that the story of the Arab and his camel would not have been repeated?

The legislature has acted with circumspection in reference to the prohibition of Sunday sports. On every occasion on which modifications have been sought, unusual interest has been manifested at the committee hearings. Invariably, remonstrances in this quarter have been loud and impressive. Legislators have been keen enough to realize the force of the aroused public sentiment back of these protests to make prohibition of Sunday sports their rule and guide to action.—Salem News.

General European War Hangs on Action of Russia—Conferences With Austrian Ambassador Now Going on at St. Petersburg—Belief That Austrian Campaign Is Well Under Way—Germany Refuses to Tie Ally's Hands In Chastisement of Serbs—Activity Prevails In All the War Offices In Europe

London, July 29.—Austria has formally declared war on Servia and hostilities already have begun. Belgrade, erstwhile capital of the Balkan kingdom, probably has been occupied.

The Austro-Hungarian government declared war against Servia by a manifesto which is one of the briefest of momentous documents in history. The text is as follows:

"The royal government of Servia not having replied in a satisfactory manner to the note remitted to it by the Austro-Hungarian minister in Belgrade on July 23, 1914, the imperial and royal government finds itself compelled to proceed itself to safeguard its rights and interests and to have recourse for this purpose to force of arms.

"Austria-Hungary considers itself, therefore, from this moment in a state of war with Servia."

Much Depends Upon Russia

The centre of interest has shifted sharply to St. Petersburg, which holds the decision whether a European war, which probably would shift the balance of power, if not rearrange the entire map of Europe, is to break out. Negotiations are afoot there between the Russian foreign minister, Sergius Sazonoff, and the Austrian ambassador, which are designed to "localize" the conflict.

The nature and progress of these conversations are wrapped in the thickest mystery, but they are the last plank the neutral powers are clinging to in face of a storm which may wash all under.

There is no doubt in British minds that Austria had fully resolved to utilize the provocation afforded by the Sarayevo murders to wipe the slate clean of all accounts against Servia, and served an ultimatum on her which was designed to have no result save war.

The next news expected is the occupation of Belgrade, and that even now may be an accomplished fact. Reports of small encounters along the frontier have been permitted to pass the censor, but military experts believe that mobilization has already been affected and that a thoroughly planned campaign is well under way.

There is absolutely no enthusiasm in England for war—no desire for this particular war which confronts Great Britain; yet there is a general belief that her obligations to her partners in the triple entente, as well as her interests as a great European power, will force her to support Russia and France in any steps they may take.

Conference Plan Rejected

Official notification of the beginning of war was made immediately after Germany and Austria had rejected Great Britain's invitation to a conference in London for the purpose of arriving at some plan of mediation.

In notes addressed to Sir Edward Grey, the two governments left the way open for further negotiations between the powers looking toward localization of the war. Austria refused to submit to an ambassadorial conference, however, demanding that Servia punish all accomplices in the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand, suppress the Pan-Servian societies and permit Austrian officers to enter Servian territory and try persons suspected of being connected with the assassination conspiracy.

This stand taken by Austria tied the hands of Germany. Though the kaiser accepted in principle the plan of the British foreign minister, it was pointed out unofficially before the formal reply was made that Germany could not approve any mediation plan without the consent of Austria, her ally.

Cannot Dictate to Ally

Germany indicated that she approved in a general way the plan advanced by Grey, but declared it was impossible for her to dictate to her ally in respect to her dealings with Servia.

Austria was determined that Servia should accede to all demands made in the ultimatum delivered last week, or take the consequences of war.

Servia took the position that she had gone as far as possible in the reply made to the Austrian note. Russia has stated unofficially that an invasion of Servia could not be countenanced and the chief efforts of the powers will now be directed toward gaining positive assurances from the czar that the Russian government will keep hands off.

Germany favors localizing the war between Servia and Austria. Troops are on the move, however, and the first overt act on the part of the czar's government will be followed by general mobilization orders from Berlin.

War was declared even while Grey and British ambassadors in various capitals were still endeavoring to arrange negotiations for peace.

Austria's Drastic Action

The Austrian government has taken over all telegraph and telephone lines. Information was first received in Berlin by telephone in the form of a bare official announcement, which was all that the censor would permit to go through.

The basis on which Austria hung her decision to make war on Servia was the reply sent by the Balkan state to the note from Vienna demanding that she take steps to put a stop to the Pan-Servian propaganda in Austria and also punish Servians indirectly concerned in the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand. The response of Servia was considered "unsatisfactory" and "filled with the spirit of dishonesty."

Peaceful Solution Sought

In the meantime, Sir Edward Grey requested the European powers to confer with a view to a peaceful solution. Italy and France at once consented, but Germany and Austria refused. Austria and Servia mobilized their forces. The garrison of Belgrade, the capital, as the chief city of Servia, occupied a vulnerable position.

Every war office and admiralty in Europe is occupied in preparations for eventualities, even the smaller countries, such as Holland, Belgium and Switzerland, taking precautionary measures. England's battle squadrons have all been mobilized and the publication of official news as to the movements of the fleet has ceased.

The first and second battle squadrons have taken on their full war stores and are ready to slip their anchors at a moment's notice, while the destroyer flotillas around the coast also have been prepared and armed guards were placed around all the magazines and oil depots. The German and Italian navies also have been ordered to concentrate.

"WILL CRUSH AUSTRIA"

King Peter Declares That Servia Is Ready For the Combat

Kraguyevatz, Servia, July 29.—"We will crush Austria."

With these words King Peter of Servia proclaimed himself and his country ready for combat and set at rest rumors that he was urging Prince Alexander, who has served as regent for a few weeks, to yield to Austria without giving battle.

"By calling up all the reserves," said King Peter, "we shall be able to put half a million men in the field. Every man is resolved to perish in the last ditch rather than allow their country, which has just risen after 500 years of oppression, to be crushed.

"My Serbs are equal to a million Czechs, Hungarians, Germans, Croatians, Ruthenians and Slavonians who form the Austrian army. Everything divides the Austrian army, which will not fight for a single ideal as we shall. Our mountain-trained fighters form the most formidable legion in the world."

Stock Markets Demoralized

New York, July 29.—Expectation of war between Austria-Hungary and Servia and its subsequent declaration demoralized the markets of the world.

War was not declared until after the bourses of Europe had closed, but in London, Berlin and Paris panicky conditions and severe declines in securities anticipated the announcement. At all three capitals, bonds of the governments in Europe, which have been steadily dropping, registered further losses.

In Vienna, the bourses had been closed since Saturday, but there was a heavy run on the Austrian savings banks, the most important in the dual monarchy.

News of the declaration reached this country while markets were in session. With it came an avalanche of foreign selling on the New York stock exchange. Leading securities slumped from five to twenty points and conditions paralleled in their intensity the domestic panic of 1907.

The stock exchanges of Montreal and Toronto suspended their sessions.

On the Chicago board of trade there was a tremendous rise in wheat and the wildest trading in many years. This was precipitated on the expectation that war in Europe would create a demand for our grain. Other foodstuffs also advanced. These conditions were reflected in all the produce markets of the country.

In the event of a bloody conflict between Austria and Servia it now seems impossible to prevent complications between France, Germany, Russia, Italy and other European countries. These are the latest pictures of the Russian czar (top) and the kaiser (below).

A STARTLING CONFESSION

Police Sent Innocent Man to Prison to Cover Their Own Robberies

Rockville Centre, L. I., July 29.—Adding further details to their remarkable stories of the robbery of homes and business houses while acting as policemen, two of the men now under arrest told of the sending to prison of an innocent man.

Village President Bulson and several of the trustees were in conference for three hours while they listened to the story of Oscar Peterson, the first policeman to be accused. Later Bulson said Peterson had given all the details of how an innocent man was sent to prison to cover a robbery by the policemen.

"This man, according to Peterson's statement to us," said Bulson, "was not only arrested by them and charged with burglary, but they testified against him in court, and he was sentenced to a long term in Sing Sing prison. His only defense was that he was intoxicated and did not know what he was doing."

BRYAN WOULD CHECK ACTIVITY OF VILLA

Asks Carranza to Call a Halt Upon Northern General

Washington, July 29.—Secretary Bryan appealed to General Carranza to call a halt upon Villa, who is reported to be making wholesale demands for horses upon ranch owners in the state of Chihuahua.

Consular advices to the state department also declared Villa was smuggling arms across the border as rapidly as they were available. There was no doubt in the minds of the people of Chihuahua as to the meaning of Villa's activity, the dispatch to the department added.

Recent reports from the border have intimated that Villa intended to concentrate his forces in Chihuahua with the aim of demanding certain concessions from Carranza after the constitutionalists occupy Mexico City.

Arrest of Three Men Wanted In Bay State For Murder

Worcester, Mass., July 29.—Word was received at Worcester police headquarters from Wilmington, Del., that Carmino Roberts and the two Perrelli brothers, Antonio and Gregory, who have been sought since Antonio Gisto was murdered, July 4, in Auburn, a suburb of this city, have been captured and have confessed their guilt.

The prisoners will be brought back to Worcester for trial as soon as the necessary extradition papers are made out.

BLAME ON MRS. ANGLE

Coroner Holds Her Responsible For Death of Ballou

Bridgeport, Conn., July 29.—"Waldo Ballou came to his death as the result of the criminal action of Mrs. Helen Angle."

Summarized, this is the finding announced by Coroner Phelan in the mysterious death of the prominent Stamford business man and politician.

Phelan's report told of the finding of bloodstains in Mrs. Angle's apartment, in front of which the body of Ballou was found in a pool of blood.

VACATION SUGGESTIONS for the SEASHORE

OVER 20,000,000 persons in America enjoy vacations annually. This means that practically everybody who can afford it take a summer outing for health and recreation.

Fifty years ago nobody did.

The vacation habit grew out of the old time camp meeting after the civil war and became a fixed custom with the Philadelphia centennial.

We have no right to live only to do business. Rest, different environment and a change from the daily grind of life result in happier healthier people.

TAKE A VACATION!

TO LEARN CRAWL STROKE.

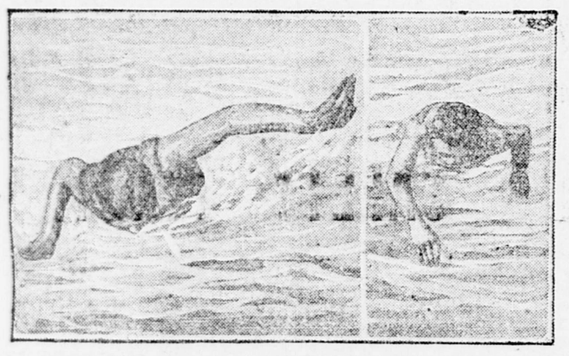

You Are but Half a Swimmer Unless You Know This.

One is but half a swimmer if he has not learned the crawl stroke. The general stroke may be acquired by a land drill. Begin with right foot advanced, knees stiff, leaning forward to imaginary water level; face turned toward left elevated shoulder, with top of head down and mouth up. Move the arms regularly and continuously, after the fashion of a windmill, but more slowly, always maintaining the same relative distance apart. Left arm swings upward and forward, with palm of hand upward. Right wrist bends so as to hook and grip the water. Right arm swings downward and backward.

In the next position the right shoulder is depressed, right elbow up, right thumb down, hands flat, left elbow up, left palm up, little finger in advance. Swing the right arm back, the left forward. In the third position the right shoulder and elbow are elevated, face turned to the upper shoulder. Swing the left arm back, the right forward. On the extreme right the right arm relaxes and springs forward. Left arm moves back.

In the cut the swimmer is shown in the water. Note how the water is gripped by the strongly curved right wrist edgewise, like the blade of an oar. The left hand has just left the water with a vigorous jerk. In the next position breathe out through the nose under the water, working the arms like a double bladed paddle in the hands of a canoeist. When the left arm has finished its stroke and is swinging forward the right arm has begun its stroke and is swinging backward. Note that the palm is up.

There is no system of motion so powerful for correcting round shoulders as the crawl stroke. This is because the crawl is chiefly deep breathing and shoulder action.

TWO POSITIONS IN THE FAMOUS CRAWL STROKE.

BIRDSEYE VACATION VIEW.

How the People of the United States Play In Summer Time.

Among the agricultural population, after haying and reaping the early grain, there is a lull in the press of farm work, which gives time for the August excursion to the seashore. The dwellers in the seashore cities take their vacations on the farms and the mountains of the back country.

The people of the south move to their own springs in the Alleghenies and to the seaside resorts of New Jersey and New England. The great lakes furnish resting spots for the middle west, and the farther west has its cool summer dwelling places in the Rocky mountains and their foothills. This annual summer transfer of millions of people is a strong factor in welding together the different sections of the United States

USING THE SHOTGUN.

Proper Way to Pull Trigger Is First Essential.

An axiom of shotgun shooting is that the arm is never to be held still upon anything—in this differing radically from the rifle. The trigger should be pressed, therefore, without checking the regular rising movement of the barrels, the pulling and upward movement of the sight being so well timed that the discharge will take place just before the center is covered.

Press the trigger, not by any conscious crooking of the forefinger, but by tightening the grip of both hands the one pushing forward and the other drawing back. This is not only the right manner of pulling trigger on a shotgun, but tightening the grip of the hands enables the gunner to catch the recoil just as the blow of a fist is warded off before it gathers momentum.

LET THE FROG TEACH YOU.

Learn to Swim by Not Trying to Keep Head Out of Water.

The frog, a champion swimmer, the model of man, has his mouth on top of his head. Man uses the mouth, not the nose, in breathing while swimming. The nose is usually choked with water.

When dogs begin to swim they try to keep their heads away up. When they learn how to swim they keep only the nose above water. So it is with all other animals.

But their heads, being light, do not drag them under, as man's head does him. So they survive to learn better.

The chief effort of every beginner in swimming is to keep his body from the waist up out of water. The higher his head is above it the more he is pleased.

WEEK

No champion could swim very far that way. He would tire and drown.

Man's swimming motions are as natural as any animal's. He can learn to swim in a day if he will only go about it right.

Tennis More Popular Than Ever.

Tennis is more the go this year even than last.

"YOU LOOKED UP TOO SOON."

Here's a Tip For the New Man on the Golf Links.

If the golf player will direct his attention when making his swing upon applying his greatest effort after his club head reaches the ball he will find a tremendous increase in the distance he gets as well as a much smoother finish throughout the swing.

If the player will just try hard to see how long he can keep his club head against the ball he will find that he has no inclination to look up too soon or to apply the power at the wrong time.

You will hear the criticism, "You looked up too soon," more often on the links than any other thing, and this fault can be quickly and positively cured if the player will make this experiment.

FOOD FOR CAMPERS.

Don't Forget to Take Right Kind of Salt Pork.

In these days of canned meats, vegetables and fruits the camper is saved the necessity of carrying bulky supplies. Canned meats, though, do not displace salt pork.

Nothing can take the place of that. It fries the fish and flavors the stew and is good for itself alone. Buy pork that is hard and of a pink color. White lardy looking pork avoid at any price.

Twenty pounds of good pork is little enough for a party of four to use in two weeks under ordinary circumstances.

GROPST UNABLE TO APPEAR

Andrew Gropst, who was stabbed in a fight on Garfield street late Saturday night, was unable to appear in court this morning as a witness against Narta Kinsonen, held in connection with the stabbing, and according to the police his condition is critical.

Gropst was cut on the face. He was taken to the hospital where he was doing well, but this morning septicemia set in and his wound may prove fatal.

Kinsonen was arrested by Patrolman Jeremiah Dineen. The knife alleged to have been used has not yet been found.

Kinsonen was arraigned Monday morning on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon and this morning because of the condition of Gropst the case was again continued until next Wednesday.

NORTHFIELD ACTIVITIES.

The Sunday School and Interdenominational Home Misionary Summer Schools with a combined registration of nearly eleven hundred, held their closing session at Northfield on Saturday. This closes the series of the July summer schools which have been by far the largest and most successful both in attendance and interest ever held. Rev. F. B. Meyer of London continues with his Bible Studies taking for his subject "Lessons for Christian Service from the Book of Judges." A number of the leaders of the Sunday school work remain on for a special workers conference.

The General Conference which opens Aug. 1, bids fair to register a large number due to the list of strong speakers including Dr. F. B. Meyer, B.A., Rev. Charles Brown, Rev. John A. Hutton, M.A., Rev. A. T. Robertson, D.D., Rev. W. Douglas Mackenzie, D.D., Rev. Joseph Kyle, D.D., Rev. John R. Davies, Prof. J. Hope Moulton, Mr. Melvin Trotter, Rev. Geo. T. Berry, Rev. Robert F. Y. Pierce, Rev. John Thomas, Rev. Chas. Inglis and Rev. J. Stuart Holden.

THE WAKEFIELD TRIAL

Woman Accused of Killing Her Husband Denies Charges

New Haven, July 29.—The defense rested in the second trial of Mrs. Bessie J. Wakefield, charged with the murder of her husband, and the state has commenced to make its arguments.

Mrs. Wakefield was the principal witness yesterday. She denied that she had aided James Plew in killing her husband, for which crime Plew was recently hanged. She also denied a number of minor points which the state attempted to prove.

Asked if she had not told Mrs. George Gillette, who lived in the same house with her, that if Wakefield was dead she would have another husband at once, Mrs. Wakefield replied with an emphatic "No."

"I am not at liberty to say what the proposals are," asserted Judge Knapp, a member of the mediation board, "but we hope they will bring peace. The situation, however, still is grave."

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufarturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

YOU CAN'T GO WRONG IN FOLLOWING ADVERTISEMENTS.

SALEM RULES FOR BUILDING

Possibly Salem may be too strct for its own good and check the rebuilding of the ill-fated city.

The rebuilding committee on Tuesday gave out its final decision on details of rebuilding, specifying that all houses for the use of more than two families must have self-supporting walls of fireproof material and fireproof roofs.

Permits were issued to 35 for rebuilding. A delegation of 250 French-speaking people appealed for the right to build "three deckers" of wood but they were refused.

Buildings of every kind must have metal gutters and cornices and have approved cellars. Houses for two families or less may use wooden walls, suitably built to resist fire.

All factories are to be of first or second-class construction, state specification.

RESTORE THE GOVERNMENT.

(Batavia Times.)

No thoughtful student of present day conditions can fail to observe that we are in the presence of a new organization of society. We do not do business in the way in which we used to do it. The individual has been succeeded by great corporations. Small dealers are declining. The great majority of our business men are the employees of great corporations. The man with only a little capital finds it harder and harder to compete with big business corporations. The affairs of government have become most intimately associated with big businesses, and as a result there have grown up vicious schemes of governmental favoritism. Government designed to be an instrumentality to serve the people has fallen into the hands of political bosses and their employers—the special interests. But the powers of invisible government have recently, in state and nation, been distinctly revealed to all, and reforms have been instituted calculated to restore government to the people.

THE SNAP SHOT.

(Dedham Transcript.)

We have recently noticed in the daily papers pictures of individuals or parties where the faces have been hidden by the pulled down hat, the uplifted arm or a garment held before the face to prevent its showing in the photograph. It seems brutally unfair that the morbid curiosity of a certain class of readers should be so catered to by our Metropolitan journals that people of respectability and sensitive feelings should be so treated. Just because a person happens to be a relative or acquaintance of some poor unfortunate, and in the line of duty or a desire to assist goes to a court, hospital or other institution to testify or identify, is that any reason for insult by the curious rabble and a snap shot photograph for display in the daily press? Let our law makers "get busy" and put an end to this practice at once.

INTERESTING AGE.

(Brockton Times.)

No man is interesting until he is 35, says a wordly-wise old woman of 17, in her bridal interview. This will be questioned. But anyway, it gives the youngsters something to look forward to in their puerility.

TO PLAY FOR PURSE OF $25

The Ward Four playground will be the scene of an exciting base ball game Saturday afternoon when the teams of Div. 22 and the Copeland Club play a regular West Quincy league game for a purse of $25.

The purse was proposed by Manager McTiernan of the Hibernians after the latter had defeated St. Mary's leaders of the league, and the Ave Maria council, strong contenders for first place. Manager Richard Barry of the Copelands immediately raised the purse money and deposited it at Berry's pharmacy.

The Hibernians are playing sterling base ball and is the only team that administered a defeat to St. Mary's.

ROOSEVELT TELLS OF QUEER GAME

How Indians In Brazil Play Football With Their Heads.

HANDS KEPT OFF THE BALL

Players Show Marvelous Dexterity, and Their Reckless Disregard of the Chances of Personal Injury Amazes the Uninitiated Onlookers—Colonel Describes Extraordinary Spiders.

[From Colonel Roosevelt's fifth article describing his journey in the Brazilian wilderness in Scribner's Magazine for August, 1914. Copyright, 1914, by Charles Scribner's Sons.]

A unique game of football, played with the head by the Parecis Indians, is one of the unusual things described by the colonel. He writes as follows:

These Parecis Indians enthusiastically play football with their heads. The game is not only native to them, but I have never heard or read of its being played by any other tribe or people. They use a light hollow rubber ball of their own manufacture. It is circular and about eight inches in diameter.

The players are divided into two sides and stationed much as in association football, and the ball is placed on the ground to be put in play as in football. Then a player runs forward, throws himself flat on the ground and butts the ball toward the opposite side.

A Remarkable Performance.

This first butt, when the ball is on the ground, never lifts it much, and it rolls and bounds toward the opponents. One or two of the latter run toward it; one throws himself flat on his face and butts the ball back. Usually this butt lifts it, and it flies back in a curve well up in the air, and an opposite player, rushing toward it, catches it on his head with such a swing of his brawny neck and such precision and address that the ball bounds back through the air as a football soars after a drop kick.

If the ball flies off to one side or the other it is brought back and again put in play. Often it will be sent to and fro a dozen times, from head to head, until finally it rises with such a sweep that it passes far over the heads of the opposite players and descends behind them. Then shrill, rolling cries of good humored triumph arise from the victors, and the game instantly begins again with fresh zest.

There are, of course, no such rules as in a specialized ball game of civilization, and I saw no disputes. There may be eight or ten or many more players on each side. The ball is never touched with the hands or feet or with anything except the top of the head. It is hard to decide whether to wonder most at the dexterity and strength with which it is hit or butted with the head as it comes down through the air or at the reckless speed and skill with which the players throw themselves headlong on the ground to return the ball if it comes low down. Why they do not grind off their noses I cannot imagine.

Wonderful Colony of Spiders.

We came across many queer insects. One red grasshopper when it flew seemed as big as a small sparrow, and we passed in some places such multitudes of active little green grasshoppers that they frightened the mules. At our camping place we saw an extraordinary colony of spiders. It was among some dwarf trees, standing a few yards apart from one another by the water.

When we reached the camping place early in the afternoon—the pack train did not get in until nearly sunset, just ahead of the rain—no spiders were out. They were under the leaves of the trees. Their webs were tenantless and indeed for the most part were broken down. But at dusk they came out from their hiding places, two or three hundred of them in all, and at once began to repair the old and spin new webs. Each spun its own circular web and sat in the middle, and each web was connected on several sides with other webs, while those nearest the trees were hung to them by spun ropes, so to speak.

The result was a kind of sheet of web consisting of scores of wheels, in each of which the owner and proprietor sat, and there were half a dozen such sheets, each extending between two trees. The webs could hardly be seen, and the effect was of scores of big, formidable looking spiders poised in midair, equidistant from one another between each pair of trees.

When darkness and rain fell they were still out fixing their webs and pouncing on the occasional insects that blundered into the webs. I have no question that they are nocturnal; they certainly hide in the daytime, and it seems impossible that they can come out only for a few minutes at dusk.

Speaker Clark's Bridal Spoons.

The "Champ Clark wedding spoon" has appeared in Washington and young friends of the speaker and his family who marry may expect to be the recipients of a unique gift. The spoons were devised by the speaker when he received an invitation to the wedding of one of his young acquaintances. The spoon is made of silver and bears a portrait of the speaker in bas-relief.

SWINDLED PEOPLE OUT OF $3,400,000

Sentence of Banker Who Over-Issued Railroad Shares

Brussels, July 29.—Nestor Wilmart, Belgian banker, railroad man, newspaper proprietor and sportsman, was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment and $800 fine on a charge of swindling the public out of $3,400,000 by over-issuing shares in the Ghent-Terneuzen railway.

Five accomplices also were sentenced, Rasquin, the traffic manager, to seven years and $800 fine; Waechter to four years, and three others to three years each.

The railway is the only privately owned line in Belgium, and the operations of Wilmart and his associates placed a number of small banks in difficulties. Wilmart suddenly disappeared and after a world-wide search was arrested in France.

MME. CAILLAUX FREED BY JURY

Sensational Trial of Woman Ends Amid Great Tumult

SHE EMBRACES HER COUNSEL

General Fight In Courtroom Temporarily Lulled When Labori and Chenu Hug One Another—Freed Woman Escapes From Melee by Way of Back Staircases

Paris, July 29.—Mme. Henriette Caillaux was last night acquitted by the jury in the court of assize of the wilful murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of The Figaro. The jury brought in its verdict after fifty minutes' deliberation and the announcement was followed by the wildest tumult.

Mme. Caillaux tottered and fell upon the neck of her counsel, Fernand Labori, and embraced him. Her hair was undone and fell over her shoulders; her hat dropped to the floor. The spectators stood upon desks and chairs. "Caillaux! Labori!" and cries of "Caillaux, assassin!" merged into one.

The din was deafening. Several groups of barristers came to blows and the Republican Guards, in an endeavor to separate them, joined in the melee. The spectacle of Labori and Chenu, the latter counsel for the Calmette family, embracing each other, calmed the tumult for a moment, but it was redoubled when they left with Mme. Caillaux.

Failing to make himself heard, the presiding judge, followed by the other judges, marched out of the room. The advocates took complete possession of the court; some of them mounted the judges' desks and harangued the crowd. The guards then cleared a portion of the court, and comparative quiet being re-established, Judge Albanel returned and read the judgment, ordering the release of Mme. Caillaux.

Mme. Caillaux left by the witnesses' door, the guards making a lane through the crowd. She covered her face with her hands as if to shield herself from the furious cries of "Murderess!" By way of a number of narrow corridors and back staircases she reached a small side door in the palace of justice, where an automobile was waiting, and drove off unobserved.

Thus ended the most sensational trial that Parisian courts have had to deal with in years. Each day provided its dramatic thrill, and although the verdict has been pronounced, the outcome cannot be foretold.

Horta, Fayal, Azores, July 29.—Shamrock IV., Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America's cup, arrived here, seven days and three hours out from Falmouth, Eng., convoyed by her owner's steam yacht Erin.

She will remain here only long enough for her convoy to take on coal, and will then proceed direct to New York, where she will be put in racing trim for the cup races in September.

During her trip, according to those on board, the yacht proved herself an excellent sea boat. In hard blows she took the big seas without difficulty and slipped through the water with great ease.

LITTLE BITS OF SPORTING CHAT

Pulling Many New Inside Baseball Stunts This Season.

KID WILLIAMS IS STUCK.

New Bantam Champion Can't Find Good Matches—Nap Lajoie Would Be In a Lot on Bonuses if Somers Had Offered Them—Art Fletcher Taboos Decollete Uniform.

There are teams in the major leagues that are pulling new stuff, new plays, unexpected plays, and getting away with them. In fact, there are more real baseball generalship and brain work being shown this season than for a long time.

One of the prettiest plays evolved by the Athletics this year is the squeeze, with runners on second and third, with both runners attempting to score. In one game at Chicago both tallied. The play is a variation of Mike Kelly's famous play of olden times, when he used to score from second behind the man who was thrown out at the plate.

The Athletics have worked this play quite often. With runners on second and third, the batter pushes a bunt down the line, if possible, with both runners advancing at top speed when the ball is pitched. The runner from second naturally has a great lead and turns third, gaining on the man ahead. If the ball is fielded to the plate there is a chance to catch the first runner, but while the catcher is tagging him the one behind slides safe on the other side of the plate. If the opposing infielders are caught asleep or hesitate as to which shall field the ball both runners will score as they did in Chicago.

Herzog, with the Reds, is preventing mixups on balls thrown toward the plate when a runner is trying to score. Herzog knows that not one pitcher in ten knows whether to let the ball go on to the plate or try to catch the runner or catch the ball and shoot back to second to catch the batter who will attempt to take an extra base on the throw home. Therefore, he makes all his pitchers go back of the catcher when a hit is made, and the first baseman comes to the middle of the diamond and handles all balls or decides to let them go.

Maranville and Evers are playing a lot of new stuff around second. The chief improvement is in Maranville's change of style of passing balls in force-outs and in starting double plays. He used to snap the ball at the second baseman, which is risky when the baseman is running at top speed toward him. Now he scoops it.

Kid Williams, the twenty-year-old Danish fighter, who won the world's bantamweight championship from Johnny Coulon at Los Angeles, is holding the bag. All that he gets out of winning the championship is the title and $1,500, Coulon getting away with $7,500 even in defeat.

Furthermore, the Dane—real name John Gutenko—has defeated every bantamweight of note, so that none of the little fellows now in the ring will prove drawing cards against him. Ledoux, the French champion; Jim Kendrick, the British champion; Eddie Campi, the only other American in Williams' class, have all suffered defeats. No more world's champions remain to be conquered, and the Baltimore boy now is in the same shape in which Abe Attell found himself for several years—with no more opponents to face.

Gutenko will have to go out of his class, which means hard knocks and very few soft pickings unless he happens to be good enough to work into the championship brigade.

Unless new talent develops speedily the new champion will have a very tame time and very scant pickings for himself. Coulon squeezed dry all the bantamweight lemons.

Napoleon Lajoie never has been known to complain regarding the salary paid him by Charles W. Somers, but it is quite likely that he wishes that during all the time he has worked for the Naps their liberal owner had offered him a bonus such as Joe Jackson has been proffered this season.

Jackson, according to rumor, is to get so much if he hits above .400, so much if he hits above .375 and so much if he hits above .350. Never having hit below the last named mark since he has been in the American league, the chances are that J. J. will earn at least one of the extra sums his contract calls for, even if the Cincinnati base hit has been abolished.

Look what Lajoie would have had, however, in the way of extra remuneration had his contract called for more money in the event of his hitting above .350, 375 or .400. In 1901, working for Connie Mack, he piled up an average of .422, still the high water mark for the American league and approached only by Ty Cobb in 1911, the year he was accounted the most valuable player in the younger organization. Cobb hit .420 that year and .410 the next, Joe Jackson having an average of .408 in 1911 and Charley (Duke) Farrell an average of .404 in 1903.

During two years of his employment by Somers, Larry has hit better than .375 and in five years better than .350. Cobb has been above the last named mark six times, Hans Wagner five times, Joe Jackson four times and Tris Speaker, Ed Delahanty, Olaf Henriksen and Mike Donlin twice each.

Yale university is becoming the real old time opponent for Harvard, having defeated the Crimson on the water, the diamond and the track.

All that now remains for the Blue is to come back in football.

Arthur Fletcher is the only member of the Giants to wear a collar on his baseball shirt. Arthur's head is so far above his shoulders that he feels more dressed up when the intervening space is neatly covered.

MY SHADOWER

An Episode In Mexico Under Huerta.

By JOHN TURNLEE

I was a banker in the City of Mexico in the latter part of the Diaz regime during the revolution that deposed him and the one that raised Huerta to the dictatorship. It was soon after Huerta came to power that about $50,000 disappeared from the vaults of the bank with which I was connected. The best detectives in Mexico were put to work to find out who was the thief and what had become of the money, but they never succeeded in getting the slightest clew.

During the period when Huerta was acting as provisional president—that is, before he had declared himself dictator—I was a commercial traveler in northern Mexico. The Constitutionalists were in possession of that part of the country, and traveling was dangerous. In the first place, the region was infested by robbers; in the second, any point was liable to be attacked by federals or rebels, and in the third one hailing from Mexico City ran the risk of being taken for a spy.

While eating dinner one day at a hotel in Chihuahua, looking up suddenly, I met the gaze of a man bent on me intently. The moment I looked at him he dropped his eyes to his plate. Two or three times after that during the meal I looked at him just in time to catch him turning away his gaze. He did not look like a soldier or a fighter of any kind. He wore mutton chop whiskers and was bald on the top of his head.

I was fearful that I had seen him, or, rather, he had seen me, at the capital; that he was in sympathy with the rebel cause—the Constitutionalists held the place—and suspected me of being identified with the Huerta government. I arose from the table before I had finished my dinner in order to get away from him.

I was making for home, because on account of the troubled conditions of the country the selling of goods was out of the question, and left immediately for Santa Rosalia, about a hundred miles to the southward. There I stopped over to try to collect a debt. The day after my arrival I was looking out of a window when, on the other side of the street, I saw a figure suddenly emerge from behind a tree box. It was the man who had stared at me at Chihuahua.

I now became thoroughly alarmed. Either the man had spotted me for a spy and was dogging me with a view to turning me over to the rebel authorities or he was after several hundred pesos I had on my person. If the former was his object he would watch for his opportunity when near a band of rebels; if the latter, when he could get me alone, though I rather suspected, in this event, that he was in league with a band of robbers.

I was a long distance from Mexico City and despaired of getting through without giving the man his opportunity. We were constantly failing in with rebel troops, and I was at times obliged to move through lonely places. I was armed—every one in Mexico carried a revolver—but what use would weapons be to me against a band of rebels or robbers who quite often were both?

I left Santa Rosalia at midnight, hoping to elude my shadower, and instead of going by a direct route toward home I struck out for Parral. I thought it best to stop at the latter town for a day or two in the hope of losing my man and remained within doors most of the time. But the second evening of my stay there I went out on the street to get a little air, for the day had been intensely hot. Stopping to look into a shop window, who should I see inside but the man whom I was trying to get rid of. He was not purchasing anything, but was talking with the shopkeeper. I had no doubt that he was describing me and asking the man if he had seen me.

I slunk back to my hotel and went to my room.

I remained housed for three days, then, thinking that possibly I might have given my shadower the slip, I continued my journey. A week passed, during which I was moving slowly southward. I began to feel easier with regard to him, for it seemed that if he was still on my track I should have seen something of him. It was evident that he had lost me without having found an opportunity to turn me over to one of the rebel commanders or rob me. I was getting nearer all the while to federal territory, and if I could once get within it would feel comparatively safe.

I was doomed to disappointment. Tampico seemed for me the easiest point to reach, and from there I might go by sea to Vera Cruz. Both places were then in federal hands, but before I reached Tampico it was besieged by rebels. At Victoria I heard of the rupture between Huerta and the United States.

Puzzled as to what to do, I stopped where I was. I was in rebel territory and could not get into the federal lines. Foreign refugees were leaving Mexico when they could, and I was tempted to do the same. But I had lived a long while in the country, and if I were to go away from it I did not know how I would make a living.

I was walking through the town one day when suddenly I encountered my shadower face to face. On this occasion he seemed as much rattled at the meeting as I. He started, put his hand to his hip, thought better of the movement and did not draw his weapon. I followed his movements exactly.

"You villain!" I exclaimed. "Raise a finger against me and I will kill you."

"If you do my secret will be buried with me," he said, very much excited.

I gathered courage. For some reason, either because he was unaided or because we were on a public street, I seemed to have the advantage. I concluded to permit him to explain his object toward me if he would without betraying my ignorance of it. I glared at him and said nothing.

"I am ready to restore the whole amount," he said, "not that you could, in the present state of the country, compel me to do so or imprison me for the crime."

"Go on," I said without indicating that I did not know what he was talking about.

"The fact is," he continued, "that I have not had a moment's peace of mind since I took the money."

"That is the usual result with new criminals," I put in, still ignorant of what money he referred to.

"Not a cent has been wasted, not a cent spent. The bills are in packages just as they were taken from the safe."

A sudden light broke in on my dull brain. This man who I supposed had been shadowing me had considered me his shadower. Truly, a guilty conscience needs no accuser.

"Where are they?" I asked.

"I'll never tell until I am promised immunity from prosecution."

"Will you be content with such a promise from me?"

He thought awhile before replying to this, then said: "I suppose I'll have to be content. You were an official of the bank. In these times we can't choose our methods. My principal motive is to get the matter off my hands and off my conscience."

"Very well; so far as my promise of immunity goes I will give it, and I think it will be respected by the others concerned. If the whole amount taken is restored I am quite sure you will not need to fear prosecution."

"Come to my room and draw up the papers."

I went with him and, as we sat facing each other, listened to his recital as to how he came to take the money:

"One of the clerks in the bank was a friend of mine. I had been for years in the employ of a safe and lock company. The clerk suggested how easy it would be for him to admit me to the safe and for me to pick the lock and take enough money to make us rich. We both fell under the temptation. On pretense of being behind with his books he worked at night, took me in when no one but himself was there, and I opened the safe and took the money.

"I carried it northward, crossed the Rio Grande and buried it in a metal box in the state of Texas. The clerk who admitted me to the bank became panic stricken at what he had done and would not accept a cent of it. I dared not spend it, for I knew detectives were watching me, as they watched all intimate friends of the bank's force. And that's the reason why the secret service men never got on to who took the money. None of it was ever spent."

The man concluded by saying that he had known I was an officer of the bank and asked me to tell him how I had spotted him. Then I confessed that I was perfectly ignorant of his being the thief of the money lost until he told me that he was. But he was so relieved to get the matter off his mind that he did not regret the mistake.

After I had sworn to the man to keep the secret pertaining to himself and the clerk who had helped him we started together for the Texas border, crossed it in a lonely place on the north bank of the Rio Grande and dug up the stolen bills. I deposited the money, dividing it among several different Texas banks, and wrote those concerned on its return an account of the adventure by which I had discovered it.

I gave the man who had returned it funds for his immediate use from my own pocket, and he went I know not whither. My terror when I supposed I was in danger of my life was turned to amusement at the denouement, and the further I pass from the former the more I derive of the latter.

AUSTRO-SERVIAN CRISIS REACHED

Precipitated by the Murder of Francis Ferdinand.

SPLIT DATES FARTHER BACK

Russia and Germany Concerned In Acute Situation Resulting From Annexation Controversy—First Balkan War Intensified Feeling—Relations More Strained Since Later Conflict.

Austria's demand upon Servia for the punishment of all the accomplices in the murder of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and the suppression of all the societies which have fomented rebellion in Bosnia is the climax of a long time disagreement between the two countries.

The demands of Austria upon Servia are based in part on the confession of Nedeljo Gabrinovics, who threw the bomb at the archduke on June 28, shortly before Gabrio Prinzip shot him. Gabrinovics said that he had formed in Belgrade a conspiracy with Prinzip and four others to kill the archduke. One of the four, a Belgrade student named Grabes, has been arrested, but the others are still at large.

The Pan-Servian union is the society aimed at in the ultimatum. This organization aspires to unite the entire Servian race.

Long at Odds.

The feeling between the two nations, however, goes back much further, says the New York Times. Only a minority of the Servian race live in Servia and the Macedonian territory recently won from the Turks. Montenegro is inhabited by people ethnically and linguistically the same; so are Bosnia and Herzegovina; so is much of the hinterland of Dalmatia and large districts in Hungary. In other words, a hundred years ago part of the Servian race was subject to Turkey and part to the Hapsburg monarchy. The part under Turkish domination has won its freedom; the other has not.

Bosnia and the Herzegovina rose against Turkey in 1876, as did Servia proper. After the congress of Berlin had settled the Balkan question in 1878 these two countries, so far from receiving their freedom, were handed over to Austria, though remaining under nominal Turkish suzerainty. They promptly revolted, and were subdued only after four years of guerilla warfare. Ever since then there has been much bitter feeling and a strong army of occupation has been maintained.

Austria spent large sums on public improvements and felt that she had a property interest in the territory. When, therefore, the Turkish constitutional revolution in 1908 led to a call for representatives to come to a parliament from all parts of the empire, including Bosnia and the Herzegovina, Austria had a good excuse for announcing the annexation of these countries. Servia protested violently, and was backed by Russia, but Germany's support of Austria led to the withdrawal of the opposition of the Slav powers and the annexation was completed.

Servia Aroused.

This inflamed the feeling of the Servians, which the promise of an autonomous diet for the two provinces did nothing to allay. Austria's ambitions still looked toward the ultimate acquisition of Saloniki, and Servian and Turkish territory lay squarely in the way. The first Balkan war made the situation more acute, for Servian troops easily conquered western Macedonia and forced their way through Albania.

Then Austrian diplomacy won another victory. In the conferences of the powers which followed the war Montenegro was deprived of Scutari, and Servia was compelled to withdraw her troops from Albania.

The Servian victories in the second Balkan war were largely neutralized by the fact that Austria seized the occasion to occupy the Sanjak of Novi Bazar, a strip of territory between Montenegro and Servia which belonged to Turkey till the war of 1912, thus thrusting herself in between the Servians and their Montenegrin kinsmen. And so another blow was dealt to the unification of the Serbs, which, if ever carried through, would cut off the entire southwestern corner of the Hapsburg empire.

Since then a strong army has been at all times maintained by Austria within striking distance of the Servian frontier.

ARMY WORMS DEFEATED.

Ditches Filled With Poisoned Food Attract Pests With Effective Result.

The army worm which is ravaging the fields of several eastern states has suffered a knockout blow in Connecticut. Millions of army worms which threatened the destruction of seventy acres of corn valued at $10,000 on the Branford farms owned by Commodore Morton F. Plant at Eastern Point have been exterminated by fifty laborers working under the direction of Professor G. H. Lamson of the Connecticut Agricultural college.

Double ditches were dug, surrounding the field. In places a poisonous mash consisting of bran, paris green and molasses was strewn. The worms ate it and died. They lay so thickly in the ditches that they were shoveled out like sand.

Kitchen Science

No Milk Bottles In Sickroom.

Milk bottles should never be taken into a sickroom, for as they are usually returned to the milkman they may thus carry infectious diseases into other homes, says the United States department of agriculture.

Every milk bottle left at a house where there is an infectious sickness should be boiled before being returned. The best thing to do in such circumstances is to provide one's own milk bottles or covered dishes into which the milkman may pour the milk from his bottles.

The duty of each individual to his neighbor in this connection is most important. The board of health may be called to disinfect milk bottles properly after they have been in a home where there is sickness.

Bottles should be given reasonable care before they are returned to their owner. The practice of pouring vinegar or kerosene or other liquids into them temporarily when not in use should by all means be discouraged. The containers should be washed in cold water first and finally in warm water before they are returned to the farmer supplying the milk.

Opening a Bottle of Milk.

Before removing the cap from a bottle of milk the cap and the neck of the bottle should be washed and carefully wiped with a clean cloth. The cap should not be pushed down into the milk. It may be easily removed with a sharp pointed instrument without injuring the contents.

The bottle when once open should be kept covered, and the milk should be kept in the original bottle until it is used up. The original cap should not be replaced, but instead an inverted glass may be put over the top of the bottle. The bottle when not in use should, of course, always be left in the refrigerator, and any milk that has been poured from it into another vessel should not be poured back.

Onions and other foods having a strong odor impart their distinctive smell to milk that is left uncovered. This is an additional reason for always keeping milk in a covered receptacle.

Summer Care of Milk.

When milk is delivered it should be put into the refrigerator at once. A very brief exposure to summer heat makes it unfit for use.

If it is impossible to have the bottles put immediately into the refrigerator provide on the porch a box containing a lump of ice.

In planning a house arrange to have the refrigerator set in the wall, with an opening on the outside. It is always possible to provide locks for these boxes or refrigerator doors and supply the milkman with a key.

The interior of the food compartment should be wiped every day with a clean cloth and thoroughly scalded as often as once a week.

Under no circumstances should the drainpipe of an icebox be connected with a sewer.

Gloves For Dishwashing.

The housewife who has never used rubber gloves has yet to learn what a comfort they are when washing greasy dishes, pots and pans and doing other forms of housework which force one to put the hands in strong suds.

In selecting a glove the same rule holds good as in selecting for hot water bottles. The seamless ones are less apt to spring a leak. Be sure they are amply large, for they will not stand much stretching.

Apple Sauce Sundae.

Make apple sauce in the usual way. Shell and chop into small pieces one dozen English walnuts or pecan nuts. Also chop fine enough preserved ginger to make three tablespoonfuls. Just before serving beat the whites of two eggs to a stiff froth. Add the nuts and the chopped ginger with its sirup. Serve in sherbet glasses, heaping the nut and ginger decorated whites on top.

Tomatoes Farcied.

Cut the tops from six large tomatoes, but do not peel them. Scoop out the insides and mix with one cup corn, one-fourth cup breadcrumbs, three teaspoonfuls melted butter, three teaspoonfuls milk and salt and pepper to taste. Dust the inside of the tomato shells with salt and pepper and fill with the mixture. Sprinkle dried breadcrumbs over the top and bake.

Poinsettia Salad.

Peel small tomatoes and cut in eighths lengthwise, but do not separate sections at one end. Open like flowers on bed of lettuce. In the center of each pile a teaspoonful of cream cheese that has been put through a coarse strainer. Serve with salad dressing to which has been added one teaspoonful each of finely chopped green pepper, parsley and chives.

Nice Milk Toast.

To keep milk toast from becoming soggy serve the boiling buttered milk in a covered pitcher, so that each one may pour it himself over his toast.

Green Onions.

An appetizing way to use these is to boil them and serve them, as one would asparagus, on toast with the regular drawn butter dressing.

THE QUALIFICATIONS.

(Banker and Tradesman.)

Taxpayers in Masachusetts cities and towns who are witnessing the increase in their tax rates, would do well to remember that they cannot go on sending irresponsible men to represent them in the Legislature without paying the piper. The result of log-rolling and working with professional politicians who are playing a game, is bound to be reflected in the tax rate. Nothing is more important than that at the coming State election voters should carefully scrutinize the qualifications of the candidates who seek their votes.

No Pie Crust Promises

Wise advertisers never make "pie-crust" promises.

They know that to break faith with the public would be fatal—worse than throwing their money away.

That is one reason why advertised goods are more in demand.

People know that there is quality behind them.

They look on them as standards. Any dealer knows that there are more calls for advertised goods than for goods not advertised.

This is especially true if they happen to have been advertised in the newspapers which directly reach the people.

The standard of advertising is more exacting today than ever before. Advertisers are more careful of their promises and more interesting in their text and illustrations.

The world grows better.

TAX RATES FOR YEAR 1914

Highest Figures in History of Several Cities

The assessors of Salisbury have announced the tax rate for the year as $21.60. This is an increase of $8.40, or 64 per cent over last year, when it was only $13.20.

Beverly is not in the Metropolitan district and it is the home of the United Shoe Machinery Co. Mayor MacDonald announces a tax rate of $15.70 for 1914 which is a reduction of $2, the best showing made by any city this year.

SERVICES POORLY REWARDED.

Officers of the Bucknall Line steamship Mattoppo, which arrived Saturday from the Philippines, confirmed the statements of Dean C. Worcester and Spanish War veteran officers that more than 500 veterans i nthe Philippine service have been forced out of employment with little notice by the new Philippine regime.

According to the statement of these officers, Americans are walking the streets of Mantila out of work and unable to return to America because of lack of means. They cannot leave the country because most of them have no money. Many of them, however, have married native women and for that reason are bound to remain there.

Most of the Americans who are now out of positions have fought in the Philippines in defense of the American Government.

One of the officers said that Gen. Francis Burton Harrison had made the statement that he is not running an institution for old soldiers.

The Matoppo owing to lack of room was obliged to refuse applicants for passage.

The Philippine controversy was brought to the attention of President Wilson last week by Dean C. Worcester, who understands the situation thoroughly and as a result of his statement, the conditions in the Philippines will probably be investigated.

ENGLISH SHIPBUILDING.

Shipbuilding is active in Great Britain. According to Lloyd's returns, which take account only of vessels of 100 tons and over, there were on June 30, 477 vessels of 1,722,124 tons gross under construction in the United Kingdom. The tonnage is about 169,000 less than at the end of the previous quarter and over 281,000 less than June, 1913. Warships, of which there were 90 building of 392,545 tons, are not included in the above figures.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Powers of Cranch street quietly celebrated the 28th anniversary of their marriage on Sunday. They were married at Concord, N. H., but have always resided in this city, where their many friends wish them many more years of health and happiness. Mr. and Mrs. Powers have four daughters, Katherine L., wife of Edward H. McGinty, Helen R., Margaret L., and Alice R. Powers.

THE NEW CANAL.

(Taunton Herald)

One of the striking facts about the Cape Cod canal is that, by comparison with the expense of digging other canals, it cost very little to construct it. A tremendous volume of traffic is assured. The saving in time, the additional factor of safety and the difference in insurance rates will assure that.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Work is the artist that builds a splendid arch; worry, the enemy which removes the keystone, allowing the structure to fall.

HOUSEKEEPING HINTS.

When you are roasting or baking set the alarm clock at the time you desire to look at your dishes and you can freely give your mind to other work.

Put a silver knife in a glass fruit jar down into the fruit to let out every bit of air. See that the knife is well scalded and clean.

After the rubber and lid has been placed on a jar and screwed as tightly as possible with the handle of a knife or fork, press the edge of the lid down all around, pressing firmly down on the rubber. You will never have a leaky jar if you have good rubbers and tops well put on.

When wiping the jars use a special cloth for the purpose, not the dish cloth.

A delicious sandwich filling is chopped almonds which have been blanched and two parts of finely chopped celery with a dash of salt and a little mayonnaise dressing.

Flour sacks make good dish towels. To remove the lettering rub well with soap and put into cold water with a little kerosene. The paint will soften and often one boiling will do the work. If not entirely removed, soap again and boil up once more. Rinse and hang out on the line.

Kerosene will clean porcelain like magic. Rub the surface to be cleaned with a cloth dampened with kerosene, and it will not injure the surface.

Rub the cork which is used in the glue or cement bottle with vaseline, and it will always be removed easily.

Waxed paper is a great convenience in the home. It will preserve eatables from the air and keep them moist.

It is indispensable in the lunch basket. Cheese well wrapped in waxed paper will keep moist and eatable.

Fruit wrapped in it will keep fresh, and if kept on ice will be most attractive when served.

Try using a small piece of mosquito netting basted under the large hole of the child's stocking and weave the darning cotton in and out of its meshes. This will prove a great help to a tired mender of many hose.

THE BATES ASSOCIATION.

The eighth annual meeting of the Bates Association will be held in the Baptist church, North Scituate, on Thursday, August 6. The association will meet at 10 A. M. for necessary preliminary business, after which points of interest will be visited until noon. The afternoon session will assemble at 1.30 for the transaction of business and addresses. An interesting program is being prepared. The Baptist church is near the Station and will be found easily.

LOYAL ORANGEMEN.

District Master Daniel McLeod, a member of Prosperity lodge, Loyal Orange Lodge of Hyde Park, discussed topics of moment before Quincy lodge in Protection hall on Tuesday evening. He was given a warm welcome and was vigorously applauded throughout his address. One candidate was initiated to membership, the work being conducted under the direction of Worthy Master Andrew Stewart. The attendance was large. It is expected that Mr. McLeod will address Bay View lodge at its meeting in Wilson hall next Monday evening.

In the News and Out of the Ordinary

Autopsy on James McLaughlin of Dutchess Junction, N. Y., revealed that McLaughlin's heart was on his right side.

In New York Mrs. Maria Bollec sued Miss Anna Bolker for $500 damages because the latter revealed that Mrs. Bollec wore a wig.

Two raids made in Cincinnati by the police disclosed the fact that several women past the age of three score and ten have daily been playing the races.

A man who gave a ten cent tip was fined $6 and a negro porter who took the tip was fined a like amount at Jackson, Miss., under the state anti-tipping statute.

FURTHER HONOR MEMORY OF VON STEUBEN, WAR HERO.

Statue at Utica, N. Y., Another Testimonial of American Appreciation.

A statue of Baron Friedrich Wilhelm Augustus Henry von Steuben to be dedicated at Utica, N. Y., Aug. 3, will add further honor to the memory of the famous foreign soldier who helped the American colonies in their hour of need.

Von Steuben, who has been described as "the drill master of the Revolution," is buried near Utica, on the estate presented to him by congress. He wrote the drill regulations for the Continental army and had much to do with the organization of the forces.

At the Utica ceremonies, which will be marked by a pageant Aug. 5, 6 and 7, members of the German-American alliance will wear the Continental uniform and carry flintlocks in the pageant battle of Oriskany, and they will represent the German Palatines following General Herkimer to defeat the British.

General von Steuben was a lieutenant general in the Prussian army during the Seven Years' war. He came to America on his own responsibility and spent his fortune in making soldiers out of the colonists of New York, who had left the city for New Jersey after the victories of Lord Cornwallis had given possession of the metropolis to the British. His manual of instruction for the army was adopted by congress in 1779. He introduced the strictest discipline, a change greatly needed by the army, and which contributed to its ultimate success. He served throughout the war, and his conduct was marked by the utmost valor. He frequently shared his last dollar with the suffering soldiers, as he often did his clothing and camp equipments also.

At the close of the war the State of New Jersey gave him a farm, New York State gave him 16,000 acres of wild land in Oneida county, and the government granted him an annuity of $2,500. He distributed his lands among his aids, his servants and tenants.

In Dec. 7, 1910, a monument to the baron was erected in Washington. Fifty thousand dollars was appropriated for the purpose by congress. A replica of this monument was sent to Germany in 1911.

"LITTLE PANAMA'S" OPENING.

Cape Code Canal Ordered Built by Washington 139 Years Ago.

Interesting in connection with the opening of the Cape Cod canal is the fact that the event carries out an order given by George Washington in 1775.

The new waterway, which is eight miles long, connects Buzzards bay and Cape Cod bay and will shorten distances and provide a safer route for 25,000 sea craft a year which now sail around Cape Cod. It will make an island of the hook shaped cape where the pilgrims first landed.

The canal cost $12,000,000, and it shortens the present dangerous route.

Back in 1775 George Washington as commander in chief issued an order:

"Excavate as speedily as consistent a passage across Cape Cod from Barnstable to Monument bay to give us greater security in navigation and more advantage over the enemy."

The route suggested by Washington is practically the one followed by the new canal.

STARTS FOR KARLUK'S MEN.

Revenue Cutter Will Race With Famine For Marooned Crew.

The revenue cutter Bear, with Captain Robert Bartlett, master of the wrecked Stefansson exploring ship Karluk, aboard, is on its way to the arctic to take off the eighteen white men and four Eskimos of Bartlett's command who are marooned on Wrangel island, where they sought refuge after the Karluk was crushed in the ice north of Herald island last winter. The Bear carries provisions for nine months.

Captain Bartlett says the Karluk's men would run out of provisions about the middle of August, and the Bear will make every effort to reach them before that time. They should, however, be able to subsist on game, in which Wrangel island abounds, if the rescue party is delayed.

EXPRESSMAN FINED $60

NaClario of Quincy Took Wine Into Newton

Rapheal NaClario, a Quincy expressman, was fined $60 in the Newton court Tuesday, for the illegal transportation of liquor into that city. When arrested he had seven barrels of wine containing 288 gallons, and had previously delivered four barrels. He told the court that the wine was a part of a car load shipped from California for Greater Boston Italians, who had formed a club for co-operate buying. The wine came to Quincy by freight from which point it is delivered to members of the club. The Newton police claimed a violation of the so-called Pony express law.

BUILD THE DRY-DOCK.

(Boston Advertiser)

The commercial future of the port of Boston depends, in large measure, upon the construction of a suitable dry-dock. Our share in the development of ocean and coastwise traffic, that will follow the opening of the Panama canal, will be determined by the facilities we can offer for handling large ships. New York and other Atlantic ports are actively bidding against Boston for this trade. The trans-Atlantic steamship companies have offered contracts for the use of the proposed dry-dock that would assure its success as a commercial proposition, entirely aside from its value in promoting the business of the city.

The Legislature increased the per capita debt of Massachusetts beyond that of any other state in the union, in order to make the $9,000,000 appropriation for carrying out the port improvement plan, of which the chief feature was "the biggest dry-dock in the world for Boston." The Governor should immediately approve the action of the Port Board in accepting the lowest of the twelve bids submitted for the work. The construction should be begun before the fund, which is still adequate, may be further depleted by less important improvements.

TWO MONTHS SENTENCE.

Norman Whitcomb, who gave his age as 20 years and his home as 132 West street, West Quincy collapsed in the Brockton police court, Tuesday, when sentenced to two months in the house of correction, for larceny, and it was necessary to carry him from the court room. Whitcomb had pleaded guilty on two complaints for larceny.

Whitcomb was arested Monday by Inspector Brouillard for larceny of a watch from Nellie Wallace of Merton street. At the time of his arrest he was on probation for larceny of clothing from the Howard & Caldwell store, Nov. 12. He was surrendered to the court by Probation Officer Paine and sentence imposed.

The defendant, who is small and smoewhat frail, sank to the floor in a faint as if he had received a blow. Inspector Brouillard carried him from the room. Whitcomb also threatened to commit suicide.

CLANS OUTING.

Clan Gordon, O. S. C., of Barre, Vt. held its 30th annual outing Saturday under weather conditions that were ideal. The soccer championship of the state was won by the Bonaccord A team. Another pleasant feature was the distribution of coins by William Barclay of the firm of Barclay Bros. He followed a long custom of his father, the late ex-Mayor William Barclay who inaugurated the idea of giving each child on the field a dime. In all 380 children were remembered. Money was awarded in some athletic events and in other the prizes were donated by prominent men.

GETS A JOB.

Amadeen Boiligeron the juvenile member of a quartet of runaways arrested in Weymouth Sunday night, has played in luck after all, for instead of being sent back to his parents in Fall River he started to work in the Fore River ship yard.

Balligeron, when taken by the police said he was 15 years of age and a steeple jack. The officials of the company reading a story of his experience were reminded that they needed a steeplejack to paint the military masts on the warships at the yard.

The boy was offered the position and he accepted it without delay. This morning he donned a uniform and from now out will be a permanent employee at the shipyard.

WATER EXPENSES IN OTHER CITIES

Is Quincy Reckless in Water Extensions, or the Other Cities Parsimonious?

Quincy Water Appropriations Are Certainly Liberal

In the Daily Ledger of Wednesday, the yearly water receipts of Quincy were compared with other cities. Today a comparison is made with the same cities, showing the "payments" for maintenance of the Water department, and for permanent improvements in the Water department.

The cities are published in the order of their population which range from 77,000 down to 15,000. Those cities with an asterisk are in the Metropolitan Water district, and an assessment for maintenance of the Metropolitan system is included.

In the maintenance column Quincy is below the average, and it is probably a fact that expenditures which should come under this head are included under "outlays" or permanent improvements.

Quincy's "outlays" are among the highest in the list, only three cities expending more—Pittsfield, Brockton and Holyoke—and probably it was an exceptional year in these cities. Either Quincy's expenditure is excessively large, or Somerville, Salem, Fitchburg, Taunton, Everett, Chelsea, and Waltham are parsimonious.

It is undoubtedly a fact that Quincy, although growing rapidly, has been reckless in its expenditures for water extensions, which has caused too large a water debt.

In the comparison which follows, it should be remembered that "outlay" stands for permanent improvements or extensions:

	Maintenance	Outlay
Somerville*	$59,349	$15,383
Holyoke	82,194	89,029
Brockton	44,367	181,940

ANXIOUS FOR THE ECKERTS

Former Quincy Couple Now Located at Fiume, Austria

News from the present crisis in Austria-Hungary is being watched with interest by many in Quincy for the reason that one of this city's former residents is at present residing in Fiume, which is less than twenty hours sailing distance from the scene of conflict.

The young lady in question is Mrs. Louis Eckert, a daughter of Mrs. Lydia C. Hultman of Hancock street, and a sister of ex-Senator Eugene C. Hultman of Washington street. Mr. Eckert was formerly connected with the Fore River Shipbuilding Co., but some years ago went to Fiume where he has since become superintendent of the Whitehead Torpedo Co. plant in that place.

Nothing has been heard from Mrs. Eckert since a week ago, when a cable was received announcing the birth of a daughter. Things have moved rapidly however during the past week and a strict censorship and the taking over of the cable lines by the authorities make it impossible to get in direct touch with her at the present time.

That the present trend of events was not entirely unexpected is borne out by the fact that some months ago, when Mrs. Hultman visited her daugher, she was informed that trouble was expected to materialize soon.

The last letter received from Mrs. Eckert also foretold the events which are now shaping with dramatic suddenness. Mr. Eckert is a German subject, and the company in which he is employed is engaged in the building of submarines for the Austrian government.

It is probable that with the actual beginning of warfare. Mrs. Eckert will if possible, with her children, return to Quincy until peace is restored.

QUINCY PEOPLE AMONG GUESTS

Opening of Cape Cod Canal Was a Grand Success

Among the specially invited guests at the opening of the Cape Cod canal on Wednesday were President Powell, of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation; Hon. Charles W. Guy, the councillor from this district; Frank Fessenden Crane, the water front commissioner of Quincy, who was accompanied by Mrs. Crane; and Dr. Frank E. Dawes, the ex-commodore of the Wollaston Yacht club, who was also accompanied by his wife.

They report that the opening was a grand success, and were surprised at the crowds of people attracted, as thousands along the shores of the Cape Cod canal watched the progress of the fleet through the water and cheered them on. It was a distinguished gathering of representatives of the nation, state and company which accepted the invitation of President August Belmont and sailed through the canal on the steamer Rose Standish and other vessels, and Mr. Belmont served an elegant lunch. Many Quincy people witnessed the opening of the canal making the trip by train or auto.

MOOSE TO SALEM RELIEF.

Quincy lodge, Loyal Order of Moose, will be assessed approximately $100 its share of the fund to be raised by the Moose for the 800 members of Salem lodge who were rendered homeless by the fire.

The Supreme council, in convention at Milwaukee, adopted a resolution on Wednesday providing for a relief fund of $25,000 of which $5000 to be forwarded immediately and the balance raised by subscriptions among lodges. The apportionment is nearly $100 per lodge.

WALKED TO NANTASKET

Two Girls Make Trip in Three Hours-- Also Walk Back

Miss Marie Lorensten of 23 Beacon street and Miss Annie Schlenger of 58 Edison street, started out for a little "stroll" at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning. They found the air of Weymouth and Hingham exhilarating and kept on toward Nantasket. They arrived at the beach in about three hours, the distance being about nine miles. Encouraged by their success they determined after a short rest to walk home for a record. The return trip also occupied about three hours, a total of 18 miles in six hours. They may attempt a longer stroll soon.

HANCOCK STREET TO LOSE TREE

Andrew Stewart, the Gypsy Moth superintendent, commenced work this week removing the trees on the east side of Hancock street, between Granite and School streets preparatory to the widening of the street. Supt. Stewart said this noon that 23 trees would have to be removed and they are being taken up roots and all.

FOY'S CLERKS ON OUTING

Royally Entertained by Mr. Foy at Glen Echo Park

Employees of the Adams and Water street markets and their friends to the number of 120 were the guests of R. E. Foy, proprietor of the stores, at the annual outing held Wednesday at Glen Echo park, Stoughton.

A special car transported the party to the grounds, and shortly after arrival the luncheon was served, while a band and Provost's orchestra music enlivened the occasion. This part of the program was informal, those present devoting their entire attention to the "eats" and there were no speeches.

Mr. Foy was present but could not be prevailed upon to speak, his only answer to their request being a smile of encouragement to the guests to continue the jollification.

The athletic events were run off during the afternoon but because of a sudden change in the weather the swimming and boating races were not held.

The largest individual point winner was David Littlewood who took first place in three events and second in one. He also featured in the ball game.

The ball game between the clerks of the Water street store and Adams market was won by the former, 7 to 5. The contest was a warm one and many thrilling plays were made. George Guston drove out one of the longest homers ever made on the diamond at the park. The features of the game was the playing of Walsh, McGuinness and Littlewood.

The young ladies in the party added enough life to the affair to make it a brilliant success. They entered into the spirit of the day with an enthusiasm that was infectious and each picked a favorite and added what encouragement they could while they competed for the various prizes.

The races of the day for the fair sex were won by the same girls, Miss Ruth Oppie and Miss Elizabeth Ross, their positions simply being reversed in the events.

Dancing followed the field sports and with the approach of nightfall the party gathered together in another special car for the homeward trip. They created a din on the way home, louder than they made on the way to the grove, with their horns and bells which all carried.

The success of the affair was due entirely to Mr. Foy who outdid himself in entertaining his guests, and it was the unanimous opinion of all that a rousing vote of thanks would only be a slight indication of their sentiments toward Quincy's progressive merchant.

FIRE HAZARD BILL INCLUDES QUINCY

Commissioner Will Have Autocratic Powers Over City Council and Others

City to be Assessed for Maintenance of Department

One of the last acts passed by the legislature of 1914 was that to provide for better prevention of fires throughout the Metropolitan district, and is known as the "Fire Hazard bill." The act is obligatory upon Quincy and other cities and towns of the Metropolitan district, and may become applicable to cities and towns outside of the district, by an affirmative vote of two thirds of the members of City Councils or by an affirmative vote at a special town meeting. The act is particularly interesting at this time as it takes effect August 1.

Section 1 of the act states what cities the Metropolitan district shall mean, and among those named is the City of Quincy.

Section 2 provides that the Governor shall with the consent of the Council appoint a citizen of the commonwealth who shall reside in the Metropolitan district as a fire preventive commissioner for a term of three years, and for such cities and towns as may hereafter accept the act a deputy commissioner for such cities and towns. It also provides for the appointment by the commissioner of a secretary. The commissioner, deputies and secretary to devote their entire time to the duties of the office.

The salary of the commissioner is fixed at $2,500 and of the deputies and secretary at $2,500.

POWERS OF COMMISSIONER.

Section 3 is an all important one for it provides that all existing powers in whatever officers, councils, boards or persons, other than the general court and judicial courts, to license persons, or grant permits relative to the keeping, storage, use, manufacture, sale, handling, transportation of gunpowder, dynamite, nitroglycerine, camphine, or similar explosive or inflammable compounds, torpedoes, rockets, toy pistols, firecrackers the use of engines and furnaces, shall hereafter be vested in the commissioner.

INFLAMMABLE FLUIDS.

Section 6 provides that no paint, oil, benzine, naptha, or other inflammable fluid shall be kept in bulk or stored in bulk or barrel, otherwise than in the tank of an automobile, motor boat or stationary engine, in total quantity not exceeding ten gallons, or in any part of a building used for habitation, or within fifty feet of any building used for dwelling purposes, unless such paint, oil, etc., is enclosed within a fire proof room or structure, constructed and arranged to the satisfaction of the commissioner. And no paint, oil, benzine, napththa, or other inflammable fluid, except for domestic purposes shall be kept, used or stored in any part of a building used as a habitation unless a permit is first obtained from the commissioner under such terms as he may prescribe.

RESTRICTIONS.

Section 7 provides that no part of any building used for habitation, nor that on any lot within fifty feet of any building so used shall be used for the storage of the fluids named above, or of any combustible material for other than domestic purposes, unless a permit for the same is obtained from the commissioner. No part of any such building shall be used as a carpenter's shop, or for the handling or keeping of feed, hay, straw, shavings, sawdust, cotton, paper stock, feathers or rags, without a permit from the commissioner.

REFUSE OR DEBRIS.

Section 8 provides that the commissioner, or any one he may designate, may require the removal and destruction of any heap of refuse, or debris, that in his opinion may become dangerous as a fire menace. On neglect or refusal to remove such material after notice, the person designated may enter on the premises and remove such material, which if of no material value may be destroyed or stored, the total costs of such removal to be collected by process of law.

SALAMANDER STOVES.

Section 9 provides that no salamander stoves, such as used in drying out

The most popular form of outdoor exercise at the summer resorts is making embroidery on the piazza.

Don't expect the bell-hop at a summer hotel to be satisfied when you merely give him 10 cents for bringing a two cent stamp.

If people fan themselves hard enough during the hot weather, they can always get up a good copious perspiration.

The shrewd dry goods salesman always advertises his bathing suits to shrink liberally.

A hired girl is naturally dissatisfied in a family where the Old Man persistently refuses to turn the ice cream freezer.

The summer girls are buying an outfit for mountain climbing consisting of tight skirts and high heeled shoes.

The work of the summer schools seems very superficial with so little attention paid to athletic sports.

The men keep on wearing heavy and comfortable coats in summer, and it is not their wives who make them do it either.

It is very dangerous to work hard in summer, particularly on the days when the ball team plays.

While the trunks seen at summer hotels are terribly heavy, it is felt that porters and baggage men always enjoy showing off how much they can lift.

The sale of books of poetry is said to have increased to an amount sufficient to provide the author with stamps to send his manuscripts around.

A tramp printer who called around at our office the other day was so eager for work that he read through the Want ads in a last summer's newspaper.

The makers of women's styles have decided that skirts shall be shorter and fuller next fall, in spite of the fact that this is in the direction of common sense.

As golf balls do not cost so much this summer, it is predicted that neither President Wilson nor ex-President Taft will be justified in asking for a raise in pay.

There is never any lack of fuel in Mexico. If people can't find anything else to burn, they can always go out and tear up some ties from the railroads built by Americans.

After the college graduate has tramped through the business offices after a job, he concludes that he might as well have left his diploma in the desk at home.

Men may be scarce at the summer resorts, but the fact that a fellow has just secured a raise in pay of $2 per week is no sign he can dance with all of J. P. Morgan's relatives.

OUR SILENT TRAVELLERS.

It has often been said in Europe that Americans take their pleasures sadly. Some of them also take them very stiffly and silently. A lady remarked the other day, that she had spent many summers at seashore and mountain hotels, and that if she got acquainted with the other guests, it was always because she made the advances. The other people would never make any.

One of the best pleasures and benefits of travel is conversation with the chance acquaintences of the train and boat. The commonplace man who sits opposite you in the restaurant may not look as if he had any interesting thoughts to impart. Yet underneath his inscrutable mask of a face, there may be keen observation and lively sense of humor worth while drawing out.

People stand too much on their dignity. There is too much cold reserve. The man who shuts his mouth like a clam misses learning a great many things that would be useful to him. Also he will never add much to his circle of friendship.

AUSTRIA GETS RUSSIA'S WORD

Complete Conquest of Servia Will Not Be Tolerated

SEVERAL IMPORTANT FACTORS

Russian Mobilization and Sailing of British Fleet Believed to Have Caused Halt In Launching Attack, Which May Not Extend Beyond Occupation of Belgrade—Active Military Movements Continue In All Directions—Sharp Encounter After Servians Blow Up Bridge

London, July 30.—Russia has spoken at last, and has told Austria that she will not tolerate any devastating war on Servia or permanent occupation of Servian territory.

While there is no published word to confirm the above statement, the trend of events furnishes circumstantial evidence that it must be true. Russian mobilization, the departure of the British fleet under sealed orders, and last but not least, Austria's failure to push her attack on Servia, all point to Russian influence.

Apparently the present hitch is over how Austria may "save her face." She cannot be too far humiliated. She must be allowed to make some sort of war on Servia, even perhaps to the taking of Belgrade, and in this is another point of peril.

The most disquieting feature of the situation is the announcement of the partial mobilization of Russia along her frontiers—German, Austrian and Turkish. Germany at once responded, and France will act accordingly. The sailing of the British fleet for an unknown destination undoubtedly also was taken note of by Berlin. Nicholas II. and William II. hold the peace of Europe in their hands.

While the situation is most dangerous, the issue of European peace or war has not yet been decided. German - Russian - Austrian "conversations" continue and while these go on there is hope. That Austria was curiously slow in launching her attack on Servia also was a straw suggesting that she was waiting for the word from Berlin or St. Petersburg. However, a strict censorship concerning the military movements prevents the exact movements of the troops reaching the outside world.

All the Austrian and Hungarian railways were taken over for military traffic and transportation for the general public was suspended. Servia is moving her troops. Strong forces were dispatched to the fortified towns of Valyevo and Uzhitza, on the Bosnian frontier, and to Svilajnatz, in the eastern part of the country, while strong divisions of volunteers reinforced by regulars are gathering along the river Drina, on the Bosnian frontier. The Montengrins also are making preparations and have stationed a brigade with a mountain battery near Friboj, where women are busy building earthworks. Servian and Austrian aviators at the same time are flying along the frontiers trying to locate the position of the opposing forces.

German and Austrian military papers have sneered at the Russian army and treated with contempt the Servian military establishment. This may be considered a part of the strategy of war. Military experts know that Russia and the Balkan states are the only countries in Europe that have what might be called veteran armies. Russia learned much from the war with Japan. In that conflict she was beaten by geography, so to speak. Her main base was 5000 miles away and she had only a single track railroad with which to reach the theatre of war. Nevertheless, with this handicap, and others, including meddling from St. Petersburg and blunders in generalship, she forced Japan to make peace minus any indemnity.

As regards Servia, she can put an army of between 300,000 and 400,000 war-inured veterans into the field—men who have smelt powder and won battles on many a hard-fought field. If to these Montenegro and Greece should add their experienced fighters, the Austrian army may receive some surprises.

Austria has overwhelming numbers and must win in the end, perhaps, but her men have never seen the smoke of battle nor heard the shriek of a hostile shell. Austria's progress through Servia will be no military promenade.

SERVIANS BLOW UP BRIDGE

First Engagement of the War Follows on Banks of the Danube

Vienna, July 30.—The Servians blew up the bridge spanning the river Save between the Austrian town of Semlin and Belgrade and the first engagement of the war followed.

The Austrian infantry and artillery stationed at Semlin, in conjunction with monitors on the Danube, fired on the Servian positions beyond the bridge. The Servians retreated after a short engagement, with trifling losses.

A small detachment of pioneers in co-operation with the customs officers captured two Servian steamers laden with ammunition and mines.

The pioneers and revenue guards after a short, sharp encounter overcame the Servian crews and took possession of the vessels and their dangerous cargoes. The captured ships were towed away by one of the Danube steamers.

Emperor Francis Joseph will return to Vienna from Ischl today and may then go to Budapest, in order to be nearer the scene of action.

CHARLES FRANCIS JOSEPH

He Will Lead Regiment In War Against Servia

Crown Prince Charles Francis Joseph will be one of the leading figures in the conflict between Austria and Servia. He is heir to the throne since the assassination of Francis Ferdinand. Francis Joseph is a young man and very popular throughout his country. He will probably lead a large part of the Austrian army.

RUSSIA STICKS TO SERVIA

Report That Only a Miracle Can Prevent General War

St. Petersburg, July 30.—In Russian eyes the die is cast. Only a political miracle can avert war.

Russia does not swerve from her determination to support Servia, and partial mobilization has been ordered. There is every indication that the whole vast military machinery of Russia will be set in motion.

Should Emperor Nicholas become generalissimo of the forces, as is understood, an immense wave of enthusiasm will sweep over Russia.

The political parties have sunk their differences. The general attitude is not "jingoistic," but one of resolute confidence in the justice of the country's cause and readiness to make all sacrifices.

The proposal, attributed to Austria, to discuss terms when Belgrade has been occupied, is regarded as impossible. It is pointed out that before the opening of hostilities Russia proposed to Austria a direct exchange of views, which Austria rejected.

The foregoing St. Petersburg dispatch was passed by the censor without revision—a fact which is considered highly significant.

Price of Wheat Soars

Chicago, July 30.—While stocks were tumbling and wiping out fortunes, because of the fear of a general European war, wheat soared and built up other fortunes within an hour.

It is estimated that between 25,000,000 and 30,000,0000 bushels of wheat were sold during the day. Men were swept off their feet and carried out of the pit on the backs of fighting brokers.

One hitherto obscure broker made a profit of nearly $150,000 in the wheat pit between 11 and 1:15 o'clock.

Balance of $600,000 For Salem Fire Sufferers Is Still In Hand

Salem, Mass., July 30.—Of the $600,000 contributed for the relief of the sufferers of the fire on June 25 only $215,375 has been expended thus far, it was announced at a meeting of the relief committee.

No definite information has been obtained as to when the government appropriation of $200,000 will be available, said Chairman Moore of the committee, except that it will be expended under the direction of the war department. The state contribution of $200,000 will not be available until after Oct. 1 next and will be disbursed by the state board of charity, he declared.

"INTERESTS" AT WHITE HOUSE

President Tells Them Prosperity Will Follow Co-operation

HE LISTENS TO SUGGESTIONS

Promises to Lay Them Before Proper Committees—Would Put Into Law What Moral Judgment of Community Demands—Tells Business Men Government Is Not Running Amuck

Washington, July 30.—Probably the most important conferences—with the possible exception of that with J. P. Morgan—with the representatives of the business interests of the country yet held by President Wilson took place at the White House.

Nearly every business organization in the general wholesale line was represented at one, while the second was with Hugh Chalmers, automobile manufacturer.

It was explained that the conferences, like all that have preceded them, were for the purpose of permitting a general exchange of views regarding business.

Various sentiments were developed from the visitors, but the president again insisted that if co-operation comes from business men generally there is no doubt that real prosperity will follow.

The wholesalers laid before the president a prepared argument against several features of the Clayton anti-trust bill and the trade commission bill, but said they approved of the general purposes of the proposed legislation. Wilson entered into a detailed discussion of the bills, and promised to lay his callers' suggestions before the proper committees of the senate.

In speaking to the wholesalers, the president said:

"We have had ten or fifteen years of ceaseless agitation about business. During that length of time we have read stories in the newspapers and in the magazines of the extravagantly wrong things that were going on, and an atmosphere of almost universal suspicion has been created, so that if a man became a business man in a big way, he had the uncomfortable feeling that his fellow-men probably looked upon him as not coming by his money in the right way.

"I think I am right in saying that what the present administration has tried to do has been to bring all those questions to a clearing house and settle up the balance of judgments. It may have seemed sudden to do so many things in one congress; but wasn't it high time to just have a clearance and settle these things?

"I am not maintaining that they are settled in the wisest way in which they could be settled; but certainly the men engaged have tried to settle them in the interest of the country, and, I think, in the main, they have succeeded.

"We had money conditions, banking conditions, economic conditions, of which the country said, 'They are wrong.' Now we have undertaken to give a remedy, and until that was done business could not settle down to anything, because the agitation was sure to come again.

"I just want to leave that thought with you, that we are not running amuck; we are trying to close this era of suspicion and of recrimination by putting in the law what the moral judgment of the community has said ought to be there.

"And I honestly believe that when it is done, and I hope it will not be more than six weeks now when it is done—we can all take off our coats and get to work and look each other in the face and say, 'This is a nation of honest men and we are going to do business as such.'

"Don't you think that is a reasonable view to take of the present situation?"

Huerta Charters Steamer For Himself and Other Refugees

Kingston, Jam., July 30.—Ex-President Huerta of Mexico, who arrived here July 24, completed arrangements to sail for Europe on Sunday next.

The general has chartered the steamer Patia, which now is at Port Limon, C. R., but which is due to arrive here on Sunday, to carry him and his party of Mexican refugees direct to a Spanish port, probably Santander.

Scranton, Pa., July 30.—Vice President Phillips of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Coal company mailed a circular letter to the 20,000 employes, declaring he will have no further conferences with the general grievance committee.

The mine workers agreed last week to go on strike unless the company recognized their committee.

HOW TO MAKE COVER FOR TELEPHONE BOOK.

A very convenient and attractive cover may be made for the telephone directory by sewing dark colored burlap or tapestry over pieces of pasteboard, the offending paper covers of the book being tucked inside enveloped straps of the fabric on the inner sides of the manufactured cover.

A two inch strip of the material left between the two stiff boards will fit over the back of the book, and tapes sewed to the ends of these strips and fastened within the book, about its center, will keep the directory securely within its artistically colored jacket. If snap buttons are sewed to the ends of the tapes the book will close more flatly than if the tapes are tied in a bowknot.

PACKING HINT.

How to Hang Away and Store Various Garments.

Heavy outdoor garments should be hung on a well padded coat hanger, with the weight entirely suspended from the shoulders. One piece dresses should be hung in the same way, held with a light, loose stitch taken in the shoulders of the garment. The sleeves of dresses and blouses which are to be hung in wardrobes and closets should be stuffed with tissue paper.

Light colored dresses that are apt to fade and soil readily should be protected from all danger of dust by being hung in fitted bags of calico or muslin, which slip on over the hanger and are rounded in shape at the top to fit the shoulder or curve line of the hanger. These coverings are made long and deep, reaching several inches below the lower edge of the dress and button at the top over the hanger. Blue tissue paper should always be placed between packed away white materials that are not washable, such as fine lace, chiffon, silk and satin.

Waists and dresses of chiffon and similar materials need most careful packing. Not only should such garments be thoroughly padded to hold their shape, but flat pieces of tissue paper should also be laid over each fold or fullness in the material after creasing or turning it to fit into the space.

When packing no creases should ever be left without padding, or the creases will become deep and so marked in the material that it is apt to become cut or to wear out at this point. Stuff the sleeves of coats with tissue paper. Lay creased pads of the tissue paper on the inside of the coat down each side. Put more padding in the bust. Fold the arms over the front of the coat. If it is necessary to bend the sleeves do so between the elbows and cuffs. Under the crease lay padding, over which fold the sleeve. If the skirt of the coat is long it should be folded over from the back to the front to fit the coat into the straight line at the sides. In these creases lay more padding.

The hat which is to be packed away at the end of the season should first be very carefully cleaned and freed from all dust both in the hat itself and in the trimming. It is better to rip off the trimming, as it will probably not be used in the same way next season. If it is ribbon or silk roll it carefully on stiff paper. The crown of the hat should be stuffed out with tissue paper and the brim fastened as flat and smooth as possible.

The important thing in the packing and keeping of furs is thorough cleanliness. They should be carefully shaken and exposed to the sun and fresh air for at least twenty-four hours before packing away. Wrap them in dark brown paper and hang in a dark, cool place. They should never be packed tightly, as this flattens down the hair and makes it hard to raise. It is better to hang them up.

Scarfs and coats should be hung upon hangers, covered with paper and then sewed into light muslin or linen bags. Muffs should be hung upon a rod, held by heavy cords at each end and stuffed out, and should never be laid together flatly with the weight of one muff pressing down upon another.

How to Take Proper Care of Your Shoes and Boots.

To prevent shoes from creaking put a small quantity of linseed oil on a plate or shallow pan and stand the sole of the shoe in it for a few hours. The creak will disappear, and the shoe will also last longer on account of this treatment. To soften leather there is nothing so penetrating and softening as neatsfoot oil. It will enter where other oils will not make a surface impression.

By proper care you can make rubber overshoes last much longer. After wearing them, while they are still damp, do not place them near a fire to dry, as the heat will crack and draw them up. If they are cut they can be neatly mended with a piece of thin rubber placed on the inside with a little glue, such as is used for bicycle tires. When they begin to look old and rusty they may be restored to the original black by applying a little vaseline or sweet oil with a flannel cloth. Always keep them in a cool, dry place.

If rubber boots wear out at the feet they may still be made quite useful by slipping a pair of snug fitting rubber shoes over them. To dry rubber boots quickly put a couple of quarts of oats in a baking pan and heat in the oven. When very hot pour into the boots and let stand until they are dry, which will be in about an hour.

If You Don't Happen to Go to Church Don't Scoff at Those Who Do

IF you don't care to join the ever increasing GO TO CHURCH throng DON'T BE A SCOFFER. Words are inadequate to describe the man who seeks to ridicule or make a jest of the uplift GO TO CHURCH movement. He who finds in it a target for his cheap wit should stop and think what the world today would be without churches. If you don't care to help along the movement don't decry it.

THIS GO TO CHURCH MOVEMENT IS A WINNER. IT IS SPREADING LIKE A PRAIRIE FIRE. IN THIS THE MOST MATERIAL AGE IT IS GRIPPING THE BIG MEN OF THE COUNTRY. THEY SEE THAT IT IS A FORCE FOR GOOD NOT ONLY TO THE INDIVIDUAL, BUT TO THE NATION.

If the man who scoffs at the GO TO CHURCH movement could see himself as others do he would realize what a mistake he is making. The GO TO CHURCH movement is a serious, broad minded proposition. It will not be denied. In every city, town and hamlet in the United States there is a genuine religious awakening. It is not confined to any class or sect.

IT IS PLAIN THAT THERE NEVER WAS A TIME WHEN RELIGION WAS REALLY DEAD EVEN AMONG THE WORST. IT WAS SIMPLY SLUMBERING. IT REQUIRED AN AWAKENING. AS IT GRADUALLY DAWNED THAT THE CHURCHES WERE BEING EMPTIED AND THAT FACT WAS BROUGHT TO THE MINDS OF THE PEOPLE, THEY WERE AROUSED.

The GO TO CHURCH call found a quick and powerful response. As the call became generally disseminated there was a magnificent advance on the house of God. If you haven't joined the throng do it at once. If you have a social engagement for next Sunday break it for an engagement with God. If you have arranged for an auto drive, a game of golf or some other form of recreation remember that you ought to serve God. Will you serve him? You will.

ON THREE COMPLAINTS.

Wilfred R. Shrigley of Boston, who was summoned into court a week ago for failing to stop when notified to do so by an officer, was summoned into the Quincy court this morning by Weymouth officers. It is alleged that after leaving Hingham he came through North Weymouth and was involved in an accident near the Back River bridge. He was arraigned on three separate complaints all of which were continued until Sept. 10, as his counsel will be unable to attend court before that time. Bonds of $100 was ordered on each complaint.

Nearly a hundred gaily decorated automobiles passed through Quincy Wednesday afternoon on their way to Nantasket. It was the annual outing of the Dorchester Brokers, Builders and Trade association.

ANCIENT IDOLS.

The room was scrupulously clean. It had been cleaned so often and watched so closely that it might be wondered how the ancient furniture still stood up against the attacks of dusting cloth and polishing flannel.

It was the sitting-room in the old farmhouse on Cobble Hill, the home of a long line of Carberrys, all farmers in a small way and all poor. The old land was good for a fair living if carefully worked, and that was all

The last of the Carberrys sat in the old rocker, with its green cushions, beside the table with its faded red cover and its kerosene lamp, and looked through the window across the snowy fields.

He was a man of sixty-five, a man whose life was all work, whose recreation was work, who bore the scars of work in wrinkled face and hands, in stooping shoulders and hollow chest.

Yet the eyes that looked out across the fields were mild and even gentle in their pale blueness, and the weather-stained old face with its fringe of white beard had a kindly expression.

A little wooden clock, black with age, ticked loudly on the shelf over the fireplace. The old man slowly turned and looked at it. It was 11 o'clock, a dull February morning, with a suggestion of coming snow. The old man sighed.

As he looked away from the yellow clock face with its bent hands, a woman came through the inner door. She was a few years younger than the old man, thin and angular, scrupulously neat and with a pleasant smile on her slender face.

"I'll be in presently, David," she said in a gentle voice that had a little sing-song tone to it. "Mornin' seems pretty long, doesn't it?"

The old man nodded.

"It's th' doing nothing makes it long," he answered. When you're doing nothing you get to thinking. An' you can't always think just th' kind o' thoughts that are pleasant. I was thinking just now of how little there's ever been in life for us. All work, work, an' nothing to show for it—an' past sixty, both of us."

The woman came to him and laid her thin hand on his shoulder.

"You're low-spirited, David," she said. "We can't complain. We're in good health an' we owe nobody nothing an' we've always been honest."

He slowly nodded.

"Of course, it's all right," he said. "I s'pose I'm a little tired of settin' round waiting for th' weather to improve."

"That's it," said the woman cheerily, "an' you'll feel better, too, when you get your dinner. Why, David," and she softly patted his shoulder, "you wouldn't change anything if you could."

"No," he agreed, "I guess I wouldn't."

"You are used to things as they are, an' you've grown to love them, an' they are all old friends."

"That's right, Lydia," he agreed again. "It's too late to think of changes now. Only—" and a shadow darkened his face, "I could wish the future looked just a little more secure."

"David," said the woman warningly, "where's your faith? We've always been provided for, an' we always will be." She suddenly smiled. "An' who knows but some of th' bread we've cast upon th' waters is floating back to us?"

A slow smile crossed the old man's wrinkled face.

"It looks as if our bread might be too heavy to float," he said.

The woman laughed aloud.

"That's a pretty bad compliment for th' best breadmaker in th' country," she said. "You don't deserve any more of it —not even a crust. Why, there never was a loaf that wasn't light enough to float— an' I just wouldn't be a mite surprised to hear one of them bumping against th' door at this very minute."

Rat-tat-tat!

Somebody was knocking at the outer door.

The woman gave a little start and stared down at the old man.

Rat-tat-tat!

She crossed to the door and opened it.

A man was standing there, a well-dressed man past thirty, a man who took off his hat and smiled.

"I am quite sure this is the home of David Carberry," he said. "It has been so often described to me. May I come in?"

She held the door open.

"Certainly, sir," she said. "Mr. Carberry is at home."

He stepped in and looked around. Then he smiled.

"It's just the same," he said. "Right down to the clock tick. May I take off my coat?"

He had it off in a moment, and laid it aside and then put out his hand.

"I'll shake hands with Aunt Lydia first," he said, with a quick nod to the old man. "I must call you Aunt Lydia. I can't help it. I've never known you by any other name. And now, Uncle David."

He was a very brisk young man and seemed to impart some of his briskness to the very atmosphere. The woman brought him a chair, and the old man straightened up and his dull eyes grew brighter.

"Are you someone we used to know?" David slowly asked.

"No," the young man answered. "I'm just an acquaintance by marriage." And he laughed merrily. He was very quick in his movements. He gave the room another sweeping glance. "Oh," he cried, "there's the steel engraving of Washington standing by his horse.. Yes, yes. And there are the wax flowers under the glass cover. And this is the colonial chair with the long rockers."

Aunt Lydia smiled and came a little nearer. There was something infectious about this young man's delightful familiarity.

"You seem to know a good deal about our home," she said.

"To be sure I do," he answered. "That's the door to the stairs with a sharp angle in them—and you never know what you'll meet when you turn the corner."

The old man frowned a little.

"Yet you say you are a stranger"

"Stranger!" cried the guest. "Nothing of the sort. I'll show you." He suddenly arose and stooping over the woman lightly kissed her cheek. "Shake hands again, Uncle David. I'm right at home here. Treat me like one of the family. Invite me to dinner. Bring out the plates with the blue pagodas on them, and if you have one of those famous mince pies in the buttery with the little wooden doors, set a generous section before me."

The old man laughed. It was impossible for him to resent this blithe youngster's assurance.

"Perhaps," he said, "you will let us know your name?"

"To be sure I will," replied the stranger. "It is Robert Stephens, but I am only Robert to you."

The old man shook his head.

"I do not recognize the name," he said.

"Of course you don't," said the stranger. "I told you I was an acquaintance by marriage only." He suddenly looked at his watch. Then he glanced at the dingy clock. "I'm going to set my watch by the clock," he explained. "Susie will like that."

"Susie!" said the woman, quickly.

"Yes, Susie."

His dark eyes watched her face.

"There was a Susie," she began.

"That's the one," he quickly interrupted.

"There was a Susie," said the old man, "an orphan girl. We took her in an' cared for her an' did our best for her, an' when she was fourteen she ran away—an' we have never heard from her since."

His tone grew hard as he spoke.

"That's Susie," said the stranger.

"Is—is she well?" stammered the woman.

"Very well and very happy," he answered. "She sent me here. Business took me to Sharpsville, and Susie insisted that I must come across and see you both—and the old home." He paused and looked around. "The old home that she has never forgotten." He paused again. "Now let me tell you Susie's story in a brief way. She ran away, that's true. She was thoughtless and ungrateful—but she was only fourteen. She longed to see the city—she wanted noise, excitement—it was in her blood. She ran away—she was only a wayward child. Thank heaven, she fell into safe hands. A good woman—she was poor in worldly goods, but her heart was rich in love—took Susie in and sent her to a school where she learned shorthand and typewriting and when she was eighteen, after her kind friend died, Susie found a place in the office of a great factory and there I met her. We were good friends very soon, and when I got a chance to go to Southern California, I asked her to be my wife. So we were married and went away and remained for eight years. Then business called me back to New York." He looked at the old couple and smilingly nodded. "That's the plain statement. Susie is well and happy. She has two children, a girl of seven and a baby boy—and she has a husband who wouldn't trade her for the pyramids with the sun and moon thrown in. Now, wait, I've got a message from Susie. I'm going to repeat what she said as well as I can. "Tell my dear friends," she said, 'that I have never forgotten their kindness. Tell them the lessons I learned in the old home have helped me and strengthened me and kept me good. Tell them I am sorry I hurt their feelings by my ingratitude and ask them to excuse me because I was only a foolish child. Say to them that every board in the old floor, every

GIRLS' TIES.

Those of Windsor Silk In the College Colors Will Be Popular.

PLAID WINDSOR TIE.

Plaid silk windsor ties knotted under a roll collar of white pique are striking and please the fancy of the school or college girl. They harmonize admirably with the semitailored gowns which are suitable for classroom wear. When seeking something that will be a chic and appreciated addition to the college girl's wardrobe do not forget the utility of the windsor tie. Choose it of the school or college colors.

SEEN ON THE BEACH.

Bathing Costumes That Follow Fashions Approved For Ordinary Wear.

Bathing suits have lost their old time conventionality and adopted all the whims of the season—the tunic, ruffles and even the many colored striped materials.

Not to be outdone by other styles and fashions, those that govern bathing attire have taken cognizance of Roman striping and Scotch plaids.

Many of the caps show visors or trimming bands or puffed crowns of stripes or plaids. Some of the new bathing suits, too, are trimmed with girdles and waistcoats of stripes or plaids.

Bathing caps that are especially desirable have visors of rubberized silk mounted on stiff frames. These caps save much discomfort from the bright sunlight of the seashore. Some very pretty bathing caps made of rubberized silk are shirred into a rosette over each ear.

The small corsage bouquets of rubber flowers that made their appearance last year are still in evidence for the bather, and sometimes rubber flowers are used as trimming for bathing caps.

The slippers most popular for bathing are in the tango style, laced up the leg.

Combination Salads.

A delicious combination salad is the following: Shred fresh, crisp lettuce and on it arrange thin slices of beets and the whites of hard boiled eggs chopped fine. Add finely chopped gherkins and a little minced onion. Serve with mayonnaise dressing which is flavored with mustard.

Whatever sort of combination salad you make, prepare it daintily. Garnish it with slices of hard boiled eggs or minced white and yolk of hard boiled egg, olives, parsley, slices of pickles, slices of ripe tomato, nut meats or cheese balls.

Have the lettuce with which it is served always crisp and chilled. Then, no matter what sort of vegetables you utilize, the salad resulting will be worth eating.

Putting Away Dried Fruit.

Any dried fruit if put away with a little sassafras bark, about a handful to a bushel, will keep unmolested by worms. Dried fruit will have a better flavor if soaked before cooking in warm water to which a pinch of salt has been added.

Keeping Fish Fresh.

If you must keep fish for a time do not put one on top of the other. Instead wrap each fish separately in a clean cloth wrung out of cold salt water and put in a pail on ice.

FASHION'S FOIBLES.

Rose colorings are seen everywhere.

The separate blouse is immensely popular.

Skirts of the newest frocks are trimmed with circular flounces, sometimes piped with plain colors.

Yolk of egg yellow is one of the smart shades.

Stockings should match the color of the frock.

Dresses for the street are most useful when made with coatee waists.

Modish white shoes are of white duck and made in colonial style.

The prettiest afternoon dresses are almost as simple as those for morning.

Collars and cuffsipes are so much alike this season it is hard to identify them apart.

Taupe, purple and turquoise is a surprising color combination seen in silks.

TRAINED SEALS FEATURE ACT.

Other Good Things with the La Tena Circus, Witnessed by Large Crowd.

"Those who saw the La Tena circus June 2d, afternoon and evening came away feeling that they had gotten their money's worth," says the Marlboro Enterprise. "In fact a better circus for its size has never been seen in Marlboro. There was a fair sized crowd in the afternoon and a large audience in the evening.

"Perhaps the most satisfying feature of the program were the trained seals. There have been trained seals in Marlboro before, but there was never one that could trot with this collection.

"A wild animal act in which a woman went into a cage filled with young lions, kept the attention of the audience riveted on her every action. The animals at times appeared very fierce, but the woman had them under subjection, so that they obeyed her every wish.

"Trained ponies were also a red letter event. The little fellows were the best thing in their line that has ever appeared here. In addition to the features enumerated, there were horse riding acts, trapeze performances, slack wire stunts and many other things that made the interest linger until the last man was out in the ninth inning.

Will exhibit at Quincy Aug. 3.

HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL

Call for Candidates to be Issued at Early Date

Captain Paul Larkin of the football team of the Quincy High school is preparing to issue a call for candidates for this year's eleven, and it is expected that nearly all who will come out for the team will report, since few are away on vacations.

The schedule commences this year earlier than usual, the first game being booked for Sept. 19, a short time after school opens. Because of this an early start will have to be made to get the boys into condition.

The combination this season should be a winning one, the only man lost through graduation being Leon White. His place will be hard to fill, but there is no question as to the possibility of some of the available material being pounded into shape. James Jenkins who secured his diploma, is expected back this year, and will be a valuable asset to the team.

Frank L. Mansur, assistant to Principal Ernest L. Collins, may not be able to devote much time to coaching the boys during the summer practice, because both men are at work completing the year's program, but after the opening of school several hours an afternoon will be at his disposal.

Many hoped that the plans of the proposed alumni association would be realized and that the services of a professional coach could be furnished this season, but although the arrangements are going forward steadily they have not reached a point as yet where this will be possible.

Practically all of the interscholastic captains are issuing call for practice. At Woltham the candidates have been keeping in condition all summer, Coach Harry Dame having distributed footballs to prospective players when school closed.

LETTER CARRIERS WIN AT POOL

The uch discussed pool match between Barron and Mitchell, clerks at the Quincy Post Office and Connor and Reilley, letter carriers, was played on Wednesday evening and resulted in the latter winning by a score of 75 to 54.

Unusual interest was attached to the game, owing to a written challenge issued by Barron and Mitchell, who it appears, have of late acquired considerable fame as pool players. Barron is seeking another match but there is a rumor that John T. Cain, manager of the winning combination, will keep him waiting several weeks.

IN PLAYGROUND LEAGUE.

The South Quincy boys will endeavor to the show the Ward Two team how to play the national game Friday morning at Ward Three playground. The Point team won the game the other day by a score of 3 to 2, and the losers say that there will be nothing to it after this game, as they are out for revenge.

Real Heroism.

To live well in the quiet routine of life; to fill a little space because God wills it; to go on cheerfully with a petty round of of little duties, little avocations; to smile for the joys of others when the heart is aching—who does this, his works will follow him. He may not be a hero to the world, but he is one of God's heroes.—Dean Farrar.

Not Triplets.

My little grandson was told by his mother to run across the street and inquire of a lady who was going by with three little babes in a cart if they were triplets. He soon came back, looking much disappointed, and said: "No, they are not triplets. They were born the same day, but two of them are girls and the other one is a boy."—Exchange

HELPED PREMIER OUT WITH MONEY

Claim of Contractor In New Brunswick Graft Probe

St. John, July 30.—An alleged payment of $2000 to Provincial Premier Flemming was described by John Kennedy of Woodstock, a railway contractor, at the resumption by a royal commission of the investigation of charges of extortion in connection with the building of the St. John Valley railway.

"You have a right to help us out with some money," said Flemming, according to the witness, who added that the following day he drew $2000 from the bank and handed it personally to the premier, who had called at his office.

The payment, Kennedy said, had nothing to do with getting contracts. He understood that the money was for campaign purposes.

PEACE TERMS ARE ARRANGED

Constitutionalists to Take Over Mexican Government

BOALT IS ORDERED DEPORTED

Court of Inquiry Shows That War Correspondent Sent False Report of Mexican Prisoners Being Subjected to Law of Flight by Americans—Called Reckless Fabrication

Washington, July 30.—General Carranza and Provisional President Carbajal have agreed on a basis for the arrangement of peace in Mexico, according to a message received here by Jose Castellot, personal representative of Carbajal.

Castellot showed Secretary Bryan his latest advices from Mexico City, which stated that General Villar and Justice Allende, Carbajal's two delegates to Carranza, have been instructed to carry out in detail the general basis of peace "already agreed upon."

That was interpreted by Castellot to mean that, through private channels and through Reginaldo Oepeda, advance delegate of the Carbajal government, now with Carranza, a definite understanding has been reached for a peaceful transfer of the government at Mexico City to the constitutionalists.

With respect to amnesty and guarantees, Carranza, it is understood, will promise immunity to all except those directly responsible for the overthrow of Madero. Practically all of those said to be guilty have fled Mexico and that exception will not be opposed by the Carbajal government.

An agreement whereby General Zapata's forces are to co-operate with the constitutionalists in restoring peace throughout Mexico has been arranged by delegates at Vera Cruz. A definite idea of General Villa's intentions is expected soon.

Secretary of War Garrison announced that he directed Brigadier General Funston at Vera Cruz to deport from Mexico Fred L. Boalt, a correspondent for the Newspaper Enterprise association, who sent out a sensational story that an American naval officer applied the "law of flight" to Mexican prisoners. A court of inquiry pronounced the story false.

"There was absolutely no truth in his story," said Garrison, "and he had no reason to think it was true. It was a pure, sheer, reckless fabrication, and Boalt is not entitled to be considered a reputable correspondent."

The time and manner of Boalt's deportation will be left with Funston.

The article which caused Boalt's arrest and the order for his deportation and now threatens to develop into a congressional investigation was, in part, as follows:

"When the Americans took Vera Cruz an ensign, in his student days perhaps the best fullback Annapolis ever had, had command of a squad of men who took many prisoners.

"The prisoners were coralled in a room. At a word from the ensign they were released and told to scurry for the next corner. Those who reached it in safety, in the opinion of the ensign, deserved to live. But very few did.

"The ensign applied the "ley de fuga"—the law of flight. The law of flight is not nice. The rules of civilized warfare forbid the application of the law of flight.

"But war is war and one American naval officer did apply the law of flight. He admits it; boasts about it. Curiously enough, his friends applaud him for it.

"Hundreds of American army and navy officers and men know that this ensign and his men applied the forbidden law of flight—made sport of prisoners of war and even non-combattants, giving them a flying start and "potting" them as they fled. I have been told that it was fun to see them run."

In this article the name of Ensign Richardson was not mentioned, but his identity was easily traceable from the description of the officer who was accused of performing a deed of cruelty not tolerated in civilized warfare.

A naval court of inquiry completely exonerated Richardson of charges made against him by Boalt.

MUST FACE GRAND JURY

Former City Controller of Louisville Charged With Theft of $14,500

Louisville, July 30.—Samuel M. Wilhite, former city controller, charged with the embezzlement of $14,500, waived examination in police court and was held to the grand jury. His bond was fixed at $10,000, in default of which he was remanded to jail.

Wilhite is charged with hypothecating bonds of contractors deposited with the city to insure the contracts.

Potash Miners Blown to Pieces

Cassel, Ger., July 30.—Twelve potash miners were blown to pieces by the explosion of dynamite while they were sinking a shaft near here.

HELD UP BY BANDITS

Tourists In Yellowstone Park Stages Relieved of $3000

Gardiner, Mont., July 30.—Stage coaches of four of the largest transportation companies operating in Yellowstone park were held up by two men. The 165 passengers on the stages were robbed of their money, and it is reported the robbers obtained a total of $3000.

The hold-ups occurred at Spring Creek Canyon. Only one robber participated actively in the hold-ups, the second man remaining behind trees as a lookout.

The transportation companies have offered rewards aggregating $500 for the capture of the bandits.

The highwaymen had the advantage, because government regulations prevent any person except those with permits from carrying arms in the park. The bandit who did the actual work of robbing had only to cover the driver with his gun.

TWENTY HURT IN CRASH

Failure of Signals to Work Causes Collision of Trolley Cars

Lynn, Mass., July 30.—In a head-on collision at high speed on a sharp curve, two cars of the Bay State street railway were wrecked near the Peabody line last night, and twenty passengers were injured, one perhaps fatally.

Failure of the signals to work properly is given by the management of the road as the cause of the accident. Both motormen, it is said, were given white lights instead of red by the automatic signaling device as they approached the curve on a single track line.

Warburg Will Appear Before Senate Banking Committee

Washington, July 30.—Paul M. Warburg, the New York banker, whose nomination to the federal reserve board has long been held up in the senate, communicated with the White House and later it was announced that he would appear before the senate banking committee, which wishes to inquire into his qualifications for the office.

A letter from President Wilson urging Warburg to alter his position, and a conference in New York with Senator Hitchcock, evidently induced him to reconsider his refusal to respond to the committee's invitation.

The general opinion in the senate is that the committee will favorably report Warburg's nomination and that it will be confirmed.

COOK BURNED TO DEATH

Employer Ordered to Settle Bills of Doctor and Undertaker

Hartford, July 30.—Basing his ruling upon an ante-mortem statement in which the woman denied being a habitual user of kerosene, Compensation Commissioner Chandler decided that an employer should pay $100 for burial expenses and doctor's bills by reason of the death from burning of his cook, a negress.

The woman's clothing caught fire from kerosene she was using at a range. The employer contested the claim on the ground that, although the cook had been warned of the danger, she persisted in using oil to kindle fires.

COULD NOT STAND DISGRACE

Man Dives to Death In Jail When About to Be Sentenced

Buffalo, July 30.—S. R. Schmidt of Huntington, L. I., who had been in Erie county jail since July 16 on the charge of defrauding a local hotel, committed suicide three hours before he was to have been sentenced by diving from the third story gallery to the cement floor. His skull was crushed.

A note found in Schmidt's clenched fist declared that he was innocent of any crime and could not stand the disgrace of arrest.

CONNIE MACK HAS AN INDIAN BATTERY.

Connie Mack has an Indian battery in the incubator. If he ever gets to spring it he will have a battery unique in the majors, as the Indians are brothers.

Connie's young redskins are John and Joe Graves. Joe, eighteen, is a pitcher; John, twenty, is a catcher. They are fellow tribesmen of Chief Bender.

The Graves brothers played ball on the reservation and later at Flandrau school. Joe attracted Mack's attention while pitching for Brainard, Minn., where Joe Bush got his start.

WANT A TWO SPORT RULE.

Conference Athletic Association Proposes Changes In Present Code.

Three new rules, which must be referred to the faculties for passage, were adopted by faculty committees of the Intercollegiate Conference Athletic association at its annual meeting. Following are the proposals:

First.—That athletes will be allowed to compete in only two branches of sport during the scholastic year.

Second.—That a conference athlete cannot try out for an Olympic team under the tutelage of an athletic club coach, but must be coached by his college mentor or must train himself for the event.

Third.—Any student or athlete may take charge of a playground where gymnastic ability is not required without jeopardizing his amateur or collegiate athletic standing.

Only the first proposal has any bearing on the present conference relations, it was stated, and doubt was expressed if it will meet sufficient approval to insure its passage. The proposal was a compromise of the resolution offered by Professor G. A. Goodenough of Illinois to allow a student to compete in only one branch of sport. The general argument in favor of the resolution is that too much athletic work impairs a student's health.

CORNELL LOSES ATHLETES.

Graduation Takes Away Track and Other Stars From University.

The champion Cornell university track team has lost by graduation Captain Sheldon of the cup winning squad, Dave Caldwell, who set a new half mile mark; Morrison, the high and broad jumper, and Burton Brodt, the hurdler and broad jumper, who scored the greatest number of points for Cornell.

The football team has lost James Munns, captain of the 1913 football team, which beat Pennsylvania for the first time in a decade. Schirick, captain of the baseball team, also left college. Bert Halsted, leader of the champion basketball team for two years, also went out.

Thomas L. S. Boak, captain of the champion wrestling team, who did not lose a match in three years, is also through.

HOBBY JOINS RED SOX.

Reds' First Sacker Now on Way to Become American League Star.

While the New York Americans were dickering with the Cincinnatis for Dick Hoblitzel, first baseman, Owner Lannin of the Boston Red Sox stepped in and bought the player. He is considered one of the best fielding first basemen in the game. Herzog has long been dissatified with the big Teuton's showing at the bat and recently made a deal with the Cubs for Fred Mollwitz, benching Hobby.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

YOU CAN'T GO WRONG IN FOLLOWING ADVERTISEMENTS.

An Ownerless Million

How an Immense Sum of Money Can Cause Its Possessor Annoyance and Trouble.

By THOMAS HOWELL HEATH

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

I jumped on the Congressional Limited one winter afternoon as the train was moving out of the Washington station.

It was a hurried business trip to New York, of which I had only an hour's notice. I had the afternoon papers and a small hand bag.

When shown to my seat in the parlor car I noticed that the chair next to mine was occupied by a woman; also that she was pretty, aristocratic looking and dressed fashionably.

So far as could be seen, she had nothing in the shape of bundles or baggage with her except what appeared to be a lot of stationery wrapped in pink paper and tied with a red cord, which she kept on her lap and carelessly handled from time to time.

Just before the train reached Philadelphia she got up, stood a moment apparently undecided and then, turning to me and extending the box in pink, surprised and pleased me by asking with a smile, "May I trouble you to look after this?"

"Certainly, certainly, with pleasure," I replied as soon as I could get my wits together, but she had not waited to hear.

She had left the pink covered box in my hands and had gone, I supposed, to the buffet car.

After the train had left Broad street station and the woman had not returned I asked the porter what had become of her and was astonished when he said that she had got off at Philadelphia.

It was evident that the pink covered box had been intentionally left with me, but why, and what did it contain?

Great as my curiosity was to know the contents of the box, I would not

A MILLION DOLLARS ALL IN MY POSSESSION.

unwrap and open it in the car, and when I did open it in the privacy of my room in a New York hotel I was very glad that I had placed that restraint upon myself.

What sort of stationery do you suppose was in that pink covered box?

Ten packages of crisp, new United States $1,000 gold certificates, with a band of paper around each package as they used them in banks. Upon each band was written "One Hundred Thousand Dollars," 100 notes in each package, a grand total of $1,000,000.

My first impulse was to take the million dollars and go to Europe on the first available steamer.

Impulse, did I say? It was really a calm determination that lasted through the greater part of the night and included the selection of a steamer sailing the next day and was not abandoned until my avarice was convinced that a large reward, at least 10 per cent of the whole, perhaps double that, would be offered by the owner of the money, who would be sure to advertise for its return.

The decision that it would be better to have one-tenth of a million as a reward for honesty than the entire million as a weight upon my conscience was not easily arrived at, but, once reached, it was clung to with all my strength.

Sleep was entirely out of the question with $1,000,000 in cash in the room with me. I spent the night thinking, and such thoughts!

In the morning I tore up the box, which had really originally contained stationery, and carefully dropped the pieces into a waste pipe. The money I wrapped in my nightshirt, which I put in the hand bag.

This hand bag was near being the death of me that day.

I ate breakfast with the hand bag in my lap and one hand always touching it and attended to the business which had carried me to New York without ever once letting it loose, and I am sure I never took my eyes entirely away from it once while on the train returning to Washington.

I bought all the New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore papers, but there was no advertisement in any of them concerning the loss of a large sum of money.

Another sleepless night in the room with a million dollars followed my return to Washington. The next morning I hired a box in a safe deposit vault and got rid of the awful and wearing responsibility.

I waited a week, and still there was no advertisement of the lost fortune. My associates began to comment on my increasing restlessness and nervousness and to suggest that I would better take a rest.

I intended to take a long rest and a luxurious one as soon as the ownership of the million dollars was settled.

Perhaps the money was stolen property and the thieves were afraid to advertise its loss. I concluded to advertise for the owner myself.

After many advertisements had been written and torn up I decided on this:

Large sum of money left on Congressional Limited between Washington and New York. Will be restored to owner upon proper identification. Address Caretaker, P. O. box 1911, Washington, D. C.

For a full week this was run in all the daily papers of Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York at an expense to me of $39.70. I took receipts from each paper and preserved them as souvenirs of my stay in millionairedom.

I had any number of answers, but none of them got within a million miles of my million.

Having sought diligently for the owner of the million dollars and spent my own good money freely in advertising, without success, was I not now the legal and legitimate owner of it?

That question had my poor brain doing a continuous twenty-four hour stunt. I answered it in the affirmative twenty times a day, but the plaguy thing wouldn't stay answered.

I began to feel quite as worn and haggard as I looked and to wonder why the possession of a million dollars, with the probability that it would all be mine growing into a certainty, did not bring me more pleasure. I asked myself whether all millionaires were as much troubled about their money as I was.

Six weeks had passed since the million dollars was placed in my possession, and I began to make plans as to what I would do with it. I no longer expected the owner to turn up.

I had not mentioned the money or the odd manner in which it had come into my possession to any one and was still undecided as to how I should account for my sudden wealth when I began to spend the money.

After mature deliberation I decided to make my appearance as a man of wealth gradually.

I would make a deposit of $10,000 in one bank.

After taking ten of the $1,000 notes from my safe deposit box it occurred to me that it would be a good idea to carry them to the United States treasury and get notes of smaller denominations for them.

On reaching the cash room of the treasury I handed the ten $1,000 notes through the wire wicket teller's window and asked that he give me fifties for them.

It did not surprise me to notice a rather astonished and startled look on the teller's face as he took the notes or that he should step to one side and examine one of them carefully through a glass.

I did not suppose that ten $1,000 notes were passed through the wicket very frequently by any one except runners for the banks; consequently it seemed the natural thing that they should be carefully examined.

His deliberation, however, in counting and recounting those fifty dollar notes was getting on my nerves, and I was about to speak impatiently to him when I felt a light touch on my shoulder and a low but distinct voice said near my ear, "I want you."

"Well, I'm here," I answered, facing the speaker impatiently. "What do you want with me?"

"I want you to go with me," he replied with a smile, without raising his voice.

"Why should I go with you?" I asked rather sharply. "I don't know you."

"No, but I think you'll go," he answered in the same exasperatingly calm tone.

"Why?" I demanded, somewhat frightened by his manner, without having any clear idea why I should be.

"Because," he said, almost in a whisper, "you are under arrest."

"What for?" I managed to ask, at the same time trying hard to think of any reason why I should be arrested.

"Trying to pass counterfeit money," he replied, turning back his coat and allowing me to see the United States secret service badge he wore.

"You are out of your head," I retorted angrily, but at the same time the awful truth flashed upon me—my million was counterfeit.

"That may be," he said as he reached for the notes, which the teller handed him, each with the word "Counterfeit" cut across its face. "You can talk about that to Chief Wilkes. Come!"

Fortunately I was well known to Chief Wilkes. He pot only accepted my story, but added to it by telling me that the woman had learned from a confederate on the train that his men were hot on her trail and, being obliged to get rid of the counterfeit money somewhere, had given it to me, thereby securing her own release when she was arrested and searched immediately after leaving the train.

The chief went with me to the safe deposit vault, got the rest of the counterfeits and destroyed them. He congratulated me on getting out of an ugly predicament so easily.

To this day I am unable to say with certainty whether relief or regret was my stronger feeling over the loss of the ownerless million dollars.

FOR MATURE YEARS.

Dark Blue Serge Tailored Suit Suitable For Elderly Woman.

MODISH SERGE SUIT.

Of dark blue serge in the latest model, and in perfect accord with what the middle aged woman should wear is this tailored suit, with its suggestion of a cape. Good taste is exemplified rather than extremes of style—a hat of black straw banded with taffeta ribbon and boasting a cluster of uncurled ostrich.

CLEANING HATS.

Oxalic Acid In Solution Gives Good Results For Fine Straws.

A panama hat is a delightful accessory to one's summer wardrobe. It may be cleaned or bleached repeatedly. A teaspoonful of oxalic acid to a pint of lukewarm water will safely clean a panama, leghorn, milan and other light straw hats. Oxalic acid is poisonous and must be kept away from children.

Apply to the hat with a soft brush or sponge. Clean only a small portion at a time and then rub off as much moisture as possible with a clean white cloth, as in this way there will be less tendency of the hat losing its shape.

Go over the entire hat carefully and when partly dry press with a moderately hot iron over a muslin cloth. Lemon juice may be used instead of the oxalic acid with good results.

TAFFETA AND TOWELING.

Here's a Striking Combination of Materials In Smart Afternoon Frock.

The oddest combinations of fabrics are sanctioned this season. One of these is cleverly carried out in the case of the gown of embroidered toweling and white pussy willow taffeta shown here. There is a double tunic effect, one of embroidered toweling being worn over a tunic of the taffeta. The skirt is slightly caught up.

SILK AND COTTON COSTUME.

How to Make Pillows.

When making pillows put the feathers into a cheesecloth case and then slip this into the regular case of ticking. When the pillow is soiled the ticking can be taken off and washed and the feathers washed, sunned and dried without emptying them from the cheesecloth. The latter should be made much larger than the ticking to allow for the spreading of the feathers.

WOLLASTON MAN VICE PRESIDENT

Herbert W. Pinkham of Wollaston was elected vice president of the United States League of Local Building and Loan associations, at its annual session which closed in Washington on Wednesday. Mr. Pinkham is one of the best known men in the state in co-operative bank circles. He is the secretary-treasurer of the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank association, and treasurer of the Wollaston co-operative bank. He is also treasurer of Wollaston Masonic lodge. Charles E. Clark of Covington, Ky., was elected as president of the association. San Francisco was selected for the annual meeting in 1915.

BURGLARIZED SECOND TIME.

The Coliseum bowling alleys were burglarized after they closed Wednesday night and five sets of pool balls and five cue balls were stolen. Entrance was gained by forcing a rear window. A small quantity of cigarettes and tobacco was also taken.

A week ago Tuesday, the cigar case at the alleys was cleaned out, and although the police have been at work on the case nothing definite has been uncovered that will lead to the detection of the burglars.

Because the summer weather has affected business the alleys have been closed early and it was a few minutes after eleven when John DiSalvo turned the key in the lock and left everything in good order on Wednesday evening.

He opened up this morning and shortly after discovered that the balls were missing. He communicated immediately with police headquarters and an Inspector has been assigned to the case.

DISTRICT COURT.

John Brown was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Walter Desmond was arraigned for assault on Arthur N. Carter at Braintree. Case continued until Aug. 24.

Wilfred R. Shrigley was arraigned on three complaints for violation of the automobile laws at Weymouth. Case continued under bonds of $300 until Sept 10.

COL. KINCAIDE NOT CANDIDATE

Declines to Run Again for Representative to Congress

When the State Committee of the Progressive party meets in Boston on Friday to take an inventory of its candidates for the various offices on their ticket it is expected that Col. Henry L. Kincaide of this city will announce that has withdrawn from the congressional race and will not be an aspirant for any elective office.

The announcement will be a surprise to the party leaders who have felt that Quincy's "live wire" intended to make the run for congress.

Col. Kincaide met defeat two years ago at the hands of Edward Gilmore of Brockton by only a few votes. The filing of his nomination papers was the first act of a political nature he ever assented to and between then and election day he toured the district with such results that it was said at the time that if he had one more week to campaign in his victory would have been certain.

A list of prospective candidates from the Neponset line to the lower end of the 24th district have withheld making their plans known, pending the announcement of Col. Kincaide's position, and before midnight Friday several may enter the race from both the Republican and Progressive parties.

Colonel Kincaide's reason for declining to stand this fall is a business one. His large interests in Boston and Quincy require more time each day, and it would only be at the sacrifice of these that he could fill his post in Washington if elected. It is admitted throughout the length and breadth of the district that the next representative would be the Quincy man and although the withdrawal will be a disappointment to many of the Progressives, it will be as serious a one to hundreds of independent voters who intended supporting him in the fight this year.

MUST GO TO WORK.

Dennis McCarthy, the West Quincy boy who it is alleged visited the City Treasurers office some weeks ago and drew the pay envelopes belonging to two of the city employees obtaining thereby over $34, is to be given an opportunity to make restitution. The case came up a few days ago in the juvenile court where it is alleged that the boy confessed to obtaining the money, and he was sentenced to the Lyman school for boys. The sentenced was suspended and he was placed in charge of the State agent and will be given an opportunity to make restitution. The boy's parents are poor and he is one of a half dozen children which the father has hard work to support, and it would be a great hardship if the father was compelled to make good the loss.

The boy told State Agent Carey that he had never done any work, and was informed by Mr. Carey that it was time he began. It is understood that an arrangement is to be made to find employment for the boy in one of Commissioner Browns departments, and whatever he earns will be applied toward liquidating the debt. Under the terms of the probation, State Agent Carey can surrender him at any time, in which event he would be sent to the Lyman school. As long as the boy behaves himself he will be at liberty.

SALEM BALANCE LARGE.

The Salem relief committee reported Wednesday that of the $600,000 contributed for the relief of the sufferers of the fire June 25, only$215,375 has been expended thus far.

No definite information has been obtained as to when the Government appropriation of $2000,000 would be available, said John F. Moore, chairman of the committee, except that it would be expended under the direction of the War Department. The State contribution of $200,000 would not be available until after Oct. 1 next, and would be disbursed by the State Board of Charity, he declared.

It is proposed, Mr. Moore said, to use all or part of the $400,000 remaining from the relief fund to assist the several hundred tradesmen who were burned out.

RUN TO MARBLEHEAD.

The annual run of the Quincy Yacht club to Marblehead will take place Sunday. The purpose of the run is to attend the races of the Eastern, Corinthian and Boston Yacht Clubs Aug. 3 to 8. Suitable prizes have been offered for the best corrected time in each class.

FARM LIFE AGREES WITH MAYOR

Mayor Miller came up from Hingham this morning, arriving at City Hall soon after 10.30. He immediately went into conference with representatives of fire apparatus manufacturers, who had submitted bids for the tractor truck for the steamer at the Central fire station. The Mayor is looking considerable better than when he went away, and he says that he feels better. Life on the farm seems to agree with him. He will return to Hingham later in the day.

The contract for the tractor truck was awarded to the A. & B. Co. of Providence, R. I. The bid of this company was $4,000 the amount named in the suplementary budget.

While it has not been given out, it is reported that the Mayor has been successful enough to have included with the new tractor the necessary changes in the rear wheels of the steamer. It was necessary to have larger tired wheels on the steamer and the estimated cost of these was $250. This amount was not provided for in the suplementary budget.

The A. & B. Co., is the same concern which manufactured the steamer known then as the Amoskeag Co. The steamer will be loaded onto the cars at the freight station in a few days, and during its absence the company will supply the city with a relief steamer, somewhat lighter than the Quincy steamer. About sixty days will be required before the tractor is delivered. It will take the place of the forward wheels and will be bolted to the steamer truck.

It is said that when in service it will be placed in the rear of the Central fire station, where the auto chemical is now kept, and that the auto chemical will be placed on the main floor of the station.

ASSAULT ALLEGED.

Walter Desmond was arrested at West Quincy on Tuesday night by Officer Hinchon for Braintree officers on a warrant charging assault. The Braintree officers claim that Desmond assaulted Arthur N. Carter of Myrtle street, Braintree, a week ago, and that Carter is still in a dangerous condition at a Boston hospital.

The alleged assault took place in a South Braintree shoe factory where both men are employed. It is claimed that Carter was struck on the face and that the inside of his cheek was lacerated against a broken tooth, as a result of the blow and that blood poisioning has set in.

STEEL SHELVING.

Steel shelving is being placed in several of the vaults at City Hall, in compliance with the order of the State agent who visited the city on a tour of inspection some time ago and made certain recommendations. All of the wooden shelving in the vault in the City Clerks office has been replaced with steel, as has also the wooden shelving in the vault in City Treasurer's office. The shelving in the vault in the office of Burial Places and Inspector of Buildings department is being changed.

GUY HAM A CANDIDATE.

Guy Ham of Dorchester who got the surprise of his life when he was defeated last year for reelection to the Executive Council by Charles W. Guy of Quincy, announces that he will be a candidate for the Republican nomination in September. With the Progressives in the field there was a triangular fight last year.

MORE TAG DAY MONEY.

The receipts of Quincy tag day for Salem have been increased $8 by subscription from the Finnish Congregational church of Ward Four, and $3.90 more from Ward Three, making the net total $1,086.15.

A COLD JULY DAY.

Wednesday was the coldest July 29 since 1898, when the minimum temperature was 57 degrees. On Wednesday it was 58 with 73 as a maximum.

ANCIENT IDOLS.

shingle in the old roof is dear to me—and add that the hours I passed in the old home are hours that I remember better and better as I grow older and wiser, and that I would not lose the precious memory of them. And tell them last of all that I am coming to see them when my baby boy is old enough to come with me."

He paused and looked at the old couple. The woman had turned away and was softly crying, and the old man stared hard at the pattern of the faded table-cloth.

Suddenly the woman turned.

"You were wrong, David," she cried, and she was half laughing, half crying. "The bread upon the waters did float back."

"I was wrong, Lydia," said the old man, and his voice trembled.

"And you are both quite happy and contented?" the guest inquired.

"Yes," the old man answered.

"And have you no desire for new things, for a change to modern ways and modern improvements?"

"No," the old man answered. "I like the old things best. Here is my old Bible—it was my grandfather's. The cover is coming off and the leaves are loosened, but there is no other book like it." He laughed. "Yonder on the hook is my old overcoat—I've worn it five and twenty years."

The woman laughed.

"Father is wedded to his ancient idols," she said. "Why, he even drinks the same kind of coffee he drank during the war."

"Perhaps," said the guest, "Uncle David likes the old things because he has never been tempted by the new."

But the old man only shook his gray head.

And the guest, watching him, softly smiled.

Every moment of Robert Stephens' two-hour visit was enjoyed by the old couple. And he went away leaving a deeply cherished promise that they would hear from him soon again.

A week later a special messenger from the office of the express company in the village brought a package to the farmhouse.

And in it they found a letter from Susie.

"Dearest friends," it began. "I am sending you some things herewith that I hope you will like. The Bible is the newest one I could find, with the latest maps and all. Robert said the dear old book was quite worn out. And the overcoat is to take the place of the one that has seen such good service. And the coffee-pot is considered a modern marvel. Yes, and I have sent Uncle David a two-pound package of coffee—the latest blend of java and mocha. Try it and tell me how you like it when I come to see you in the summer time. Robert unites with me in sending love. Good-bye, kind friends,—Susie."

Two months or more passed by and then on a day in early April the husband of Susie came again.

"Just a flying visit," he cried, as he greeted them. "The new railway brought me in a double sense, and I couldn't resist the temptation to drop in."

They were unmistakably glad to see him.

"And you will stay to dinner, Robert?" Aunt Lydia asked.

"Yes, thank you. I want a cup of coffee from the new coffee-pot."

Aunt Lydia flushed.

"I-I couldn't bring myself to use it, Robert," she said. "It was so fine, so new—and I didn't think I could understand it. And I like the battered old one so well. I've had it thirty years."

Robert suddenly laughed.

"And that overcoat you sent me was quite too grand," said Uncle David. "I wouldn't feel at home in it."

"And you haven't worn it?"

"No, Robert. Nor the gloves, nor the muffler."

"Well, well. And what have you done with it?"

"Put it away very carefully, Robert."

The guest laughed again.

"Saving it for our little David, I suppose?"

"David!" gasped the old man.

"That's his name. But you wouldn't like him."

"Not like him, Robert?"

"No, you wouldn't like him. He's too new."

And he laughed and laughed again.

"You're not hurt, are you, Robert" the old man asked.

"Not yet," the guest replied. "But what about the new Bible?"

The old man looked across at his wife.

"It was too splendid," he explained. It didn't look like the old one—it didn't feel like it—even the words didn't seem quite the same."

The guest slightly frowned.

"Uncle David," he said, "I want to see that Bible."

The old man went to the ancient bookcase and taking out the carefully wrapped volume brought it to the table.

"Open it, Uncle David," said Robert. "Your favorite is the book of Job. Open to the book of Job."

The old man obeyed.

"You will note what happens to people who neglect to read the Good Book," said Robert.

Something fluttered loosely on the page. It was a $100 bill.

"A little gilded umbrella for a rainy day," laughed Robert. He turned from the old man. "And have you tried the new coffee, Aunt Lydia? But I know you haven't. I want a cup of it."

"Yes, Robert," said Aunt Lydia contritely, and she turned and hurried from the room.

A moment or two later they heard her cry out, and she ran back with the coffee in her hands.

"Look, David," she cried, "see the gold pieces scattered through it! Oh, oh! "

"Another umbrella," said Robert, "but it might have rained a month of Sundays and you wouldn't have found it!"

There was a little silence.

The moistened eyes of the old man suddenly twinkled.

"That's rich coffee, Robert, my boy," he said, "but I'm afraid I'm pretty sure to like the old kind the best."

And Robert laughed loud and long.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

A year and nine months ago the Atlantic Reading room of the Thomas Crane Public Library was opened at 11 Botolph street. It has been a very successful venture. The circulation and scope of the work has steadily increased until the present quarters have become too small to successfully carry on the work.

On Friday of this week, the Reading room will be transferred to Sagamore street directly opposite Memorial Congregational church.

The new room in the brick building erected by Bennett Bros., is being specially fitted for library occupancy with new shelving, cork carpet, electric lights, and a low table and chairs for the little folks.

The summer's circulation has kept up remarkably, and it is hoped that grown people will frequent the new room, which will be much more comfortable than the hitherto crowded place which the children have so greatly appreciated.

Those borrowing books on Thursday evening at 11 Botolph street may return them on Friday afternoon at three o'clock at the Sagamore street room, as it is the intention to not have the Reading Room closed during the moving at all, if all goes well.

No Pie Crust Promises

Wise advertisers never make "pie-crust" promises.

They know that to break faith with the public would be fatal—worse than throwing their money away.

That is one reason why advertised goods are more in demand.

People know that there is quality behind them.

They look on them as standards. Any dealer knows that there are more calls for advertised goods than for goods not advertised.

This is especially true if they happen to have been advertised in the newspapers which directly reach the people.

The standard of advertising is more exacting today than ever before. Advertisers are more careful of their promises and more interesting in their text and illustrations.

The world grows better.

Cabinet Declares State of Seige in Empire and the European War Is Extending

Stock Exchanges in Boston and New York Closed

(Special to the Daily Ledger.)

The German Cabinet, presided over by the Emperor, sat at Potsdam until midnight and this morning a state of seige was declared by Germany.

A strict censorship has been imposed, and newspapers have been forbidden to publish anything in connection with military movements.

The steamers of the Hamburg-American line have been ordered to stay in port. All sailings have been cancelled. The Imperator is tied up at Hamburg and returning tourists will have to seek other means of reaching America. The Vaterland is in New York harbor and the Amerika in Boston. These steamers are being held ready for transport duty if necessary

The German army is now mobilizing and the British Navy is on war footing and ready to sail the minute orders are received. Russian mobilization is general and Austria has issued a prounciamento refusing to listen to any outsider regarding any of her dealings with Servia.

The stock exchanges all over the world are closed, the Boston and New York exchanges being closed this morning. This is to prevent the selling of bona fide securities at a sacrifice.

Today there was another jump is the cost of foodstuffs, the price of flour rising one dollar a barrel.

BREAKERS AT NANTASKET.

The northeast wind for several days past, kicked up quite a sea and many people made a trip to Nantasket on Thursday to see the breakers. The waves dashed high and as they bounded toward the shore and broke, they sent up a shower of spray that was grand to see. It was a sight well worth a trip to the beach. The surf Thursday was the highest seen for many months. The four mile stretch of white sand had the appearance of one continuous foam bank, and so great was the foam from the breakers that the beach was pounded. Along by Atlantic hill the waves dashed against the rocks throwing the spray high into the air. The sea was so rought that the steamer Betty Alden was obliged to abandon her trip t Plymouth, although the Rose Standish came up from the Cape reporting very rough weather.

TRYING TO RAISE FUNDS

Confidence Men Would Wipe Out the I. W. W.

Two confidence men have been operating in this city the past three weeks, but as far as is known their attempts to exploit their latest creation have been unsuccessful. At their first appearance they flashed letter heads of the American Federation of Labor and printed pledges explaining they were collecting a fund to be used in wiping the I. W. W. out of existence.

With extreme care, they outlined the minute details of the proposition to Anthony J. Thompson but when he didn't contribute they asked permission to call again. They made their next call at the City Square cafe, but here Joseph W. Dennen, the proprietor, recognized one of them as the man who five years ago represented himself as Representative Mellen of Worcester, without funds, and they were ordered from the place.

They returned again to the Thompson cafe Thursday evening, about 8 o'clock, and after reminding Mr. Thompson that he told them to call again they renewed their request for funds. Not getting the results they expected and becoming suspicious they left, and a few minutes after a police officer was on their trail. He couldn't locate either man however.

Both are men of big frame with dark complexions. One is over six feet tall and weighs close to 230 pounds, and the other is five foot, 11 inches, and weighs close to 200 pounds. Both are slick talkers and were dressed in light outing suits.

NEW ALLLEYS TO BE OPENED

Capt. Wardwell Lessee and Louis Ross Manager

The grand opening of the new Wardwell alleys in the new Kincaide block on Hancock street will take place on Monday evening, and arrangements have been made to accommodate one of the largest gathering of fans the city has ever seen.

The feature of the evening will be the exhibition by Paul F. Poehler, champion small ball roller of the world, and Archie Walsh, the Greater Boston champion. Although the match will be a friendly one neither will let up. Poehler has full control of three balls and Walsh is a wonder with his first ball. Beyond any question records for singles and totals will be established for the alley that will remain for sometime.

The alleys are the best equipped in the state, and are of regulation length On the first floor four have been built and on the lower floor there are six alleys. The upper alleys can be reserved especially for ladies clubs and special parties, and a private dressing room has been installed for their convenence. The alleys on the lower floor are for men and every facility for their comfort has been arranged.

The building was started last spring but owing to the extra precautions taken to shut out the old Town brook which runs along its side there was some delay. A scheme of waterproofing however was hit on that has proved successful, but eight tons of tar were required. The total cost of this part of construction is estimated to have been $8000.

The lessee of the alleys is Capt. George E. Wardwell, the present manager of the Kincaide theatre. Louis Ross will be the alley manager.

GOOD SEASON AT HOUGHS NECK

Cottages in Demand--Unusually High Tide Thursday

The unusual weather conditions has had no effect on the poulation of the Houghs Neck summer colony, and cottages are being rented for the balance of the season and are in as much demand as though the thermometer flirted with the 100 mark. Several land sales have been made through the office of Thomas Dwyer and there is but little first class building land available.

This shortage is felt by the children of the district who have no playground and have not yet obtained permission to make use of the Atherton Hough school yard. It is expected that the playground proposition will be made a feature of one candidate for the City Council next fall.

The batter boards are in position, and all preparations are complete for the early start on the addition to the Atherton Hough school on Sea street.

The tides Thursday were the highest since last winter and in some places the water trickled across Sea street. Most of the owners of cottages on the causeway have built dikes of sods which answered the purpose Thursday. One woman at Post Island went to Boston on Thursday and left clothes drying on the line in the rear of the house. She returned about 5 o'clock and took them in from a row boat.

The dance halls have done a good business the past week, as many as seven cars being necessary to carry the frolickers on some trips.

Fred Baird who was injured in an auto accident in Milton is recovering from injuries received. He is at his home on Sea avenue.

John Kenney of Roxbury will occupy the Flips cottage on Freca road during August.

Mrs. Stella Quinn of Boston has taken the Milton cottage on Turner street for August.

J. A. Mills of Hyde Park is in the bungalow on Charles street.

F. G. Lyons of South Boston is summering in the Margie cottage on Charles street.

Mrs. Addie M. Wayne, and her daughter, Mrs. George Tubman, both of Dorchester, have opened the Mollie Bawn cottage on Turner street.

Mrs. Elizabeth Battos of Charlestown will be in the Casey bungalow during August.

Thomas F. Powers and family take possession of the Kelly bungalow on Charles street on Aug. 1.

Robert H. Morris of Milton has taken the Orieta on Bell street for the balance of the season.

H. Shattuck of Roxbury will be in the Just Us Two cottage on Winthrop street after the first of the week.

S. Tekmejian of Boston is stopping at the Ott cottage on Charles street.

Charles Leary and family of Roxbury enjoyed the week end at Houghs Neck.

Three boats were carried off in the high wind of Sunday, and all have been recovered. John Cain's tender, which deserted the Germantown shore was found off Rock Island. John Sullivan's Swampscott dory floated off Sunday night and was picked up on the bay side, and the power boat of John Ingram was found Thursday, high and drw on Hangman's island.

Officer Daniel Linnehan of Station 16, Boston, who captured an auto thief in Boston three weeks ago, and cleared up the mystery surrounding the theft of autos, is spending his vacation at Houghs Neck.

Civil Service Commission announces a mesenger boy examination to beheld at Quincy, August 15. for the purpose of providing a register from which to fill an existing vacancy in the position of messenger boy, $1.04 per diem, office of Naval Inspector of Machinery, Fore River Shipbuilding Corp., Quincy and similar vacancies in Quincy or vicinity as they may occur.

MILLIONS OFFERED FOR RIVADAVIA

Several of the European Countries Are Anxious to Purchase Quincy Built Battleship

But Argentina Denies All Rumors of a Sale

There is a possibliity of the battleship Rivadavia being sold to one of the powers that may be involved in the present trouble in Europe. It is well understood that several of these powers have already taken steps and have made offers for the battleship, which is now about ready for delivery. Rumor has it that the highest price offered for the vessel up to the present time is $22,500,00. As the vessel originally cost $11,000,000 it will be seen should the Argentine government decide to sell it would net quite a tidy sum, although it is probable that upwards of $1,000,000 has been expended in furnishings by the Argentine government in addition to the $11,000,000.

It is reported that Germany, Austria-Hungary, Italy, England, France and Russia are all in a mad scramble for the vessel. The Rivadavia is a first class marine war implement, designed especially for offence. She is also very speedy and carries many guns of the largest type.

One thousand marines from Argentine are now on their way to America to man the vessel, and will arrive sometime in August. The battleship will leave the Fore River dock at an early date, and go to New York where she will enter dry dock to have her bottom scrapped and painted, as there is no dry dock large enough in Boston waters to accommodate her.

President Powell of the Fore River Co., is reported to have said in an interview that "every great European power has tried to buy the Rivadavia. That there is absolutely not a scintilla of truth in any story to the effect that Argentina has already sold the Rivadavia."

It is reported that the Argentine government has been offered two and one half million pounds for the Rivadavia. The offer came from a European power. Argentina responded that she had already been offered four million pounds whereupon the first power offered four and one-half million pounds or $22,500,000 in American money. The Argentina consul located in Boston says he knows nothing of the negotiations.

BURGLARIES AT BRAINTREE

Unoccupied houses in East Braintree have been burglarized during the past week and the police believe an organized gang is working the town.

The family home of Daniel Baxter Hayward on Quincy avenue was entered several nights ago and the furniture in the house tipped upside down. Mr. Hayward is out of town, and his wife is in New Hampshire and it will not be known how much was taken until their return.

Chief of Police Horace Hunt learned Thursday night that the home of J. G. Smith, a short distance from the Hayward house, had also been visited. No list of articles thought to have been taken has been furnished him as yet.

POLICE CHIEFS OUTING.

Chief of Police Burrell attended the outing of the Massachusetts Chief of Police association on Thursday. The party went to Bass Point where they were taken in charge by Chief Carey of Manchester, who with automobiles loaned by summer residents of that section, took the blue coats for a trip along the North Shore summer resorts.

FAMILY REUNION.

There has been a family reunion this week at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Landers on Beale street, as all their sons and daughters are home,—Mr. and Mrs. Harold Landers of Toronto, Can., Mr. and Mrs. Paul E. Brodbeck of Montreal, Can., and Eugene Landers of Brattleboro, Vt.

RAN AWAY FROM WRENTHAM

Twelve Year Old Shows Up Here About Midnight

Merick Dimmick, 12 years, reached Quincy about midnight after running away from the parental school at Wrentham, a distance of 26 miles, the greater part of which was covered on foot. He was discovered in the Quincy station by Officer Charles Olsen who sent him to police headquarters where he was put to bed.

Little Merick is the son of parents that lived here at one time and because they were unable to give him the proper education the State Board of Charity placed him in the Wrentham school two years ago. Thursday morning, after a restless and lonesome night, he eluded the authorities and headed for Brockton, where he thought his mother was now living. Not finding her at the old address he came to Quincy.

Most of the last lap of his trip was made in darkness, and when he reached this city the little fellow was somewhat fatigued.

He went into the depot and was curled up on one of the long benches for a little snooze when Patrolman Olsen happened along. A few questions brought the truth to light, and also that he had eaten nothing from early morning. A few moments after discovery he was the guest at the Thompson cafe.

There he became the centre of interest, nearly everyone in the place crowding around to hear his account of his journey. He said he had been at the school for two years, but not being treated as well the past few weeks as he should have been he took French leave. "Sure," he says, "I have run away a couple of other times too," when asked if it was his first experience.

At Police headquarters he said he was born in this city and then mentioned a dozen places where his parents lived. Today he will be given a chance to see his parents if they can be located and then may be sent back to the school.

Little Merick was not confined to a cell, but was put in the compartment reserved for women. The officers at the station did what they could to make him comfortable, and last but not least, the grating between the wooden door and the cell was not swung into position.

Alice Whalen of John street, Atlantic, has returned from St. Elizabeth's hospital, where she recently underwent an operation for appendicitis.

WATER DEFICIT.

The statistics which the Daily Ledger has been presenting to its readers, comparing Quincy with other cities of about the same size, are of value and taxpayers are getting some return for the State assessment for support of the Bureau of Statistics, which promises to do good work for city finances in general.

Many have been particularly interested in the statistics concerning the Water department. At first it looked as though the water receipts of Quincy were large in comparison with other cities, but when the Ledger put against them the expenses for water maintenance and water extensions, the balance was small.

But there is still another expense which has been overlooked and that is the amount paid annually for water interest which varies but little from year to year. The annual report of the Bureau of Statistics gives these figures as the cost and expense of the Water departments of Everett, Quincy and Chelsea, all of which are in the Metropolitan water system, and have practically the same population:

EVERETT, 33,484 POPULATION.

Water Maintenance	$27,217
Water Extensions	9,989
Water Interest	37,107
Total costs	$74,314
Total receipts	$110,288

CHELSEA, 32,422 POPULATION

Water Maintenance	$23,893
Water Extensions	15,862
Water Interest	42,738
Total costs	$82,300
Total receipts	$135,210

QUINCY, 32,642 POPULATION.

Water Maintenance	$21,999
Water Extension	78,782
Water Interest	59,269
Total costs	$160,050
Total receipts	$128,466

It will be observed that Everett at an expense of $74,314 annually for its water department, has an income of $110,288; a profit of $35,974 which helps reduce the tax levy.

That Chelsea with an expense of $82,300 obtains an income of $135,210, which is a profit of $52,910.

But Quincy's water expenses amount to $160,050, and the income is $128,466; an annual deficit of $31,584.

This is why the Quincy Assessors find it necessary each year to include an item for water expenses in the tax levy. In 1913 the water item was $35,061, which made the tax rate one dollar higher. Had the Water department of 1913 made a profit of $35,000, the tax rate would have been two dollars less than it was.

Quincy's item paid annually for interest on water debt is larger than all smaller cities, and also larger than in Everett, Taunton, Fitchburg, Newton, Salem, Haverhill or Holyoke.

Is it not about time to reduce the annual loan for water extensions and thereby reduce the water debt and water interest? It could be cut in half if used strictly for extensions.

Is it not about time to revise the water rates, especially for manufacturing, so that water shall not be sold below cost? The city is making a big profit on water supplied to houses, but the loss on manufacturing rates is so heavy that there is an annual deficit of $35,000. No water should be sold in Quincy for less than fifteen cents per thousand gallons.

With $160,050 as the basis of the annual cost of the Quincy Water department, the cost per thousand gallons supplied is over fifteen cents; for the total supply to Quincy from the Metropolitan Water system is 1,056,543,500 gallons annually. Unfortunately the city is not able to sell all the supply, because of leakage from mains, so that the net cost may be twenty cents per thousand gallons.

Although the cost of water is from 15 to 20 cents per 1000 gallons, (or 12 to 15 cents per 100 cubic feet,) Quincy is willing to sell some as low as six cents per 100 cubic feet which is at the rate of eight cents per 1,000 gallons. One cubic foot equals seven and one half gallons, and the meter rates by quantity in Quincy are as follows per 100 cubic feet. (Add one-third to obtain the rate per 1000 gallons:)

QUANTITY	CENTS
20 cubic feet, per day	23
20 to 50	21
50 to 100	19
100 to 500	15
500 to 1,000	12
1,000 to 2,000	11
2,000 to 4,000	10
4,000 to 8,000	9
8,000 to 16,000	8
16,000 to 40,000	7
Over 40,000	6

All water takers in Quincy who use over 1000 cubic feet per day obtain their water below cost. Why not a uniform meter rate by quantity at 12 cents per 100 cubic feet?

Statistics would be of interest showing the minimum rate in the cities and towns of the Metropolitan district, both residential and manufacturing. There is too much secrecy about Quincy rates.

BATTLES RAGE ON THE BORDER

Servia Invaded by Austrian Force of 500,000 Men

REPORTS ARE CONFLICTING

Vienna Announces Great Victories, While Servian Messages Say Enemy Was Repulsed—Germany Asks Russia What Is Meant by Mobilization, to Which Russia Replies That It Is a Precautionary Measure—Every Country Likely to Be Involved Is Preparing For Possible General War—Grey and Asquith Not So Hopeful of Early Settlement of Trouble

London, July 31.—Austria is invading Servia with 500,000 men. Of these 150,000 are operating from Samlin, opposite Belgrade, the Servian capital, 100,000 from Svornik on the river Drina in Bosnia, 150,000 from Sarayevo, the capital of Bosnia, and 100,000 from Milarovatz, on the Danube, in the eastern part of Servia. As a result blood is flowing freely on the Danube.

Serb resistance, while spirited and costly to the enemy, is meant only to impede his advance and not to be decisive. Rumors of great battles in which the Servians lose 800 men and have 4000 taken prisoners, while the Austrian casualties are but 200, must not be taken seriously.

It makes considerable difference from where the dispatches covering hostilities come. If from Vienna something like the foregoing is produced. On the other hand, Servian messages say that the Austrian attempt to cross the Danube twenty miles east of Belgrade was repulsed, also that the enemy was successfully resisted at Losnitza, west of Belgrade.

A note dispatched by the German government to St. Petersburg gives Russia twenty-four hours to explain her intentions with regard to mobilization.

The following official statement was authorized at St. Petersburg:

"Russia desires no war. Our partial mobilization is a precautionary measure to preserve the independence of Servia."

In the meantime preparations for a possible general war goes on in every country likely to be involved. A rumor comes from St. Petersburg that Japan might also come to the assistance of England if the latter became involved.

Following the partial mobilization of the Russian army, a step which that country officially anounced to Germany and Austria-Hungary, an order was issued by Germany to all the officers and men of her reserve forces to hold themselves in readiness for a call to arms.

England's fleet has been ordered to be kept on a war footing and the scattered vessels of the navy are being brought back to their bases. The Mediterranean fleet, which reached Malta, found lighters waiting there loaded with coal, which was at once taken on booad. All the members of the metropolitan police, which is a British government force, have been recalled from leave and ordered to return to duty at once, as the men might be required to guard the government dock yards and magazines.

That Great Britain fully realizes the gravity of the situation is manifest from the momentous announcements made in the house of commons by Sir Edward Grey, the foreign secretary, and Premier Asquith. Grey "regrets" to announce that he cannot say the situation is "less grave," while Asquith, following a conference of all the party leaders, informed the house that with the assent of Mr. Law, leader of the Opposition, home rule would go over until later, in order that all parties might rally to the government and thus "limit, if not avert, the calamity" which threatens. Berlin and Rome are also pessimistic.

As a last resort it is said Emperor William has sent Ernest of Hesse, brother of the Empress of Prussia, to St. Petersburg to endeavor to arrange peace.

All through Europe national banks have advanced discount rates, in an endeavor to prevent the movement of gold, each country desiring to retain what it already has. Trading in securities has come virtually to a standstill, there being little money in sight. In France, indeed, minted coin has disappeared from circulation. All through the continent a pessimistic tone is clearly evident.

AWAITING DEVELOPMENTS

United States Not Ready to Issue Neutrality Proclamation

Washington, July 31.—Issuance of a formal proclamation of neutrality in the war between Austria and Servia will be delayed by the United States pending developments of the next few days.

Secretary Bryan said the disposition at the state department is to withhold action until it is known whether other European powers will be drawn into the conflict.

Eventually the proclamation will be framed upon the document issued when Italy and Turkey were at war in 1911 over Tripoli. It will prescribe strict neutrality and warn American citizens that they cannot expect protection from the United States government if they violate the international laws governing the conduct of neutrals.

WALL STREET SWAMPED

Bears Brunt of World-Wide Liquidation of Securities

New York, July 31.—The New York stock exchange bore the brunt of tremendous world-wide liquidation of securities. This was solely inspired by the clouds of war which hung over all Europe.

It centred here because there is no other primary security market in the world which is not either closed or under restriction.

Prices broke from 6 to 17 points under an overturn of 1,300,000 shares of stock, a large part of which represented the "dumping" of foreign holders of American securities or the selling of foreign speculators.

International bankers who have their fingers on the pulse of the situation expressed pride in the fact that the American market had so well withstood the avalanche of selling. This has now been actively in progress for nearly a week.

LABOR FAMINE FEARED

Mining Industry Will Be Crippled by War In Europe

Philadelphia, July 31.—Fears of a labor famine are expressed by the heads of great industries in many parts of eastern Pennsylvania as a result of the present European crisis.

Large numbers of Austrians and Hungarians in this city applied to their consul for transportation back to their native country, while at South Bethlehem officials of the big steel and coke plants received passports for 2000 men.

There are approximately 500,000 subjects of Emperor Francis Joseph in western Pennsylvania and four counties of West Virginia embraced by the Pittsburg consulate. More than one-third are employed in the coal mines.

Servians and Coatians, while not so numerous, nevertheless might form an imposing army. There are more than 125,000 in the Pittsburg district and an army of more than 50,000 could be raised on call, it is declared.

SEAT OF THE WAR.

MRS. WAKEFIELD IS CONVICTED

Second Degree Murder Verdict Is Returned by Jury

CARRIES LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Jury Out Seven Hours In Second Trial of Woman Once Sentenced to Be Hanged For Killing Husband and For Which Plew, the Actual Murderer, Was Recently Executed

New Haven, July 31.—Mrs. Bessie J. Wakefield, on trial for the second time for the murder of her husband, William O. Wakefield, at Cheshire, June 3, 1913, was last night found guilty of murder in the second degree by a jury in the superior court after seven hours' deliberation.

Conviction of second degree murder in Connecticut carries with it the penalty of life imprisonment. Judge Reed pronounced sentence this morning.

Mrs. Wakefield was found guilty of first degree murder at her first trial and was sentenced to be hanged, but a retrial was ordered by the supreme court of errors. James Plew, the actual murderer, was recently hanged for the crime. The state alleged that Mrs. Wakefield aided and abetted Plew in killing her husband.

Mrs. Wakefield, in her defense, denied that she plotted or desired the death of her husband, and claimed that in the hanging of Plew the real murderer of her husband had paid the penalty for the crime.

Mrs. Wakefield broke the silence of the impressive scene in the court-room, following the anonuncement of the verdict, by weeping hysterically. She was led into an ante-room by a deputy sheriff. There she clung to the breast of her aged father, Frank Webster, and continued to give way to her feelings. There was scarcely a dry eye in court. Later she was taken to the county jail, where she became somewhat more composed.

During the hours the jury deliberated, Mrs. Wakefield talked with the newspaper men and expressed her belief that she would be acquitted.

TWO MOONS PAYS VISIT TO WILSON

Indian Chief Also Talks Over Old Days With Soldier

Washington, July 31.—Indian war days were vividly recalled at the White House when Two Moons, one of the principal chiefs at the Custer massacre, met Brigadier General Scott, one of the few army officers of today who saw the frontier campaign.

Scott greeted Two Moons in the Indian sign language, and visitors at the White House were entertained by seeing the two conversing with their hands.

Two Moons was taken to the White House and introduced to President Wilson. After the call at the White House Two Moons was taken by Scott to his office at the war department, and there the two talked over the old days on the plains. Two Moons was once a scout for Scott.

LONG CHASE REWARDED

Alleged Forger Who Fled From Canada Is Caught In Revere

Boston, July 31.—A chase across Canada and the United States from Calgary, Alberta, led to the arrest in Revere of Herbert M. McDonald, 27, on the charge of being a fugitive from justice. He is wanted in Calgary on several charges of forgery.

He was traced by Detective Turner of the Calgary police. Twice during the pursuit he eluded the detective when the latter attempted to arrest him.

It is said that he lived on money sent him by his wife. He admitted his guilt and waived extradition formalities, according to Turner.

TAKES HIS OWN LIFE

Sickness of Maine Political Leader Leads to Melancholia

Augusta, Me., July 31.—Joseph Williamson, long prominent in Democratic politics, committed suicide by cutting his throat in a fit of melancholia brought about by a severe attack of indigestion. Besides a widow, who is a daughter of United States Senator Burleigh, he leaves two sons.

Williamson has served as county attorney for Kennebec county and was a member of the Maine house in 1911. He was 45 years old.

RECORD OF ASSISTS FROM THE OUTFIELD.

One Rasty Wright of Cincinnati Set the Mark Years Ago.

Fred Clarke's record of four assists from the outfield—two at the plate—made in the game with the Phillies several years ago, is unquestionably an unusual performance, but it is not a record. Nearly twenty years ago a right fielder on the Cincinnati team, "Rasty" Wright by name, beat that by at least two, if not three, and the beauty of it was that every assist he made cut off a base hit. The Reds were playing the Phillies at Broad and Huntingdon streets, and there was a tremendous crowd in attendance, necessitating the stretching of the ropes to accommodate the overflow in the outfield. They did not carry the ropes so near the right field wall in those days, the crowd as a rule surging away in front of the old bicycle track.

This Wright seemed to be a pretty wise gazabo and had a rattling good whip. Instead of playing in the turf, where the right fielder usually played, he measured his distance so that he could back and get any ball that did not actually go into the crowd. This brought him practically equidistant between the ropes and the base lines. As a result all flies that went to his territory were either outs or two base hits, but whenever a grounder went out his way there was nothing to it. He was really playing right field-shortstop, and he nailed either six or seven men at first on what would have been base hits under normal conditions.

NO FLUKE HERE.

Ed Walsh Made an Honest to Goodness Comeback.

Ed Walsh had numerous things to rejoice about when he beat the Yankees recently and showed that he really had come back. In addition to winning his first full game of the year he held a batter hitless that he has always feared above all others.

When Walsh was at the height of his pitching fame a baseball writer in Chicago went to him and inquired how he pitched to various batters. Big Ed had at the tip of his tongue methods to circumvent Speaker, Cobb and Crawford, but when the reporter mentioned Birdie Cree Walsh had nothing to say.

"I don't know what to give that fellow," Walsh confessed. "He hits most everything I've got."

Cree came up in the eighth inning in Walsh's comeback game with a chance to drive home a run, but Walsh fanned him. And now the pitcher will have to look for another hoodoo batsman.

NEW SWIMMING CHAMP.

Meehan Distances Richards and Durborrow In Marathon Race.

A new long distance swimming star was uncovered recently in the Marathon race held in New York harbor. He is George R. Meehan of Boston, who covered the twenty-two miles in seven hours and eighteen minutes.

Three other men finished, but were outclassed by Meehan. They were Sam Richards and Walter Dunn of Boston and Charles Durborrow of Philadelphia. They finished in the order named.

Meehan took the lead about ten miles out, and from that place onward maintained the lead and gradually widened the distance between himself and the others until he was practically by himself. He used an overhand stroke.

GEORGE R. MEEHAN.

Meehan is twenty-three years old and weighs 195 pounds stripped. He has been considered one of the best swimmers about Boston for several years. In 1912 he started in the swim to the Boston light, but was forced to retire while in the lead because of trouble with his eyes.

THE PLAYHOUSE

MAJESTIC THEATRE.

The summer stock engagement at the Majestic Theatre is proving a success far beyond the most sanguine expectations of the management, demonstrating the fact the public is just as quick to take advantage of a dramatic offering as of a department store sale. For next week the offering will be Miss Nance O'Neil in the play which made her famous, "Camille." Miss O'Neil is one of Bostons own favorite actresses, and her name has always been sufficient to attract capacity audiences on her every appearance here.

The story of "Camille" is familiar to most theatregoers. It is an old play but so powerful, appealing and fascinating, that it has become established as a classic. When Miss O'Neil appeared in this play at the Tremont Theatre some years ago, Daniel Frohman the well known New York theatrical manager declared that she was the only real rival of Sarah Bernhardt in the role. Miss O'Neil will have excellent support in the persons of Arthur Hickman who was the original Little Billy in "Trilby," Donald Meek whose popularity in Boston seems to increase from season to season, Rose Morrison, Frederic, Ormunde, Augusta Gill, Raymond Capp, Bark Symons and a host of others. But perhaps most prominent player in the cast outside of Miss O'Neil herself will be Miss Francine Larramore who is Mr. Edmund Breese's leading lady in "The Master Mind."

PLYMOUTH THEATRE

"Under Cover," the play that scored the record for the longest run of consecutive performances in Boston's theatrical history, will return to the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, Saturday afternoon Aug. 8. The engagement will be limited to three weeks. The reappearance of this remarkable play was made possible through the persistent efforts of Manager Wright, who believes that many playgoers have yet to witness it despite its long record-breaking engagement. This will afford theatregoers another opportunity to witness the charm of this delightful play. The company and production will be entirely new. The cast, however, will offer a number of well known stage favorites including Rockliffe Fellows, who will appear as Stephen Denby, the role created by William Courtenay. Mr. Fellows is not unfamiliar with the part as he made a decided impression in it during the final week of the last engagement. Mr. Fellows will be surrounded by a company that will in every detail be equally as efficient as the original company.

The receipts of the matinee and night performances of the opening day will be given Gov. Walsh to swell the fund now being raised for the relief of the Salem fire sufferers. This will enable New England playgoers to partake of an afternoon's or evening's thorough enjoyment and incidentally help along a worthy cause.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

NAVAL TRIAL WAS NOT FAIR

Contention In Brief Filed In Behalf of Boalt

CONCERNS "LAW OF FLIGHT"

Congressmen Quote Bluejacket's Story of Incident Similar to That Related by War Correspondent Who Was Ordered Deported—Court Proceedings "Prejudiced and Inadequate"

Washington, July 31.—Protest against the order of the war department deporting from Vera Cruz Correspondent Fred L. Boalt, author of the "law of flight" story, declared not substantiated by a naval board of inquiry, was made to Secretary of War Garrison by Representatives Falconer and Bryan of Washington, on behalf of Boalt's employers. Boalt is a resident of Washington and a former constituent of the two representatives, who filed a brief with Garrison.

That the naval trial was "prejudiced and inaccurate" and its finding contrary to the evidence was contended by Falconer and Bryan. New evidence to prove that a "law of flight" incident similar to that described by Boalt occurred was presented.

The brief said that Roy Melton of Galesburg, Ills., bluejacket on the battleship Utah, wrote a lettre which was published describing such an incident. Melton's article said the American forces would find Mexicans "and if we wanted to shoot them we would, but if not we would take their guns away from them and start them up the street on the run; then we would watch for some one else to peep up and see some of the other boys shoot them."

That the naval trial was really a trial of Boalt and not of Ensign Richardson, who, Boalt said, boasted of applying the law of flight, and that Boalt was not advised and did not understand that he was the complainant against Richardson and entitled to be present during all testimony, was declared by Falconer and Bryan.

It was also stated that Boalt was not subject to the war correspondents' regulations when his story was written June 19, not being accepted as a correspondent until three days later.

The brief asserted that not until just before the inquiry closed was Boalt advised that he should be present during the sittings and that he was compelled to "sum up as prosecutor" testimony he had never heard in a final statement to the naval court, without counsel, or an opportunity to rebut.

That Boalt was threatened with contempt proceedings for sending a cable account of the first day's inquiry, although the court announced its sessions were "open," was also asserted.

"The procedure of calling upon Boalt to sum up a case he had never even heard was little short of farcical," the two congressmen declared.

That three Vera Cruz correspondents, including Boalt, told of hearing of a "law of flight" incident was stated, despite the court's official findings that only one other than Boalt testified to that effect, was recited in the brief.

"The proceedings were more in the nature of an ex-parte proceeding than one which would result in judicial determination," Falconer and Bryan stated. "The secretary of war has not sufficient ground for discrediting and deporting Boalt."

WILSON TAKES A HAND

Summons Railroad Heads In Effort to Prevent General Strike

Chicago, July 31.—President Wilson took a hand to prevent a strike of the engineers and firemen of the western railroads.

He summoned members of the mediation board, leaders of the men and general managers' committee to Washington for a conference. All left suddenly last night.

TELEGRAPHIC BREVITIES

Rev. Edward J. Curtin, 58, pastor of St. Agnes' church, Arlington, Mass., died from heart trouble. He was one of the best known priests in the diocese of Boston.

William Pierce, 38, was drowned at Webster, Mass., when a boat in which he was fishing sprang aleak and sank.

Mrs. Mary C. Hoyt, 80, of Beatrice, Neb., sister of Grover Cleveland, died at Arlee, Mont., while visiting a granddaughter.

Railroad officials are quietly testing the sentiment of western engineers and firemen to learn what action they will take if a strike is called.

LONG BEACH NOTES.

Fashionable Throng in Motor and Elaborate Get-ups.

It is a very Cosmopolitan throng that one sees at this fascinating play spot. People from all over Long Island motor here for a dip in the surf, dine at the Casino with its artistic decorations and delightful cuisine, dance or listen to the fine music provided, and go home at midnight either by car or on the special train that the Pennsylvania runs to accommodate this class of patrons. With the people who elect to make New York their stopping place, Long Beach is especially popular, for no matter how high the thermometer climbs in town, cool ocean breezes prevail at this favored spot, and few other resorts can show such a delightful stretch of clean sandy beach where bathing is safe and delightful. Beside the short time visitors, there are a number of regular residents at the hotels and many picturesque cement cottages that add greatly to the attractive aspect of things, and while one frequently has to wait for a table unless engagements are made in advance, there is none of the objectionable crowding that one encounters at the more democratic resorts nearer town.

DRESS PARADE.

Few places are more interesting for the woman who likes to see the latest thing in styles, smartly worn. One has only to sit still and watch the world go by to view costume after costume that embodies novel and attractive features which will be generally adopted by Fall. The striking note here as elsewhere where fashionable throngs assemble, is the basque in its new wrinkled manifestation and the ruffled skirts that now grow five ruffles to every one worn at the beginning of the season, and only the narrow line of the under petticoat recalls the fact that a few months back such a thing as flare and fullness was unknown below the knee line.

SUMMER FURS.

Summer furs are among the attractive small novelties that are cosy and becoming additions in the cool breeze that prevails here. These are usually combined with chiffon so that weight and warmth are tempered to the season. An attractive collar embodying the fashionable color note so often repeated, is of dyed yellow fox backed by seal brown chiffon. With this there is a muff, more chiffon than fur, that will no doubt do duty for warmth between seasons, but is now carried purely for its decorative note.

A NEW BLOUSE.

A new mull blouse made with a flaring organdie collar, has a tie of black tulle half an inch wide ending in tassels of colored beads, that lend just the right note of novel coloring. The flaring organdie collar, while perishable—and it must be fresh, or it is horrible—is so exceedingly becoming that it appears with every sort of costume, even on bathing suits, though its limp condition, once the waves play with it, makes its attraction brief at best. Bathing caps are seen on the smartly turned out bathers, in an endless variety of shapes and styles. One with a visor, that shades the eyes is especially practical and pretty. Rubber flowers are quite as much used as last season.

RHODE ISLAND WOMAN TELLS OF HEALTH MIRACLE THAT SAVED HER

Mrs. Clare Shaw of Norwood Used Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy

Mrs. Clare Shaw of 21 Majestic Avenue, Norwood, R. I., was a sufferer from stomach and liver troubles for many years. She was treated both in the United States and abroad. She underwent an operation. Still she suffered.

Then she took Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy and found swift relief. In a letter telling of her case she said:

"I reecived your sample treatment the day before Christmas and it saved my life, for I was almost gone. I had an inflammation that got right up in my throat and seemed to choke me. My neighbors say it is a miracle, as they know how I suffered. I am better now than I have been for 20 years."

This remarkable health story is like those told in thousands of other letters from users of this wonderful remedy in all parts of the country. The first dose convinces—no long treatment.

Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy clears the digestive tract of mucoid accretions and poisonous matter. It brings swift relief to sufferers from ailments of the stomach, liver and bowels. Many declare it has saved them from dangerous operations and many are sure it has saved their lives.

Because of the remarkable success of this remedy there are many imitators, so be cautious. Be sure it's MAYR'S. Go to Clyde T. Cox drug store and ask about the wonderful results it has been accomplishing in cases they know about—or send to George H. Mayr, Mfg. Chemist, 154 156 Whiting St., Chicago, Ill., for free book on stomach ailments and many grateful letters from people who have been restored. Any druggist can tell you its wonderful results.

SUPERVISOR OF MUSIC.

Clarence J. Fouche has been elected supervisor in the public schools of Holbrook his native town, to take the place of Edwin C. Barnes of Brockton, who resigned to go to Central Falls, R. I. His election occurred about the same time his physicians pronounced him free from the dangerous effects of an operation for appendicitis..

Mr. Fouche is as well known in this city as anywhere in the state. He held a similar position temporarily in Quincy, and was a most popular young men while he lived here. He resigned to take up musical work in New York and about a year ago organized an orchestra in Brockton which was considered the "talk of the town."

SPORT BRIEFS

"Pappy" Wall, who went to a Canadian base ball league, several weeks ago, is expected back this week, as it is reported that the league has disbanded. He may do the catching for the Fore Rivers on Saturday in their game with Bird & Sons, on which depends their chance of winning the pennant in the Manufacturers league. Bishop has been filling that position since Wall went away. Nichols, the Syracuse pitcher who did fine work last Saturday, winning over the Forbes Lithograph in 11 innings will be in the box.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. GETS TIME TO COOL OFF

Wife Beater Sentenced to Hundred and Twenty Days In Jail

Nashua, N. H., July 31.—Mike Kesper of this city was given a jail sentence of 120 days in the district court here for wife-beating.

He admitted he had assaulted his wife, promised never to repeat it and begged for leniency, but when his record was looked up it was discovered that he was already under a suspended sentence of ninety days for the same offense.

THOMAS C. BUNDY, the veteran California tennis sharp and holder of the national doubles title with McLoughlin, has been chosen as a member of the Davis cup team. He will have to fight it out with Carl Behr for the honor of playing in the doubles, but owing to his having paired off with McLoughlin in so many hard matches it is thought that he will surely be the final choice.

LITTLE BITS OF SPORTING CHAT

What the Cubs Need to Win According to Bresnahan.

PAYS TRIBUTE TO MATTY.

Umpire Johnson Pulling a Funny Stunt on the Bases—Very Few Heavyweights Have Held Title at Johnson's Age—How Fed Raids Have Hurt Organized Baseball.

Roger Bresnahan and Christy Mathewson, battery mates for McGraw's Giants in the days when talking to a Cub player was considered a sacrilege, met during the recent Giant-Cub series in Chicago.

"You're getting younger every day, Roger, and you never worked better. How do you like being a Cub now?" Matty asked.

"We got the best ball club in the league, Matty," Bresnahan replied, "and if you was on our pitching staff we would be so far ahead that the race would be a joke."

They talked over olden times for nearly twenty minutes and then proceeded to dig up their hatchets, for when the Cub backstop came to bat in the fifth he yelled for Matty to duck as soon as he threw the ball if he wanted to keep on pitching.

"You could not bat .100 in the Kitty league," Mathewson shot back, and proceeded to get his ex-mate on a foul fly to the catcher.

When working as a field umpire Mr. Johnson is pulling a novel trick, doubtless unthinkable, which seems strictly illegal and yet apparently has no prohibition in the rules. When a long hit is made and Mr. Johnson, as is the custom, accompanies the runner around the bases, he stops, spreads his hands and gives the "safe" signal at the base where the runner should end his stride. The umpire thus acts as coach and protector to the base runner, and no runner thus directed can overslide, go too far or be headed off. Doubtless the habit is purely mechanical, and Mr. Johnson escorts the runners impartially for both sides, but should it not be unlawful for an umpire to guide, direct and protect the sprinters?

The fact that Jack Johnson had reached the age of thirty-six when he risked his title against Frank Moran has led to some interesting discussion regarding the ages at which previous heavyweight champions lost their ring laurels.

John L. Sullivan was thirty-four years old when defeated by James J. Corbett at New Orleans in 1892. He held the title for ten years, but Corbett was less fortunate, for he retained the championship but five years, being thirty-one years old when Bob Fitzsimmons won at Carson City in 1897.

Fitzsimmons' tenure of championship was even less, for at the age of thirty-seven he was knocked out by Jim Jeffries at Coney Island in 1899 after holding the title for two years and three months. Jeffries, who met defeat at the hands of Johnson at Reno July 4, 1910, was thirty-five years old when Johnson wrested the ring honors from him. He held the championship for eleven years.

The following table shows the extent of the Fed raids on organized baseball:

One reason that George Weaver is the shortstop of the White Sox is because he played a game for 48 cents for Dick Devaney's famous St. Mary's team of Phoenixville just five years ago.

Weaver is a native of Stowe, Pa., which is not far from Pottstown. Early in the season of 1909 Weaver, who was then not much bigger than a bee's knee, was constantly pressing Devaney for a chance with St. Mary's, which has always been one of the strongest independent clubs in its part of the country.

Devaney was surprised, for Weaver was nothing more than a sand lot player who butted in when the St. Mary's players were drilling. But he noticed that he was a conscientious, agile little cuss, and one day he told him he would give him a chance.

He took Danny, as he was known to the boys then, to Pottstown and stationed him at third base. Weaver played a rattling good game both at bat and in the field, and Devaney was pleased over his showing. After the game he went up to Weaver to pay him off.

"What's the damage, Danny?" asked Devaney.

"Well, 48 cents will be all right," was the response. It happened that 48 cents was the exact amount in car fare that it cost Weaver to get to the game.

Of course Devaney paid him more than this amount, but the incident made a big impression on him, and he at once made him a regular and ever afterward took a big interest in his career.

DETECTIVES ON THE JOB

Prevent What Appears to Be Attempted Flight of Carmans

Freeport, L. I., July 31.—An attempt by Dr. Edwin Carman, his wife and daughter to leave Freeport in a high-powered automobile was frustrated by detectives after they had been informed of the plans for the getaway by reporters.

Everything was ready for the leaving when the detectives appeared on the scene. Carman had already placed several large bags in the machine, and Mrs. Carman and their daughter were coming out of the house to enter the car when detectives informed the doctor that they were under orders to follow the Carmans wherever they went.

Carman thereupon held a conference with his wife and finally took the bags out of the car and returned to the house. The chauffeur drove the machine back to the garage.

Carman was plainly distressed at the discovery of his plans, and it was reported that he would attempt to get away as soon as he felt he could do so unnoticed. Detectives, however, will watch the house more zealously than ever, and will follow the Carmans wherever they go in their machine.

PURPOSE ACCOMPLISHED

Hoosiers Say There Is No Further Need of Bull Moose Party

Indianapolis, July 31.—More than 100 men who voted the Progressive ticket in 1912 held a conference here, declared their allegiance to the Republican party, and issued an appeal to men of all political parties, and especially to those who voted the Progressive ticket in 1912, to join with them in support of the Republican ticket this year.

Every section of the state was represented at the conference, and many of those in attendance were active in the leadership of the new party two years ago.

In the appeal it is declared that there were reasons for voting other tickets in 1912 which no longer exist and that "the organized protest against methods and men, but not against principles, was effectual. The purpose of the third party is accomplished."

BEEF SHORTAGE IS GIVEN AS REASON

Government Removes Ban on Certain "Diseased" Meat

Washington, July 31.—Because of shortage and high prices of meats, the department of agriculture announced that, under new meat inspection rules effective Nov. 1, packing houses will be allowed to sell as "second-class sterilized" certain meat—cooked and canned—from animals with purely "local" diseases.

"This sterilized cooked meat which the packers are to be permitted to sell as 'second-class sterilized'—plainly labelled as such—is the meat of portions of animals the fat of which the old regulations permitted to make into edible lard and tallow," the department states.

"The new plan extends the principle to utilize the lean portions of this meat which heretofore packers have not been allowed to sell for food purposes."

TESTIMONIAL OF ESTEEM

Friends Unite to Honor Warden Bridges Upon His Retirement

Boston, July 31.—As a testimonial of the love and esteem in which he is held by the officers and employes of the Charlestown state prison, Warden Benjamin F. Bridges, who retired to private life after twenty years' service at the head of the institution, was tendered a banquet at the American House and presented with a gold watch and chain and a charm studded with diamonds.

There was a touching scene when the toastmaster read letters from prisoners who regretted the departure of Bridges and thanked him for the opportunities he had given them to secure an education by establishing a school in the prison.

Darlington alleges violent temper, profane language, flirtations and immoderate smoking by his wife. She, in turn, charges him with excessive use of intoxicants and not allowing her enough money.

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER

A Question of Value

It Involves the Subject Love

By IDA SPEED

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Given two men and a woman you'll most always have a romance; two women and one man are apt to produce a riot, but take two women and two men, all in love, and every one of 'em bein' a misfit, as you might say, and it's like a two ring circus—you can't possibly take in all the details.

When this here Miss Daphne Donaldson first throws in with the west it's with no notion except to forgit past unpleasantnesses which, I learn afterward, was caused by her havin' Pullman tastes and her husband havin' a day coach pocketbook.

Course, in order to win her he puts up a bigger front than his bank account calls for, and when he can't live up to the premises she pleads nonsupport and requests her maiden name.

So when we first see her she's got both the divorce and said maiden name and has flew west to escape the gossip and scandal ensuin' from the same.

It took a special trip to freight her trunks out to the ranch, and she had clothes that made the men set up and take notice and the women's eyes turn green with envy.

She shore has the heart broke look, and she ain't been here a week before I see plain that Johnny Duval is goin' to be first aid to the injured.

You see, the biggest part of this ranch is owned by a man back east named Stoner, who was her confidential adviser, and he tells her just to come and make herself at home here till such time as she feels like facin' the world again.

Now, Mary Talbert, whose folks have charge of this outfit, is one of them quiet, practical girls who only know one way to love—that's with a secret, consumin' passion.

Secret, that is only to the object of it, and consumin' all her time in thinkin' about it. The object of Mary's devotion was Johnny Duval.

That such is bad enough.

But about three weeks after Miss Daphne arrives Mr. Talbert gits a letter from this Stoner sayin' he can't come out to look after some matters as he does once each year, but is sendin' a substitute who will make a new contract with Talbert and attend to all business for him.

I drive in to meet this duck, whose name is Smithson, and I find a tall, slim fellow dressed like them pictures in the back of the magazine where it says:

"If you want to feel at ease in any society, wear"—etc., and who can ask more questions than a jackleg lawyer?

When we reach the house Daphne and Mary are on the east gallery. I make 'em acquainted with Mr. Smithson.

Daphne is standin' foolin' with a chain she always wears around her neck with some kind of a little hoodus on the end of it.

"How do you do?" she says, noddin' her head, indifferent. Then she turns with a rattle of silk and walks in the house.

"Glad to meet you," says Mary, holdin' out her hand. "Have you all had your dinner?"

When we say we haven't she gits up, smoothin' out her fresh gingham dress, and goes in to set dinner out.

That was the difference between 'em.

In a week's time Mr. Smithson looks like he's forgot he was sent here for any purpose but to make love to Mary, who is real nice to him to keep from showin' how she hates to see Johnny and Daphne together so much.

But, listen, that's not the worst.

What does the grass widow do but begin to build a stack at this here Smithson, who don't seem to notice it he's that took up with Mary Talbert.

It was like singin' "Three Blind Mice." They all fell in with the same words to the same tune, but only produced a jumble in the end.

I watch 'em pretty close and observe more or less human nacher in all of 'em.

From the very first I know why Mary is trettin' Smithson so nice, but it takes a long time for me to glean that Johnny is playin' the same game with Daphne because he don't think Mary cares for him.

I figgered that this Daphne didn't take to western ways and folks, and it wasn't so much Smithson as them back east garments of his'n that was holdin' her spellbound.

And it took this here Smithson just a month to do what Stoner usually attends to, gittin' back by return mail.

Before he leaves we begin to work the cattle. The first day we rounded up the north Cross S, and course the women wanted to go on the drive.

Johnny Duval was on his fanciest cuttin' horse, Don, and he was showin' off the least mite, as cowboys will do with back east folks lookin' on.

Smithson was swell in his ridin' togs, with little race spurs, and his mount was a big, handsome bay, but he was powerful in the way.

About the middle of the mornin' Johnny works hard for five minutes tryin' to cut a big jar headed yearlin' out of the herd, and when at last the steer takes to the bushes Smithson spurs up and turns him right back in the herd, not knowin' enough to see where the brute should go.

"Let him go," yells Johnny, and rips out four uncomplimentary words which wouldn't have sounded so bad to Smithson if the first and fourth hadn't been "you."

Daphne rides over to Smithson at once, her face plumb scarlet.

"I think," she says, dignified, "you'd better take Mary and me home."

So he takes the ladies to the ranch, and that's the last I see of 'em till that eventn', when us boys come up from the brandin' pens and the two women are on the gallery by themselves.

Johnny Duval marches right up and apologizes for losin' his patience.

Daphne shrugs her shoulders and says nothin'. But Mary looks at him with sympathy.

"It's pretty hard work to have to do twice on account of somebody's ignorance," she says.

Johnny looks at Mary, grateful.

Then Daphne boils over.

"You western men can do just one thing," she says, scornful. "You can work cattle with all the ridin' and other things that appertain. But put one of you back in civilization and you'd have to drive a dray for a livin'."

"Poor people have poor ways, but ain't that a honest way to make a livin'?" says Johnny and turns on his heel, spurs jinglin', and goes in the house.

I could see Mary was pleased plumb through.

The rest of us boys says nothin', and directly Mary goes out to a mesquite bush a few feet from the house and picks off a leaf.

She comes back to the foot of the gallery steps and says: "Somebody name this. I'm goin' to tell Miss Daphne's fortune."

Just then Smithson saunters out, and I says, "I've named it."

"Big house, little house, pigpen, kitchen," says Mary, pluckin' off a prong and throwin' it away with each "house."

"Big house, little house, pigpen, kitchen."

"Big house, little house"—

"Mr. Smithson," I says.

"You're goin' to marry Mr. Smithson and live in a little house," says Mary, lookin' at Daphne and laughin'.

"That leaf had one too many prongs, I'm afraid," says Smithson. "How about it, Miss Donaldson?"

"Love," begins Daphne, toyin' with that chain of hers. "Love is like happiness and everything else—it has a relative value. It depends on who is in the 'little house.'" She gits up and goes to the door; then she stops.

"The 'little houses' where love exists," she says, lookin' straight at Smithson, "are more complete than the 'big houses' that are only for show and to keep pace with the bunch."

Then she walks in the house.

"I'd about as soon mine would 'ome out 'pigpen' if it couldn't be 'big house.' I've lived in little houses and kitchens all my days," Mary says, with a sigh.

"You'll never know the relative value till you've tried both," says Smithson to Mary. When she has gone in the house, too, he turns to me.

"Women, my friend, are alike the world over," he says, sorter bitter. "But just the same we can't do without them."

"No, sir," I replies emphatic.

The next day that blamed little pitchin' "baby" horse of mine turns over with me and breaks my ankle, and breakin' that leg done for me what one of these here Japanese screens they set in the corner of the stage does for the show business.

They put me to bed in the east room, which has windows openin' on the front gallery, and because an invalid is expected to go to sleep early I heard somethin' that night I never should have got on to otherwise.

The pain had got easy, and I was dozin' a little when voices waked me.

It was not light enough to see the faces, but a woman was speakin' when I commenced to listen.

"I suppose Elmer Stoner sent you out here, too?" she says.

"Yes," says the man, "but I'll swear to you I didn't know you were here until I was within five miles of the ranch."

"And then it was too late to turn back," she says.

"Not if I had known you were flirtin' with a cowpuncher who is far beneath you every way. And so soon!" he adds in a hard voice.

"The cowpuncher and that little Talbert person are wrapped up in each other, so your flirtation won't do you any good," she retorts.

"Oh, Harry," she goes on, "you only wanted to be rid of me!" And I hear her voice catch.

"Daphne, it's so like you, dear. You get a divorce from me, run away and hide, amuse yourself with another man and then lay the blame on me. Now, I don't mind the blame," he says.

"God knows I've been lonely without it, but I wonder if we could patch them up—our lives, you know. The little Talbert is a poor substitute for you."

I propped myself up on my elbow.

A big, round, red moon was just peepin' over the edge of the world, and a man was leanin' against a post of the gallery with his arms around a woman, whose head was down on his shoulder.

"Anyhow," she says, dabbin' at her eyes with a little white speck of a handkerchief, "there never was any one else and there never will be."

"We'll go home tomorrow," he says, soothin'.

The curtain ought to come down as they kiss, but there wasn't none, and that moon was so bright I just compromised by pullin' the sheet up over my head.

For the Children

Master John R. Fell, Jr., Is Quite a Happy Lad.

© by American Press Association.

Master John R. Fell, Jr., during the summer season is a resident of Newport, the very fashionable resort of America's richest folks. In winter he lives in New York city, so he sees society in both seasons. That is, John R., Jr., might see it if he chose to bother about it, which he does not. He is too young and full of the carelessness of youth to bother about anything that isn't fun. John is a real boy of the American kind, who is mainly interested in things common to boys of his years. For instance, John met a photographer down at Newport, and he wasn't a bit uppish. He posed gleefully for the man with the camera and held his dog Buster by the tail, so that the little animal could be in the picture. Unfortunately the column of the paper is not wide enough to show Buster, but in the photograph he may be seen, his tail firmly grasped in John's right fist. John is a real boy—no mistake about that.

The Eagle Emblem.

The Etruscans were the first race to adopt the eagle as an emblem of their royal power and to carry it high upon their standards at the head of their armies. From the time of Marius it was the emblem of the Roman republic and was borne on the standard of the legions. It was generally represented with outstretched wings and was made of silver until the time of Hadrian, who made it of finest gold.

The Byzantine emperors used the double headed eagle to indicate their claim to the empire of the east and west.

The German emperors adopted it in the fourteenth century, and afterward it appeared on the arms of Russia.

Prussia carries on her standards the black eagle, and Poland bears a white eagle.

The United States of America has adopted the white headed eagle as an emblem.

Napoleon adopted the eagle as emblematic of imperial France.

A Wonderful Wall.

Few people realize what an almost perfect condition prevails along a large part of the great wall of China. The bricks of the parapet are as firm as ever, and their edges have stood the severe climatic conditions of north China with scarcely a break. The paving along the top of the wall is so smooth that one may ride over it with a bicycle, and the great granite blocks with which it is faced are smooth and as closely fitted as when put in place over 2,000 years ago.

The entire length of this wall is 1,400 miles. It is twenty-two feet high and twenty feet in thickness. At intervals of 100 yards or so there are towers, some forty feet in height.—Popular Mechanics.

"Holy City."

This is a name bestowed by any sect or nation upon the city most closely associated with its religious beliefs and observances and that has become a place of veneration consequently or special worship.

Allahabad is the holy city of the Indian Mohammedans.

Benares is the holy city of the Hindus, while Cuzco was that of the ancient Incas.

Jerusalem is the holy city of the Jews and Christians.

Mecca, Medina and Damascus have first place in the affections of the Mohammedans.

Moscow and Kiev are the holy cities of the Russians.

An Odd Beast Is the Aye-aye.

Have you ever heard of the aye-aye? No? Well, it is a small mammal about the size of a cat and inhabits Madagascar. It is said to have been named because of the peculiar cry it makes—aye-aye-aye! It has sharp teeth like those of a rat and long, thin fingers with pointed claws. But the middle finger of each paw is exceptionally long and thin. And for a purpose too. It feeds chiefly upon earthworms, so finds this middle finger very convenient for poking into worm holes and dragging forth the luckless dwellers therein.

VOLUNTEERS FOR IRELAND

Company Being Organized at West Quincy

The first steps toward the formation of a company of volunteers, to go to Ireland if necessary to help in the Home Rule fight, were taken in West Quincy Thursday evening, when 25 men assembled on William T. Shea park at West, Common and Copeland streets for the purpose of drilling.

The movement was first proposed by Robert Welsh, the hero of many battles, who was chosen captain. Hugh Golden, another prominent resident of that ward, it is expected will serve as drillmaster for the troops.

The question as to whether or not the patriots could carry carms came up and Captain Welsh telephoned police headquarters for permission. Sergt. Bishop informed him he thought it would be outside the jurisdiction of the police, unless permission was received from the Mayor of the city. Such a request has not yet been made.

Ward Four is the home of many of Irish birth and they have been on the anxious seat since the Sunday gun running affair which resulted in the Scottish Borderers firing on men, women and children, causing the death of four and the wounding of 60. Before the week is out it is expected that the company will be recruited to full war strength.

High single was made by Poehler who got 124 the first string, the highest made there in several years. He eased up in the two remaining strings and closed with a total of 304.

NEW PORT DIRECTORS.

The members of three important state boards were named by Gov. Walsh Thursday and while it was anticipated that a Quincy man might figure as an appointee on one of the boards none appeared.

For the directors of the Port of Boston Edward F. McSweeney of Boston was appointed for three years, Joseph A. Conry of Boston for two years and Lombard Williams of Dedham for one year. McSweeney is named as chairman and Conry as secretary. Conry is the only appointee of the present board of which Admiral F. T. Bowles is a member.

The commissioners on economy and efficiency are Francis X. Tyrrell of Chelsea, chairman, for three years; Thomas N. White of Newton for two years, Russell A. Wood of Cambridge for one year.

State Board of Insanity, Michael J. O'Meara of Worcester chairman, three years, L. Vernon Briggs of Boston two years, and Charles E. Ward of Buckland one year.

CITY SQUARE RUNAWAY

Ladies Have Narrow Escape Auto Damaged

The wild rampage of three runaway horses hitched to an empty coal team of J. F. Sheppard & Sons was brought to a sudden stop in City Square this noon when the nigh horse slipped on the tarvia coating on Washington street and fell against the unoccupied auto of W. G. Shaw.

The other two horses reared and plunged in an effort to free themselves but the harness held long enough for men to jump to their bridles and bring them under control.

The horses bolted on Saville street and with the heavy wagon swaying from side to side they crossed Hancock street at terrific speed. Passing autos held up to give them the right of way and people on the streets ran to the sidewalks.

The animals headed toward the furniture store of W. G. Shaw and in trying to avoid the auto they swung to the right. The nigh horse slipped and fell against the machine. His nigh hind leg went under and while he beat a tattoo on the underside of the chassis, the men who had the other horses by the bridles succeeded in quieting them.

The machine was backed off the horses leg and he was unhitched and got to his feet. The only damage done was to the fender, the end of which was bent out of shape. The horses leg was scraped considerably but he suffered no serious injury. The three horses were driven to the barn by the driver. Two ladies waiting to take a street car just escaped being hit.

HOW TO FIGHT THE ARMY WORM

False Alarm at West Quincy But Watch for Them

It was reported Thursday that the dreaded "Army Worm" had invaded Quincy. The report came from West Quincy and the place where the pest was supposed to have made its appearance was on the swamp in the rear of the Hall cemetery. Supt. Stewart, to whom the report was made, lost no time in visiting the place Thursday afternoon and after a thorough search he was unable to find any trace of the worm.

When seen this morning he said that he would not be surprised to see the pest make its appearance at any time. That the worms travelled in swarms, and from this it got its name of "Army Worm." That they would go through a corn field and eat up everything clean.

That hay fields and vegetation of all kind was it prey. Up to the present year, Supt. Stewart said, there was a species of fly that devowered the "Army Worm" and destroyed it, but that something had happened to the fly and it had disappeared. He further said that the pest was one of the worst that had to be contended with and that steps could not be taken too soon, on its appearance, to control it.

He further said that the worm had made its appearance in East Weymouth and that he would not be surprised to have it appear in Quincy at any time. The worm came from swampy places. It was a long worm with yellow stripes on each side.

The State Board of Agriculture, which has made a study of the worm and the method of controlling it has sent out a circular giving the best method of control. One of the best is to surround uninfested places with tarvia such as is used on streets, another method is a mixture of paris green and water. They may also be exterminated by pouring kerosene on them or by crushing. The method of control as given out by the state board is as follows:

When detected, all efforts should be centered on keeping the worms out of crops not yet attacked and confining injury to as small an area as possible.

To protect premises not already entered by these worms, surround by a strip of travia (road oil) a few inches wide and as thick as possible, and keep this road oil freshly renewed.

In fields, as a barrier to their progress, either dig or ploy a deep furrow ahead of the worms' line of march. Along this trench, every rod or so, a hole should be dug, making the sides as steep as possible. The worms crawling along the furrow will fall into these holes, and can be killed from time to time by pouring in kerosene or by crushing them.

The outside rows of crops liable to attack should be sprayed thoroughly with paris green, using about two pounds of the paris green with from 50 to 75 gallons of water. Worms which pass the barriers will usually feed before entering very far. Paris green is preferable to arsenate of lead, as it will destroy the worms more quickly and will soon be washed off by rain, so that there is no danger from feeding to livestock crops sprayed in this way. Lawns and other growth not to be eaten by man or animals may be sprayed broad-cast with paris green as directed.

Poisoned bran-mash, either placed in strips or spread broad-cast over infested fields and gardens, will prove effective, as the insects prefer it to any of their natural food. Bran-mash may be prepared as follows: Paris green, 1 pound; bran or middings, 25 pounds; cheap molasses, 2 quarts. Mix these materials and add just enough water to make with thorough stirring a thick mash. Poultry should be kept away.

TRIP ACROSS CONTINENT.

On a recent trip to San Francisco by two Boston police inspectors, Michael Burke and George J. Farrell, after a prisoner wanted in Boston to answer the charge of forgery, they had the pleasure of meeting Officer J. J. Avery's father, who is attached to the inspector's office of the U. S. Army, department of shoes, and also two cousins Detective J. F. Dinan and Lieut. W. J. Dinan of the San Francisco police department. The returning inspectors report a very enjoyable time while in the far away city as their guests.

Subscribers who are going out of town for a vacation can have the Daily Ledger sent to them by mail without extra charge. In notifying the office give both the old and the new address.

BIRTHDAY GIFT NOT APPRECIATED

A young lady in an office, less than a thousand miles from City Square, is observing the passing of another birthday todya. This morning she received a neat package by parcel post, and immediately thoughts of a birthday gift entered her mind. With a face wreathed in smiles, the wrapping was removed, disclosing a box containing a few potatoes, cucumbers, tomatoes, etc. which she suspects were sent as a joke by some of the other clerks in the establishment. However a vegetable dinner will be in order tonight, although the young lady promises to get square with the jokers sometime.

MONEY ORDER FEE REDUCED

Now Ten Cents for Every $10 Sent Abroad

The reduction in the cost of foreign money orders, payable in all lands that are members of the postal union which goes into effect August 1, will be of interest to Quincy's large foreign element who monthly send money to their old homes. One needs only visit the post office on a Saturday to see to what a large extent money is being sent away. Nearly every Saturday evening a long line of persons may be seen waiting their turn at the money order window and several clerks are kept busy handling the business.

Under the present schedule, fees for the remitters of small sums, are burdened with more than their proportionate cost of the service. The change is made in order to adjust this inequality and that postal facilities shall be afforded the public at the lowest cost.

By the new rates the fee for small sums are in many instances less than half of the former rate, the ratio of charge is exactly the same whether a large or small sum is remitted. For less than $10 the price is ten cents, and it increases ten cents for each $10, the fee for $100 being $1.

No Pie Crust Promises

Wise advertisers never make "pie-crust" promises.

They know that to break faith with the public would be fatal—worse than throwing their money away.

That is one reason why advertised goods are more in demand.

People know that there is quality behind them.

They look on them as standards. Any dealer knows that there are more calls for advertised goods than for goods not advertised.

This is especially true if they happen to have been advertised in the newspapers which directly reach the people.

The standard of advertising is more exacting today than ever before. Advertisers are more careful of their promises and more interesting in their text and illustrations.

The world grows better.
